The new matter to found a bill of review ought to be such as may be used as evidence of what was in issue in the cause. Patterson v. Slaughter, Ambl. 293. But see Anon., 2 Freem. 31.

Bill of review after two trials, and a decree to establish the will. Upon discovery of new matter another trial ordered, and a verdict for the heir-at-law and the former decree reversed. Att.-Gen. v. Turner, Ambl. 587.

The discovery of new matter in being at the time of the decree, but not known till after, entitles the party to a review. Standish v. Radley, 2 Atk. 177.

It is sufficient to entitle a party to a bill of review, if the new proof did not come to his knowledge till after publication; or when, by the rules of the court, he could not make use of it. Norris v. Le Neve, 3 Atk. 35; Ridgw. 322. S. P., Ord v. Noel, 6 Madd. 127.

—— Must be Relevant.]—Upon application for new bill upon new matter discovered after decree, it must be shown to be relevant; for being new matter merely, will not entitle them to such a bill. Bennet v. Lee, 2 Atk. 529.

—— Must be Material and Discoverable by reasonable Diligence.]—Where it is sought to rescind a final and valid judgment on the ground of the discovery of new evidence, it must be shown that such evidence is both new and material. Although evidence may have been withheld from the court at the original trial by one of the parties to the suit with an improper intention, such conduct is not sufficient to set aside the judgment unless the evidence withheld would have had a material effect upon the decision of the court. Boswell v. Coaks, 6 R. 167—H. L. (E.)

The grounds for obtaining the leave were precisely the same as existed before the Judicature Acts; namely, the evidence discovered must be shown to be material, and must have been discovered since the decision, and it must be shown that it could not with reasonable diligence have been discovered before. Falcke v. Scottish Imperial Insurance Co., 57 L. T. 39; 35 W. R. 794.

Where a good title has been declared on a summons under the Vendor and Purchaser Act, 1874, the purchaser is not at liberty to reopen the question by way of review, unless he can prove that since the order on the summons he has discovered material facts, which he could not with reasonable diligence have discovered earlier, showing that the title is defective. Scott v. Alvarez, 64 L. J., Ch. 376; [1895] 1 Ch. 596; 72 L. T. 455.

Leave to file a supplemental bill in the nature of a bill of review to introduce new evidence, refused, where the proper means of searching for it had not been used previously to the decree. Bingham v. Dawson, Jac. 243.

To entitle party to file a supplemental bill in nature of review, it is necessary that the new matter should be discovered after time when it could have been introduced into the cause; and the matter should be not only new but material, and such as if unanswered in point of fact would clearly entitle plaintiff to decree, or would raise question of so much nicety and difficulty, as to be a fit subject of judgment in a cause. Ord v. Noel, 6 Madd. 127.

Application by defendant for liberty to file a supplemental bill, in aid of a rehearing, to put in issue evidence discovered during and since the hearing, refused, the evidence discovered being a deed, and proceedings in suits to which the defendant was a party, and must have been apprised of their nature, and by negligence lost the benefit of them as a defence, and the object of the supplemental bill being to abandon the original defence, and rely on a new one. Blake v. Foster, 2 Ball & B. 457.

The act of incorporation of a railway company required that all resolutions come to at meetings of the proprietors should be entered in a book, and the entries were made evidence of the resolutions to which they referred. In a suit against the company for the specific performance of an agreement, the defendants were ordered to produce their books, with the usual liberty to seal up such parts as did not relate to the matters in question. The books were produced accordingly, but the pages left open furnished no evidence of the agreement. After the bill had been dismissed for want of evidence, the plaintiffs, on an affidavit of having recently discovered that the agreement had been recognised by a resolution passed at a meeting of the proprietors, applied for leave to file a supplemental bill, in the nature of a bill of review, for the purpose of making the resolution part of their case. And the court, although of opinion that the plaintiffs might, with due diligence, have made the discovery soon enough to have availed themselves of it in the original suit, nevertheless granted the motion, on the ground that if the defendants had entered the resolution in their books, as they ought to have done, the consequence of any want of care and attention on the part of the plaintiffs or their agents would have been obviated. Sheffield Canal Co. v. Sheffield and Rotherham Ry., 1 Ph. 484; 14 L. J., Ch. 25; 8 Jur. 1107.

made, though not capable of being used as evidence of anything which was previously in issue in the cause, but constituting an entirely new issue, may be subject of a supplemental bill in the nature of a bill of review. Partridge v. Usborne, 5 Russ. 195 ; 7 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 49.

On a petition for leave to file a bill of review, it is necessary to make out a primâ facie case of facts discovered since the proceedings sought to be impeached, and that there is a claim. Smyth and Arnold's Estates, In re, 32 L. J., Ch. 779 ; 8 L. T. 599 ; 11 W. R. 850.

The court directed the validity of three codicils to be tried at law ; and the result was, that after much litigation three successive trials were had, in which the plaintiff succeeded once and the defendant twice, the codicils being ultimately found to be forgeries. The cause came back to be heard on the equity reserved, when a decree was made dismissing the bill. Just before that hearing of the cause, two other documents were alleged to have been discovered by the plaintiff, which, if genuine, would have gone far to substantiate the defeated codicils. A petition was accordingly presented by the plaintiff, after the decree dismissing the bill was passed and entered, but before it was enrolled, praying for leave to file a supplemental bill in the nature of a bill of review, on the footing of the last discovered documents :—Held, that such petition must be dismissed. Creswell v. Jackson, 11 L. T. 530.

Upon an application to file a bill of review on the discovery of new evidence, the question is whether the new evidence would have induced the court to make a different decree : and, secondly, if the application is made with due diligence after the discovery. Thomas v. Rawlings, 34 Beav. 50 ; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 1192 ; 11 L. T., 721 ; 13 W. R. 248.

A party who applies for permission to file a bill of review on the ground of having discovered new evidence, must show that the matter so discovered has come to the knowledge of himself or his agents for the first time since the period at which he could have made use of it in the suit, and that it could not with reasonable diligence have been discovered sooner, and that the evidence is of a character that if it had been brought forward in the suit it might have altered the judgment. Hosking v. Terry, 15 Moore, P. C. 598 ; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 975 ; 7 L. T. 52 ; 10 W. R. 884.

To obtain leave to file a bill of review on the ground of new matter discovered, the matter must be not only material, but such that by employing reasonable diligence could not possibly have been used at the hearing. Michael v. Fripp, 18 W. R. 423.

An infant petitioning for leave to file a bill of review will not be required to give evidence that the knowledge of the facts relied upon could not have been previously obtained by reasonable diligence. Hoghton, In re, Hoghton v. Fiddey, 43 L. J., Ch. 758 ; L. R. 18 Eq. 573 ; 22 W. R. 854.

To permit a supplemental bill in the nature of a bill of review, after reversal of the decree in parliament, to be filed, the court must be satisfied that the new matter discovered is such as will materially affect the ground of the lords' order. Blake v. Foster, 2 Moll. 357.

Upon an application to file a bill of review on the ground of discovery of fresh evidence, the question is not merely whether such be material, but whether, had it been adduced before the hearing, it would have been likely to have turned the scale. Hungate v. Gascoyne, 2 Ph. 25 ; 15 L. J., Ch. 382 ; 10 Jur. 625.

The party making the application for leave to file a bill of this description, must satisfy the court that the mere evidence could not, by any reasonable diligence on the part of himself or his solicitor, have been brought forward at the hearing of the cause. Ib.

The new evidence must be of a kind that, combined with the former evidence, would, if it could have been brought forward at the hearing, probably have induced the court to make a different decree. Ib.

The new evidence must not only be relevant, but it must be material ; it must be such that the court shall think might have produced a decision favourable to the party bringing it forward. Ib.

A decree was made in favour of cestuis que trustent upon an original bill, and without a bill of review, upon the discovery of fresh evidence, although a decree had previously been made as to the same matter against their trustees, but in a suit to which the cestuis que trustent were not parties. Pierce v. Brady, 23 Beav. 64.

A party petitioning to be allowed to file a supplemental bill in the nature of a bill of review, on the ground that since the decree was made he has discovered new facts, must not only show that the facts are new, but that they could not with reasonable diligence have been discovered before ; and also that the facts discovered are material, and such as would have affected the former decision of the court. Wason v. Westminster Improvement Commissioners, 4 L. T. 80.

3. Practice.

Leave of Court—Since Judicature Act.]—The old chancery practice as to bills of review necessitating a preliminary application to the court is not now in use. An action to set aside a judgment may now be commenced without leave, but the defendant may move to stay the proceedings as frivolous and vexatious. On such a motion the court should receive evidence on either side as to whether there has been a discovery since the judgment of new and material evidence. Boswell v. Coaks, 6 R. 167—H. L. (E.). See Scott v. Alvarez, 64 L. J., Ch. 376 ; [1895] 1 Ch. 596 ; 72 L. T. 455 ; Falcke v. Scottish Imperial Insurance Co., 57 L. T. 39 ; 35 W. R. 794.

If a petition is heard on its merits, and is dismissed on the ground that the petitioner has failed to make out his case, he cannot on the subsequent discovery of fresh evidence in support of his case present a fresh petition for the same object, without leave of the court previously obtained. House, Ex parte, May, In re, 54 L. J., Ch. 338 ; 28 Ch. D. 516 ; 52 L. T. 78 ; 33 W. R. 917—C. A.

—— Former Practice.]—For a bill of review on newly discovered facts, the leave of the court necessary. Perry v. Phelips, 17 Ves. 177.

Liberty to file a bill of review, after a former petition for the same object had been refused on the ground of a deficiency of evidence. Thomas v. Rawlings, 34 Beav. 50 ; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 1192 ; 11 L. T. 721 ; 13 W. R. 248.

Leave of the court must be asked, before a bill of review for new matter can be filed; otherwise, if brought to reverse a decree upon error appearing on the face of it. Gould v. Tancred, 2 Atk. 534.

The filing of a bill of review or a supplemental bill in the nature of a bill of review, grounded upon the discovery of new evidence, is in the discretion of the court. Hungate v. Gascoigne, 2 Coop. C. C. 405; 2 Ph. 25; 15 L. J., Ch. 382; 10 Jur. 625.

After decree in a suit against the heir of A., the plaintiff petitioned for leave to file a bill of review, alleging error apparent on the face of the decree, and also that the plaintiff had discovered since the decree that the defendant was the executor of A., and that it was essential to the establishment of the plaintiff's rights to bring the defendant before the court in his executorial character. Petition dismissed, because a bill of review for error apparent may be filed without leave of the court, and because the defendant had admitted in his answer that A.'s will was in his possession. Trulock v. Robey, 15 Sim. 265. Affirmed, 2 Ph. 395; 11 Jur. 999.

Property was held by A., B. and C. in trust for D. for life, with remainder to her children. The children filed a bill against the trustees for a breach of trust, and, by the decree, the trustees were ordered to replace the fund. C., afterwards, being in contempt for non-performance of the decree, filed a bill against the other trustees, and the tenant for life, alleging that they had received and retained the produce of the breaches of trust, and seeking to make them and the life estate liable to indemnify C.:—Held, that such a bill was not in the nature of a bill of review, and therefore that it might be filed without leave of the court. Taylor v. Taylor, 12 Beav. 220.

Circumstances under which relief sought by a bill was held a variation of a former decree, which could not be given without rehearing the cause. And semble, it was a bill of review, which should not have been filed without leave of the court. Chute v. M'Gillicuddy, 11 Ir. Eq. R. 312.

Where a bill seeks a declaration that certain orders of the court were fraudulently obtained, and also seeks to alter or vary such orders, the relief sought being grounded not only on allegations of fraud, but on matters which had been recently discovered, it is not a bill of review, or bill in the nature of a bill of review, within the terms of the 31st Gen. Ord. r. 11, and the special leave of the court for its admittance is not therefore necessary. Pearse v. Dobinson, 13 L. T. 518.

Where a bill, which was in part a supplemental bill in the nature of a bill of review, and in part a bill of revivor, had been filed without leave of court, the whole was ordered to be taken off the file, though as a mere bill of revivor it would have been regularly filed without leave. Hodson v. Ball, 1 Ph. 177; 11 Sim. 456; 12 L. J., Ch. 80; 7 Jur. 475.

Defendant filed supplemental bill in nature of review without leave and without deposit, rectified by subsequent order and payment cy près of deposit. Loubier v. Cross, Dick. 223.

A bill by the representative of a deceased partner against the surviving partner for an account of the partnership dealings and transactions, contained an allegation that the defendant had employed, and intended to employ, the assets of the late partnership in carrying on the business on his own account, but prayed no relief in respect of such allegation: and the decree merely directed the ordinary partnership accounts, reserving further directions. But on the death of the defendant some years afterwards, and before the master had made his report under the decree, the same plaintiff filed a bill of revivor and supplement against the representatives of the late defendant, repeating the allegation above mentioned as to the employment of the partnership funds, and praying an account of the profits made thereby, in addition to the usual prayer for carrying on the accounts directed by the former decree:—Held, that such bill was not, in reference to the decree in the original suit, a supplemental bill in the nature of a bill of review, the new relief founded upon the allegation above mentioned not being inconsistent with that decree, but so far from it, that the accounts directed by the decree were necessary to raise the case for such new relief, and must have been directed if both claims had been united in one suit. Toulmin v. Copland, 2 Ph. 711. Reversing 4 Hare, 41; 14 L. J., Ch. 92; 8 Jur. 1160.

The question in such cases turns upon the matter of the decree, and not upon allegations in the original bill to which the decree does not apply. Ib.

In order to try whether a bill is a bill of review or a supplemental bill in the nature of a bill of review, and therefore requiring the leave of the court before it can be filed, the first question is, whether it is inconsistent with or impeaches the decree to which it refers, and one test of this is whether, if the decree had not been referred to in the bill, it could have been pleaded in bar to the relief prayed. Taylor v. Taylor, 1 Macn. & G. 397; 1 H. & Tw. 437.

A contract was entered into for the sale of the vendor's interest in a lease and premises at Doncaster, known as the betting-rooms, for the remainder of the lease granted by A. A bill for specific performance was filed by the purchaser, in which and in the decree the agreement was treated as comprising the premises held of A., and an account of the rents was directed. It turned out that the rooms and premises were partly under A. and partly under B., whereupon the vendor filed a second bill praying a declaration that the whole was comprised in the agreement:—Held, however, that the plaintiff could not, upon a rehearing, obtain the relief asked by the second bill, nor could he, by such second bill, obtain the relief thereby prayed whilst the decree stood in its present form; that to obtain the relief asked the original cause must be reheard with the second, and, consequently, that the second bill was a supplemental bill in the nature of a bill of review, which ought not to be filed without leave of the court. Davis v. Bluck, 6 Beav. 393; 7 Jur. 805.

A supplemental claim in the nature of a bill of review cannot be filed without leave. A motion of the defendant to take such a claim, filed without leave, off the file for irregularity, was adjourned to the hearing of the claim, and leave to file the claim was then given on payment of costs. Matthews v. Pincombe, 4 De G. & Sm. 485; 20 L. J., Ch. 395.

A bill was filed by a defendant to an administration suit alleging wilful default against the executors, who were plaintiffs in the administration suit:—Held, that inasmuch as the present plaintiff might have raised the question of wilful default by answer in the original suit, this was a supplemental bill in the nature of a bill of review, and could not be filed without the leave of the court. Harvey v. Bradley, 15 W. R. 527.

Terms on which Leave granted.]—The plaintiff not allowed to bring a bill of review unless he performed the decree, or would swear he was unable to do it, and would surrender himself to the Fleet, to lie there till the matter on the bill of review was determined. Williams v. Mellish, 1 Vern. 117.

Plaintiff allowed to bring a bill of review without paying the costs decreed in the original cause, upon making oath he was not worth 40*l.* besides the matter in question. Fitton v. Macclesfield, 1 Vern. 264 ; 2 Freem. 88.

Order for dispensing with costs upon bringing a bill of review ought to be set out in the bill. Id. 292.

In a bill of review all things that do not extinguish the right are to be performed according to the former decree, otherwise the non-performance is a good plea in bar, as if writings are to be brought into court or costs paid, but not to release the right or make a conveyance, as that would destroy the right. S. C., 2 Freem. 88. And see Anon., 12 Mod. 343.

After decree for payment of money, money must be paid before bill of review can be brought. Durham (Bishop) v. Liddell, 2 Bro. P. C. 63.

But court dispensed with rule upon defendant giving good security for payment of money decreed. Savile v. Darcy, 1 Ch. Ca. 42 ; 2 Freem. 172.

A party may obtain leave to file, and may file, a supplemental bill in the nature of a bill of review, though he has not performed the decree in the original cause, if the proceedings under the decree are not at the time in such a state as to enable the adverse party to bring him into default for not having done what the decree orders. A party will not be allowed, except under very special circumstances, to file a bill of review or a supplemental bill in the nature of a bill of review, or to prosecute it after he has obtained leave to file it, unless he performs at the proper time all that the decree commands him to do. Partridge v. Usborne, 5 Russ. 195 ; 7 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 49.

Plaintiff moved, on his solicitor's affidavit of new matter being discovered since the decree, for leave to file a bill of review without first paying the costs agreed, but the court refused it, for payment of costs ought to be performed rather than any other part of the decree. And the court thought the affidavit of the party himself necessary, and that of the solicitor not sufficient ; or that if the party himself should, under particular circumstances, be excused, there ought at least to be an affidavit corroborating that of the solicitor. Durham (Bishop) v. Lyddal, 2 Eq. Abr. 175 ; 4 Vin. Abr. 415. Affirmed, 2 Bro. P. C. 22.

On every bill of review the plaintiff must deposit 50*l.* in order to answer costs. Anon., 2 P. Wms. 283. S. C., nom. Davies v. Larmar, cited, 11 Sim. 464. And by Order 17th October, 1741, this rule is extended to supplemental bills in nature of bills of review. See Astel v. Montgomery (2 Atk. 138), which led to the last-mentioned order. Also Moore v. Moore (2 Ves. 597 ; Dick. 66), where Lord Hardwicke states his reasons for making it ; and Mr. Dickens' observations in Gartside v. Isherwood (Dick. 612), where he draws the distinction between a bill of review and a bill in nature of one.

Jurisdiction since Judicature Acts.]—A defendant took out a summons asking that, notwithstanding the order made in the action, he might be at liberty to commence an action against the plaintiff in the nature of a bill of review grounded upon new matter discovered after the making of the orders :—Held, that the old jurisdiction of the court of chancery to entertain an action in the nature of a bill of review was unaffected by the Judicature Act. Falcke v. Scottish Imperial Insurance Co., 57 L. T. 39 ; 35 W. R. 794. S. P., Scott v. Alvarez, 64 L. J., Ch. 376 ; [1895] 1 Ch. 596 ; 72 L. T. 455.

Application to High Court.]—An application to institute an action in the nature of a bill of review is part of the original jurisdiction of the high court, and such an application should be made to the high court and not to the court of appeal, which has no original jurisdiction of that kind. Falcke v. Scottish Imperial Insurance Co., 57 L. T. 39 ; 35 W. R. 794.

Time for Application.]—No limitation of time for bringing a bill of review ; yet after a long acquiescence under a decree the court will not reverse it but upon very apparent errors. Fitton v. Macclesfield, 1 Vern. 287.

Demurrer of length of time to bill of review after twenty-seven years allowed. Sherrington v. Smith, 2 Bro. P. C. 62.

As to length of time in general, in bar to bill of review, see Edwards v. Carrol, 2 Bro. P. C. 98.

Though a bill of review cannot in general be brought to reverse a decree after twenty years, that bar does not apply to persons having contingent interest, and then not existing or under disabilities. Lytton v. Lytton, 4 Bro. C. C. 441.

Bill of review for error apparent will not lie after twenty years from the making of the decree. The time runs from the decree, not from the inrolment. Smith v. Clay, Ambl. 645.

Plea to bill of review of length of time since inrolment of decree, under which part of estate had been sold to bonâ fide purchaser who had had possession twenty-seven years. On argument of plea and appeal, leave given to withdraw plea, with liberty to plead and demur, answer or demur alone, without introducing new matter. Gorman v. M'Culloch, 5 Bro. P. C. 597.

Statements of the practice of the court of chancery as to the time within which petitions for rehearing and bills of review may be filed. Scarisbrick v. Skelmersdale (Lord), 4 Y. & Coll. 78.

The time for filing a bill of review is regulated by analogy to the time limited by 6 Geo. 1, c. 6, for bringing a writ of error, i.e., twenty years after the judgment and five years after the disability of the plaintiff in error, if any, has been removed. Kelly v. Lennon, 1 Jo. & Lat. 305 ; 7 Ir. Eq. R. 98.

Parties.]—Parties to decree must all be parties to bill of review. Hartwell v. Townsend, 2 Bro. P. C. 107.

The plaintiff in the original suit is a proper party to the bill of review, although no relief is prayed against him. Talbot v. Minnett, 6 Ir. Eq. R. 83.

A bill of review will not lie against those who were not parties to the original bill. Carlisle (Earl) v. Goble, 3 Ch. Rep. 94 ; Nel. 52 ; 2 Freem. 148.

A bill of review may be sustained by the party in whose favour the decree is made, and who inrolled it. Vandebende v. Levingston, 3 Swanst. 625.

A bill of review cannot be filed by the party in favour of whom the decree was pronounced. Glover v. Portington, 2 Freem. 182. But see S. C., 1 Ch. Ca. 53, where the demurrer is said to have been overruled, and the bill consequently allowed. See also 3 Swanst. 625.

A person not a party to the suit, and aggrieved by a decree made in his absence, and afterwards served upon him, so as to attempt to bind him in subsequent proceedings, must move on notice, for leave to file a bill in the nature of a bill of review. Kidd v. Cheyne, 2 Eq. Rep. 475 ; 18 Jur. 348 ; 2 W. R. 316.

A suit was instituted by the trustee of a policy of assurance to obtain payment for the benefit of his cestuis que trustent, who were not parties to the suit. Their interests, however, were held to be sufficiently represented, and a decree was made giving the money to the assignee of the original holder of the policy, who had become a bankrupt, on the ground that no sufficient notice of the assignment of the policy had been given to the office when it was purchased by the settlor. Positive evidence was afterwards produced of such notice having been given, and the executors of the purchaser of the interests of some of the cestuis que trustent filed another bill to arrest the fund :—Held, that in point of form they were not compelled to get the plaintiff in the first suit to ask leave to file a bill of review, and that upon the merits they were entitled to arrest the fund, and have it transferred to the credit of the suit for the benefit of the cestuis que trustent ; but the costs of all parties were paid out of the fund. Pierce v. Brady, 26 L. J., Ch. 257 ; 4 W. R. 736.

Proof.]—Where a plaintiff having taken a common decree for an account, either on administration summons or bill, presents a petition for leave to file a bill of review to take a decre for wilful default, he is only bound to make a primâ facie case, and need not go into detail. Partington v. Reynolds, 6 W. R. 615.

A petition for leave to file a bill of review on newly discovered evidence cannot be sustained if supported merely by an affidavit of the petitioner upon his information and belief. Thomas v. Raulings, 34 Beav. 50 ; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 1192 ; 11 L. T. 721 ; 13 W. R. 248.

Counter-claim.]—If the vendor has brought an action for specific performance, the purchaser may bring his action of review by way of counter-claim to the vendor's action. Form of judgment on such counter-claim. Scott v. Alvarez, 64 L. J., Ch. 376 ; [1895] 1 Ch. 596 ; 72 L. T. 455.

Pleadings.]—Distinction between a bill of review, and a supplemental bill in nature of it. If the decree is inrolled, it is strictly a bill of review ; and prays, that the decree may be reviewed and reversed ; if not inrolled, the prayer is, that the cause may be reheard. In either, matter of supplement or revivor may be introduced, with the proper prayer. Perry v. Phelips, 17 Ves. 177.

To sustain a bill of review proceeding on facts discovered subsequent to the decree complained of, it must be shown that leave of the court to file it was regularly obtained. Tommey v. White, 1 H. L. Cas. 160.

A petition in the nature of a bill of review must be, and state that it is, filed with leave of the court, or it will be dismissed at the hearing. Connor v. Reeves, 16 Ir. Ch. R. 386.

A bill of review must state on the face of it that it is filed with the leave of the court ; if it does not, it is demurrable. Henderson v. Cook, 4 Drew. 306 ; 6 W. R. 831.

When supplemental bill is brought for new matter discovered since hearing of cause, but before decree is inrolled, if defendant is able to show that there is no new matter discovered, he must take advantage of it by plea, &c., and cannot insist on it merely at the hearing. Lewellen v. Mackworth, 2 Atk. 40 ; Barnard. 445.

q. Enforcing Performance.

By Action.]—An action will not lie upon an undertaking, contained in a judge's order, though the order was made by consent, and the undertaking was founded on a good consideration. Hookpayton v. Bussell, 10 Ex. 24; 2 C. L. R. 1081; 23 L. J., Ex. 267.

No action lies for the disobedience of a judge's order made for the delivery, by the attorney to his client, of his bill of costs. Dent v. Basham, 9 Ex. 469 ; 2 C. L. R. 989 ; 23 L. J., Ex. 161 ; 18 Jur. 295 ; 2 W. R. 201.

But an action will lie on a judge's order to refer made by consent, the consent being evidence of an agreement to perform the award. Lievesley v. Gilmore, 1 H. & R. 849 ; 35 L. J., C. P. 351 ; L. R. 1 C. P. 570 ; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 874; 15 L. T. 386.

An order, made by consent, whereby it was ordered that proceedings in an action should be taxed upon certain conditions, does not amount to an agreement to perform those conditions ; and a bill in equity for a specific performance will not lie. Thames Iron Works and Shipbuilding Co. v. Patent Derrick Co., 1 Johns. & H. 93 ; 29 L. J., Ch. 714 ; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1013 ; 2 L. T. 208 ; 8 W. R. 408.

—— Action in Queen's Bench Division—Order of Probate Division to pay Costs.]—In an action in the probate division an order was made by the registrar that proceedings should be discontinued, and that the defendant should pay the plaintiff's taxed costs. The costs were taxed, and an order was made by the president of the probate division that the defendant should pay to the plaintiff 127*l.*, the amount of the taxed costs. The plaintiff sued the defendant in the queen's bench division, upon a specially-indorsed writ, to recover that sum of 127*l.*, and obtain leave to sign final judgment under Ord. XIV. :—Held, that an action could be brought in the queen's bench division upon the order of the probate division, and that leave to sign final judgment under Ord. XIV. was properly given. Norton v. Gregory, 14 R. 735 ; 73 L. T. 10—C. A.

Compromise of Divorce Action—Power to make Agreement an Order of Queen's Bench Division.]—An action for judicial separation in the divorce division was compromised by the parties, and an agreement of compromise signed by them which provided that a separation deed should be executed; that the agreement might be made a rule of the high court, and that the respondent should pay the petitioner's taxed costs. A separation deed was afterwards executed, but the respondent refused to pay the taxed costs, and the agreement was made an order of the queen's bench division for the purpose of enforcing payment:—Held, that there was power to make the agreement an order of court in the queen's bench division, and that as the agreement of compromise had been reduced to an agreement to pay costs, the discretion of the court to make the order had been rightly exercised. Smythe v. Smythe, 56 L. J., Q. B. 217; 18 Q. B. D. 544; 56 L. T. 197; 35 W. R. 346.

Enforcing Undertaking.]—At the trial of an action for specific performance of an agreement to make a road, the defendant gave an undertaking that he would complete the road in question. An order was subsequently made, fixing a date by which the road was to be completed. This not having been done, the plaintiff moved, under Ord. XLII. r. 30, for an order that he might be at liberty to complete the road himself at the cost of the defendant:—Held, that the case did not fall within the rule, but nevertheless, the court would enforce the undertaking by permitting the plaintiff to do the works, with liberty to apply that the defendant should pay the expenses so incurred in completing the road. Mortimer v. Wilson, 33 W. R. 927.

The court relieved a party from an undertaking to make an admission upon a trial at law, the law on the point having, since the undertaking, been placed in a state of uncertainty, by reason of conflicting decisions of different courts. Cocks v. Purday, 12 Beav. 451.

Non-Reservation of Further Consideration.]—An order was made in a suit, and no further consideration was reserved; one of the parties by whom the order was to have been carried out afterwards died. On a summons by the survivor for the purpose of carrying out the order:—Held, that as no further consideration was reserved, no order could be made on the summons, and a petition must be presented. Lewis v. Allenby, 25 L. T. 785; 20 W. R. 198.

Erroneous Orders.]—When a court of equity is called upon to carry into execution a former decree, it is not bound to do so, if upon inquiry into the merits it appears to have been erroneous. White v. Panther, 1 Knapp, 179.

The court will not carry into execution an erroneous decree. Montgomery v. Southwell, 2 Con. & L. 363; 3 Dr. & War. 171. O'Connell v. Macnamara, 2 Con. & L. 266, n.; 3 Dr. & War. 411.

The court will not continue a manifest error in a decree, either upon a hearing for further directions, or upon a supplemental bill to carry the decree into execution; and where the decree to account, the report, and decree for sale, in the original cause, were erroneous, the court would not correct them in a suit to carry the final decree into execution. Stamer v. Nisbitt, 3 Jo. & Lat. 447; 9 Ir. Eq. R. 96.

Of Foreign Court.]—Though the court of chancery will not enforce a decree of a foreign court obtained against a party in his absence and without notice, yet where it finds that the proceedings in the foreign court were rendered necessary by his resistance to a proper demand it will order him to pay the costs of those proceedings by way of damages. Griffin v. Brady, 39 L. J., Ch. 136. See INTERNATIONAL LAW.

Of County Court.] — A judgment being recovered in the county court, and execution issued, there being no goods, nothing could be recovered; and the debtor's only property being an equitable interest in leaseholds in the hands of trustees in trust to pay him an annuity thereout, the creditor files his bill for payment of the debt out of the leaseholds in aid of the judgment of the county court:—Held, that he was entitled to such relief. Semble, the aid of a court of equity to enforce the judgment of a county court is a totally different thing from an action on such judgment in a superior court of law. Bennett v. Powell, 3 Eq. Rep. 1023; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 719; 3 W. R. 618, 640. See COUNTY COURT.

Service of Order and Certificate.]—A. obtained a common order for taxation of the costs of his former solicitor B., the order directing payment by A. to B. of the amount of the taxed costs within twenty-one days after the service of the order and of the certificate of taxation. The order and certificate were served, not on A. personally, but on the solicitor then acting for him in the taxation. A. failed to pay the amount within twenty-one days after service of the order and certificate on the solicitor, and B. applied for the issue of a writ of fi. fa. against A. for the amount, but the officer of the court refused to issue the writ, on the ground that A. had not been personally served with the order and certificate:—Held, that B. might have the writ at his own risk, without service of the order and certificate on A. personally. Solicitor, In re, 33 W. R. 131.

Attachment.]—An order made by the chief clerk in chambers cannot be enforced by writ of attachment until after entry. Ballard v. Tomlinson, 52 L. J., Ch. 656. See ATTACHMENT.

Effect of Assignment of Property.]—A., being decreed to pay a sum of money, or deliver possession of a house to B. by a certain day, conveys the house to a creditor in satisfaction of a real debt. This shall not defeat B. of the benefit of the decree. Self v. Madox, 1 Vern. 456.

Where legal interests are created subsequently to a decree directing the conveyance of the legal estate, in pursuance of an order of the house of lords:—Held, that the decree must be obeyed before setting up any new rights or interests. Persse v. Persse, 2 Jur. (N.S.) 551.

Want of Diligence.]—The court will not assist a plaintiff whose right has been protected by a decree in enforcing the extreme penalty upon a violation of that decree, when the plaintiff has not himself exercised due vigilance in maintaining his rights so secured. Rodgers v. Nowill, 1 W. R. 122.

Acquiescence.]—Where a plaintiff has obtained a decree restraining a defendant from doing any particular act, any acquiescence of the plaintiff in the breach of the injunction by the defendant must be of the most distinct and clear description, amounting to almost enough to enable a defendant to enforce a claim founded on such acquiescence, or the defendant will be liable to be committed. Rodgers v. Nowill, 1 W. R. 205.

Failure of Execution.]—Where for any reason the execution of a final decree of the court in a suit fails, or is set aside, and the proceedings as regards that execution are taken off the file, the whole suit is not discontinued thereby, nor are the further proceedings for the same purpose considered as taken in a new suit. Singh v. Singh, 9 L. T. 129.

Staying Proceedings.]—In 1848 the defendant mortgaged his freehold estate to the plaintiff. In 1852 a commission of lunacy was issued against him, and he was found by the inquisition to have been lunatic since 1825. The plaintiff filed a claim against the lunatic and his committee to foreclose the mortgaged estate, and proved the deed in the usual way by the attesting witness. The defendant did not cross-examine the witness, but produced evidence to show that the mortgagor was insane at the time of the execution of the deed. The court made the common foreclosure decree, but kept back the decree for six months, with leave to the defendant to take proceedings in the meantime for setting aside the deed. Jacobs v. Richards, 23 L. J., Ch. 557 ; 18 Jur. 527 ; 2 W. R. 174.

To Execute Deeds.]—The probate division has jurisdiction under s. 14 of the Judicature Act, 1884, in the event of any person neglecting or refusing to obey its order to execute a deed, to direct its execution by any other person whom it may nominate for the purpose. Howarth v. Howarth, 55 L. J., P. 49 ; 11 P. D. 95 ; 55 L. T. 303 ; 34 W. R. 633—C. A. Affirming 50 J. P. 376.

Where a defendant refused to obey an order, directing her to execute a mortgage, the judge appointed his chief clerk to execute it under s. 14 of the Judicature Act, 1884. Edwards, In re, Owen v. Edwards, 33 W. R. 578. S. P., Derham v. Kiernan, Ir. R. 5 Eq. 217.

Writ of Assistance—Delivery of Chattels.]—Although for the purpose of recovering land the old writ of assistance has been superseded by the writ of possession (Ord. XLVII.) the writ may still be issued for the purpose of recovering possession of and preserving chattels which have been ordered to be delivered to a receiver. Wyman v. Knight, 57 L. J., Ch. 886 ; 39 Ch. D. 165 ; 59 L. T. 164 ; 37 W. R. 76.

r. MOTION FOR JUDGMENT.

See R. S. C., 1883, Ord. XL.

On Verdict of Jury—Where made.]—Motions for judgment upon the verdict of a jury must, by s. 2 of the Judicature Act, 1890, be made to the judge who tried the case, and such motions will not, in the future, even by consent of parties, be heard by the court of appeal. Stevens v. Marston, 39 W. R. 129—C. A.

After Jury Discharged—Judge abstaining from giving Judgment.]—By. Ord. XL. r. 2, it is provided that "where at the trial of an action the judge or referee abstains from directing any judgment to be entered, the plaintiff may set down the action on motion for judgment" :—Held, that the judge cannot be said to have abstained from giving judgment, unless he has been asked to give judgment at the trial. Davenport v. Ward, 47 L. T. 348.

Judge leaving Party to Move.]—Upon the trial of an action at nisi prius, the judge may, if he think fit, at or after the trial, leave any party to move a divisional court for judgment, notwithstanding the provisions of s. 17 of the Appellate Jurisdiction Act, 1876, and the Rules of the Supreme Court, 1876, Ord. XXXVI. r. 22a, Ord. LVIIa. Benschor v. Coley, 52 L. J., Q. B. 398 ; 48 L. T. 533.

Short Cause.]—In an administration suit pending at the commencement of the Judicature Acts the defendant had put in his answer, but no further proceedings had been taken. It was desired by the plaintiff and defendant that the cause should be heard as short. The acts make no express provision for hearing of short causes. The court directed that the plaintiff should set down the cause on motion for judgment in the same way as provided by Ord. XXXIX. r. 10, when the defendant had made default in delivering his defence. Palin v. Brookes, 33 L. T. 322 ; 24 W. R. 20.

Special Case.]—Where a special case for the opinion of the court is stated in an action pursuant to the Rules of Court, 1875, Ord. XXXIV. r. 1, and the answers to the special case in fact dispose of the action, the proper course is to take the answers in the shape of a judgment making declarations to the effect of the answers, the action being, if necessary, set down pro formâ for trial on motion for judgment. Harrison v. Cornwall Minerals Ry., 49 L. J., Ch. 834 ; 16 Ch. D. 66 ; 43 L. T. 496 ; 29 W. R. 258.

Demurrer.]—A demurrer to a defence ought not to have been raised by way of motion for judgment under the Judicature Act, Ord. XL. r. 11. Mellor v. Sidebottom, 46 L. J., Ch. 398 ; 5 Ch. D. 342 ; 37 L. T. 7 ; 25 W. R. 401.

Judgment against some Defendants in Absence of Others.]—There is a difficulty in making a final order at the hearing of an action against some defendants only, in the absence of the others ; where the minutes asked for a perpetual injunction against some defendants only, in the absence of the others, the difficulty was overcome by treating the application as interlocutory, and making the order asked for, and in addition staying all further proceedings against the defendants who appeared. Cooke v. Gilbert, 40 W. R. 682.

Filing Notice of Motion.]—A notice of motion for judgment is a document which may be delivered, in case a defendant does not appear, by filing it with the proper officer pursuant to Ord. XIX. r. 6. Dymond v. Croft, 45 L. J., Ch. 604 ; 3 Ch. D. 512 ; 34 L. T. 786 ; 24 W. R. 842—C. A. S. P., Morton v. Miller, 3 Ch. D. 516.

Notice of motion for judgment is not a document required to be delivered between the parties where the defendant has not appeared and the writ has been filed with the proper officer. Williams v. Cardwell, 25 W. R. 646.

Writ without Pleadings—Statement of Claim dispensed with—Short Cause.]—A plaintiff, upon the defendant dispensing with a statement of claim, set down his action as a short cause, and moved for judgment according to prepared minutes. Upon the defendant objecting that the action must be brought to trial, it was ordered that the action be placed in the general non-witness list. Wilmott v. Young, 44 L. T. 331; 29 W. R. 413.

Effect of.]—A decree made upon a motion for decree is a decree for the purposes of the suit, and is for a dismissal if the suit fails. Secretary of State for India v. Underwood, 39 L. J., Ch. 569; L. R. 4 H. L. 580.

Evidence cannot be taken by Affidavit, even by Consent.]—On motion for judgment the court has no power, under the Rules of Court, 1875, to order that the evidence shall be taken by affidavit. Accordingly, where a consent action, in which an infant and a married woman were defendants, and in which the evidence had been taken by affidavit, was set down on motion for judgment, the court gave judgment, but directed that notice of trial should be given to the infant and married woman, and that the action should be placed in the paper again pro formâ. Ellis v. Robbins, 50 L. J., Ch. 512.

On Admissions—Application by some of several Plaintiffs.]—A motion under Ord. XXXII. r. 6, for an order against a defendant on admissions of fact, cannot be made by some of several plaintiffs. All the plaintiffs must join in any such application. Wright, In re, Kirke v. North, 65 L. J., Ch. 37; [1895] 2 Ch. 747; 13 R. 849; 73 L. T. 396; 44 W. R. 125.

a. WHAT QUESTIONS CAN BE THUS DECIDED.

Only such as must arise in Action.]—Under Ord. XXXIV. r. 2, only such questions of law can properly be raised as must necessarily arise in the action. Bolivia Republic v. National Bolivian Navigation Co., 24 W. R. 361.

So, Ord. XL. r. 8, is intended to enable the trial of such issues of fact only as must sooner or later have to be decided. Ib.

The 15 & 16 Vict. c. 76, s. 46, only enables the parties to state questions without pleadings which they might have raised with pleadings, but does not entitle them to put questions on speculation. Wellesley v. Withers, 4 El. & Bl. 750—Ex. Ch.

Question of Fact—Proceedings Extra cursum curiæ.]—A special case can only properly be stated for the purpose of obtaining a decision on questions of law arising upon facts which are admitted, and the consent of a judge to its use for the purpose of trying a question of fact cannot, although the fact when found might give rise to legal questions, make it a regular procedure in the ordinary course of law. Burgess v. Morton, 65 L. J., Q. B. 321; [1896] A. C. 136; 73 L. T. 713—H. L. (E.)

A judgment so given is pronounced extra cursum curiæ, and is in the nature of an arbiter's award or a consent order, from which, except in cases when the holder of the original judgment has raised no objection, no appeal will lie. Bicket v. Morris (L. R. 1 H. L. Sc. 47) distinguished, on the ground of consent given to appeal, from Craig v. Duffus (6 Bell's App. 308), Dudgeon v. Thomson (1 Macq. H. L. 714), and Renfrew Magistrates v. Hoby (2 Macq. H. L. 478). Ib.

When an Evasion of Stamp Act.]—A case was stated for the opinion of the court in which the question was whether the plaintiff was entitled to recover from the defendant a sum due on an alleged contract of insurance. No stamped policy had been issued, and the covering note or memorandum of insurance was also unstamped. For the purposes of the case, however, the parties agreed that a valid policy should be deemed to have been executed in the ordinary form in accordance with the covering note. The court ordered the case to be struck out, on the ground that they could not hear it without sanctioning what amounted to an evasion of the stamp laws. Nixon v. Albion Marine Insurance Co., 36 L. J., Ex. 180; L. R. 2 Ex. 338; 16 L. T. 568; 15 W. R. 964.

Fictitious Questions.]—Upon a special case to obtain a decision whether persons not in esse would be entitled, under certain circumstances which might never arise, to a share in property, the court declined to decide the question, being of opinion that it would be injurious to the parties to have that decided until the events should happen which would give rise to the question. Bright v. Tyndall, 4 Ch. D. 189; 25 W. R. 109.

When the interest of the parties to a special case is not of such a nature as to give the court jurisdiction to decide the questions, the court will not feel itself bound to decide upon a fictitious interest created for the express purpose of obtaining a decision. Ib.

A father devised and bequeathed real and personal estate to trustees for his daughters for life as tenants in common, and after their respective deaths as to the share of each for such of the children of such daughter "as, being a son or sons, should attain the age of twenty-one, or, being a daughter or daughters, should marry under that age," as tenants in common; with a gift over of the share, original as well as accruing, of any daughter dying without leaving issue taking a vested interest, to the other or others of his daughters and their children in like manner. The testator left six daughters surviving him, one of whom married and had two children, a son and a daughter, both of whom were infants at the date when the special case hereinafter mentioned was stated. One of the daughters assigned the contingent life interest in the shares of her five sisters to which she should become entitled under the gift in the event of any of her sisters dying in her lifetime without having had issue any child or children, who, being a son or sons, should attain twenty-one, or, being a daughter or daughters, should marry under that age, but having had issue a daughter or daughters who should attain twenty-one without having been married. A special case was stated to obtain the opinion of the court whether the assignee of the contingent life estate was entitled to present a petition for the appointment of new trustees of the will, or to file a bill to have the estate administered :—Held, that as the assignment was of a possibility only, and made for the purpose of getting a decision upon the construction of the will by anticipation, and as the point sought to be decided might never arise, on order ought to be made on the special case. Ib.

Courts of law will not answer speculative question ; and therefore a case must state conveyances, &c., that may raise the question. Bliss v. Collins, 1 Jac. & Walk. 426.

On a special case raising questions of legal limitations at the instance of a plaintiff not in possession, the court declined to make any order or to entertain any fictitious question as to title-deeds or accounts in order to found jurisdiction. Pryse v. Pryse, 42 L. J., Ch. 253 ; L. R. 15 Eq. 86 ; 27 L. T. 575 ; 21 W. R. 219.

When a plaintiff in a special case asked the decision of the court that she was under a will legal tenant in tail in remainder, expectant on the determination of a life interest in her father, or in the alternative that she was legal tenant in fee, or in tail in possession, or that she was legal tenant in tail in possession of a share only : —Held, that the court would not assume jurisdiction; or extend the meaning of the 13 & 14 Vict. c. 35, to decide a purely legal question. Ib.

The court refused to give judgment in a special case stated under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 25, it appearing that the action was not bonâ fide brought to try a question really in contest between the parties to the cause. Doe d. Duntze v. Duntze, 6 C. B. 100 ; 17 L. J., C. P. 220.

Future Interests.]—The court will not, on a special case, make any declaration of future rights. Smith v. Gibson, 25 L. T. 559 ; 20 W. R. 88.

No declaration as to future interest will be made upon a special case. Savage v. Tyers, L. R. 7 Ch. 356 ; 20 W. R. 817.

In other Cases.]—Trying a feigned issue without the consent of the court, is a contempt of the court ; and after such a trial they will stay the proceedings. Hoskins v. Berkeley, 4 Term Rep. 402.

Questions on which it is proper for the court of chancery to send cases for the opinion of a court of common law, or to seek the assistance of the judges of such courts, under the statutes 13 & 14 Vict. c. 35, s. 14, and 14 & 15 Vict. c. 83, s. 8, or otherwise. Faulkner v. Grace, 9 Hare, 280.

A special case is only proper for the purpose of obtaining the opinion of the court in cases of doubtful construction. It is not similar to a suit or claim, as the court has no power to bind the rights of parties ; and upon this case the court declined to give any opinion upon two points which involved disputed rights. Bailey v. Collett, 23 L. J., Ch. 230 ; 2 W. R. 216.

E., a married woman, being entitled under a will to a share of 420*l.* to her separate use, and also claiming as one of the next of kin of the testator a share of the general residuary estate upon the ground that the gift of such general residue is void for remoteness, seeks to have these questions of construction determined by special case, making only the legatees of the 420*l.*, her husband, and the trustees, parties :—Held, that such a case is within Sir George Turner's Act. Entwistle v. Cannon, 4 W. R. 450.

c. Form and Settling.

Form.]—In an action against a company, the declaration alleged that the company by their servants so negligently and improperly managed their steam-engine, and the fire and igneous matter contained therein, that, through the negligence and improper conduct of the company by their servants, sparks of fire and portions of the fire and igneous matter passed and flew from the engine to and upon a stack of beans of the plaintiff, in a field adjoining the railway, near to which the company's engine was passing, and the same became ignited, and was wholly consumed. Plea, not guilty. In a special case, stated for the opinion of the court by order of a judge under the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 25, it was stated that the stack of beans was eleven yards from the rails of the railway, that the engines and boilers used upon the railway were of the ordinary description, and were used at the time of the occurrence in question in the ordinary manner :—Held, that there was evidence for a decision of a jury with regard to the negligence of the company ; and that, upon the facts stated, the company was not entitled to a nonsuit ; and that the case, therefore, was improperly stated for the opinion of the court under the statute. Aldridge v. G. W. Ry., 4 Scott (N.R.) 156 ; 1 D. (N.S.) 247 ; 3 Man. & G. 515.

Evidence and documents set out at length in an appendix should be numbered in paragraphs, or the costs will not be allowed. Hadley v. Perks, L. R. 1 Q. B. 444.

Where the facts and questions stated on a special case were such as did not enable the court to determine the rights of the parties:—Held, that the proper course was to discharge the order made below on the case, without prejudice to any question. Bulkeley v. Hope, 8 De G. M. & G. 36; 25 L. J., Ch. 240; 4 W. R. 280—L.JJ.

It is not a proper use of the act of parliament to come to the court for its opinion on a partial or garbled statement of facts. Ib.

Statements on special cases with reference to facts which are doubtful, or as to which the evidence is scanty or insufficient. Domville v. Lamb, 9 Hare (App.) lv.

Signing.]—The court will not hear a special case which is not signed by counsel for both parties. Branchardiere v. Elvery, 18 L. J., Ex. 381. S. P., Bliss v. Collins, 1 Jac. & W. 426.

At the trial a verdict was taken for the plaintiff subject to a case for the opinion of the court. It was referred to a barrister to settle the special case, which being done, it was signed by him and by the plaintiff's counsel; but the defendant's counsel refused to sign it, because documents were omitted. The plaintiff having set the case down for argument, a rule was obtained for striking it out of the paper for irregularity:—Held, that the case might be set down in the special paper without the signature of counsel. Price v. Quarrell, 11 L. J., Q. B. 84; 6 Jur. 604.

A verdict having been taken for the plaintiff, subject to a case to be settled by a barrister, and the defendant having refused to procure the signature of a serjeant to the case when so settled, the court made a rule that the record and postea should be delivered by the associate to the plaintiff, unless the defendant should, within a week, cause the case to be signed. Doe d. Phillips v. Rollings, 2 C. B. 842; 15 L. J., C. P. 186.

The court directed a special case to be set down for argument, which was signed by the plaintiff (who intended to argue it in person) and by counsel for the defendant. Udny v. East India Co., 13 C. B. 742; 22 L. J., C. P. 211; 17 Jur. 1078.

The same counsel may sign a special case, not only for the plaintiff but for the defendants. Craig, Ex parte, 20 L. J., Ch. 136; 15 Jur. 762.

d. Amendment.

When Allowed.]—The court will not allow a special case to be amended, by raising a point which the parties have not raised for their consideration. Hills v. Hunt, 15 C. B. 1.

Where a special case has been stated for the opinion of the court, the court will not, on the application of one of the parties, amend the case to enable the party applying to raise a point which the other party refuses to consent to raise, unless the point has been omitted by error or through fraud. Mersey Dock and Harbour Commissioners v. Jones, 8 C. B. (N.S.) 124; 29 L. J., C. P. 239; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 960; 2 L. T. 243.

Although the court may have power, even after judgment on a special case, to order an amendment by the statement of a fact omitted, and intended to be introduced, it will not do so when the fact is disputed or the intention denied. Pennington v. Cardale, 10 W. R. 544. See Notman v. Anchor Assurance Co., 6 C. B. (N.S.) 536.

The court amended a case by directing (in delivering judgment) certain alterations in the pleadings to meet objections taken by the defendant to the declaration. Carpenter v. Parker, 27 L. J., C. P. 78.

The court will not amend a special case on which judgment has been given by inserting a fact which was known to the parties when the case was drawn. Ganthony v. Witten, 17 L. T. 117; 16 W. R. 61.

The court will not amend a special case by inserting a new fact, unless satisfied that the judgment would have been different if that fact had been originally inserted. Ib.

When the interest of the parties to a special case were not of such a nature as to give the court jurisdiction to decide the questions asked in the case, the court gave permission to amend the case by introducing a question as to the right of the plaintiffs to commit waste in order to give the court jurisdiction. Forsbrook v. Forsbrook, L. R. 3 Ch. 93.

Mistake—Power of Court.]—In an action for the administration of the testator's estate it was ordered that a special case should be stated to obtain the opinion of the court on the effect of the codicil. The case made it appear that 3,000*l.* had been paid by the testator before the date of the codicil, and the declaration made by the court of appeal and the consequent inquiry went on this footing, and referred only to sums paid by him before the date of the codicil. A certificate was made accordingly, and the balance due from J. T. was found to be 453*l.* The 3,000*l.* had in fact been paid by the testator after the date of the codicil, though he had been called upon for payment before. No subsequent order had been made giving effect to the certificate. The executors on discovering the error applied for leave to amend the special case, which was refused by Kay, J., on the ground of want of jurisdiction:—Held, by the court of appeal, that the special case could not be amended. But that where a special case is stated in an action, and a decision given upon it under a mistake of fact, the court is not bound by that decision unless it has been adopted by subsequent orders, but may disregard it, direct the action to go on to trial, and direct inquiries to ascertain the real facts. On the present occasion the parties waiving all technical objections, and the payment of the 3,000*l.* after the date of the codicil being admitted, the court decided that the legacy must be reduced by 3,453*l.*, it not being material whether the 3,000*l.* was paid before or after the date of the codicil. Taylor's Estate, In re, Tomlin v. Underhay, 22 Ch. D. 495; 48 L. T. 552—C. A.

A material fact having been inadvertently omitted in the special case, but appearing to have been recognised by all parties, a preface was introduced before the order, stating the circumstances from which it appeared that that fact had been recognised by the parties. Lane v. Debenham, 11 Hare, 188; 17 Jur. 1005.

Special Power of Amendment.]—A term in a special case that the court should be at liberty to amend any part of the pleadings as they may think proper, gives no additional power beyond that possessed by a judge at nisi prius under

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 23. Chapman v. Sutton, 3 D. & L. 646 ; 15 L. J., C. P. 166.

By Addition of Parties.]—A special case was amended by leave at the hearing by adding a party in existence before the case was filed, but accidentally omitted, and ordered to be set down, as amended against the added defendant. Barnaby v. Tassell, L. R. 11 Eq. 363 ; 24 L. T. 221 ; 19 W. R. 323.

May be ordered before Statement of Claim.]—A judge has power, under Ord. XXXIV. r. 2, after writ and appearance, and before statement of claim, to order a point of law to be decided by statement of special case or otherwise. Metropolitan Board of Works v. New River Co., 45 L. J., Q. B. 759 ; 1 Q. B. D. 727. Affirmed, 46 L. J., Q. B. 183 ; 2 Q. B. D. 67 ; 35 L. T. 589 ; 25 W. R. 175—C. A.

Parties — Classes of Persons — Representation.]—The court heard a special case under 13 & 14 Vict. c. 35, s. 1, to determine questions arising between classes of persons respectively represented by one of them on behalf of all others in the same position. Bardwell v. Sheffield Waterworks Co., 41 L. J., Ch. 700 ; L. R. 14 Eq. 517 ; 20 W. R. 939.

XXXIV. r. 8, and the saving clause in the Statute Law Revision Act, 1883, the protection given to trustees and others acting on the declaration of the court on a special case is preserved, notwithstanding the repeal of the act. Forster v. Schlesinger, 54 L. T. 51.

—— Creditor.]—Where a creditor of a deceased person is named as plaintiff in a special case, the record should not be entitled, "between such creditor on behalf of himself and all other creditors of the deceased plaintiffs and the defendants," such other creditors not being before the court, and therefore not bound by the proceedings. Lee v. Head, 1 Kay & J. 620 ; 3 Eq. R. 1046 ; 24 L. J., Ch. 569 ; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 722 ; 3 W. R. 591.

—— Omission of.]—The name of one of several children whose interests were identical, who was on a voyage to the East Indies, was allowed to be omitted as a defendant in a special case, in which the interests of the children were proposed to be determined. Brown, In re, 29 Beav. 401 ; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 650 ; 9 W. R. 430.

—— Adding.]—A special case, amended by leave at the hearing by adding a party in existence before the case was filed, but accidentally omitted, and ordered to be set down, as amended, against the added defendant. Barnaby v. Tassell, L. R. 11 Eq. 363 ; 24 L. T. 221 ; 19 W. R. 323.

Birth of Parties after Case set down.]—When the defendants to a special case include a class of children which is increased by the birth of a child after the case is filed, the new party should be brought before the court by a supplemental statement. Palmer v. Flower, 18 W. R. 887.

Upon the birth, after a special case has been set down for hearing, of an infant tenant in tail, the proper course for bringing such necessary party before the court is, that the order for setting down should be discharged, and the special case amended by making the infant a party. Savage v. Snell, 40 L. J., Ch. 216 ; L. R. 11 Eq. 264 ; 23 L. T. 801 ; 19 W. R. 382.

Since the filing of a special case affecting property to which certain infant defendants were entitled, another child in the same interest had been born. The court, at the hearing, dispensed with the presence of the newly-born child. Palmer v. Flower, 41 L. J., Ch. 193 ; L. R. 13 Eq. 250 ; 25 L. T. 816 ; 20 W. R. 174.

After a special case had been, under the usual order, set down for hearing under Sir George Turner's act (13 & 14 Vict. c. 35), an infant tenant in tail was born. The court, on being informed of the fact, held, that the proper course was, that the order for setting down the case should be amended by bringing the infant before the court, and that appearances de novo should be entered for all the parties to the amended case ; and then that upon proper affidavits the leave of the court should be obtained, under the 13th section of the act, for setting down the amended case. Thistlethwaite v. Garnier, 5 De G. & Sm. 73 ; 21 L. J., Ch. 16 ; 16 Jur. 57.

On Bankruptcy of Parties.]—Where a verdict is taken for the plaintiff subject to a special case, and the defendant subsequently becoming bankrupt, the plaintiff declines to proceed with it, the court will send the cause down again. Cottam v. Partridge, 3 Scott (N.R.) 174 ; 2 Man. & G. 843 ; 9 D. P. C. 629 ; 10 L. J., C. P. 186 ; 5 Jur. 680.

Death of Parties.]—After verdict for a sole claimant in ejectment, taken subject to a special case, and before the case came on for argument, the claimant died. The court ordered the case to stand over until after a suggestion under s. 190 of 15 & 16 Vict. c. 76, had been entered by the legal representative of the claimant. Denison v. Holiday, 1 H. & N. 61 ; 26 L. J., Ex. 227.

J., Q. B. 258 ; 10 Jur. 570.

Motion or Petition "Of course."]—The terms "motion or petition of course," in the 19th section of the 13 & 14 Vict. c. 35, mean that no service is requisite, but the same must be mentioned to the court. Harrold, In re, 20 L. J., Ch. 168 ; 15 Jur. 763.

Time of Delivery.]—A verdict in ejectment having been taken for the plaintiff by consent, subject to a special case, and a long period having elapsed without the plaintiff delivering a case, the court, notwithstanding the alleged insolvency of the defendant, and notwithstanding that proceedings in equity were pending as to the property, made absolute a rule to set aside the verdict, and for a new trial, unless within a certain time the plaintiff delivered a case. Seymour v. Brecon Corporation, 29 L. J., Ex. 296.

On a special case by way of appeal from a rule to enter a verdict for the defendant, he is not called upon to take any step towards settling or advancing the case ; but if the plaintiff does not do so with due promptitude, the court will compel him to do so under pain of final judgment for the defendant. Hunt v. Allgood, 3 F. & F. 155.

Power to draw Inferences.]—When, in a special case, power for the court to draw inferences from the facts stated is not reserved, neither the court of first instance nor the court of error can draw such inferences. Latter v. White, 41 L. J., Q. B. 342 ; L. R. 5 H. L. 578.

The court refused to allow a special case, stated under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 25, to be argued where the court was to draw inferences from the facts stated, as a jury might, and liberty was reserved to either party to turn it into a special verdict. Engstrom v. Brightman, 5 C. B. 419 ; 5 D. & L. 499 ; 17 L. J., C. P. 142 ; 12 Jur. 337.

J., C. P. 102.

Time for setting down.]—A verdict and judgment having been taken for a plaintiff subject to a special case to be settled by a barrister, and the referee having settled it, the defendant obtained a rule to set aside the judgment, on the ground that the plaintiff neglected to take the necessary steps to set the case down for argument. Cause was shewn upon an affidavit stating that the delay had arisen partly from the refusal of the defendant to pay a moiety of the referee's fees for settling the special case, and partly from the fact of the plaintiff's attorney having been, until within two days of the application for the rule, engaged in negotiations for obtaining a loan of money on mortgage for the defendant, to enable him to settle the plaintiff's claim. The court discharged the rule, with costs. Howkins v. Bennet, 6 C. B. (N.S.) 386.

When more than six months have elapsed since an order for setting down a special case for argument without the order being drawn up, it is necessary, in order to the drawing up of such order, that the matter should be again mentioned to the court. Bastard v. Page, 17 L. T. 560.

Setting down when Parties Absent.]—The court directed a special case to be set down for hearing on the application of the executrix, the first tenant for life and the trustees being defendants ; the persons interested in remainder, who

R. 972.

A special case may be set down for argument as a short cause on the usual certificate that it is fit to be heard as a short cause. Dole v. Atkinson, 3 Jur. (N.S.) 41.

Where a rule to set aside an award is made into a special case, the counsel, who objects to the award ought to begin and have the reply. Dippins v. Anglesea (Marquis), 2 D. P. C. 647.

J., Ex. 269.

Hearing Counsel.]—Upon the argument of a special case only one counsel is heard on each side, except when the case is stated upon an order of sessions, when it is brought before the court upon an order nisi to quash, and there all the counsel instructed on both sides may be heard. Spurling v. Bantoft, 60 L. J., Q. B. 745; [1891] 2 Q. B. 384; 65 L. T. 584; 40 W. R. 157; 17 Cox, C. C. 372; 56 J. P. 132.

Answer disposing of Action—Motion for Judgment.]—Where the answer to the special case disposes of the action, the proper course is to take a declaration in the terms of the answer and stay further proceedings in the action, and it is unnecessary to set down the action for trial on motion for judgment, as suggested in Harrison v. Cornwall Minerals Ry. (16 Ch. D. 66, 80). Cane, In re, Ruff v. Sivers, 60 L. J., Ch. 36; 63 L. T. 746.

Where a special case for the opinion of the court is stated in an action pursuant to the Rules of Court, 1875, Ord. XXXIV. r. 1, and the answers to the special case in fact dispose of the action, the proper course is to take the answers in the shape of a judgment making declarations to the effect of the answers, the action being, if necessary, set down pro formâ for trial on motion for judgment. Harrison v. Cornwall Minerals Ry., 49 L. J., Ch. 834; 16 Ch. D. 66; 43 L. T. 496; 29 W. R. 258.

He stated a special case, raising the question whether the plaintiff was entitled to the flow of light, on which the judgment of the court was for the plaintiff:—Held, that there was no judgment upon which error could be brought. Courtauld v. Legh, 38 L. J., Ex. 124; L. R. 4 Ex. 187; 20 L. T. 496.

Generally.]—See COSTS.

Costs of Cause.]—Where after writ issued a special case is stated, without pleadings, under 15 & 16 Vict. c. 76, s. 46, and there is no agreement as to costs, a plaintiff who has obtained judgment for part of his claim is entitled to the general costs of the cause, and the defendant is entitled to deduct any costs which he may have incurred in respect of the matter on which he has succeeded. Elliott v. Bishop, 10 Ex. 522; 3 C. L. R. 272; 24 L. J., Ex. 33; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 46; 3 W. R. 160.

The court has power, under the 32nd section of the statute 13 & 14 Vict. c. 35, to give costs of a special case under it. Jackson v. Craig, 20 L. J., Ch. 204; 15 Jur. 811.

Where the general costs of the suit are given to a party by the decree, they include the costs of a special case on which the opinion of a court of law was taken under the direction in the cause of this court. Humphrey v. Grey, 3 De G. & Sm. 450; 18 L. J., Ch. 488; 13 Jur. 823.

Out of what Fund.]—On a special case the costs follow the same rule as in administration suits, and are payable out of the general residue; and if there be none, out of the property specifically bequeathed. Cookson v. Bingham, 17 Beav. 262.

The court has no jurisdiction to order the costs of all parties to a special case to be paid unless there is a fund in court. The proper course is to insert in the special case a question out of what estate or fund the costs should be paid. Blinston v. Warburton, 2 Kay & J. 410; 25 L. J., Ch. 468; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 858.

Costs of a special case paid out of surplus income. Hume v. Richardson, 31 L. J., Ch. 713; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 686; 6 L. T. 624; 10 W. R. 528.

A testator bequeathed his leasehold and personal property, except plate, to his wife absolutely, and he devised his real estate to sell, and out of the produce to pay his funeral and testamentary expenses and debts, and to invest the residue and pay the income to his wife for life, with remainders over:—Held, that the funeral and testamentary expenses and debts were primarily payable out of the produce of the real estate. The costs of a special case to determine this question are nevertheless payable out of the personal estate. Gilbertson v. Gilbertson, 34 Beav. 354; 12 L. T. 816; 13 W. R. 765.

Who entitled to.]—A special case raised a question of election under a will, the plaintiff and the defendant each fairly claiming what he thought himself entitled to, and no question of conduct being involved in the matter. The plaintiff succeeded:—Held, that he was entitled to his costs. Ustieke v. Peters, 4 Kay & J. 457; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 1271.

Judgment reversed on Appeal.]—A special case, stated under 15 & 16 Vict. c. 76, s. 46, in which the question was, whether the plaintiff had a right to sell to the defendant certain tenant's fixtures and trade fixtures. The court gave judgment for the plaintiff for the value of the trade fixtures, and for the defendant as to the tenant's fixtures. The master allowed the plaintiff the general costs of the cause, deducting the costs of the defendant in respect of that part on which he had succeeded. The defendant took proceedings in error, and the court of error reversed the judgment for the defendant, and affirmed the judgment for the plaintiff, and increased it by the value of the tenant's fixtures, but made no mention of costs:—Held, that the court below had no power to direct the master to review his taxation by allowing the plaintiff his costs of the proceedings below, and disallowing those of the defendant, but that the costs must be taxed according to the judgment of the court of error. Elliott v. Bishop, 11 Ex. 321; 24 L. J., Ex. 303; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 808; 3 W. R. 596.

Follow Event.]—When a special case is stated for the opinion of the court, the costs follow the event. Richards v. James, 16 L. T. 672.

When a verdict is found for the plaintiff on some counts and for the defendant on other counts, and the questions raised on the counts found for the defendant are submitted for the opinion of the court in the form of a special case, on which the defendant obtains judgment, the master should allow the costs of the special case to the defendant. Gosbell v. Archer, 5 N. & M. 523; 2 A. & E. 500; 1 H. & W. 559; 5 L. J., K. B. 35.

Abortive Special Case.]—Where, after verdict, the court recommended a special case, which was acceded to by both parties, but which was never finally settled by reason of the defendant's default:—Held, that the plaintiff, who had the general costs of the cause, was not entitled to the costs of the abortive special case. Poley v. Botfield, 4 D. & L. 328; 16 M. & W. 65; 16 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 227; 27 R. R. 630.

Case Unnecessary.]—In an action upon a bill of exchange drawn in figures for 245*l.*, and in words for two hundred, a verdict was taken for the plaintiff, subject to the opinion of the court upon a special case; if the court was of opinion that the plaintiff was entitled to recover either of those sums, a verdict to be entered accordingly; if neither, a nonsuit. The court directed a verdict for 200*l.*, which the defendant had been ready to pay, but had not tendered. The court refused to allow him his costs attending the special case, holding that the declaration might have been amended at nisi prius upon nominal costs. Saunderson v. Piper, 5 Bing. (N.C.) 561; 7 Scott, 418; 7 D. P. C. 632; 9 L. J., C. P. 64.

Delay.]—When a special case, on which judgment had been given for the plaintiff, was, at the instance of the defendant, turned into a special verdict, that he might have an opportunity of obtaining the judgment of a court of error thereon, the court, after the lapse of two years, and after the costs of the trial and special case had been taxed and paid, refused to allow the plaintiff the costs thereby occasioned. Collins v. Gwynne, 2 Scott, 332; 4 D. P. C. 122.

a. In what Cases.

Petition instead of Summons—Costs.]—Where under the Judgment Law Amendment Act, 1864 (the procedure under which has been altered by Ord. LV. r. 9 (b), of the Rules of the Supreme Court), an application has been made by a judgment creditor by petition instead of by originating summons for the sale of the debtor's interest in certain houses in respect of which a receiver has been appointed, the court has power under Ord. LXX. r. 1, to allow the petition, but the petitioner, if successful, will only be entitled to the costs of an originating summons. Martin and Varlow, In re, 13 R. 189; 43 W. R. 247.

—— Payment out of Court.]—Where money has been paid into court under the provisions of the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, and the ascertainment of the persons entitled involves the construction of a will, the application must be by petition, and not by summons. Hicks, In re, N. E. Ry., Ex parte, 63 L. J., Ch. 568; 8 R. 319; 70 L. T. 529.

Petition or Summons for Payment out of Court.]—See post, col. 763, and LANDS CLAUSES ACT.

Petition or Bill.]—A., being entitled, under a decree, to an annuity, which she was to receive from the receiver in the cause, borrowed 100*l.* from B., and signed a memorandum of agreement to the effect that her said annuity should be a security for that sum and interest, and also gave an order upon the receiver for payment to B. of 100*l.* Upon B. presenting the order to the receiver, the receiver stated that he would not pay it, because A. had desired him to pay to no person but her agent. Upon the petition of B., praying an order upon the receiver for payment:—Held, that, as A. appeared and opposed the petition, the court had no jurisdiction to make the order upon petition, but that B. should have come by bill. Wastell v. Leslie, Carter, Ex parte, 11 Jur. 29.

Question between Crown and Subject.]—When the crown, being interested in respect of administration duty, consented to appear, the court decided the question between the crown and subject on petition. Ware's Trusts, In re, 41 L. J., Ch. 121; 25 L. T. 737; 20 W. R. 142.

Life Assurance — Policy — Appointment of Trustees.]—Application for the appointment of trustees of a policy of life assurance, effected under the provisions of the Married Women's Property Acts, for the benefit of the wife and children of the assured, may be made by petition. Atkinson's Policy Trusts, In re, 13 R. 285.

Steward.]—Court will not determine in whom is the right to appoint a steward on petition for delivery of deeds, &c., to the appointee of one of the parties. Mott v. Buxton, 7 Ves. 201.

Court taking Possession of Property.]—If the court takes possession of the property of an individual by mistake, he may apply by petition pro interesse suo, and the court may immediately grant him relief. Anon., 1 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 11.

Compromise.]—The proposition that every agreement for a compromise of a suit can be carried into effect by petition is not general. Dawson v. Newsome, 6 Jur. (N.S.) 625; 8 W. R. 725.

Setting aside Injunction.]—A person not a party to a suit, in which an injunction has been made, will properly proceed by petition to set aside the injunction. Bourbaud v. Bourbaud, 10 L. T. 781; 12 W. R. 1024.

Real Assets.]—Specialty creditor of uncle of bankrupt, from whom real estate descended to bankrupt through elder brother, seeking to follow real assets in hands of assignees, and an inquiry as to specialty debts outstanding, and the assets, allowed to be by petition, the property being small. Morton, Ex parte, 5 Ves. 449.

Letters of Administration.]—Semble, where a party objecting to a paper annexed to letters of administration has been by the court assigned to declare whether he propounds another instrument, it is irregular and inconclusive, instead of following up the assignation, to have the question decided upon petition. But such procedure estops the parties from further litigation. Henfrey v. Henfrey, 4 Moore, P. C. 29; 6 Jur. 355.

Counsel's Clerk.]—Petition against a clerk of counsel dismissed for want of jurisdiction, but without costs, on account of his improper conduct in the matter complained of. Cotton, Ex parte, 9 Beav. 107; 10 Jur. 84.

Payment of Money.]—In an interpleader suit to determine the right of conflicting claimants to portions of an aggregate fund, the court directed inquiries as to the claims of several defendants, and reserved further direction and costs. One defendant obtained a separate report, finding his title to a portion of the fund, and, being unable to set down the cause on further directions, in consequence of the claimants of the other portions of the fund not having proceeded to establish their title, presented his petition for payment of the sum found due to him; but the court refused to order such payment upon petition, or until the cause was heard on further directions, and the costs of the suit could be disposed of. Bruce v. Elwin, 9 Hare, 294.

A testator gave his property after the death of his wife to trustees, in trust to pay the interest and profits to his two daughters, J. and E., to their separate use, with a direction to pay to and apply for the benefit of A., the son of E., 200*l.* annually when he attained the age of twenty-one years, and before that period such part of the 200*l.* bequeathed to him as might be judged proper. He then gave his daughters power to dispose of the principal by will to their children or grandchildren respectively, "except that proportion of principal given to E., and from which the interest is to arise, to my grandson, namely, 4,000*l.*, which sum shall be my grandson's property"; and in case either of the daughters died without issue, he limited her share of the fund over to the other daughter, her children, or grandchildren. The executrix having, in mistake, made payments to A. in respect of his annuity for two years before he attained twenty-one, was entitled to retain them out of the future payments of the annuity. An order authorising her to retain them, and made upon petition, after the decree had been passed and entered, is regular. Livesey v. Livesey, 3 Russ. 287. S. C. in part reversed Id. 542; 6 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 13; and 7 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 120.

A. was appointed receiver, but the solicitor in the cause alone acted and paid over the rents to the tenant for life. An incumbrancer compelled the receiver to pay the same amount into court; and after payment of his claim there remained a surplus, which was paid to the tenant for life:—Held, that A. could not, on petition, obtain repayment by the tenant for life or out of the estates. Gurdon v. Badcock, 6 Beav. 157; 12 L. J., Ch. 62.

A feme covert, entitled to a reversionary interest in a chose in action, obtained a release of the prior interest; and a petition being presented by all parties interested, including the feme covert, for payment and distribution of the fund:—Held, that payment of her share could not be ordered to be made to the married woman and her husband on petition. Semble, a bill is the proper course. Story v. Tonge, 7 Beav. 91; 13 L. J., Ch. 191; 8 Jur. 566.

Accounts.]—If court of exchequer will interfere at all in cases of commissioners of audit investigating accounts of public functionary, it will not in a summary way on petition and motion, but on bill only. Colebrooke, Ex parte, 7 Price, 87.

The contract being afterwards performed, it was held to be regular for the plaintiff to bring before the court, upon petition, the facts which had taken place subsequently to the answer. Price v. Penzance Corporation, 4 Hare, 506.

b. FORM OF.

Signature of Counsel.]—Notwithstanding Ord. XIX. r. 4, applications for the advice of the court under 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35, s. 30, still require the signature of counsel. Boulton's Trusts, In re, 51 L. J., Ch. 493; 30 W. R. 596.

In Alternative.]—A petition may be framed in the alternative, and the respondent cannot call upon the petitioner to elect to proceed for only one of the objects of the petition, unless under special circumstances. Schooley, Ex parte, Buck, 476.

Residence.]—The petition of a person not a party to the cause must state his residence, otherwise it cannot be heard. Glazbrook v. Gillatt, 9 Beav. 492.

Setting out Transactions.]—At the hearing of a suit to establish a will, an issue was directed at the instance of the heiress-at-law, who was a married woman. Before any trial, she and her husband presented a petition, stating that, at the urgent request of their children (who were devisees), they had agreed to withdraw all opposition to the will upon being allowed their costs, and praying that the order directing the issue might be discharged upon these terms upon this petition; an order was made according to the prayer, and purporting to be made upon the consent of the married woman by her counsel. Subsequently a private act of parliament was obtained authorising leases to be made of the devised estates. The married woman was one of the petitioners for the act, and was excepted from the saving clause; and the act recited the will, and proceeded upon the assumption of its validity. Some years afterwards the married woman presented a petition to rehear the cause. This petition was intituled in the cause and in the matter of the private act. It stated the subsequent transactions, but not the provisions of the act:—Held, that the preceding transactions did not constitute grounds for taking the petition off the file; and that such grounds were not afforded by the introduction into the petition of statements as to the matters occurring since the hearing, or by the petition being intituled in the matter of the act, or by the omission to set out in it the act itself, especially, upon appeal, when these objections of form had not been insisted upon in the court below. Turner v. Turner, 2 De G. M. & G. 28; 21 L. J., Ch. 422.

Title—Act of Parliament.]—The court will not make an order on a petition presented under an act of parliament, unless it be intituled in the matter of the proper act. French, In re, 2 Jo. & Lat. 243; 8 Ir. Eq. R. 96.

It is not necessary to intitule a petition in the matter of the act of parliament under which it is presented; and if it be intituled in the matter of a wrong act of parliament, and the court can see, from the matter of the petition itself, that it has jurisdiction to make the order prayed under the authority of a public statute, the reference to the act in the title will be rejected as surplusage. Hunter v. Edmonds, 6 Ir. Eq. R. 123.

It is not necessary that the petition or other proceedings under the judgment creditors' acts should be intituled of those acts. Nagle v. Creagh, 6 Ir. Eq. R. 265.

The title of a petition presented under an act of parliament, as the Trustee Act (1 Will. 4, c. 60), should contain a reference to that act, as well as to the matter of the petition. Law, In re, 4 Beav. 509; 11 L. J., Ch. 118; 6 Jur. 615.

Petitions for the appointment of new trustees of charity estates must be intituled in the matter of Sir Samuel Romilly's act, and the fiat of the attorney-general previously obtained. Bierton Charity Land, In re, 10 Hare (App.) lxv.

The rule which requires petitions for the appointment of new trustees of charities to be intituled in the matter of Sir Samuel Romilly's act applies to the case of a petition for the appointment of trustees of a Wesleyan chapel. Varteg Iron Works Wesleyan Chapel, In re, 10 Hare (App.) xxxvii.

At the hearing of a suit to establish a will, an issue was directed at the instance of the heiress-at-law, who was a married woman. Before any trial, she and her husband presented a petition, stating that, at the urgent request of their children (who were devisees), they had agreed to withdraw all opposition to the will upon being allowed their costs, and praying that the order directing the issue might be discharged upon these terms upon this petition; an order was made according to the prayer, and purporting to be made upon the consent of the married woman by her counsel. Subsequently a private act of parliament was obtained authorising leases to be made of the demised estates. The married woman was one of the petitioners for the act, and was excepted from the saving clause; and the act recited the will, and proceeded upon the assumption of its validity. Some years afterwards the married woman presented a petition to rehear the cause. This petition was intituled in the cause and in the matter of the private act. It stated the subsequent transactions, but not the provisions of the act:—Held, that the preceding transactions did not constitute grounds for taking the petition off the file; and that such grounds were not afforded by the introduction into the petition of statements as to the matters occurring since the hearing, or by the petition being intituled in the matter of the act, or by the omission to set out in it the act itself, especially, upon appeal, when these objections of form had not been insisted upon in the court below. Turner v. Turner, 2 De G. M. & G. 28; 21 L. J., Ch. 422.

—— Names of Solicitors.]—A petition was presented and answered for the taxation of a solicitor's bill of costs, &c., and intituled in a cause which had no existence; a copy of it was then served on the solicitors, who, by letter to the petitioner's solicitors, apprised them of the irregularity of the petition, and of their intention not to appear upon it. An order was then obtained by the petitioner on the petition day to adjourn the hearing of the petition till the next petition day, with liberty in the meanwhile to amend the petition. The petition was accordingly amended, one of such amendments being the intituling it "In the matter" of the solicitors (stating their several names), in addition to the title of the cause. No new fiat was affixed to the petition, and it was served on the solicitors, who declined appearing upon it. An order was obtained by the petitioners for taxation of the solicitors' bill of costs, on the condition (suggested by the petitioners' counsel) of paying the amount of the bill of costs into court. This order was discharged by the Master of the Rolls, on the motion of the solicitors, before the amount of the bill of costs was paid into court. On appeal, the Lord Chancellor affirmed the order of the Master of the Rolls discharging the previous order obtained for the taxation of the bill of costs; the court below having no jurisdiction, under the circumstances stated, to make such a previous order. West v. Smith, 10 L. J., Ch. 230.

—— Infant.]—Where a petition is presented in a cause for a reference to inquire whether an infant is a trustee under the statute of Anne, and the infant is not a party to the cause, it is not enough that the petition be intituled in the cause: it must be intituled also in the matter of the infant. Headley v. Redhead, 1 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 159.

—— Bankruptcy.]—Petition under 33 Geo. 3, c. 54, s. 10, in consequence of bankruptcy of trustee of friendly society, should, it seems, be intituled in bankruptcy only, and not in matter of the society. Anon., 6 Madd. 98.

Court has no jurisdiction in bankruptcy to declare an infant heir of assignee a trustee of bankrupt's estate; the petition must be intituled under 6 Geo. 4, c. 74. Kirk, Ex parte, Buck, 478. S. P., Beddam, Ex parte, 1 Rose, 310.

A petition for the committal of a person for publishing insulting observations on the court of review, and on parties engaged in litigation before it with reference to proceedings on a particular bankruptcy, is properly intituled in the matter of such bankruptcy. Turner, Ex parte, Martin, In re, 3 Mont. D. & D. 523.

—— Cause—Matter.]—There being a matter and a cause, reference by which it is sought to affect the fund should be directed in the cause as well as matter. Massey, In re, 2 Moll. 365.

—— Lunacy.]—A petition praying that the committee of a lunatic may be ordered to transfer property vested in the lunatic as a trustee ought to be intituled in the lunacy, and need not be intituled in the matter of the act which authorises the Lord Chancellor to make the order. Fowler, In re, 2 Russ. 449.

Two Suits.]—An order was made in a suit in the court of Kindersley, V.-C., declaring K., a party to the suit, entitled to money. An order was made in a suit at the rolls directing a party to that suit to pay money. Sequestrators were appointed in the suit at the rolls against K.'s estate. The plaintiffs in the suit at the rolls were also the defendants in the suit before the vice-chancellor; they and the sequestrators presented a petition in the suit before the vice-chancellor praying payment to them of K.'s money in that suit, or the transfer of it to the credit of the other cause:—Held, that the petition must be amended by being entitled in both suits, and must then be presented to the lords justices, but that K. must, in the meantime, be enjoined from receiving the money which had been ordered to be paid to her. Knight v. Knight, 25 L. J., Ch. 848; 4 W. R. 771.

Parties.]—A special jurisdiction, under an act of parliament, must be strictly followed; therefore, under an act preventing the necessity of recovery by tenant in tail of land to be purchased, each party must petition. Baynes v. Baynes, 9 Ves. 462.

Under the Public Health Act, local bodies are not bodies corporate. Petitions must be in the name of the clerk, and pray payment to the treasurer. Llanelly Local Board, Ex parte, 22 L. J., Ch. 419; 17 Jur. 107; 1 W. R. 159.

c. SERVICE.

Time for.]—It is irregular to serve a petition after the petition day for which it is answered. Salvidge v. Tutton, 10 L. J., Ch. 347.

What Parties.]—A petition cannot be brought on merely for the purpose of ascertaining what parties are to be served. A petitioner must serve such persons as he thinks proper, and state in the footnote who have been served. Green, In re, 29 L. J., Ch. 716; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 530.

Out of Jurisdiction.]—Where some of the persons entitled to certain funds in court were residing out of the jurisdiction, and it was impossible to deal with such funds unless a petition, which had been presented asking for payment out of a portion thereof, was served upon such persons, the court gave liberty to serve the petition, together with a copy of the order, upon them. Colls v. Robins, 55 L. T. 479.

The court has no jurisdiction to allow service out of the jurisdiction of a petition under the trustee relief act for payment of money out of court. Gordon's Settlement Trusts, In re (W. N. 1887, p. 192), not followed. On appeal from this decision, it appearing that the order sought by the petition was only for carrying into full effect an order which had recently been obtained by the respondents, the court of appeal, without deciding that leave was necessary, gave leave to serve the petition on the solicitors who had presented the former petition, and who were willing to accept service. Jellard, In re, 39 Ch. D. 424; 60 L. T. 83—C. A.

Filing Copy.]—A petitioner having refused to deliver the original petition, for the purpose of being filed with the clerk of the reports, prior to the order made upon its being passed, leave was given to the respondents to file in its stead the copy of the petition with which they had been served. Andrews v. Walton, 1 Myl. & C. 360.

A petition, presented at the rolls, was afterwards heard by the Lord Chancellor, who made an order upon it, but before the order was passed the original petition was lost. The Lord Chancellor allowed a copy of it, certified by the under-secretary at the rolls to be a true copy, to be filed, in pursuance of the 27th of the new orders of December, 1833, instead of the original petition. Sanderson v. Walker, 1 Myl. & C. 359.

Where original petition has been lost, the copy left with the court may be filed in its place. Smith v. Hardwood, 1 Sm. & G. 137 ; 1 W. R. 111.

A petitioner having refused to file the original petition, it was ordered that the respondent be at liberty to file a copy, and that the petitioner do pay the respondent his costs of the application. Devonshire, In re, 32 Beav. 241.

Petitioners neglected to file the petition and had lost it. On the application of the respondents, liberty was given to file a copy, and the petitioners were ordered to pay the costs of the application. Anglo-Greek Steam, &c. Co., In re, 35 Beav. 419.

Costs.]—A petition which the court has no jurisdiction to entertain may be dismissed with costs, semble. Isaac, In re, 4 Myl. & C. 11.

—— Two Petitions.]—When two petitions are presented on the same day in the same matter, the court will order the costs of the more perfect petition only to be paid out of the fund, notwithstanding that the less perfect petition was presented first. Pring's Trust, In re, 42 L. J., Ch. 473 ; 28 L. T. 467.

Where two petitions with the same object are bonâ fide prepared by different parties, the costs of both will be allowed ; but where solicitors were aware that a petition had been presented, and nevertheless persisted in presenting another for the same object, no costs were allowed on the second petition. Chaplin, In re, 33 L. J., Ch. 183 ; 9 L. T. 677 ; 3 N. R. 289.

—— Tender for—Respondent not Interested.]—When a petitioner does not, on serving the petition upon a respondent who has no interest in the matter, tender him a sum sufficient to enable him to consult a solicitor as to the petition, the petitioner must pay the costs of his appearing. Wood v. Boucher, 40 L. J., Ch. 112 ; L. R. 6 Ch. 77 ; 23 L. T. 723 ; 19 W. R. 234.

If a petitioner, on serving a petition on a respondent, the necessity for whose appearance is a matter of doubt, at the same time offers him 40*s.* in order to enable him to get legal advice, and the respondent afterwards appears, the court will consider whether the appearance is justified or not, and if it finds that the appearance was not justified, will not order the petitioner to pay such respondent's costs of appearance. Otherwise the respondent must have his costs of appearance. Duggan, In re, L. R. 8 Eq. 697.

—— Party Served and Appearing.]—A party who is served with a petition, but who has no interest in the order to be made upon it, is not entitled to the costs of appearing on the hearing of that petition. Garey v. Whittingham, Turn. & R. 405. But see note, id. 407. S. C., 2 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 16.

A party who had been served with a petition, and had appeared upon it, was held entitled to the costs of his appearance, although nothing was prayed against him, and he had no interest in the result of the petition. Lodge v. Robins, 9 L. J., Ch. 331 ; 4 Jur. 478.

A party served with a petition held not to lose the costs of his appearance merely because his counsel at the hearing had raised an unsuccessful opposition. Stevens, Ex parte, 2 Ph. 772 ; 13 Jur. 2.

Where an unnecessary party had been served with a petition solely in consequence of a claim set up by him, he was left to bear his own costs. Shrewsbury School, In re, 1 Macn. & G. 85 ; 13 Jur. 201.

Where a party is served with a petition or notice of motion, he is not bound to take upon himself the responsibility of deciding whether his interest in the matter is such as to render it unnecessary for him to appear, and he will not be deprived of the costs of his appearance on the ground that he is not interested in the matter. Bamford v. Watts, 2 Beav. 201.

A defendant who has been served with a petition, though he has no interest in the subject-matter of it, is entitled to the costs of appearance. Marks v. Marks, 18 L. J., Ch. 171.

A party served with a petition appeared merely to ask for his costs:—Held, not a sufficient reason to deprive him of them. Bruce v. Kinloch, 11 Beav. 432.

A solicitor was concerned in a cause for two parties, and a petition was served on him which affected one only, but without any intimation in respect of which of these parties he was served. He appeared on the hearing for both:—Held, that the party having no interest in the matter was entitled to his costs. Kilminster v. Noel, 12 Beav. 246; 19 L. J., Ch. 25.

A respondent unnecessarily served is not, as a matter of course, entitled to his costs of appearing. Birch, In re, 2 Kay & J. 369.

The court disapproves of the appearance of parties on the hearing of a petition, though served, where their appearance is unnecessary, and their costs will be disallowed. Day v. Croft, 19 Beav. 518.

Where a person has been properly served with a petition, he has a right to have his costs of appearance. Burnell, In re, 10 Jur. (N.S.) 289; 10 L. T. 127; 12 W. R. 568.

Where, upon a petition being presented, parties having no sufficient interest in the subject-matter to make their appearance necessary are served and appear, they are entitled to their costs. Clarke v. Simpson, 17 L. T. 559.

a. In what Cases.

Disposing of whole Subject of Action.]—The defendant was in the employment of the plaintiffs, the executors of P., who were carrying out certain contracts with a railway company on behalf of P.'s estate, for some time previous to 1895. While in their employment he measured up and entered the work done by the plaintiffs for the railway company. During a part of the time he also acted in some capacity on behalf of the railway company, and received a part of his salary from them. In April, 1895, the defendant of his own accord left the plaintiffs' service, and took with him the books or documents in which he had entered the said measurements. The plaintiffs brought this action for the recovery of the documents, and now moved for an interlocutory order for their delivery:—Held, on the evidence, that the papers had never been in the defendant's possession in any capacity but that of clerk to the plaintiffs; that his taking them away was wholly improper, and that he ought to be ordered to give them up in four days, notwithstanding that their recovery was the sole object of the action. Whitwham v. Moss, 73 L. T. 57.

Court will not, upon motion, make an order which will decide the merits of the cause. Like v. Beresford, 3 Bro. C. C. 366.

An order embracing the whole subject of the suit cannot be made on motion without express consent. Notice to the other parties is not sufficient if they do not attend. Ib.

It is very common in equity to decide a question on motion, where all the facts appear upon the bill and answer, and there is nothing to dispute but the law of the court. Revel v. Hussey, 2 Ball & B. 286; 12 R. R. 87.

A testator devised and bequeathed certain copyhold and leasehold estates to trustees, upon trust to pay the rents and profits to M. A., for her life, to her separate use, and without power of anticipation, and a testatrix gave certain freehold estates to trustees in trust for the same M. A., for her life, to her separate use, and without power of anticipation. M. A. was a feme sole at the date of the testator's will, and of his death. She was also a feme sole at the date of the testatrix's will, but she was married at the death of the testatrix. M. A. joined with her husband in granting annuities to the plaintiff, charged upon the estates bequeathed by the testator, and the estates devised by the testatrix. On the insolvency of the husband, a bill was filed by the plaintiff to have the annuities paid out of the estates; and upon motion for an injunction and receiver, the court granted the motion as to the estates devised by the testator, but not as to those devised by the testatrix, on the ground that the rents of the former estates ought to be secured till the question in the cause could be determined, which could not be decided on an interlocutory motion. Tullett v. Armstrong, 1 Keen, 428; 5 L. J., Ch. 303.

Subsequent Orders.]—Where papers upon which a lien is claimed had been delivered up, pursuant to an order upon petition at the rolls, pending an appeal upon which that order was ultimately reversed:—Held, that restitution of the papers should be ordered upon motion and affidavit. Such a motion is independent, and is not open to any objection, upon the ground that an order upon petition cannot be varied by motion. Richards v. Platel, 11 L. J., Ch. 409.

Under the charity petition act, where one order has been obtained on petition, a subsequent order may be obtained on motion. Chipping Sodbury School, In re, 5 Sim. 410.

After an order upon petition under the friendly society acts, the subsequent orders may be obtained on motion. Friendly Society, Ex parte, 10 Ves. 287.

Where an order made in bankruptcy reserves further directions and costs, a subsequent application to the court as to the costs merely may be entertained by motion, but if it is by way of further directions it must be by petition. The solicitor for the respondents ought to have notice of such an application, as well as the respondents themselves. Shadbolt, Ex parte, Fox, In re, 2 Deac. & C. 286; 1 L. J., Bk. 82.

A motion cannot be made upon a decretal order till it is passed with the registrar. Smith v. Reynolds, Mos. 69.

The court will not determine matters in a summary way upon motion that have been reserved between parties till after the master has made his report. Cooke v. Gwyn, 3 Atk. 689.

Wrong Parties.]—Where wrong party sued, it must be shewn by plea and not by motion. Harrison v. Haule, Cary, 61.

Setting aside Order.]—An order made upon petition may be set aside on motion, when the objection is grounded upon the want of jurisdiction and not upon error in the substance of the order itself. Dovenby Hospital, In re, 1 Myl. & C. 279; 5 L. J., Ch. 212.

b. NOTICE OF.

1. When Necessary.

Notice must be given for time to answer affidavits, unless the motion is made when the petition is called on. Binns, Ex parte, 3 Deac. & C. 189.

Every motion for an order which may have the effect of delaying the cause must be made on notice. Brien v. Brien, 1 Hog, 389.

Notice must be given to the other side of the application to discharge an order. Lowe, Ex parte, Aaron, In re, 1 Deac. & C. 43.

Notice must be given of a motion made to the court of appeal, under the Judicature Act, Order XL. r. 4, to set aside the judgment entered at the trial before a jury and enter judgment. Jones v. Davis, 36 L. T. 415.

Orders Ex parte or Of course.]—See supra, JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS, ante, col. 584.

2. Form and Contents.

Particulars.]—A notice of motion for leave to file a supplemental answer, stating that "certain facts," without specifying them, are intended to be introduced, is irregular. Haslar v. Holds, 2 Beav. 236; 3 Jur. 996.

A notice of motion should fully state the matter of the application, so that if the court should say "be it so," the office may be enabled, by following the notice, to frame the order. Where the notice of motion was for leave "to amend the bill in the several particulars specified in an affidavit," the court refused to make any order. Curreen v. Walsh, 1 Ir. Eq. R. 200.

Amendments moved ought properly to be stated. Carnatic (Nabob) v. East India Co., 1 Ves. J. 388.

Upon an application to file a supplemental answer, the defendant should state, on his notice of motion, the facts intended to be introduced therein. Smith v. Hartley, 5 Beav. 432.

See PLEADING (AMENDMENT).

Notice of motion to make a consent a rule of court, should set forth the substance of the consent. Smith v. Martin, 4 Ir. Eq. R. 168.

A party quarrelling with the report of bad title, should move to set aside, not to send it back to the officer to be reviewed, and the notice of motion ought to state the grounds upon which the party seeks to set aside the report. Vincent v. Thwaites, 4 Ir. Eq. R. 689.

A notice of motion to have a receiver's account sent back to be reveiwed, must specify the items objected to: it is not sufficient to refer for them to the affidavit used upon the motion. A motion to vacate the recognizance at the same time that the receiver applies to be discharged is premature. D'Arcy v. Sherry, 2 Ir. Eq. R. 411.

Where Motion to be made.]—A notice that the court will be moved at the royal courts of justice is sufficient, though the judge be sitting in chambers. Petty v. Daniel, 56 L. J., Ch. 192; 34 Ch. D. 172; 55 L. T. 745; 35 W. R. 151.

Two Matters.]—Application that documents may be produced, &c., and that publication may be enlarged, till, &c., being matters not only not inconsistent but connected with and depending on each other, may be made by one motion. Firkins v. Lowe, 13 Price, 193; M'Clel. 73.

Affidavits.]—Where affidavits are intended to be read in support of a motion made on notice, the general rule of the court requires that notice that such affidavits are filed and are intended to be read, be given in the notice of motion; and unless this be done the affidavit cannot be read. The rule does not apply to affidavits of service of notice of motion. Rock v. Unett, Younge, 268.

See ATTACHMENT.

Motion by a plaintiff for the postponement of the cross-examination of his witnesses by the defendant until after the defendant had filed the last of the affidavits refused, on the ground that the notice of motion wrongly recited that the time allowed to the defendant for filing his affidavits had been enlarged. Morey v. Vandenbergh, 14 L. T. 542.

The court has discretionary power to permit the defendant to cross-examine the plaintiff's witnesses before filing his own affidavits. Ib.

A notice of motion and affidavit in support professed, in its title, to give the names of all the parties, but omitted one. The court would not proceed, but gave leave to amend and re-swear. Davis v. Barrett, 7 Beav. 171.

Title.]—A motion for leave to file a supplemental bill was entitled in the suit which it was proposed to institute:—Held, that the court could neither hear the motion nor allow the title to be amended. Morrall v. Pritchard, 11 Jur. (N.S.) 969; 13 L. T. 425; 14 W. R. 172.

Service before Appearance—Leave of Court.]—Service of a notice of motion upon a defendant before he has appeared to the bill is irregular, unless the leave of the court has been previously obtained. Hill v. Rimell, 2 Myl. & C. 641; 8 Sim. 632; 7 L. J., Ch. 82; 2 Jur. 45.

Where a motion is made with the leave of the court, if the notice does not mention that it will be so made, the defendant may disregard it. Ib.

A defendant who has not appeared to the bill, and whose time for appearance has not expired, may safely disregard a notice of motion in which it is not stated that the notice is served by leave of the court. Moggridge v. Thomas, 2 Coop. C. C. 166. And see cases there collected.

A plaintiff cannot before appearance serve a notice of motion on defendant, without first obtaining the special leave of the court; and the notice of motion should state that such leave has been given. Jacklin v. Wilkins, 6 Beav. 607; 13 L. J., Ch. 32.

Leave to serve notice of motion upon defendants before their appearance in the cause does not include also leave to give short notice of the motion; and if other than the regular period of notice be given leave for that purpose must be obtained, and will not be implied from the distance of the place of service. Hart v. Tulk, 6 Hare, 611; 18 L. J., Ch. 162. See Newton v. Chorlton, 10 Hare (App.) xxvii.; 1 W. R. 257, 266.

Short Notice—Leave of Court.]—Where a party applies for special leave to serve short notice of motion he must distinctly state to the court that the notice applied for is short; and the same fact must distinctly appear on the face of the notice served on the other party. But in a case where short notice of a motion had been irregularly applied for and served, but the party served had not been injured by the irregularity, the court exercised its discretion under Ord. LIX. r. 1, and disregarded the irregularity and heard the motion on the merits. Dawson v. Beeson, 52 L. J., Ch. 563; 22 Ch. D. 504; 48 L. T. 407; 31 W. R. 537—C. A.

A party having leave from the court to move on short notice should state in the notice that he moves on short notice by leave of the court. Harris v. Lewis, 8 Jur. 1063.

Leave given to serve notice of motion before appearance does not also include leave to serve short notice; and if that be required, it must be expressly given; but where short notice has been given without leave of the court to that effect, it is not of course to order the party moving to pay the costs, unless any costs have been specially occasioned to the other parties by the irregularity. Newton v. Chorlton, 10 Hare (App.) xxvii.; 1 W. R. 257, 266. See Hart v. Tulk, supra.

Where special leave is obtained to serve short notice of motion with a copy of the bill it must be so stated in the notice, otherwise the motion will be refused. Chambers v. Toynbee, 10 L. T. 860; 12 W. R. 1100.

—— In Vacation.]—Leave to serve short notice of motion cannot be given by the chief clerk in vacation any more than during the sittings. Conacher v. Conacher, 29 W. R. 230.

—— When given.]—Plaintiff cannot move to amend his bill on an affidavit of equitable facts without notice to defendant; but if circumstances of case require it, and it is late in the term, court will order defendant to accept short notice of motion. Harrison v. Delmont, 1 Price, 117.

Short notice of motion to take bill pro confesso allowed, notwithstanding Consolidated Ord. XXII. r. 3. Wedderburne v. Thomas, 10 Jur. (N.S.) 92.

Short notice of motion to take the bill pro confesso allowed, notwithstanding Consolidated Ord. XXII. r. 3. Newton v. Carr, 6 N. R. 347.

Time for giving—For what Day.]—Where an order in chambers was made on the 14th, and notice of motion was given on the 19th for the "21st, or such other day as counsel can be heard" (this not allowing two clear days after notice):—Held, that the motion could be properly made on the 22nd, which was the eighth and last day for the motion under Ord. LIII. r. 4. Forrest v. Davies, 26 W. R. 534.

On the 20th of December, 1875, the plaintiffs served on the defendants a notice that the court would be moved on the 22nd, or as soon after as counsel could be heard, to reinstate for argument a demurrer in which judgment had been given for the defendants in the absence of the plaintiffs. On the 11th and 12th of January, 1876, the defendants appeared in court by their counsel to oppose the motion, but no one appeared for the plaintiffs:—Held, that the notice was bad on two grounds: first, because under Ord. LXI. r. 1, the Michaelmas sittings terminate on the 21st of December; and second, because there were not two clear days between the 20th and 22nd, as required by Ord. LIII. r. 4; that the defendants therefore were not bound to appear, and were not entitled to their costs of doing so. Daubney v. Shuttleworth, 45 L. J., Ex. 177; 1 Ex. D. 53; 34 L. T. 357; 24 W. R. 321.

When a notice of a motion is personally served on a party out of court, it should be of a motion to be made on a particular day, and not on "the first opportunity." Creed v. Creed, 2 Ir. Eq. R. 32.

A notice of motion was given for a day not in the sittings of the court:—Held, that the notice was good. Daubney v. Shuttleworth (1 Ex. D. 53), overruled on this point. Coulton, In re, Hamling v. Elliott, 56 L. J., Ch. 312; 34 Ch. D. 22; 55 L. T. 464; 35 W. R. 49—C. A.

When a matter is sent to the official referee for inquiry and report, and upon the report being made one party applies that the action be dismissed, a two days' notice of motion under Ord. XL. r. 7, is sufficient. Larkin v. Lloyd, 64 L. T. 507.

Notice of motion may be given for any day in term, though it is not the course of the court to hear opposed special motions except on the days appointed for that purpose. Chaffers v. Baker, 5 De G. M. & G. 482; 2 Eq. Rep. 748; 2 W. R. 546.

Where notice of motion is given for the 2nd November, or so soon after as counsel can be heard, and the motion is made on the 4th November, which day by an error in the printed list, was not appointed for motions, the case will not be postponed on the ground that the parties served are not prepared. Electric Telegraph Co. of Ireland, In re, Budd, Ex parte, 5 L. T. 249; 10 W. R. 4.

Notice of motion on Saturday must be given for Tuesday, not Monday. Maxwell v. Phillips, 6 Ves. 146.

A party ordered to take a step within a fixed time, or that the bill should be dismissed, if desirous of an extension of the time, must give notice of motion, so as to enable him to bring it on before the expiration of the time fixed. Huntingtower (Lord) v. Sherborn, 5 Beav. 380.

Notice of motion in a cause cannot be given before service of a subpœna; nor is the defect cured by the defendant appearing in order to insist on the objection of irregularity. Lampard v. Padfield, 2 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 30.

If notice of a motion to dismiss a bill for want of prosecution is given for too early a day, the defect is not cured by the motion being accidentally postponed to a day when it might have been regularly made. De Geneve v. Hannam, 1 Russ. & M. 494.

—— Extension of Time.]—Where notice of motion has not been given in sufficient time, owing to a bonâ fide mistake, the court may, in its discretion, allow the party in default to shew the reason of the mistake by affidavit, and allow the motion to be made on a later day. Smith v. Smacksmen Insurance Co., 32 W. R. 184.

Amendment of.]—Where proceedings for expunging a trade mark have been commenced by notice of motion, the subsequent alteration or amendment of the notice in a mere matter of detail not affecting the nature of the relief claimed, such as by striking out the name of a respondent improperly added, or by changing the date for the hearing of the motion, does not make it a new notice of motion requiring to be taken to the writ department of the central office to be re-marked with the name of the judge in rotation, under Rules of Supreme Court, 1883, Ord. V. r. 9 (c), or requiring the leave of the court to use at the hearing affidavits filed prior to the alteration or amendment. King & Co.'s Trade Mark, In re, 62 L. J., Ch. 153; [1892] 2 Ch. 462; 66 L. T. 491.

A notice of motion having been given for a day not in the sittings, the court amended the notice in this respect. Williams v. De Boinville, 17 Q. B. D. 180; 54 L. T. 732; 34 W. R. 702.

A notice of appeal by motion from the order of a judge in chambers to a divisional court is bad if the day for which it is given falls at a time when no court could by any possibility be sitting. Maullin v. Rogers, 55 L. J., Q. B. 377; 55 L. T. 121; 34 W. R. 592. But see preceding case, and Coulton, In re, supra.

On an application for an interlocutory injunction, the court, on being satisfied that under the circumstances no injustice would be done, gave leave to amend by claiming a receiver. Hubbuck v. Helms, 56 L. J., Ch. 536; 56 L. T. 232; 35 W. R. 574.

On motion for judgment in default of defence a defence has been put in before the hearing, but as it disclosed no real grounds of defence, the court ordered the notice of motion to be amended by making it a motion for judgment on admissions in the defence. Gill v. Woodfin, 53 L. J., Ch. 617; 25 Ch. D. 707; 50 L. T. 490; 32 W. R. 393—C. A.

3. Service of.

Personal Service.]—A defendant had not appeared to a bill filed in 1874, but an appearance had been entered for him by the plaintiff. The defendant was attached for not answering, and remained in prison until liberated under the act:—Held, that personal service of a notice of motion in the cause without the leave of the court first obtained was regular. Sanders v. Miller, 24 W. R. 392. See Rules of Supreme Court, 1883, Ord. LXVII. r. 5.

On Defendant who fails to Appear—Filing.]—A notice of motion is a document within the meaning of Ord. XIX. r. 6, that may be served on a defendant who has failed to appear by filing the same with the proper officer. Morton v. Miller, 45 L. J., Ch. 613; 3 Ch. D. 516; 24 W. R. 723—C. A.

On whom — Servant — Attorney — Agent.]—Service of a rule upon "a female servant at the lodgings of the defendant" is not good service. Price v. Thomas, 11 C. B. 543.

An affidavit that the deponent served "the defendant with a true copy of the rule, by delivering and leaving with one H., at the defendant's residence, situate, &c., a true copy of the rule, and at the same time shewing the original thereof, and that H. promised to deliver the copy to the defendant," is insufficient, as it does not shew a service on any person connected with the defendant's residence. Taylor v. Whitworth, 9 M. & W. 478; 1 D. (N.S.) 600; 11 L. J., Ex. 137.

An affidavit stating that service of a rule had been made upon A., "who acts as the attorney or agent of the defendant in this cause," is sufficient. Pattrick v. Rickards, 3 D. & L. 573; 15 L. J., Q. B. 204.

Where a rule is served by leaving a copy with a servant, an inquiry should be subsequently made of the servant whether the master had received the copy. Panter v. Seaman, 5 N. & M. 679.

At the defendant's residence there was a board stuck up, with the words, "Messages and parcels to be left at" a particular place. A rule was served at that place, by leaving it with a woman, who said she was in the habit of receiving messages and parcels for the defendant. The woman afterwards said she had given it to him:—Held, sufficient service. Engelhart v. Morgan, 1 D. P. C. 422.

Service of a rule on an attorney by leaving it with a laundress at his chambers, who stated that she was authorised to receive notices and papers for him, is insufficient. Dodd v. Drummond, 1 D. P. C. 381. S. P., Alanson v. Walker, 3 D. P. C. 258.

So is service on the laundress's servant. Smith v. Spicer, 2 D. P. C. 231.

In 1849 a bill was filed, purporting to be exhibited by a married woman suing in respect of her separate estate, by a person named as her next friend, but who, it afterwards appeared, had died two days before the bill was filed. A year afterwards a new next friend was, without his knowledge, substituted for the deceased. The plaintiff's solicitor afterwards became insolvent, and left the country. A notice of motion to dismiss the plaintiff's bill, for want of prosecution, with costs, was served on the agent of the insolvent, the solicitor for the plaintiff in the cause; and thereupon an order was made, dismissing the bill, with costs, to be paid by the new next friend. Upon a motion by the new next friend to vary the order, by charging the costs on the plaintiff's solicitor, or to limit the liability of the new next friend to the payment of costs whilst he was on the record as such:—Held, that the notice of the motion to dismiss had been sufficiently given by service on the agent of the plaintiff in the cause, and that the form of the order, charging all the costs on the new next friend, was correct. Bligh v. Tredgett, 5 De G. & Sm. 74; 21 L. J., Ch. 204; 15 Jur. 1101.

Before a motion is made that the petition of the bankrupt for a supersedeas shall be dismissed, on the ground of his being out of the jurisdiction of the court, the respondent should serve the bankrupt's agent with notice of the motion, having previously obtained an order that service on the agent shall be good service. Drake, Ex parte, 3 Deac. & C. 284.

—— Wife.]—Service of notice of motion, where the defendant had left his home and could not be found, and the wife of the defendant had left his home and gone to her own relations, directed to be effected by being served on the wife, and a copy thereof left at the defendant's house, and advertisements inserted in local newspapers. Mellows v. Bannister, 31 W. R. 238.

—— Married Woman.]—A married woman is entitled to a separate notice of a motion for a receiver of her separate estate. Secus, as to a motion for her answering separately. Richardson v. De Held, 1 N. R. 5.

—— Scotch Company.]—Service of a notice of motion on a Scotch company not party to the suit at its office in London, held good. Maclaren v. Stainton, 16 Beav. 279; 22 L. J., Ch. 274; 1 W. R. 70. See now Ord. XI.

Putting under Door.]—Service of a notice or a rule by putting it under the door of an attorney's office is not good service without some evidence that it has duly come to hand. Burdett v. Lewis, 7 C. B. (N.S.) 791.

By Post.]—Where a copy of a rule nisi has been sent in a letter by post to a defendant resident in the country, together with the original rule, and the letter is received back, indorsed "Received a copy of the within rule," and that indorsement is signed by the defendant, it will be deemed a sufficient service. Smith v. Campbell, 6 D. P. C. 728.

Avoiding Service.]—Where regular service of a rule is endeavoured to be dispensed with, on the ground of absence or otherwise, the affidavit must shew what efforts have been made to serve the party before secondary service will be allowed. Mudie v. Newman, 2 D. P. C. 639. See Rules of Supreme Court, 1883, Ord. LXVII. r. 6; and O'Donnell v. Kearney, Ir. R. 4 Eq. 206.

Where a person keeps out of the way to avoid being served personally with a rule, preparatory to obtaining an attachment against him, and it is clearly made out to the satisfaction of the court, the court will dispense with personal service. Green v. Prosser, 2 D. P. C. 99.

A notice of motion for a decree cannot be given by substituted service. Lechmere v. Clamp, 30 L. J., Ch. 651; 9 W. R. 355.

Party out of the Jurisdiction.]—When a party to a suit, being a personal representative out of the jurisdiction, has been served with a copy of the bill, and it is desired to serve him with a notice of motion for a receiver, he must be personally served, and reasonable notice given him. Kavanagh v. Wall, 18 L. T. 18.

The order for leave to serve the notice out of the jurisdiction is to be drawn up and served, and is to specify the time allowed for filing affidavits in reply. Meek v. Ward, 1 W. R. 504; 10 Hare (App.) i., lv.

Notice of motion for decree, under Consolidated Ord. XXXIII. r. 4, allowed to be served on defendant in Demerara, an appearance having been entered for her under Consolidated Ord. X. r. 7 (4). Middleton v. Chichester, 1 N. R. 255.

A letter to the plaintiff's solicitor acknowledging the receipt of a notice of motion for a decree from a defendant out of the jurisdiction, without stating that he consented to be bound by any such decree, is not sufficient proof of notice of motion under the order of the 7th August, 1852, s. 1, No. 22. Mendes v. Guedalla, 5 L. T. 308.

The leave of the court is necessary, in order to serve personally a party out of the jurisdiction with notice of a motion in a cause, although such party has been served out of the jurisdiction, under the statute 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 82, with the subpœna to appear and answer, and an appearance has been entered for him in the suit under that statute. Green v. Pledger, 3 Hare, 165; 13 L. J., Ch. 213; 8 Jur. 801.

If a party in a suit may be served out of the jurisdiction, under the statute 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 82, in respect of any part of the subject of the suit, the service is good for all the other purposes of the suit. Ib.

Where the defendant is out of the jurisdiction, and his solicitor had absconded, service of notice of motion at the solicitor's address for service held sufficient, though the place mentioned in such address was now untenanted. Newton v. Thomson, 16 Jur. 1008.

An originating notice of motion to rectify the register of trade marks, by removing therefrom the trade marks of a foreign company having no place of business in the United Kingdom, was served upon the company in Paris, without any leave for service out of the jurisdiction. The company and the comptroller-general were named as respondents to the notice of motion:—Held, that the company ought not to have been so named, and that the service was wrong, and must be set aside. Directions given for procedure. Semble, that the court has no power to give leave to serve such a notice of motion out of the jurisdiction. Compagnie Générale d'Eaux Minérales, In re, 60 L. J., Ch. 728; [1891] 3 Ch. 451; 40 W. R. 89.

Production of Original.]—It is not necessary to produce the original rule on a service of a copy, except in cases where the party is to be brought into contempt. Holmes v. Senior, 4 M. & P. 828; 7 Bing. 162. See Rules of Supreme Court, 1883, Ord. LXVII. r. 1.

Effect of Delay.]—It is not sufficient to make a party guilty of laches that he has delayed for an unnecessary time to serve a rule, unless it be shewn that the other party is prejudiced by the delay. Gurney v. Gurney, 1 B. C. Rep. 119; 3 D. & L. 734; 15 L. J., Q. B. 265.

Irregularity.]—It is not open to one defendant on an interlocutory application to object to the irregularity of the service of and appearance by another defendant, if such other defendant, having notice of the application, does not himself object on the ground of such irregularity. Green v. Pledger, 3 Hare, 165; 13 L. J., Ch. 213; 8 Jur. 801.

—— When Appearance a Waiver.]—Where the party against whom a rule nisi for an attachment was obtained appeared, and objected that the rule nisi had not been personally served, the court, notwithstanding, made the rule absolute. Levy v. Duncombe, 3 D. P. C. 447; 1 C. M. & R. 737; 5 Tyr. 490; 1 Gale, 60.

Appearing by counsel to object to a notice of motion, on the ground of want of personal service, is a waiver of the objection. Harvey v. Hall, 23 L. T. 391.

Where a copy of a rule served was not intitled in any cause, the party's appearing by counsel to take the objection does not operate as a waiver of the irregularity. Warner v. Wood, 3 D. P. C. 262.

If an imperfect copy of a rule is served, the party served must appear to it, and by such appearance he does not admit that he is properly brought into court, so as to prevent him from taking the objection to the form of the copy of the rule. Wood v. Critchfield, 1 D. P. C. 587; 1 C. & M. 72; 3 Tyr. 235; 2 L. J., Ex. 2.

If a party against whom a rule is granted obtains its enlargement, he cannot afterwards object that it was not personally served. Cartwright v. Blackworth, 1 D. P. C. 489.

A formal objection to a notice of motion is waived by the party appearing and requesting further time to oppose it. Morland, Ex parte, 3 Deac. & C. 248.

When a defendant appears and takes a technical objection to a notice of motion the court may give leave to amend immediately, and serve the amended notice there and then, and proceed at once to try the case on the merits. Heywood v. Wait, 18 W. R. 205.

c. The Application.

Extension of Time.]—Where a motion for a new trial is to be made conditionally on the result of a decision pending in the court of appeal in a similar cause, notice of motion should be given within the usual time, and application be then made to the court to postpone the hearing till the decision in the court of appeal has been obtained. The court has a full discretion over such applications, and is not limited to cases only where parties have been misled. Puckett v. Short, 32 W. R. 123.

Rule Nisi—Chancery Division.]—In the chancery division a rule nisi will not be granted. Copp, In re, 32 W. R. 25.

—— Under New Rules.]—The court will grant a rule nisi for a mandamus to the overseers of a parish within the district of a school board to pay precepts issued by such board, or to levy rates for the purpose of paying them. Ord. LII. of the Rules of the Supreme Court, 1883, does not apply to applications for writs of mandamus, inasmuch as by Ord. LII. r. 5, the practice in use before the making of the rules of 1883 with regard to such applications is preserved. Gribthorpe School Board v. Gribthorpe Overseers, 47 J. P. 727.

The effect of Ord. LII. of the Rules of the Supreme Court, 1883, is to repeal so much of s. 6 of the County Courts Act, 1875, as requires appeals from county courts to be made ex parte in the first instance. And it is now necessary to give notice of motion under that order before moving the queen's bench division on appeal from the decision of a county court judge. Harris v. Galpin, 47 J. P. 727.

Non-Appearance of Respondent—Affidavit of Service.]—An order dismissing an action for want of prosecution was made subject to production of an affidavit of service, no one appearing for the plaintiff. Shortly afterwards counsel appeared for the plaintiff, but the judge refused to have the case argued. No affidavit of service was sworn or filed until after the day on which the motion was made. The registrar drew up the order on production of an office copy of an affidavit of service sworn and filed after that day, omitting in the order the date of the affidavit. It appeared that since the passing of the judicature acts the rule in Lord Milltown v. Stuart (8 Sim. 34) had not been uniformly observed by the registrars:—Held, that, assuming the drawing up of the order on an affidavit sworn and filed after the day on which the motion was made to be irregular, the irregularity was not such that the court ought on that ground to discharge the order. Secar v. Webb, 53 L. J., Ch. 464; 25 Ch. D. 84; 49 L. T. 481; 32 W. R. 351—C. A.

Until altered by authority, the rule that where an order has been made upon motion for judgment by default the affidavit of service of notice of motion must be produced to the registrar by four o'clock of the day on which the order has been made, is the right one, and will be strictly enforced in this branch of the court after the end of the present sittings; until which date twenty-four hours' grace will be allowed and service within that time be considered sufficient. In Secar v. Webb (supra), the court of appeal did not decide that production of an affidavit three days after the date of the order was sufficient, but only (on the principle fieri non debet, factum valet) that, it being clear that the notice had been duly served, the lateness of production was not in itself, under the circumstances, a sufficient irregularity to justify them in discharging the order. Rosier, In re, Jones v. Bartholomew, 49 L. T. 442.

Where upon an application to the court by motion or petition, the party does not appear, no order can be made, unless the affidavit of service be made, at the latest, before the rising of the court on the day on which the application is made. Milltown (Lord) v. Stuart, 8 Sim. 34; 1 Jur. 940.

Where affidavits are intended to be read in support of a motion made on notice, the general rule of the court requires that notice that such affidavits are filed and are intended to be read be given in the notice of motion, and unless this be done the affidavit cannot be read. The rule does not apply to affidavits of service of notices of motion. Rock v. Unett, Younge, 268.

When a motion is made, and fails for want of production of office copy of the affidavit of service of notice of this motion, the motion made on a subsequent day must be supported by a new notice of that motion. Cuthbert v. Fane, 1 Jur. 890.

An order, obtained on affidavit of service, discharged with costs, on the ground of a misnomer of a party in the affidavit. Salomon v. Stalman, 4 Beav. 243; 10 L. J., Ch. 327.

The application of a party, by his counsel, for time to answer affidavits filed in support of a motion, whereupon time was given and affidavits filed, is not an appearance by that party on the motion entitling the other party to obtain the order on a subsequent motion day, without an affidavit of service, no counsel then appearing for the opposing party. Hutton v. Hepworth, 6 Hare, 319; 12 Jur. 835.

An order made upon affidavit of service of the notice of motion, must not depart from the terms of the notice, even though it be less extensive than the notice, if such less extensive order may be more prejudicial to the party against whom it is made than would have been the larger order which was asked. The notice was, that the court would be moved to dismiss an original and a supplemental cause, or to direct the original cause to be put into the paper for hearing; the order made upon affidavit of service was, that the supplemental cause should be dismissed, and the original cause put in the paper. The court, upon motion, discharged the order. Ib.

A party obtained an order on motion, the other side not appearing, but the service of the notice of motion, though regular, was supported by an imperfect affidavit:—Held, that he could not subsequently verify the service, and that a new notice of motion must be given. Barton v. Chambers, 4 Beav. 547.

On the application of defendant's counsel, a motion stood over; when it came on again, it appeared that defendant had since changed his solicitor, but without order, and no counsel then appeared for him. The motion was granted on an affidavit of service. Davidson v. Leslie, 9 Beav. 104.

An affidavit of service is sufficient, if the service is sworn to have been effected "on the attorney or agent for the plaintiff in this cause." Morris v. Bedward, 9 D. P. C. 130.

Parties.]—On a motion to discharge an alleged irregular order, no parties can be heard in support of the application but those who have joined in the notice of motion to discharge it. Stubbs v. Sargon, 3 Beav. 408.

Some defendants may move to have proceedings taken off the file, without serving their co-defendants. Hodson v. Ball, 11 Sim. 456; 6 Jur. 160. Affirmed, 12 L. J., Ch. 80.

Notice of motion given on behalf of a relator in an information:—Held, irregular; it should be on behalf of the attorney-general. Att.-Gen. v. Wright, 3 Beav. 447; 10 L. J., Ch. 234.

A person, though not a party to a suit, may apply in it by motion (stating his title in the notice of motion), unless a long statement of facts is required to shew his title; and then he must apply by petition. Jones v. Roberts, 12 Sim. 189.

If a motion is intended to lay the foundation for a subsequent application against the solicitor of some of the parties, the solicitor, in his personal capacity, ought to be made a party to that motion. Vansandau v. Moore, 1 Russ. 441; 4 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 177; 25 R. R. 101.

A. being sued at law on policy of insurance which he had made as B.'s agent; on motion for injunction on affidavit of B.'s residing abroad, A. must have notice. Beachcroft v. Gordon, 3 Anstr. 686.

Notice of motion for order of sale of crown debtor's mortgaged lands, under extent, should be given to mortgagee before motion. Rex v. Coombes, 1 Price, 207.

Where, after great delay, the solicitor of a deceased party was served with a notice of motion:—Held, that his duty to the court, as well as duty to the parties serving him, was to appear and set the matter right. Chalie v. Gwynne, 9 Beav. 319.

On what Materials made.]—A rule making the same order in several causes may be moved for on a single affidavit intitled in all the causes. Barrack v. Newton, 1 Q. B. 525; 10 L. J., Q. B. 182.

But two rules moved for under similar circumstances should be founded on distinct and separate affidavits; for as an indictment for perjury could not be sustained on the affidavits referred to in the second cause already sworn in the first, the court will refuse to act on them. Reg. v. Mizen, 1 D. (N.S.) 865; 6 Jur. 857.

On shewing cause against a rule obtained by the plaintiff to rescind a judge's order, which directed the master to review his taxation, it was objected on the part of defendant that there were no materials before the court to shew what the taxation had been; the defendant's counsel saying he had an answer on the merits, the court ordered the master's allocatur to be produced at once, without imposing any terms. Ashcroft v. Foulkes, 18 C. B. 261; 25 L. J., C. P. 202; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 449; 4 W. R. 457.

The court will not hear a motion founded on documents, unless counsel be furnished with a brief, and the solicitor be in attendance with the documents. Curtis v. Darcy, 6 Ir. Eq. R. 149.

A defendant cannot vary the title of the cause in a notice or affidavit used upon a motion in the cause. M'Kiernan v. Kernan, 4 Ir. Eq. R. 275.

Affidavit not served with Notice of Motion.]—A notice of motion to set aside an award, which would expire on the last day of the sittings next after such award, was served without any copy of the affidavit in support of the application:—Held, that though the court may not have power to enlarge the time for making the application under Ord. LXIV. r. 7, there is power under Ord. LXX. r. 1, to hear the application, although the time has expired, if the court deem fit. Wiggeston Hospital and Stephenson, In re, 54 L. J., Q. B. 248; 52 L. T. 101; 33 W. R. 551.

See also ATTACHMENT.

—— Summons or Motion.]—The court had granted an injunction restraining the defendants from polluting a stream, but suspended the order for three months. The plaintiff, soon after the expiration of that period, served them with notice of motion under Ord. XLII. r. 31, for leave to issue sequestration. The defendants contended that copies of the affidavits intended to be used had not been served with the notice of motion, and that the application for leave, if necessary, ought to have been by summons in chambers:—Held, that copies of affidavits need only be served with the notice of motion in cases where the liberty of the subject is involved, as in attachment, and that under the circumstances, the plaintiff was right to move the court in the first instance, instead of proceeding by summons in chambers. Selous v. Croydon Rural Sanitary Authority, 53 L. T. 209.

Further Evidence after Hearing.]—After a summons has been heard by the judge personally in chambers, and he has given his decision upon it, further evidence, which was not before him in chambers, will not be received upon a motion in court to discharge the order made in chambers. Munns and Longden, In re, 50 L. T. 356.

Motions being renewed on fresh evidence after previous refusal, when allowed to discharge an order not justified by the evidence in the court below. Tanner v. Carter, 1 Coop. C. C. 337.

On a motion, although no notice is given by the party moving that he will read any evidence, the court may take notice of the matters given in evidence in previous proceedings in the cause, and may also refer to notes of the observations of the court on such previous proceedings. Lister v. Leather, 3 Jur. (N.S.) 433 ; 5 W. R. 550.

Second Application.]—Where a party fails, in the first instance, from the incompleteness of his materials, he cannot afterwards come to the court. Levi v. Coyle, 12 L. J., Q. B. 295 ; 7 Jur. 724.

The rule that an application once disposed of cannot be renewed under the same circumstances and for the same objects is not binding in all cases. Butler, In re, Masters v. Butler, 13 Q. B. 341 ; 18 L. J., Q.B. 328 ; 13 Jur. 869.

Where a motion besides the merits of the case fails, by reason of some defect in the affidavits, the court will not give leave to renew the application. Ilderton v. Burt, 6 C. B. 433.

A judgment signed in an action brought by A. in the name of B. having been set aside by a judge's order, a rule nisi was obtained to rescind that order, on the ground that the summons upon which it was made had been improperly altered by the defendant's attorney. This rule, which, by mistake, purported to have been moved on behalf of B., was discharged upon an affidavit of B., shewing that the rule had been moved without any authority from him, and that the alteration in the summons had been made with his sanction :—Held, that a second application for the same purpose might be made on the behalf of A., the party really interested. Tilt v. Dickson, 4 C. B. 736.

The court will not entertain a second application upon grounds which might and ought to have been brought forward upon a former occasion. Leggo v. Young, 17 C. B. 549 ; 25 L. J., C. P. 176.

Priority of Motion to Discharge Prisoner.]—A motion to discharge a prisoner from custody has priority over all other motions. Ashton v. Shorrock, 43 L. T. 530 ; 29 W. R. 117.

Attachment of Applicant.]—An attachment issued against a defendant before the making of a motion by him, but after service of the notice of motion, will not prevent the motion being made. Jeyes v. Foreman, 6 Sim. 384 ; 3 L. J., Ch. 97.

Specially constituted Court—Public Interest.]—The divisional court will decline to specially constitute a court to hear a motion for a rule to shew cause, which, it is alleged, involves questions of great constitutional importance and public interest, although it might specially constitute a court to hear the rule argued on the question of its being made absolute. Lewis, Ex parte, 52 J. P. 264.

Court of Appeal.]—Special leave had been given to make an original motion before the court of appeal in a cause which had been heard before the court, and in which an appeal was pending in the house of lords :—Held, that the respondent had no right to have the motion first heard before the vice-chancellor. Powell v. Elliot, 20 W. R. 194.

Drawing up Order.]—In an action of A. against B., the matter was by rule of court referred to the master. A. died before the master's report was read. His executors obtained a rule to shew cause why they should not be made parties to the rule :—Held, that it was not necessary that the second rule should be drawn up on reading the first, provided it adverted to the first, which was in court. Bland v. Daw, 8 Q. B. 126 ; 15 L. J., Q. B. 1 ; 10 Jur. 8.

On the last day of term a rule was made absolute on an affidavit of service ; the master next day discovering that the affidavit was defective refused to draw up the rule. The court considering the rule as a pending rule, allowed a motion to be made in the sittings after the term to make the rule absolute on an amended affidavit of service. Dow v. Bell, 4 Ex. 259 ; 18 L. J., Ex. 391.

In drawing up a rule, it is not necessary to specify the particular document on which it is obtained, but it may be described as a paper writing, provided it is properly verified by affidavit. Platt v. Hall, 2 M. & W. 391 ; 5 D. P. C. 583 ; 6 L. J., Ex. 144.

—— Order not going beyond Notice or Writ.]—The circumstance that an order goes beyond the notice of motion on which it is made, however immaterial as between those who have appeared and taken part in the discussion upon the motion, is not so as to those parties interested in the subject-matter of the motion, who, being served with notice thereof, did not appear thereon, for these are entitled to rest on their right to assume that nothing beyond what is contained in the notice will be asked upon the motion. Carew, Ex parte, 23 L. J., Ch. 761 ; 18 Jur. 339 ; 2 Eq. R. 652 ; 2 W. R. 367—L.JJ.

Semble, where a motion for an injunction is treated as the hearing of the action, and there is no statement of claim, the plaintiff is precluded from asking relief on any ground not specifically claimed by the writ. Serff v. Acton Local Board, 54 L. T. 379.

Order to Stand Over.]—When a cause is heard upon a motion for decree, the court has power to order the hearing to stand over to prove the execution of a deed. Raworth v. Parker, 2 Kay & J. 163 ; 25 L. J., Ch. 117 ; 4 W. R. 273.

Effect of Dismissal.]—Where a plaintiff, on motion for a decree, has not established his case, apparently through some omission on his part, the motion will be dismissed, and the cause left to come to a hearing. Thomas v. Bernard, 5 Jur. (N.S.) 31 ; 7 W. R. 86.

Where, on a motion for a decree, a plaintiff has not made out his case, the court has a discretion to dismiss the motion with costs, leaving the suit unaffected. Ward v. Dickson, 5 Jur. (N.S.) 698.

Construction—Peremptory.]—A peremptory rule only means so far as the party is not prevented by the act of God or some inevitable accident. Mostyn's Case, Lofft, 262, 786.

Where a rule is drawn up to shew cause peremptorily on a day named, it may be made absolute as soon as the court has gone through the bar on that day. Lace v. Adamson, 12 M. & W. 807 ; 13 L. J., Ex. 232 ; 8 Jur. 409.

—— Conditional.]—Where a rule was made absolute for changing the venue from Middlesex to the country, on payment of the costs of the application, "and of all costs reasonably and bonâ fide incurred and rendered useless by the rule" ; and, after taxation of the costs, the defendant's attorney gave notice to the plaintiff's attorneys that he abandoned the rule:—Held, that the rule was conditional only, and that the defendant was not bound to abide by it, although the plaintiff had, in the meantime, incurred the costs of his witnesses who were on their way to town before the rule was made absolute. Pugh v. Kerr, 5 M. & W. 164.

d. SHEWING CAUSE AGAINST RULE.

Affidavits.]—Appearing to oppose a rule does not waive an objection to the affidavit on which the rule was obtained. Barham v. Lee, 4 M. & Scott, 327; 2 D. P. C. 779. S. P., Clothier v. Els, 3 M. & Scott, 216; 2 D. P. C. 731.

Cause cannot be shewn till an office copy is taken of the affidavit on which the rule nisi was obtained. Brown v. Probert, 1 D. P. C. 659.

See further, EVIDENCE (AFFIDAVITS).

If a rule is moved without affidavits, none can be used in answer to it. Atkins v. Meredith, 4 D. P. C. 658.

Right of Reply.]—If cause is shewn against a rule in the first instance, the counsel who obtains the rule has a reply in support of his rule. Anon., 4 Taunt. 690.

The crown has a right to reply on a motion for a new trial, after verdict for the crown. Att.-Gen. v. Tomsett, 2 C. M. & R. 170; 5 Tyr. 514; 1 Gale, 147; 4 L. J., Ex. 171.

On a motion against which cause is shewn in the first instance, the counsel making the motion has the right to reply as in an ordinary case. Gibson v. Winter, 1 H. & W. 436.

Shewing Cause at Chambers.]—The court has no power, without the consent of parties, to make a rule returnable at chambers on a day out of term. Pollack v. Turnock, 3 Jur. (N.S.) 92.

The court will not, at the close of a term, grant a rule to shew cause at chambers, where the party could have applied earlier. Anon., 2 Chit. 266.

It is competent to the court, in case of necessity, to grant a rule on the last day of term, returnable at chambers. Casse v. Wright, 14 C. B. 562; 23 L. J., C. P. 144.

On the last day of term the court will make a rule nisi concerning a matter of a pressing nature returnable at chambers, but it is not the practice to enlarge rules returnable at chambers without the consent of the parties. Ib.

Other Points.]—The court will not allow a party, as a matter of right, to shew cause against a rule in the first instance, although notice has been given to the other side. Doe d. Wright v. Smith, 3 N. & P. 335; 8 A. & E. 255.

A party upon whom the rule does not call is not obliged to shew cause, because he is served with the rule; and if he does, the court will not give him his costs of appearing. Johnson v. Marriat, 2 D. P. C. 343.

e. RE-OPENING, ALTERING, AND RESCINDING.

Re-opening and Rescinding—When Allowed.]—Where an order has been made on motion and affidavit of service in the absence of parties, the court will, on proper application, give the absent party leave to move to discharge the order. Mapp v. Elcock, 22 L. J., Ch. 707; 17 Jur. 370.

The court refused to rehear a rule, upon a suggestion that it had been decided upon an erroneous report of the masters on a point of practice. Gingell v. Bean, 1 Man. & G. 555; 1 Scott (N.R.) 390.

A rule once disposed of, after full argument, cannot be opened again upon a suggestion that new matter has since come to the knowledge of the party, which might alter the decision of the court. Phillips v. Weyman, 2 Chit. 265.

After the parties at nisi prius had entered into a rule of court, arranging the terms of alternate enjoyment of a watercourse, in which terms the defendant was disappointed of the expected benefit, the court refused to open the rule and let him proceed to trial upon putting the plaintiff wholly in statu quo in respect of costs, or on any terms whatever. Fussel v. Silcox, 5 Taunt. 628.

But if a rule nisi is discharged through mistake of counsel in not stating the terms of the affidavits on which it was founded, the case may be reheard in a subsequent term. Rex v. Middlesex (Sheriffs), 1 Chit. 445.

Upon a statement of counsel that he had moved for a rule to set aside an award, under a mistaken supposition that an affidavit deposing to certain facts had been sworn, the court, on the day after granting a rule nisi, gave leave for the rule to be drawn up as upon reading such affidavit, on condition that it should be sworn on that same evening. Perring v. Kymer, 4 N. & M. 477; 1 H. & W. 20.

But the court refused to open a rule which had been made absolute without cause shewn, upon an affidavit by the attorney, alleging that he had understood the rule to be absolute in the first instance. Charlton v. Burfit, 1 M. & Scott, 450.

The court will not rescind a rule, on the ground that, at the time of discussion, the parties omitted to state the clause of a particular statute which might have affected its judgment or decision. Dillamore v. Capon, 8 Moore, 462; 1 Bing. 398; 2 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 35.

Non-performance of a condition in a rule is no ground for an application to rescind it. Bayntun v. Bayntun, 1 C. B. (N.S.) 220.

Mistakes in the terms of rules may be attended to on a motion to open them within the same term, or perhaps that following; but where more time has elapsed, the affidavits which were used on the occasion of making the first rule absolute, cannot be referred to in order to open it, unless the new motion is made, and the new rule drawn up on reading them. Lord v. Hope, 5 Tyr. 487.

When a rule nisi has been discharged, the court has no power, on the application of the party who obtained and supported it, to alter it by striking out any portion of it, when the party who has shewn cause objects to the alteration. Kynnaird v. Leslie, 12 Jur. (N.S.) 468.

If a rule has been drawn up improvidently or by mistake of the officer, it may be discharged on terms. Brooks v. Weston, 8 Moore, 87.

A rule fraudulently obtained will be discharged with costs. Rex v. Page, 2 Ld. Ken. 272.

A rule in the bail court will not be permitted to be reopened and argued in the full court, in the term after judgment has been pronounced, although the judge who heard the case sanctions the application to the court. Todd v. Jeffery, 2 N. & P. 443; 7 A. & E. 519; W. W. & D. 613; 7 L. J., Q. B. 1.

If a rule is obtained and discharged before the single judge in the bail court, the full court will not allow a rule for the same purpose to be discussed before them, though on affidavits discovering facts not previously stated. Rossett v. Hartley, 7 A. & E. 552, n.; 5 N. & M. 415; 1 H. & W. 581; 5 L. J., K. B. 49.

A side-bar rule obtained without disclosing the whole circumstances of a case will not be suffered to stand. Symonds v. Parmenter, 1 Wils. 86.

Where it is sought to impeach a rule, the materials upon which the rule was founded should be brought before the court. Needham v. Bristowe, 4 Scott (N.R.) 773; 4 Man. & G. 262; 1 D. (N.S.) 700; 11 L. J., C. P. 207.

Amendment, when Allowed.]—Where a rule cannot be served, it may be amended and enlarged, even though it has run out. Grissold v. Harding, 1 C. B. (N.S.) 556.

An issue went down for trial, when an arrangement was made between the parties (under a rule of court), but through inadvertence the plaintiff did not ask for the costs of the issue:—The court refused to allow the rule to be amended in this respect in a subsequent term. Hayne v. Robertson, 17 C. B. 548.

Where, in an action upon an agreement, a plaintiff obtained a verdict, and a rule was afterwards made absolute to enter a verdict for the defendant, the court, under special circumstances, allowed the rule to be amended by directing a nonsuit to be entered, but only upon the terms of the plaintiff paying the costs of the former action, and of the rule. Sillen v. Holloway, 14 C. B. (N.S.) 336.

A rule made absolute or discharged in one term cannot be amended in a subsequent term, whether on the civil or crown side of the court. Reg. v. Hearts of Oak Friendly Society, 14 L. T. 360.

A rule nisi for a mandamus was discharged, nothing being said as to costs. In the following term an application was made to amend the rule by discharging the rule nisi with costs:—Held, that the court had no power in such subsequent term to amend the rule. Ib.

f. Abandonment.

A motion not made when called on is to be treated as an abandoned motion. Turner v. Turner, 15 Jur. 1165.

A rule, when once obtained, cannot be abandoned by the party moving. Simpson, In re, 17 L. T. 617.

If a party obtaining a rule does not choose to proceed on it, the other party cannot compel him. Doe d. Harcourt v. Roe, 4 Taunt. 883.

Although the general practice may be for one party to the suit to draw up a rule obtained in the progress of a cause, if the other party wishes to act upon it he should draw it up within the time to which it relates; for if not drawn up within such period, it is to be considered as having been abandoned. Gingell v. Bean, 1 Man. & G. 50.

Costs.]—When a counsel intends to ask for the costs of a motion as abandoned, it is his duty before doing so to communicate his intention to the counsel who is instructed to move. Aitken v. Dunbar, 46 L. J., Ch. 489; 25 W. R. 366. S. P., Yetts v. Biles, 25 W. R. 452.

Where court is moved for payment of costs under General Order, 5th August, 1818 (3 Madd. 318; 1 Swanst. 328), on account of a notice of motion which has been abandoned, such notice of motion must be mentioned to the court, and must also be produced to registrar before he draws up order. Withey v. Haigh, 3 Madd. 437.

g. Costs.

On Non-Appearance of Parties giving Notice.]—When notice had been given of a motion before the court to rescind a judge's order, and the parties giving the notice did not appear, the court ordered them to pay the costs of the other party appearing to shew cause against the motion. Berry v. Exchange Trading Co., 45 L. J., Q. B. 224; 1 Q. B. D. 77; 24 W. R. 318.

J., Ex. 177; 1 Ex. D. 53; 34 L. T. 357; 24 W. R. 321.

Therefore, where a plaintiff in a foreclosure action, who had parted with his interest, had been served with a notice of motion to reopen foreclosure absolute, and appeared by counsel on the motion and asked for his costs, he was held not to be entitled to his costs of appearance; but inasmuch as, upon his being served with the notice of motion, no intimation was given him that he need not appear, and no tender was made to him of his costs of being advised as to the effect of the motion, he was allowed 40*s.* costs. Ib.

A party not interested in a motion, who is served with notice, is entitled to the costs of appearing. Heneage v. Aikin, 1 Jac. & Walk. 377.

Asking for by Notice.]—Motion granted, but costs refused, because not sought for in the notice. Little v. Johnson, 1 Moll. 234.

Costs given on a motion, although not mentioned in the notice. Every motion on notice, whether the notice mentions costs or not, is made at the peril of costs to the applicant. If no mention is made of costs in the notice of a successful motion, no costs are given against the opposite party, if he does not appear; nor even if he does appear and resist, if he does not put the party making the motion to additional expense by affidavits or documents; but if he puts the party to such additional expense, the applicant may have costs, although he did not seek costs by his notice. Ib.

Costs not given on a motion unless mentioned in the notice. Mann v. King, 18 Ves. 297.

An order having been made by a vice-chancellor refusing a motion with costs, an order is made by the Lord Chancellor giving relief inconsistent with the first mentioned order. That order, having been recited by the subsequent order, though not expressly discharged thereby, is no longer a subsisting order. The costs of the present application to stay proceedings under the vice-chancellor's order were given, though not asked for by the notice of motion. Dawson v. Jay, 2 W. R. 598.

Costs of a motion may be given, although the notice of motion does not ask that the order may be made with costs. Powell v. Cockerell, 4 Hare, 572; 15 L. J., Ch. 196; 10 Jur. 243.

As contrary to the principle of the court, an action on a post obit was restrained, and subsequent motion to set aside the injunction was refused with costs; such case being against the general rule that costs of motion for injunction, or to dissolve an injunction, refused, are costs in the cause. Marsack v. Reeves, 6 Madd. 108.

From the error of the commissioner the names of the witnesses examined in the cause were not affixed to the ingrossment of their depositions. R. 4 Ch. 372; 20 L. T. 387; 17 W. R. 545.

On a motion for an injunction being refused, the costs were reserved to the hearing of the cause; and at the hearing the injunction was decreed, and the defendant was ordered to pay to the plaintiff the costs so reserved, as well as the general costs of the suit relating to the injunction. But, on appeal, this course of proceeding was disapproved by the Lord Chancellor, and the decree was altered by striking out the order for payment of the reserved costs. Lewis v. Smith, 1 Macn. & G. 417.

J., Ch. 164; 7 W. R. 159.

On a motion some time previously, to have a second bill on behalf of an infant taken off the file, the court had not made an order in the terms of the motion, but by an order intituled in both suits had retained the second bill, and reserved the costs of it and of that motion. The question coming on now to be finally settled as to the costs of the second suit and of that motion:—Held, that it was not now open to the court to omit all provisions for the costs of that second suit. Ashley v. Allden, 16 Jur. 460.

An application to the Master of the Rolls, on the certificate of plaintiff's counsel, to advance a cause as a short cause, was refused on the defendant's counsel stating that it was not a short cause, and the costs of the motion were reserved. Motion to rectify Register—Interlocutory Motions.]—On the 23rd July, 1889, a motion on behalf of W. to remove his name from the register of the company in respect of certain shares, came on for hearing as an action with witnesses. W. was not present for examination, and the court, as an indulgence, allowed the motion to stand over till the Michaelmas sittings, on condition that W. paid to the company "all their costs of such motion incurred up to the present time, including the costs of the hearing of this motion this day." On the 16th December, 1889, Kay, J., decided the motion in favour of W., and ordered the taxing-master to tax the costs of W. of his motion, except the costs of the said order of the 23rd July, 1889, directed to be paid by him. The solicitors of the company sent in a bill of costs of the motion up to the 23rd July, 1889, including the costs of the motion on that day. W. objected to pay any costs for items which were utilised at the postponed hearing. He also objected to pay the costs of an interlocutory application to attach the secretary of the company for non-compliance with an order for discovery, which costs had by consent been made costs in the action; also the costs of an interlocutory application to postpone the trial, on which no order was made:—Held, that the taxing-master had acted upon a wrong principle in including these interlocutory applications in the costs of the motion, which W. was ordered to pay; but that the other items for subpœnas, &c., which were utilised at the postponed trial, were in the discretion of the taxing-master, and W. must pay them. Metropolitan Coal Consumers' Association, In re, Wainwright's Case, 63 L. In taxing the costs under the order of the Lord Chancellor, the taxing-master disallowed the costs of this correspondence. On summons to review the taxation:—Held, that the taxing-master was right. Norton v. Fenwick, 54 L. J., Ch. 632; 52 L. T. 341.

So where a party shews cause successfully in the first instance he is not entitled to costs. Fitch v. Green, 2 D. P. C. 439.

Where cause is shewn against a rule in the first instance, the costs are in all cases in the discretion of the court, and will rarely be given. Norris v. Carrington, 16 C. B. (N.S.) 396.

Where a rule is not moved with costs, and nothing is said about them at the time of discharging it, they are not payable to the successful party. Anon., 1 Chit. 398. S. P., Drinker v. Pascoe, 4 D. P. C. 566; 1 H. & W. 651.

A rule which does not ask for costs cannot be made absolute with costs. Gleddon v. Trebble, 9 C. B. (N.S.) 367.

The general practice is for the court not to give costs where they are not asked for by the rule, unless there are special circumstances. Marriott, In re, 1 C. B. (N.S.) 499.

Where a rule prays for several things, to some of which the party is entitled, and to others not, but cause is shewn against all, no costs are given on either side; though if cause had been shewn against the bad part only, the party shewing would have had costs. Aliven v. Furnival, 2 D. P. C. 49.

Where an affidavit answered a rule nisi for setting aside proceedings for irregularity, with costs, but was written in a cramped and slovenly hand, the court refused to grant the costs of the opposition. Bane v. Jones, 8 D. & R. 114.

If a rule is drawn up in the alternative, the party who fails on the substantial question is not entitled to the costs of the rule, although he succeeds upon the alternative. M'Andrew v. Adams, 1 Scott, 99; 1 Bing. (N.C.) 270; 3 D. P. C. 120; 4 L. J., C. P. 4.

A rule to set aside a judge's order having been drawn up at the instance of the defendant, without mentioning costs, the plaintiff consented to its being made absolute, notwithstanding the defendant obtained a second rule, drawn up with costs, stating that he abandoned the first:—The court directed the costs to abide the event of the cause. Jeves v. Hay, 1 Scott (N.R.) 399; 1 Man. & G. 390.

Upon a motion to postpone a trial, the notice of the intended application omitting to offer the costs of the postponement, the court made the rule absolute as well on payment of those costs as of the costs of the motion, though cause was shewn in the first instance. Ward v. Ducker, 6 Scott (N.R.) 45.

A party who shews cause successfully, in the first instance, against a rule, which, if granted, would be a stay of proceedings, and operate to his prejudice, will be allowed the costs of opposing the rule. Rennie v. Beresford, 3 D. & L. 464; 15 L. J., Ex. 78; 10 Jur. 76.

On discharging a rule with costs, the practice of the court generally is, not to order them to be paid to anyone not a formal party to the rule, without a separate application with that object. Reg. v. Green, 2 G. & D. 789.

The court has a discretionary power to order costs to be paid by persons making affidavits in support of a motion, particularly attorneys in their professional character; but if the claim for costs arises on the affidavits in answer, there must be a special application. Ib.

After an inquisition under the Tithe Commutation Act (6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 71), s. 82, the owner of the land obtained a rule to set aside the writ under which it was taken, and all subsequent proceedings, which after argument was discharged, no mention being made of the costs:—Held, that the costs of shewing cause against that rule could not be taxed as part of the costs of the inquisition. Hammersmith Rent-charge, In re, 19 L. J., Ex. 66; 14 Jur. 917.

A party served with a rule calling upon him to shew cause is not entitled to his costs of appearing upon the rule, if he has no costs to shew. Cassidy v. Steuart, 4 Scott (N.R.) 187; 3 Man. & G. 575; 10 L. J., C. P. 57.

a. In General.

Determination of Questions at issue in Action.]—Except to the extent to which special provisions are made by the rules, as, for instance, by Ord. XV., the plaintiff in an action is not entitled to take out a summons for the determination of the questions which are at issue in the action, and which will properly be decided at the trial. Borthwick v. Ransford, 54 L. J., Ch. 569; 28 Ch. D. 79; 33 W. R. 161.

Service—Out of the Jurisdiction.]—The plaintiff having obtained judgment against the defendant, a foreigner resident out of the jurisdiction, a summons was issued by leave of a judge at chambers calling on the defendant to shew cause why a receiver should not be appointed. On an application for leave to serve this summons on the defendant out of the jurisdiction:—Held, that there was no jurisdiction to grant such leave. Weldon v. Gounod, 15 Q. B. D. 622.

A judge of the chancery division has authority to order service out of the jurisdiction of a summons under s. 9 of the Vendor and Purchaser Act, 1874. Drapers' Co. v. McCann, 1 L. R., Ir. 13.

The court has jurisdiction to order service of a summons under the Companies Act, 1862, ss. 100, 165, upon respondents out of the jurisdiction. British Imperial Corporation, In re, 5 Ch. D. 749; 25 W. R. 583.

Leave will not be given to serve a summons for taxation of costs upon a foreigner out of the jurisdiction. Brandon, Ex parte, Bouron, In re, 54 L. T. 128; 34 W. R. 352.

Where the plaintiffs sued for goods in the possession of the defendant, and it appeared that a foreigner residing out of the jurisdiction claimed the right to the same goods, and would probably sue the defendant in respect of them, the court gave the defendant leave to serve an interpleader summons out of the jurisdiction upon the foreigner. The effect of service out of the jurisdiction in such a case is to give the foreigner notice of the proceedings within the jurisdiction, so that he may appear and prosecute his claim, or, if he does not appear, so that any future claim prosecuted by him against the defendant in respect of the subject-matter of the action within the jurisdiction may be barred. Credito Gerundense v. Van Weede, 53 L. J., Q. B. 142; 12 Q. B. D. 171; 32 W. R. 414; 48 J. P. 184.

If it is desired to make a foreigner residing out of the British dominions a party to proceedings to be commenced by administration summons, he should be served with notice of summons, and not with the summons itself. McLaughlin, In re, Roulston v. McLaughlin, 25 L. R., Ir. 513.

—— Of Originating Summons.]—See infra.

—— Substituted Service.]—A sum of money having been paid into court for the benefit of the defendant, M., his solicitor, obtained a charging order for costs upon it under 23 & 24 Vict. c. 127, s. 28. The costs had been taxed ex parte. M. then took out a summons to shew cause why the sum of money paid into court should not be paid out to him in part satisfaction of his taxed costs. This summons could not be served upon the defendant, who appeared to be wilfully evading service of it. L. had acted for the defendant after M. had ceased to do so, and H. had introduced the defendant to M.:—Held, that substituted service of the summons should be allowed; that a notice calling upon the defendant to appear in one month should be put up at the master's office, and served upon L. and H., and advertised in the "Times" newspaper, and thereupon, if the defendant did not appear, an order might be made on the summons. Hunt v. Austin, Mason, Ex parte, 51 L. J., Q. B. 455; 9 Q. B. D. 598; 47 L. T. 300—C. A.

Form.]—The omission or imperfect description of the year in the date of summons is immaterial; it is sufficient if the day and month are properly stated. Solomons v. Nainby, 5 M. & W. 389; 7 D. P. C. 459; 8 L. J., Ex. 267.

The word "peremptory" was put upon a summons, without the authority of the judge, and the court inflicted the payment of costs upon the attorney. Finnerty v. Smith, 1 Scott, 743; 1 Hodges, 158.

Striking Out—Frivolous and Vexatious.]—A summons under the Vendor and Purchaser Act asking for relief, to which it is plain from the contract that the applicant cannot be entitled, will be stayed as frivolous and vexatious. A. agreed with B. to sell him a public-house, and that in case A. should take, or be interested or concerned in a public-house within one-third of a mile of the premises sold during the occupation of B. or his widow, A. should pay to B. 500*l.*, and a covenant to this effect should be inserted in the conveyance. A.'s title to the property consisted of an agreement to purchase it from C., which contained a similar provision limited to the occupancy of A. and his widow, and not mentioning any covenant in the conveyance. B. accepted the title and tendered a conveyance containing a covenant by C., in the terms of A.'s agreement with B. C. refused to enter into this covenant, and B. took out a vendor and purchaser summons for a declaration that he was entitled to a covenant by C. A. moved to stay proceedings under the summons as frivolous and vexatious:—Held, that, as it was clearly impossible to make a declaration on the summons which would be binding on B., and the relief, if any, to which the applicant was entitled was specific performance with abatement, to which the declaration asked would not help him, the summons ought to be struck out as frivolous and vexatious. Bartlet and Berry's Contract, In re, 76 L. T. 751.

Counsel.]—The rule against hearing counsel at chambers during term did not apply to summonses which were taken out and returnable in vacation, but adjourned to a day in term. Doe d. Roberts v. Roe, 13 M. & W. 691; 2 D. & L. 673; 14 L. J., Ex. 101.

Rehearing by another Judge.]—Where a judge has, upon hearing the parties on a summons, refused an order, it is highly improper to proceed by summons before another judge; the party dissatisfied may apply to the court. Wright v. Stevenson, 5 Taunt. 850.

Effect of, as a Stay of Proceedings.]—A summons stays nothing unless it is returnable before the judgment may be regularly signed. Calze v. Littleton (Lord), 2 W. Bl. 954.

A summons is no stay of proceedings unless followed up. Knowles v. Vallance, 1 Gale, 16.

A summons returnable before judgment is signed operates as a stay of proceedings. Morris v. Hunt, 1 Chit. 93.

Where a judgment and an attendance upon a summons are running together, the summons must be attended before judgment can be signed. Barton v. Warren, 3 D. & L. 142; 14 L. J., Q. B. 312; 10 Jur. 375.

A summons to stay proceedings is waived by the delivery of a plea before the summons is due. Ib.

A summons served after judgment signed does not operate as a stay of proceedings, so as to prevent the plaintiff from making up and carrying in the judgment roll. Phillips v. Birch, 2 D. (N.S.) 97; 5 Scott (N.R.) 178; 4 Man. & G. 403; 11 L. J., C. P. 297.

A summons for a stay of proceedings on payment of debt and costs (in an action in which judgment had been given by default) was taken out on the 24th April, returnable on the 25th. Before the summons was returnable, by agreement between the parties, the matter was postponed until three o'clock on the 26th. On the morning of the 26th, the plaintiff executed a writ of inquiry, of which notice had been previously given:—Held, that, as the summons operated as a stay of proceedings from the time at which it was originally returnable on the 25th, the execution was bad and must be set aside. Serjeant v. Brown, 2 D. (N.S.) 985; 7 Jur. 700.

An order "peremptory" for time to plead does not preclude a defendant from again applying by summons for further time; and, if he takes out such further summons, judgment signed for want of a plea after the summons is returnable, is irregular. Beazley v. Bailey, 16 M. & W. 58; 4 D. & L. 271; 16 L. J., Ex. 1; 10 Jur. 906.

Costs—Adjourned.]—When a matter stands over in judge's chambers, the summons is adjourned, and therefore the costs of obtaining a new appointment and serving it will be disallowed on taxation. Catlin, In re, 18 Beav. 512.

An adjournment into court is part of the proceedings in chambers, and the costs of such adjournment go with the costs in chambers. Mitchell, In re, 33 L. J., Ch. 187; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1272; 9 L. T. 282; 12 W. R. 39.

The party at whose instance an adjournment is made will not have to pay the costs thereof, even if the question appears unarguable, unless, in the opinion of the court, there has been misconduct in bringing forward the question for the decision of the judge. Ib.

Where a summons had been taken out at chambers, afterwards adjourned into court, and abandoned by the plaintiff, the court, on motion by the defendant, ordered that the costs incurred by him in preparing to meet such summons should be taxed, and paid by the plaintiff. Lister v. Bell, 28 L. J., Ch. 162; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 115.

The same practice prevails whether the summons has or has not been adjourned into court. Ib.

Where an adjourned summons is refused, the applicant will, as a general rule, have to pay the costs of the summons as well as the adjournment. Beach v. Sleddon, 39 L. J., Ch. 123.

When a summons is dismissed with costs, the costs will, as a general rule, include all the costs, both of the adjournment and in chambers. Alcock v. Gill, 21 L. T. 704.

When a summons is dismissed with costs, costs in chambers are included as well as costs in court. Ipstone Park Colliery Co., In re, Brough's Claim, 18 W. R. 285.

Upon a summons being adjourned into court, the "costs of the application" directed to be paid by the party against whom the court decides are simply the costs of the adjournment. European Central Ry., In re, Holden, Ex parte, L. R. 8 Eq. 444; 21 L. T. 197; 17 W. R. 875.

When a claim against a company in liquidation is adjourned into court and allowed with costs out of the estate, only the costs of the adjournment into court are meant to be given, and the costs incurred by the claimants in chambers must be added to the amount of the claim. Wright, Ex parte, General Estates Co., In re, L. R. 8 Eq. 123.

—— Other Points.]—Costs follow a reversal of a decision of a judge at chambers. Friend v. L. C. & D. Ry., 25 W. R. 735.

On a summons adjourned from chambers to the court, it is the practice to certify for counsel. Graham v. Graham, 1 Johns. 624.

On an adjournment from chambers, the court always certifies for counsel. Greville v. Greville, 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1237; 8 W. R. 130.

See now R. S. C. 1883, Ord. LXV. r. 27, sub-r. 16.

1. Jurisdiction.

Effect of Ord. LV.]—The rr. 3 and 4 of Ord. LV. are only rules of procedure, and only enable certain proceedings to be taken by way of originating summons that would before have had to be taken by action, and do not enlarge the class of persons entitled to take those proceedings. Hargreaves, In re, Dicks v. Hare, 59 L. J., Ch. 375; 44 Ch. D. 236; 62 L. T. 819—C. A.

Delivery up of Papers by Solicitor.]—The expression "originating summons" does not include every summons by which proceedings are commenced without writ, but has reference exclusively to summonses by which such proceedings are commenced as could formerly have only been commenced by bill or writ. Consequently the procedure laid down by the rules in the case of an originating summons does not apply to a summons for the delivery up of papers by a solicitor. Holloway, In re, Pallister, Ex parte, 63 L. J., Q. B. 672; [1894] 2 Q. B. 163; 9 R. 384; 70 L. T. 615; 42 W. R. 433—C. A.

Equitable Tenant for Life — Possession — Custody of Title Deeds.]—The court has power to make an order allowing an equitable tenant for life to take possession of settled property, and giving him the custody of the title deeds, upon an originating summons. Bagot's Settlement, In re, Bagot v. Kittoe (8 R. 41), followed. Newen, In re, Newen v. Barnes, 63 L. J., Ch. 763; [1894] 2 Ch. 297; 8 R. 309; 70 L. T. 653; 43 W. R. 58; 58 J. P. 767.

Question between Annuitant and Devisee of Land charged with Annuity.]—A person contingently entitled to an annuity charged by will on lands specially devised, took proceedings by originating summons against the executors and trustees, and the devisee, to have it determined whether he was entitled to be paid the annuity:—Held, that there was no jurisdiction to decide the question on summons under Ord. LV. r. 4. Newman's Trusts, In re, 29 L. R., Ir. 9.

Creditor's Action—Absence of Legal Personal Representative.]—A judgment creditor took out an originating summons under Rules of Court 1883, Ord. LV. rr. 3, 4, against the husband of the judgment debtor, who had died intestate, as the person "entitled to take out letters of administration of the estate" of the deceased, for administration of that estate. The defendant had applied for, but had not yet obtained, letters of administration, and there was in fact no legal personal representative of the intestate yet constituted. The plaintiff moved for the appointment of a receiver. In opposition to the motion, an affidavit was made by the defendant, stating that since his wife's death he had taken all necessary steps to take out letters of administration, and that it was his intention to do so immediately:—Held, that the summons was bad, even treating it as a writ, since it asked only for administration of the estate, and there was no legal personal representative before the court; that the summons specified in Rules of Court, Ord. LV. r. 3, was for relief against trustees, executors, or administrators, and that the summons did not come within the order, and, therefore, that there was no action in which an order could properly be made, and that the motion must be dismissed. Leask, In re, Richardson v. Leask, 65 L. T. 199.

Executor—Money to whom belonging.]—One executor took out an originating summons against the other executor and the testator's widow to have it decided whether a sum of money in the possession of the widow, and which she alleged had been given to her by her husband in his lifetime, belonged to her or to her husband's estate:—Held, that on the originating summons the court only had jurisdiction to decide points which could have been determined in an action for the administration of the estate, and therefore had no jurisdiction to determine the question as to whom the money belonged. Davies, In re, Davies v. Davies (38 Ch. D. 210), approved. Royle, In re, Royle v. Hayes, 59 L. J., Ch. 1; 43 Ch. D. 18; 61 L. T. 542; 38 W. R. 17—C. A.

Forfeiture of Lease—Application for Relief.]—An application by a lessee, under s. 14, sub-s. 2, of the Conveyancing Act, 1881, for relief against forfeiture by reason of a breach of covenant cannot be made by originating summons. Lock v. Pearce, 62 L. J., Ch. 582; [1893] 2 Ch. 271; 2 R. 403; 68 L. T. 569; 41 W. R. 369—C. A.

Question between Legal Devisees.]—Upon an originating summons under r. 3 of Ord. LV. of the Rules of Supreme Court, 1883, there is jurisdiction to determine such questions only as before the existence of that rule could have been determined under a judgment for the administration of an estate or execution of a trust. Consequently, there is no jurisdiction upon an originating summons to decide a question arising between legal beneficial devisees under a will. Davies, In re, Davies v. Davies, 57 L. J., Ch. 759; 38 Ch. D. 210; 58 L. T. 312; 36 W. R. 587.

Question affecting Person claiming adversely to Will.]—The court has no jurisdiction, on an originating summons under r. 3 of Ord. LV. of the Rules of Court, 1883, to determine a question affecting a person claiming adversely to the will of a deceased person. Bridge, In re, Franks v. Worth, 56 L. J., Ch. 779; 56 L. T. 726; 35 W. R. 663.

Construction of Will—Settlement.]—H. devised lands to T. in terms which raised a question whether the lands passed to T. in fee or for life only, with remainder to A. as tenant in tail under a prior settlement, the legal estate in the lands passing direct to the devisee or devisees, and there being no trustees of the will. H. died in 1863. T. died in 1884, having devised his real estate to trustees. A. executed a disentailing deed and a resettlement of his estate. The trustees of T.'s will took out an originating summons under Ord. LV. r. 3, making A. and the trustees of his resettlement defendants, for the determination of the questions whether the lands devised by the will of H. passed to T. in fee, and thence to the trustees of his will, or whether they belonged to T. for life only with remainder to A. in tail, and if so, were included in A.'s resettlement:—Held, that Ord. LV. r. 3, did not apply to the case, and that the court had no jurisdiction to determine the questions upon an originating summons. Carlyon, In re, Carlyon v. Carlyon, 56 L. J., Ch. 219 ; 56 L. T. 151 ; 35 W. R. 155.

Appointment of Receiver.]—Semble, that a receiver may be appointed upon an originating summons. Gee v. Bell, 56 L. J., Ch. 718 ; 35 Ch. D. 160 ; 56 L. T. 305 ; 35 W. R. 805.

In an administration action, commenced by originating summons, a receiver may (in a proper case) be appointed immediately after the service of the summons and before any order for administration has been made. Francke, In re, Drake v. Francke, 57 L. J., Ch. 437 ; 58 L. T. 305.

A mortgagee issued a writ asking for the usual order for foreclosure, and moved for the appointment of a receiver, and on the motion being heard, a receiver was appointed. A statement of claim was delivered, but the mortgagor having become bankrupt, the plaintiff withdrew his claim for payment :—Held, that the plaintiff should have proceeded by originating summons. Barr v. Harding, 58 L. T. 74 ; 36 W. R. 216.

To set aside Release.]—Two legatees having alleged that they had been induced to execute a release, indemnifying the executors of a testator's estate, without having had independent advice :—Held, that they were entitled to take out an originating summons under Ord. LV. r. 3, of the Rules of Court, 1883, to have the release set aside, the question of the validity of the release being one "arising in the administration of the estate" and "affecting" the rights of the legatees within the meaning of that order. Garnett, In re, Gandy v. Macaulay, 50 L. T. 172 ; 32 W. R. 474.

The court, in its discretion, will not allow a claim which involves setting aside a release to be determined on an originating summons, but will require a writ to be issued. Ellis' Trusts, In re, Kelson v. Ellis, 59 L. T. 924 ; 37 W. R. 91.

Mortgage—Priorities.]—A question of disputed priority as between two mortgagees, even assuming that the court has jurisdiction to decide it on originating summons—as to which, quære—is not such a question as ought to be determined by such a mode of procedure. Giles, In re, Real and Personal Advance Co. v. Mitchell, 59 L. J., Ch. 226 ; 43 Ch. D. 391 ; 62 L. T. 375 ; 38 W. R. 273—C. A.

—— Question as to calling in Mortgage—One Trustee against Co-trustee.]—One of the trustees of a will took out an originating summons against his two co-trustees, asking for the determination of the question whether the trustees ought to take any, and if any what, steps to call in or otherwise with respect to certain mortgage securities held by the trustees upon trusts declared by the will :—Held, that the summons was properly taken out under Ord. LV. r. 3 (g), for the determination of a question arising in the administration of an estate. Medland, In re, Eland v. Medland, 58 L. J., Ch. 572 ; 41 Ch. D. 476 ; 60 L. T. 851 ; 37 W. R. 753—C. A.

—— Construction of Mortgage-deed—Offer to Redeem.]—A mortgage may proceed by originating summons, under Order LIVA., r. 1, to have a question of construction arising on the mortgage-deed determined without making an offer to redeem. Nobbs v. Law Reversionary Interest Society, 65 L. J., Ch. 906 ; [1896] 2 Ch. 830 ; 75 L. T. 309.

—— Action for Redemption—Disputed Title.]—The plaintiff obtained judgment in a redemption action where the defendant denied the tender, and disputed the plaintiff's title to redeem :—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to such costs only as he would have been entitled to on an originating summons contested by the defendant, and attended by counsel, such costs to include the costs of the witnesses examined in court to prove tender and plaintiff's title. Johnson v. Evans, 60 L. T. 29.

Power of Appointment — Validity.] — The question having been raised whether a power of appointment under a will was invalid as infringing the rule against perpetuities :—Held, that there was jurisdiction to determine the question on an originating summons under Ord. LV. r. 3. Hargreaves, In re, Midgley v. Tatley, 59 L. J., Ch. 384 ; 43 Ch. D. 401 ; 62 L. T. 473 ; 38 W. R. 470—C. A.

Trustees — Direction to.] — An originating summons ought not to be taken out under Ord. LV. r. 3, for the purpose of obtaining a direction to trustees to do or abstain from doing an act which is outside the scope of their trusts. Suffolk v. Lawrence, 32 W. R. 899.

—— Payment into Court—Wilful Default.]—An originating summons was taken out under Ord LV. of the Rules of Court, 1883, by one of the residuary legatees under the will of a testator, against the executors and trustees thereof asking that certain questions or matter arising in the administration of the estate of the testator might be determined and relief given in respect thereof. The summons asked that a sum of stock standing in the names of the trustees might be transferred into court ; that a mortgage-deed for securing the payment of a sum forming part of the testator's estate might be deposited in court ; that the trustees might be ordered to pay into court a sum forming part of the estate and improperly used by them in their respective businesses ; for proper accounts ; a declaration of the rights and interests of the persons beneficially entitled ; that so far as might be necessary for the purposes aforesaid the estate might be administered by the court ; and that the trustees might be ordered to pay the costs. It was objected that the case ought to have been commenced by a writ in an action, inasmuch as trustees could not properly be charged with wilful default by an originating summons :—Held, that the court had jurisdiction upon an originating summons, to order payment into court of moneys which had been received by trustees and improperly applied by them ; and therefore to grant the relief asked for in the present case. Chapman, In re, Fardell v. Chapman, 54 L. T. 13.

—— Breach of Trust.]—A proceeding by which trusteees are charged with a breach of trust cannot be brought by originating summons. Weall, In re, Andrews v. Weall, 37 W. R. 779.

An action was commenced by originating summons, and on the 25th March, 1893, it was declared that the trusts of a will ought to be performed under the direction of the court, and certain inquiries were directed, among others, as to the value of the mortgage securities and whether they were sufficient, and whether they should be called in or retained, and in case they were insufficient, "under what circumstances and by whom the moneys owing thereon were advanced, and what valuations were taken by the persons advancing such moneys, and whether such investments were proper." On the 5th November, 1894, further inquiries and accounts were directed, and among others, an account of the personal estate not specifically bequeathed of the testator's estate. The chief clerk certified on the 26th of March, 1896, that the investments were to a certain extent improper, and as to one of them that it was made on no sufficient valuation, and found that the defendants were liable thereon. A summons was then taken out by them asking that this might be varied, and it was so varied on the grounds that it was beyond the scope of the inquiry and not borne out by the evidence. The question now arose, the summons to vary coming on with the further consideration, what further relief there was, if any, as it lay in respect of a breach of trust, and could not presumably be given on originating summons:—Held, that the words of the inquiry above set out went too far, and that, if objection had been taken to it at the time, it would not have been proceeded with, but that, not having been objected to, it was now binding on the court. That that being so, it would be idle to send the applicants to commence another action, and that, as the account asked for was one upon which the defendants, if the case had occurred prior to the judicature act, might have been held liable on the common account, the beneficiaries were entitled to have it taken. At the same time, there was no intention of getting rid of the rule by a side wind which prevented contested cases being decided on originating summons, and if, therefore, it appeared on taking the account that it involved vivâ voce evidence, application should be made for directing the issue to be dealt with in the proper mode. Stuart, In re, Smith v. Stuart, 74 L. T. 546.

—— Question whether Defendant Co-trustee with Plaintiff.]—The plaintiff claimed, by action, that it might be determined whether the defendant was co-trustee with him of a settlement under which both of them had been appointed trustees, and that a new trustee might be appointed in the defendant's place. The defendant denied that he had ever accepted the trusts or acted as trustee, or that he had refused to concur in the appointment of a trustee in his place; and it was objected that the application ought to have been by originating summons:—Held, that relief could not have been granted under an originating summons, and that the plaintiff had rightly proceeded by action, and was entitled to his costs thereof. Elworthy v. Harvey, 60 L. T. 30; 37 W. R. 164.

—— Appointment of New Trustee—Vesting Order.]—Upon an originating summons asking for general administration of an estate and the appointment of new trustee, the court can make an order for the appointment of new trustees, all the parties interested in the appointment being before the court. Allen, In re, Simes v. Simes, 56 L. J., Ch. 779; 56 L. T. 611. And see Elworthy v. Harvey, supra.

The court has no jurisdiction, upon an originating summons in chambers, to make an order appointing new trustees, and vesting in them the trust estate. Gill, In re, Smith v. Gill, 53 L. T. 623; 34 W. R. 134.

An originating summons having been issued under Ord. LV. r. 13 (a), of December, 1888, for the appointment of a new trustee and vesting order:—Held, that this was a "matter" within s. 42 of the Trustee Act, 1850, and that the court had power on motion in the summons to make an order vesting the trust property in the new trustee, with the right to call for a transfer of stock in the Bank of England. Jones, In re, 59 L. J., Ch. 157; 61 L. T. 554; 38 W.R. 203.

Under r. 13 (a) of Ord. LV. of the Rules of Court, 1883, a vesting order may be obtained by summons in chambers upon the appointment of new trustees, but in a complicated case a petition for the appointment of new trustees and a vesting order may be presented, and the costs thereof will be allowed. Morris's Settlement Trusts, In re, 60 L. T. 96; 37 W. R. 317.

Trustee Relief Act.]—The procedure by way of originating summons is not intended to be substituted for the statutory procedure under the Trustee Relief Act, and a trustee's right of payment in under that act remains unaffected. Parker's Will, In re, 58 L. J., Ch. 23; 39 Ch. D. 303; 60 L. T. 83—C. A.

Sale by Court.]—An order for sale of a judgment debtor's interest in certain houses in respect of which a receiver has been appointed, can be made on an originating summons under Order LV. r. 9b. Martin and Varlow, In re, 13 R. 189; 43 W. R. 247.

Approval of Sale by Court.]—Under r. 3 (f) of Ord. LV. the court can only approve of a sale which the executors or trustees of the will or deed to which the originating summons relates could have made themselves. Robinson, In re, Pickard v. Wheater, 55 L. J., Ch. 307; 31 Ch. D. 247; 53 L. T. 865.

Objection to—Time for—Costs.]—An objection to the jurisdiction upon an originating summons having been taken by the defendants for the first time after the hearing of the summons had been adjourned into court:—Held, that the objection ought to have been taken in chambers, and that, though the objection was good, and the summons must be dismissed with costs, the defendants could not be allowed the costs of the adjournment into court. Davies, In re, Davies v. Davies, 57 L. J., Ch. 759; 38 Ch. D. 210; 58 L. T. 312; 36 W. R. 587.

2. Service of.

Similar to Service of Writs.]—In an administration action commenced by originating summons under Ord. LV. rr. 3 and 4, of the Rules of Court, 1883, the defendant being a person of unsound mind not so found by inquisition, the summons was served, as required for writs by Ord. IX. r. 5, of the same rules, on the person under whose care the person of unsound mind was. No appearance was made by the defendant on return of the summons, and none was entered. Notice of motion was served for the appointment of a guardian ad litem, as required by Ord. XIII. r. 1, of the same rules in case of default of appearance to writs. The court, holding that the rules as to the service of writs applied to an originating summons, made an order appointing a guardian ad litem. Pepper, In re, Pepper v. Pepper, 53 L. J., Ch. 1054; 50 L. T. 580; 32 W. R. 765.

Indorsement and Affidavit of Service.]—Ord. LXVII. r. 6, applies to service of an originating summons which should be indorsed after service in the manner provided by Ord. IX. r. 16, and the affidavit of service should verify the making of such indorsement. Browne v. Browne, 29 L. R., Ir. 368.

Out of the Jurisdiction.]—Where an originating summons was taken out by an executor for the purpose of deciding the question of the domicil of a testator, and the widow and one adult child and two infants were separately represented by counsel; but one adult child, C. B., was in Calcutta and could not be served, and the property was of great value; the court refused to decide the question in the absence of C. B., but gave leave to issue a writ, and gave leave to serve the writ out of the jurisdiction, and to serve notice of motion on C. B. in Calcutta, in order to have a declaration deciding the question, the evidence on the summons to be used on the motion. Bullen-Smith, In re, Berners v. Bullen-Smith, 57 L. T. 924.

The court cannot order service of an originating summons out of the jurisdiction. Busfield, In re, Whaley v. Busfield, 55 L. J., Ch. 467; 32 Ch. D. 123; 54 L. T. 220; 34 W. R. 372—C. A.

3. Other Points.

Form—Question of Construction.]—An originating summons issued to obtain the construction of a document, and the ascertainment of the persons entitled thereunder, should set out specific questions which the court can answer categorically. Harman, In re, Lloyd v. Tardy, 63 L. J., Ch. 822; [1894] 3 Ch. 607; 8 R. 549; 71 L. T. 401.

Statement of Facts.]—Where an originating summons is taken out to determine the construction of a will, the statement of facts supplied to the judge should set out the material portions of the will verbatim and not in the indirect narrative. Bence, In re, Smith v. Bence, 64 L. T. 282.

District Registry—Removal of Proceedings.]—See Thwaites, In re, Yerburgh v. Aston, 63 L. T. 747.

Third Party Procedure not applicable.]—The procedure directed for originating summonses under Ord. LV., and the relief intended to be thereby given, are not of such a nature as the third-party rules were intended to apply to, and the court has no power to give a defendant to an originating summons leave to issue a third-party notice. Wilson, In re, Att.-Gen. v. Woodall, 60 L. J., Ch. 101; 45 Ch. D. 266; 63 L. T. 100; 39 W. R. 58.

Point not raised by Plaintiff.]—Semble, in an originating summons the court will not at the instance of the respondent decide a point not raised by the plaintiff taking out the summons. Carter, In re, 41 W. R. 140.

Costs.]—A public body paying money into court under the Lands Clauses Act, 1845, must pay the costs of an originating summons for payment out issued with its concurrence, although there is no jurisdiction to deal with the matter on a summons. Hicks, In re, North Eastern Railway, Ex parte, 63 L. J., Ch. 568; 8 R. 319; 70 L. T. 529.

—— Objection to Jurisdiction.]—See Davies, In re, supra.

XVIII. NOTICES.

See R. S. C. 1883, Ord. LXVI.

In Writing.]—Where a writ of summons has issued for a sum under 20*l.* the notice mentioned in the indorsement thereon, of the defendant's intention to oppose the plaintiff's application for costs, must be in writing. Woodward v. North, 5 H. & N. 790; 29 L. J., Ex. 471; 8 W. R. 694.

Service on Person not a Party to Judgment.]—In an action for administration, judgment for administration was delivered on the 2nd June, 1883, and in November, 1884, notice of the judgment was served by the plaintiffs, under an order of the court on P., a purchaser of part of the testator's estate in which the plaintiffs were not interested. He was not a party to the action, and it did not appear from the judgment how he was affected. In order to ascertain his position, he entered an appearance on the 22nd November, 1884, under Ord. XVI. r. 41. On finding that he was not affected by the judgment, he served notice of motion on the plaintiffs that the order directing service might be discharged for irregularity, that the service might be declared irregular and set aside, that the appearance entered by him thereupon might be vacated, and that the costs of the application and consequent on the service might be paid by the plaintiffs. The motion was ordered to stand over, and P. was kept in the proceedings till the hearing on further consideration, when Bacon, V.-C. refused to give him any costs:—Held, on appeal, that P. was not a person who ought to have been served under Ord. XVI. r. 40, and that the service was irregular; that P. was right in appearing to the notice, that his appearance must be vacated, and that the plaintiffs must pay the costs in both courts, including the costs of appearance and all costs consequent on the service. Symons, In re, Betts v. Betts, 54 L. T. 501—C. A.

See also ante, cols. 574 et seq.

Publication of Statutory Notice.]—Where a statute required notices "to be affixed on the principal outer door of the church of such parish, or if there shall not be any church in such parish, then upon the principal outer door of every known place of religious worship in such parish," it was held that posting the notices on a notice-board fixed on a gate pier facing the principal entrance to a place of worship, but on the opposite side of the road, was not a compliance with the statutory requirement. Reg. v. Meath JJ., [1897] 2 Ir. R. 21.

XIX. PROCEEDINGS IN DISTRICT REGISTRY.

See R. S. C. 1883, Ord. XXXV.

Appearance to Writ Issued out of.]—When a writ is issued out of a district registry and is served without the district, it is imperative that notice of appearance be sent to the address for service within the district; notice of appearance given at the address for service in London is insufficient. Smith v. Dobbin, 47 L. J., Ex. 65; 3 Ex. D. 338; 37 L. T. 777; 26 W. R. 122—C.A.

Jurisdiction of Registrar—Solicitor's Bill—Order of Course.]—A company, having its registered office in Liverpool, had employed a solicitor living at Sheffield to take certain legal proceedings in London. The company obtained from the registrar of the Liverpool district registry an order on a petition of course for delivery and taxation of the solicitor's bill of costs:—Held, that the registrar had exceeded his authority, and that the order must be discharged. Porrett, In re, 60 L. J., Ch. 396; [1891] 2 Ch. 433; 64 L. T. 752; 39 W. R. 531—C. A.

—— Interpleader.]—The judicature rules confer no jurisdiction upon a district registrar of the high court to make an interpleader order. Hood v. Yates, 63 L. J., Q. B. 218; [1894] 1 Q. B. 240; 70 L. T. 557; 42 W. R. 412. But see Ord. XXXV. r. 5a.

—— To Rectify Judgment.] — A district registrar has, by r. 6 of Ord. XXXV., concurrently with a master of the high court, the jurisdiction of a master to set aside a judgment entered in the district registry. Hood v. Yates (63 L. J., Q. B. 218; [1894] 1 Q. B. 240), considered. Townend v. Kirkham, 67 L. J., Q. B. 5; [1898] 1 Q. B. 51; 77 L. T. 419; 46 W. R. 65—C. A.

—— To open Accounts and Receive Moneys.]—The treasury order of the 1st of April, 1876, relating to the official banking accounts, applies to fees and other moneys collected by district registrars, and does not authorise them to open accounts and receive moneys (e.g. on sale of real estate) in chancery actions. Macdonald v. Foster, 25 W. R. 602. In C. A., see infra.

—— To appoint Receiver and direct Accounts.]—District registrars have no power to appoint receivers, direct banking accounts to be opened, and money to be paid in to those accounts; nor have they any power to take accounts directed by the judge in actions commenced in the district registries, unless the judgment specially directs them so to do. Smith, In re, Hutchinson v. Ward, 6 Ch. D. 692; 36 L. T. 178; 25 W. R. 452.

By virtue of rr. 1a and 4 of Ord. XXXV., a district registrar has power to make an order for an account under r. 1 of Ord. XV., and if the order so directs (but not otherwise) he can then proceed to take the account himself. Bowen, in re, Bennett v. Bowen, 51 L. J., Ch. 825; 20 Ch. D. 538; 47 L. T. 114. But see Ord. XXXV. r. 6 and Ord. LV. r. 15.

—— Account—Form of Report.]—In making a report to the court under s. 66 of the Judicature Act, 1873, of the result of an account in an administration action, the district registrar ought to adopt the form of a chief clerk's certificate, and to state in the report the persons who were present before him, and the materials upon which he proceeded. Bowen, In re, Bennett v. Bowen, supra.

—— To Direct Administration Account and Inquiries.]—In the Liverpool district registry an action was commenced by a writ of summons for the administration of real and personal estate, and statements of claim and defence having been filed, the action came on for trial. The district registrar issued an administration summons, and made, by consent, a decree for administration of the real and personal estate, directing accounts and inquiries, and reserving further directions. The accounts and inquiries having been prosecuted, on application for directions as to setting down the action on further consideration:—Held, that the proceedings in the district registry were irregular, the district registrar having no power to make a decree, even by consent. Irlam v. Irlam, 2 Ch. D. 608; 24 W. R. 292, 949.

The action coming on for trial as a short cause:—Held, that, having regard to Ord. XXXV. r. 1, it is only in default of appearance that a district registrar can make an order under Ord. XV. r. 1, and that accounts and inquiries cannot be prosecuted in a district registry, except by direction of the court or the judge of the division, under the Judicature Act, 1873, s. 66. Ib.

An application for a decree, with liberty to adopt the proceedings in the district registry, was refused, but the usual administration decree was made, with a direction that the accounts and inquiries should be taken and made in the district registry, and that the sale of the real estate should take place in London under the supervision of the judge in chambers. Ib.

Where an action is intituled in the chancery division and a district registry, the usual inquiries may be made in the district registry, but the application for a sale should be made in the chambers of the judge of the chancery division to whom the action is attached. Sykes v. Schofield, 49 L. J., Ch. 833; 14 Ch. D. 629; 42 L. T. 822; 29 W. R. 68.

Order directing Accounts, Inquiries or Sale.]—Although the court has power under the Judicature Act, 1873, s. 66, in any action to direct accounts and inquiries to be taken and made in a district registry, it has no jurisdiction to appoint a receiver in such district registry for the purposes of the action. Walker v. Robinson, 34 L. T. 229; 24 W. R. 427.

When the accounts and inquiries in an action for the administration of an estate which was insufficient to pay legacies in full had been prosecuted in a district registry, the court allowed the minutes of the order on further consideration to be altered by directing the apportionment amongst the legatees to be made by the district registrar instead of by the chief clerk. Day v. Whittaker, 46 L. J., Ch. 680; 6 Ch. D. 734; 36 L. T. 683; 25 W. R. 767.

When a decree in an administration action directed the accounts to be taken in a district registry, and the real estate to be sold with the approbation of the judge, Hall, V.-C., directed that the sale should take place in his chambers:—Held, that although it might have been more convenient that the sale should take place in the district registry, yet the place and manner of the sale was a matter entirely within the discretion of the judge, and the court refused to interfere with his exercise of such discretion. Macdonald v. Foster, 6 Ch. D. 193; 37 L. T. 296; 25 W. R. 687—C. A.

Appointment of Receiver.]—In a creditor's action for the administration of a testator's real and personal estate, which was commenced in a district registry, on motion for judgment the chancery division has jurisdiction to appoint a receiver, who must give security in London, but may pass his accounts in the district registry. Capper, In re, Robertson v. Capper, 26 W. R. 434. And see Walker v. Robinson, supra.

—— Payment of Money to Credit of District Registrar.]—When an action is commenced in a district registry and money is ordered to be paid by a receiver into court to the credit of the action, it is not a compliance with that order to pay the amount into a bank "to the credit of the district registrar." That mode of payment is irregular, and the money will be ordered to be brought into court under the chancery funds act and rules. Finlay v. Davis, 12 Ch. D. 735; 39 L. T. 662; 27 W. R. 352.

Removal of Proceedings.]—A motion made in the chancery division in an action commenced in a district registry has the effect of removing such action to London, so that no further proceedings can be taken in the district registry. Dyson v. Pickles, 27 W. R. 376.

Ord. XXXV. r. 16, provides that, "In any case not provided for by rr. 13 and 14, any party to a cause or matter proceeding in a district registry may apply to the court or a judge, or to the district registrar, for an order to remove the cause or matter from the district registry to London, and the court, judge, or registrar may make an order accordingly, if satisfied that there is sufficient reason for doing so, upon such terms, if any, as shall be just." Circumstances under which an order for transfer to the high court will not be made. Neath and Bristol Steamship Co., In re, 58 L. T. 180.

An originating summons was taken out in the Liverpool district registry by a tenant for life against the trustees of a testator's will and infants, asking for an account and the appointment of a new trustee. The testator's property was situate in Leicestershire, Lancashire, Scotland, and London, and comprised a large brewery in Lancashire. The testator, by his will, appointed three persons living in Lancashire as trustees of his will, and the defendant A. The plaintiff and the defendant A. lived in London, and the surviving trustee in Lancashire. On summons by the defendant A. asking as a matter of right that the proceedings might be removed from the Liverpool district registry to London:—Held, that the proceedings did not come within the terms of Ord. XXXV. rr. 13 and 14, of the Rules of Court, 1883, the proceedings not having been commenced by writ. Held, that r. 16 of Ord. XXXV. applied, and an important part of the property being situate in Lancashire, and three of the trustees appointed by the will being Lancashire men, the summons must be refused. Thwaites, In re, Yerburgh v. Aston, 63 L. T. 747.

A plaintiff commenced an action in the Bradford district registry for administration of the estate of a deceased party. The statement of claim was marked as delivered on 19th November, 1875, and as assigned to the chancery division, Bacon, V.-C. The defendant made default, whereon the plaintiff became entitled to set down the action on motion for judgment. On the plaintiff's motion under Ord. XXXV. r. 13, Bacon, V.-C., ordered the cause to be transferred to his court. Walker v. Robinson, 33 L. T. 779; 24 W. R. 137.

When a plaintiff is entitled, under Ord. XXIX. r. 10, to set down on motion for judgment an action which has proceeded in a district registry, the court will not make an order, under Ord. XXXV. r. 13, for the removal of the action to London, but will direct the papers and documents to be sent to London, and upon this being done, the action may be set down for trial without further direction from the court. Birmingham Waste Co. v. Lane, 24 W. R. 292.

Trial of Chancery Actions commenced in.]—Notwithstanding Ord. XXXV. r. 1a, chancery actions commenced in district registries ought to be tried in London before the judge of the chancery division to whom they have been assigned. Smith, In re, Hutchinson v. Ward, 6 Ch. D. 692; 36 L. T. 178; 25 W. R. 452.

Power to vary Order as to Costs.]—The enactment in s. 49 of the Judicature Act, 1873, that no order by the high court, or any judge thereof, as to costs only which by law are left to the discretion of the court, shall be subject to any appeal, does not apply to the order of a master or district registrar, and therefore a judge of such court has power to vary as to costs an order of a district registrar dismissing the action without costs. Foster v. Edwards, 48 L. J., Q. B. 767.

Charging Order after Trial.]—Upon a petition by a solicitor for a charging order on property preserved in an action marked "Chancery Division, Liverpool District Registry, Hall, V.-C.," which had been tried by a judge and jury at Liverpool:—Held, that the judge who had dealt with the substantial part of the case was the only judge who could deal with the application. Owen v. Henshaw, 47 L. J., Ch. 267; 7 Ch. D. 385; 26 W. R. 188.

Taxation of Costs.]—The court will not, except under very special circumstances, direct the costs of an action commenced in a district registry to be taxed otherwise than by the taxing-master in London. Day v. Whittaker, 46 L. J., Ch. 680; 6 Ch. D. 734; 36 L. T. 683; 25 W. R. 767.

When an administration decree directed accounts and inquiries to be taken in the district registry and ordered that upon the result being reported the action should be heard in London on further consideration, the court refused to allow the costs of the action to be taxed in the district registry. Irlam v. Irlam, 2 Ch. D. 608; 24 W. R. 949.

The court can, in its discretion, order the taxation of costs in an administration action, commenced and prosecuted in a district registry, to be made by the district registrar. The term "taxing officer" in rr. 3, 11, and 12 of Supreme Court Funds Rules, 1884, these rules being read in conjunction with Ord. LXV. r. 27, sub-s. 43, of Rules of Supreme Court, 1883, includes "district registrar," where the court has directed taxation to be made by that officer, and the paymaster is bound to act on the certificate of taxation of a district registrar, when the court, in the exercise of its discretion, has directed taxation in the district registry. The court, however, following Day v. Whittaker (6 Ch. D. 734), will not, except under very special circumstances, direct the costs of an action commenced in a district registry to be taxed otherwise than by a taxing master of the chancery division. Wilson, In re, Wilson v. Alltree, 53 L. J., Ch. 989; 27 Ch. D. 242; 32 W. R. 897.

—— Review of Taxation—Appeal.]—A taxation of sheriff's costs and charges by a master of the supreme court or district registrar of the high court, under the general order as to fees of the 31st of August, 1888, made in pursuance of the Sheriffs Act, 1887, is not the subject of review under the provision of Ord. LXV. r. 27 (39-41), of the rules of the supreme court. Such taxation is a mere calculation of amount, and, per se, fixes no liability on the person assessed. Townend v. Yorkshire (Sheriff), 59 L. J., Q. B. 156; 24 Q. B. D. 621; 62 L. T. 402; 38 W. R. 381; 54 J. P. 598.

Where a taxation of costs has been carried out in a district registry, and objections have been delivered to and disallowed by the registrar, a judge of the high court has jurisdiction on a summons to review the taxation to make an order that the items referred to in the objections be referred to a master of the supreme court for re-taxation. Stevens v. Griffin, 66 L. J., Q. B. 698; [1897] 2 Q. B. 368; 76 L. T. 803; 45 W. R. 658—C. A.

See R. S. C. 1883, Ord. LV. r. 2.

Private Act.]—A private act of parliament directed a reference to a master of the court of chancery from time to time for various purposes connected with the management of an estate:—Held, that the reference may now be directed to the chief clerk in chambers. Thornhill v. Thornhill, 1 Eq. R. 397; 22 L. J., Ch. 985; 17 Jur. 252; 18 Jur. 31; 1 W. R. 251, 459.

Question of Law.]—Where the question in the suit is a question of law, the inquiry must be made at chambers unless the parties can come to an agreement. Duffield v. Lenny, 1 W. R. 74.

Inquiry.]—When a plaintiff is allowed to go into evidence in chambers in support of a point in his case raised at the hearing, but which formed no part of the prayer of the bill (as, for instance, whether valuable consideration was really given, when the settlement under which he claims appears primâ facie to have been voluntary), there must be an order drawn up directing the inquiry, and the case cannot proceed before the chief clerk on a simple adjournment to chambers. Kelson v. Kelson, 9 Hare (App.) lxxxvi.; 17 Jur. 129; 1 W. R. 196.

Proceedings by inquiries in chambers, and by certificate, in a case where the consideration of the result of the evidence was adjourned for argument in court. Rogers v. Mort, 10 Hare (App.) liii.

Foreclosure.]—In foreclosure suit, the reference should be to the judge's chief clerk in chambers. Staines v. Rudlin, 16 Jur. 965; 1 W. R. 13.

Leases.]—An application for a renewal of a lease ought to be by summons in chambers. Bickford v. Chalker, 1 Eq. R. 236.

Leases to be granted by trustees under the provisions of the 19 & 20 Vict. c. 120, must be settled in chambers. Procter's Settled Estates, In re, 26 L. J., Ch. 464; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 534; 5 W. R. 643.

Damages.]—Inquiry as to damages for polluting a stream sent to chief clerk and not to a referee. Slack v. Midland Ry., 50 L. J., Ch. 196; 16 Ch. D. 81; 43 L. T. 434; 29 W. R. 302.

Conduct of Proceedings.]—The question, who is to have the conduct of the proceedings, will be decided in chambers, as well where the proceedings are in two causes as where they are in one cause. Stone v. Van Heythuysen, 18 Jur. 344.

Fund in Court.]—Questions respecting the payment of money out of court are properly settled before the chief clerk, or in case of difficulty by the judge in chambers, and ought not to be made the subject of an application in open court. Bentley v. Craven, 1 W. R. 362, 401.

The court having ordered certain small leaseholds to be sold and the proceeds distributed, together with a fund in court, among numerous parties, upon the certificate of the chief clerk, in order to save expense, directed the purchasers to be served with a summons to show cause at chambers why the proceeds should not be distributed pursuant to the order; and no cause having been shown, the proceeds were distributed by the chief clerk. Thorp v. Owen, 2 Sm. & G. (App.) i.

Where 300*l.*, part of a fund in court, was to be settled by the court, the petition for the settlement was referred to chambers; and after consideration the trusts were inserted in the order, instead of the settlement being referred to the conveyancing counsel. Chamberlain v. Chamberlain, 1 Sm. & G. (App.) xxviii.

All questions of title relating to land, in which money in court is to be invested under the order of the court, are, as a general rule, referred to chambers for consideration, and the judge in chambers will there consider whether he can approve of the title without sending it to the conveyancing counsel of the court. Jones' Settled Estates, In re, 3 Eq. Rep. 735; 24 L. J., Ch. 504; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 817; 3 W. R. 564.

Guardian.]—Application for the appointment of a guardian to concur in a special case (see 9 Hare (App.) xlviii.) made in court and not by summons at chambers. Thornhill v. Copleston, 10 Hare (App.) lxvii.

Sale.]—Evidence of the propriety of a sale of an estate by private contract heard and approved of in court, and not referred to chambers. Pim v. Insall, 10 Hare (App.) lxxiv.

2. Authority of Chief Clerk.

To decide Necessary Questions.]—Where an inquiry as to personal estate was directed in a suit, commenced by administration summons, and a question arose, in the course of such inquiry, as to whether there was a binding agreement for a settlement, which it became necessary to determine, in order to ascertain what the personal estate consisted of, and the chief clerk determined that question, and this finding was objected to as being ultra vires:—Held, that the chief clerk had power to decide the question, it being necessary to do so to carry out the inquiry. Wadham v. Rigg, 2 Dr. & Sm. 78; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 206; 6 L. T. 180; 10 W. R. 365.

Witnesses.]—An alleged contributory under a winding-up order was summoned before the chief clerk as a witness, and to produce papers. He refused to be sworn, on the ground that it was important that he should have the assistance of counsel. Upon a motion to commit:—Held, that the witness had no right to refuse to be sworn, but that the proper course was, after he was sworn, to apply to the chief clerk to have his examination taken before the judge or an examiner, and, if necessary, to have the question determined by adjournment in court. Electric Telegraph Co., In re, Bunn, Ex parte, 24 Beav. 137; 26 L. J., Ch. 614; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1013.

The chief clerks of the vice-chancellors have power to administer an oath under the winding-up acts. National Alliance Assurance Co., In re, 1 L. T. 131; 8 W. R. 75.

Compromise.]—An official manager, having entered into a compromise with a contributory, believing that some of the statements made by the contributory were untrue, sought to set aside the compromise, on the ground that it had only received the sanction of the chief clerk, and had not received that of the judge, or been brought before his attention:—Held, that the compromise was valid, although it had not been brought before the judge. Home Counties Life Assurance Co., In re, Garstin, Ex parte, 6 L. T. 374; 10 W. R. 457.

General Administration.]—The proviso in Ord. LV. r. 15, that no judgment or order for general administration shall be made under r. 4 of that order by the chief clerk, extends to orders for general administration of trusts constituted by deed. Davidson v. Young, 54 L. J., Ch. 747.

Reference to Accountant.]—A reference made by a chief clerk to an accountant of questions arising in an action is irregular. Hill v. King, 3 De G. J. & S. 418; 1 N. R. 341; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 527; 8 L. T. 220.

Inquiry as to Debts—Purchase of Debts by Plaintiff's Solicitor.]—The solicitor to the plaintiff in a creditor's action bought up debts; the estate was insolvent:—Held, that the question whether the solicitor was trustee for the creditors of any profit on the purchase could not be raised by the certificate of the chief clerk, in the absence of any direction on the subject in the order under which the certificate was made. Tillet, In re, Field v. Lydall, 55 L. J., Ch. 841; 32 Ch. D. 639; 54 L. T. 604; 35 W. R. 6.

Short Notice—Vacation.]—Leave to serve short notice of motion cannot be given by the chief clerk in vacation any more than during the sittings. Conacher v. Conacher, 29 W. R. 230.

3. Adjournment to Judge or Court.

Right of Parties.]—The chief clerk in chambers never makes any order of his own authority, but all the orders made in chambers are orders of the judge, and are, in fact, made by him in the presence of the parties, unless they agree, for their own convenience, to take the order without actually going before the judge in chambers, or unless the order is such an order of course as would be made in court without communication with the judge, upon simply handing in a brief to the registrar; such last-mentioned order, when made in chambers, being made upon the communication of the chief clerk to the registrar without the actual intervention of the judge. The judge in chambers is always accessible to any of the parties who are engaged in proceedings there; and any party suggesting that he wishes to see the judge personally can at once do so. Hayward v. Hayward, 1 Kay (App.) xxxi.; 23 L. J., Ch. 549; 2 Eq. R. 436; 2 W. R. 332.

It is the absolute, unqualified right of the suitor to adjourn a summons in chambers from the chief clerk to the judge, at his own risk as to costs. The suitor has a right to go to the judge at any time before the chief clerk's order becomes operative—that is, before the order is drawn up and passed, or until something has been done under it. Scott v. Homer, 60 L. J., Ch. 238; 63 L. T. 618.

Upon proceedings in chambers any party has a right at any time to have any question brought before the judge personally, there being no such thing as an appeal from the chief clerk's decision. Rigg, In re, Wadham v. Rigg, 6 L. T. 180; 10 W. R. 365.

Every suitor of the court has an unqualified right to have his case heard before the judge in person, whether under the ordinary proceedings of the court or under the winding-up acts.

Agricultural Cattle Assurance Co., In re, Lowe, Ex parte, 30 L. J., Ch. 619; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 590; 4 L. T. 430; 9 W. R. 682—L.JJ.

When either party is dissatisfied with the chief clerk's decision, the matter should be brought before the judge in chambers. Parr v. Lovegrove, 4 Drew. 170; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 600; 6 W. R. 201.

Objections to the finding of the chief clerk as to title should be made and at once referred to the judge in chambers before certificate made. Parr v. Lovegrove, 4 Jur. (N.S.) 600; 6 W. R. 201.

Either party has a right on the minutest point to require an adjournment before the judge himself in chambers. London and County Assurance Co., In re, 5 W. R. 794.

Where accounts are being taken in chambers before the chief clerk, either party has a right to have an item which has been found against him adjourned before the judge without taking out a summons for that purpose; and where a question of principle is involved in a particular item it may be necessary to do this. But the ordinary practice is to wait till the account is completed, and then take the adjournment once for all before the judge. If a solicitor were to insist upon his right to take particular items before the judge in an unreasonable manner, the court might make him pay the costs personally. Upton v. Browne, 20 Ch. D. 731; 47 L. T. 289; 30 W. R. 817.

Discretion of Judge.]—It is in the discretion of the judge to hear matters in chambers, or to adjourn them into court. Agricultural Cattle Assurance Co., In re, 3 De G. F. & J. 194; 11 W. R. 386.

Not an Appeal.]—An adjournment from the chief clerk to the judge in person is not in the nature of an appeal. Watts, In re, Smith v. Watts, 52 L. J., Ch. 209; 22 Ch. D. 1; 48 L. T. 167; 31 W. R. 262. S. P., Rigg, In re, supra.

Adjournment into Court.]—Practice as to discussion in court of a question raised in chambers. Hudson v. Carmichael, 23 L. J., Ch. 893; 18 Jur. 851. See 1 Kay, 613; 2 W. R. 503.

On a summons adjourned from chambers to the court, it is the practice to certify for counsel. Graham v. Graham, 1 Johns. 624; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1237.

The practice on proceedings in chambers is, that if one side only desires to be heard by counsel, the judge hears the argument in chambers; if both desire to be so represented, the matter is adjourned to be heard in court. Rumbold v. Forteath, 3 Kay & J. 44.

—— Evidence.]—On the hearing of a summons adjourned from chambers into court, affidavits filed after the time fixed by the chief clerk for the filing of evidence cannot be used before the judge in court unless special leave to use the new affidavits has been given either by the judge or the chief clerk. This rule does not apply where no time has been fixed by the chief clerk for the filing of evidence. Chifferiel, In re, Chifferiel v. Watson, 58 L. J., Ch. 137; 58 L. T. 877; 36 W. R. 806.

—— Rehearing.]—It is at the option of a party, who is dissatisfied with a certificate of the chief clerk, to have his objections to it argued before the judge in chambers or in open court; but where objections have been argued before a judge in chambers, no rehearing will be allowed in open court, except under special circumstances. York and North Midland Ry. v. Hudson, 2 Eq. Rep. 295; 18 Beav. 70; 17 Jur. 1090; 2 W. R. 90.

Where a party wishes to appeal from a certificate of the chief clerk which has been confirmed by a judge in chambers, the proper course is to make an application in open court, when the judge will make an order, pro formâ, in conformity with the decision in chambers, against which the party can appeal. Ib. See also APPEAL.

—— Form of Order.]—On an adjourned summons from chambers, the court will not make any declaration, but, if necessary, will direct a certificate to the same effect to be drawn up by the chief clerk for its approval. Morgan v. Hatchell, 19 Beav. 86; 24 L. J., Ch. 135; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 125; 3 Eq. R. 121; 3 W. R. 126.

—— In what Cases.]—Important questions are to be discussed in court. Mildmay v. Methuen, 1 Drew. 215; 22 L. J., Ch. 297; 16 Jur. 965; 1 W. R. 13.

A creditor's summons was taken out in chambers in a cause. Upon the return of the summons, the chief clerk, finding that he had no jurisdiction, adjourned the summons into court at the suggestion of all parties, to come on with the cause upon further consideration: —Held, that the application by summons was regular, but that it ought to have been referred to the judge in chambers, and not adjourned into court. Halliley v. Henderson, 4 Jur. (N.S.) 202.

If any point arises in the judge's chambers of sufficient importance to require the assistance of counsel, the point should be argued in court. Bennett's Estate, In re, 2 Eq. Rep. 4; 18 Jur. 33.

The proceeding by adjourned summons is inconvenient; the chief clerk's opinion should be taken, and the matter should be brought on by motion to discharge his order. Ware v. Watson, 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1083; 4 W. R. 36.

—— Costs.]—It is the right of every party to have the opinion of the judge, as of course, and if a matter is adjourned into court with a view to obtain the judge's opinion, the costs of the proceedings in court must, as a general rule, be borne in the same way as the costs in chambers would have been. Mitchell, In re, 33 L. J., Ch. 187; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1272; 9 L. T. 282; 12 W. R. 39.

Therefore, where a matter was, without opposition, adjourned into court in order to obtain the opinion of the judge on a question of domicil, and on the matter coming on in court the counsel for the party opposing the view taken by the chief clerk considered the question not arguable on the part of his client: —Held, that this was no sufficient ground for fixing this party with the costs of the proceedings in court. Ib.

A reservation of costs is implied without express direction where the cause is adjourned before the judge at chambers. Wallis v. Bastard, 2 Eq. Rep. 508; 17 Jur. 1107; 2 W. R. 47. See also ante, col. 688.

Order drawn up.]—Where the chief clerk expresses his opinion, and any of the parties are dissatisfied with it, they have always a right to have the hearing adjourned into court; but it is no appeal—it is merely a continuation of the hearing begun before the chief clerk. If the chief clerk makes an order which is drawn up, then a motion may be made to discharge that order; but that is a different proceeding. Leeds v. Lewis, 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1290.

4. Chief Clerk's Certificate.

a. General Form and Contents.

On Sale by the Court.]—See VENDOR AND PURCHASER.

"Without Prejudice."]—When the chief clerk in distributing a fund, by consent of all the claimants, waives a question of title as to some of the claimants, the certificate should be made "without prejudice." Waterton v. Burt, 39 L. J., Ch. 425.

Incidental Question.]—Under an order of reference to take an account of assets, the master having reported that there were assets sufficient to satisfy the plaintiff's legacy, although assets to an amount sufficient to satisfy the trusts of the will were not shewn by the accounts, the master grounding his general finding upon the evidence of the defendant's admission of assets by his answer, upon which a personal decree against him had been made, but which the plaintiff had been advised to abandon and take a new decree for an account of assets under the circumstances, with a view to more effectual relief:—Held, that the report was right, this being an inference directly arising from, although not strictly within, the terms of the reference, and the master not being so purely ministerial as to be precluded from drawing such inferences, but, on the contrary, bound to do so. Even if matter so reported beyond the terms of the order was surplusage, that is not a ground of exception, it not being of course to send back the report to the master to expunge a few unnecessary words. M'Carthy v. M'Carthy, 1 Moll. 136.

Facts and Reasons.]—Masters in chancery, in reports which are special, are only to state bare matters of fact. Marlborough (Duke) v. Wheat, 1 Atk. 454.

Master, in his report, is always at liberty, though not directed by decree, to state his reasons for disallowance of a claim. Champernown v. Scott, 4 Madd. 209; 22 R. R. 248.

On a reference to a master in bankruptcy, with liberty for him to examine parties on interrogatories if he should think fit, it seems that if the master should decline to examine any party when required so to do, he should state the grounds on which he declines to do so. Charter, Ex parte, 2 Cox, 168.

Accounts referred to the master. Afterwards an order of reference was made to arbitrators to take an account of all dealings and transactions in like manner as if the same was referred to the master, and that the parties should be concluded and bound by the award, and should observe it; and further directions were reserved. This reference is not in nature of a reference to the master; therefore the parties are bound by a general award of a balance due without particulars stated, the decision being final, because upon matter of fact, and no corruption or misconduct imputed; and the court will not require particulars merely as a ground for costs. Dick v. Milligan, 4 Bro. C. C. 117; 2 Ves. J. 23.

In a suit between a contractor and a railway company, praying a settlement of accounts between them, a decree was made directing an inquiry whether anything, and what, was due to the contractor in respect of the works executed and materials supplied under the contracts. That decree was not appealed from. The chief clerk found that a lump sum was due, and that in a schedule he had set forth the particulars of such sum, and that the evidence adduced on the inquiry was that set forth in another schedule. On an objection to the form of the certificate:—Held, that the certificate must be discharged, for that the chief clerk ought, in finding the lump sum to be due, to have stated how that amount was arrived at, so as to enable the court to judge whether he had come to a right conclusion. M'Intosh v. G. W. Ry., 1 De G. J. & S. 443; 2 N. R. 210; 32 L. J., Ch. 412; 8 L. T. 479; 11 W. R. 788.

An exception does not lie to a master's report upon the ground that he has therein stated irrelevant matter. Rufford v. Bishop, 5 Russ. 346; 7 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 108; 29 R. R. 40.

One Report—Two Actions.]—One report was directed to be made in two suits (a creditors' and legatee's) for the administration of an estate. Budgen v. Sage, 3 Myl. & C. 683.

Special Circumstances.]—The master is not at liberty to state special circumstances unless authorised by the court; and where in a creditors' suit the decree directed the usual accounts, and the master found the amount of the debt appearing to be due to the plaintiff, but stated, without the authority of the court, special circumstances not supported by evidence, raising a doubt as to the amount of the appointment to which the plaintiff would be entitled out of the intestate's estate, which was insolvent, upon the debt so found due, the court refused to enter into the consideration of such special circumstances. Semble, that the decision would have been the same had the special circumstances been supported by evidence before the master. Gayler v. Fitzjohn, 1 Keen, 469; 1 Jur. 101.

Consequences of Facts found.]—Where the master, by his report, finds a fact involving, according to the practice of the court, a particular consequence, the court will act upon the fact so found, and it is not a ground of exception that such consequence is not stated in the report. The master found that two executors had, by signing joint cheques, enabled each other to receive sums belonging to the estate of their testatrix when they were both largely indebted to that estate, and that the sums so received by them were debts provable under their respective commissions, both executors having become bankrupt:—Held, that interest at 5 per cent., as the consequence of the devastavit, was to be added to the principal sums found to be provable against the bankrupt estate of the executors. Beck v. Motley, 2 Myl. & K. 312; 4 L. J., Ch. 63.

Setting out Accounts.]—Schedules of accounts referred to in the master's report must be annexed to, and filed with, the report. Smith v. Smith, Dick. 789. S. P., Kilbee v. Sneyd, 2 Moll. 196.

Where a surplus to be distributed is an uncertain sum, the master ought to report the shares in aliquot parts, not in money. Att.-Gen. v. Haberdashers' Co., 1 Ves. J. 295.

The master's report speaks from its date, and if a creditor of a deficient estate proves a debt in respect of bills of exchange indorsed to him by the testator, and, before the master has made his report, receives certain sums from the estates of other persons liable on the bills, such sums will be properly deducted in the report from the amount of the debt proved. Jennings v. Elster, 1 Myl. & K. 440; 2 L. J., Ch. 72.

Decree made upon report having directed a sale of real estate in six months according to the course of the court, and more than six months having elapsed, decree on further directions will order an immediate sale; but the personal estate being first to be applied, and the master finding that it was very small, if any, although the report was not excepted to, Lord Chancellor refused to act upon a report not setting out exactly the account of the personal estate without first having the consent of the heir and others interested in the real estate. Knox v. Neary, 1 Moll. 214.

Discussion as to the conclusiveness of the dates contained in the schedule of accounts annexed to a master's report. Campbell v. Campbell, 2 Y. & Coll. C. C. 607; 8 Jur. 28.

Setting out Documents and Evidence.]—The master's report is in too brief a form unless the evidence is set out upon the face of the report, and a schedule annexed, when a debtor and creditor account has been taken shewing the way in which the balance is formed. Kilbee v. Sneyd, 2 Moll. 196.

The master's report should contain such a statement of the evidence as will enable the court to judge of the justness of the findings if questioned by either party, not detailing the evidence, but giving such a specification of it as will enable the court to see with certainty the grounds upon which the master acted. Johnston v. Reardon, 1 Moll. 54.

It is not sufficient for a report ascertaining that a party is a trustee within the 1 Will. 4, c. 60, to state merely that such party is a trustee: the documents which make out the trust must be stated on the face of the report. Purdon, In re, 1 Dr. & War. 500.

Construction of the 48th Order of the 26th August, 1841, on the framing of the master's reports. Meux v. Bell, 1 Hare, 73; 11 L. J., Ch. 77; 6 Jur. 123.

Under the 48th Order of August, 1841, it is not sufficient for the master to give a short description of the documents laid before him, and then to state his finding, but he ought to mention on which of those documents he proceeded, and to shew what were the contents thereof from which he drew his conclusion, and then to state his finding. Grant, In re, 10 Sim. 573; 11 L. J., Ch. 91.

Where very numerous exceptions were taken to a master's report which referred generally to the evidence laid before him without distinguishing the same, the report was referred back to him to state on what evidence and grounds he had acted. Mayhew v. Brettingham, C. P. Coop. 43.

b. Direction to Report specially.

When required.]—The direction to the master not to disturb settled accounts applies only to mutual accounts between the parties, by which they would be bound, and is a special direction; but the direction to report special circumstances is one of course, and very often introduced without any object. Milford v. Milford, M'Clel. & Y. 151.

Partnership accounts having been directed to be taken by the master in a case in which some of the books had been lost, the court directed the master if it should appear in taking the account that any necessary books, &c., should be wanting, to report the same specially, and whether, in consequence of the want of such books, he was unable to proceed satisfactorily in taking the accounts. Millar v. Craig, 6 Beav. 433.

Order empowering the master from time to time to receive proposals for leases and to report on them. M'Dermott v. Kealy, Jac. 374.

Authority given to the master to report specially, if, from lapse of time, the death of parties, the loss of evidence, or other circumstances, he should find himself unable to proceed. Kirkman v. Booth, 11 Beav. 273; 18 L. J., Ch. 25; 13 Jur. 525.

Under the direction in an order of reference, "with liberty to state special circumstances," the master is not restricted to special circumstances relating to the precise subject of inquiry referred to him. Neate v. Pink, 3 Macn. & G. 476; 21 L. J., Ch. 574; 16 Jur. 69.

Where the master has liberty to state special circumstances, it is entirely within his discretion to state any circumstances specially or not, and if he refuses to do so, exceptions to his report on that ground will be disallowed. Knott v. Cottee, 16 Beav. 82; 16 Jur. 752.

No direction in a decree for liberty to state special circumstances is henceforth necessary. Williamson v. Jeffreys, 9 Hare (App.) lvi.

c. Separate Report.

In what Cases.]—A separate report directed of what was due to a doweress without entangling her in a general account of incumbrances. Eccleston v. Berkley, Ridgw. 253.

As to master's power to make an ex parte report, see Bernado v. Duran, 1 Barnard. K. B. 319.

Court of Exchequer will not direct deputy remembrancer to proceed to make a general report until the previous orders for separate reports are regularly disposed of, although he have before him a full statement of facts. Lewes v. Morgan, 3 Price, 175.

Separate report under circumstances allowed as to costs alone without waiting for general report in the cause. Edes v. Rose, 2 Madd. 448.

A separate report is never allowed except for the purpose of expediting the general proceedings. Hare v. Ruscombe, M'Clel. 101; 13 Price, 277.

Motion by plaintiff to restrain masters from making a separate report until a month after the trial of an indictment for perjury, upon affidavit carried on by that party in support of charges, or until further order, or that the report might be without prejudice to plaintiff thereafter prosecuting his claims, refused with costs. Bolaffey v. Bendelack, M'Clel. 573.

Where a party to a suit objects to a separate report, he must except to it in the usual manner, and not by petition. Drever v. Maudesley, 7 Sim. 240 : 4 L. J., Ch. 162.

Upon reference of a claim, the master having made a separate report as to part :—Held, to be not improperly confirmed by orders nisi and absolute. Beavan v. Gilbert, 8 Beav. 308 ; 14 L. J., Ch. 365.

A creditors' suit stayed on the application of the executors after a decree in a suit by residuary legatees for the administration of the same estate, notwithstanding there might be inquiries directed in the legatees' suit which would not have been necessary in the creditors' suit, it being competent to the master to make a separate report, and thereby prevent the payment of the creditors from being delayed by the business of the ultimate administration of the estate. Golder v. Golder, 9 Hare, 276.

d. Practice as to.

Appointment to sign.]—No attendance is necessary by any of the parties on an appointment before a chief clerk to sign the certificate, as such attendance for signature is a purely formal matter. Ingham, In re, Lawes' Chemical Manure Co. v. Ingham, 74 L. T. 21.

Enforcement of.]—An order made by the chief clerk in chambers cannot be enforced by writ of attachment until after entry. Ballard v. Tomlinson, 52 L. J., Ch. 656.

The chief clerk, by his certificate, found that a certain sum was due from the defendants as occupation rent. Before the certificate had become binding on the defendants the plaintiffs moved for leave for the receiver in the action to distrain for the rent, or that the defendants should give some security :—Held, that the motion must stand over until the certificate had become binding. Craven v. Ingham, 58 L. T. 486. S. P., Douthwaite v. Spensley, 18 Beav. 74.

After a decree to take the accounts of a partnership the chief clerk directed that two accountants, one of whom was employed by the plaintiff and the other by the defendant in investigating the accounts for the purposes of the suit, should report on the accounts, shewing what items were undisputed and what were disputed, and verify their report by affidavit. The accountants verified an account shewing 541*l.* due from the defendant to the plaintiff on the undisputed items, and verified also an account of disputed items. These were items of charge against the defendant, so that, however they were decided upon, the 541*l.* would not be reduced :—Held, that the 541*l.* ought to be ordered into court ; for that, although no certificate had been made, the fact that 541*l.* at least was due from the defendant was ascertained with sufficient certainty to entitle the plaintiff to have it ordered into court. London Syndicate v. Lord, 8 Ch. D. 84 ; 38 L. T. 329 ; 26 W. R. 427—C. A.

Held, also, that under the circumstances of the case the defendant must be taken to have admitted by his agent that at least 541*l.* would be found due from him. Ib.

Opinion of Court.]—Motion cannot be made for opinion of court to obviate difficulties of master in drawing up his report. Agar v. Gurney, 2 Madd. 389.

Filing.]—A party obtaining a master's report adverse to himself will be compelled to file it. London Dock Co., In re, 11 Beav. 78 ; 17 L. J., Ch. 111 ; 12 Jur. 405.

Taking off the File.]—When the chief clerk's certificate was filed after the birth of an infant who was a necessary party to the suit, but before the infant had been made a party, the court, upon the application of all parties, and in order to avoid the expense of a supplemental suit, directed the certificate to be taken off the file. Cuthbert v. Wharmby, 41 L. J., Ch. 216 ; L. R. 13 Eq. 202.

Stay of Proceedings.]—Where inquiries had been ordered by a decree, and a summons had been taken out on the plaintiff's behalf, which was adjourned in order to enable the plaintiff to complete his evidence, and the chief clerk had certified that the plaintiff had made default in producing evidence to answer the inquiry, the court, on motion to stay the certificate, and that the plaintiff might be permitted to prosecute the inquiry, refused the motion with costs. James v. Gwynne, 2 Jur. (N.S.) 436.

Assessment of Damages before Certificate.]—The court refused to appoint an expert to assess damages before the chief clerk had made his certificate. Llynvi Iron Co. v. Brogden, 24 L. T. 612.

Failure to proceed.]—Parties neglected for ten years to prosecute a reference, and the master reported that he was unable to dispose of the cause. On an application to the court the matter was transferred into chambers, and it was ordered that the reference should be prosecuted with effect within a month, the court intimating that, in default, the cause would be disposed of summarily. Parkinson v. Lucas, 28 Beav. 627.

Court Fees.]—A person suing in formâ pauperis is entitled to the chief clerk's certificate without paying the court fees, even though the order enabling him so to sue has been made after the certificate was ready. Thomas v. Ellis, 8 Ch. D. 518 ; 26 W. R. 839.

Statute of Limitations.]—In an administration suit instituted by a residuary legatee more than twenty years after the testator's death, the chief clerk's certificate found that certain legacies remained unpaid ; and, by the order on further consideration, liberty was given to any persons claiming to be entitled to the legacies to apply as to their payment. The legatees, who were not parties to the suit, having applied under the order for payment of their legacies :—Held, that the residuary legatee was precluded by the certificate and order from setting up the Statute of Limitations. Prowse v. Spurgin, 37 L. J., Ch. 251 ; L. R. 5 Eq. 99 ; 17 L. T. 590 ; 16 W. R. 413.

Interest.]—The chief clerk's certificate, finding money to be due to a party, though adopted by the judge, is not an order for payment of money within 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 18, so as to make the sum found to carry interest. Mansfield (Earl) v. Ogle, 4 De G. & J. 38 ; 28 L. J., Ch. 422 ; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 419 ; 7 W. R. 423.

Examination of Witnesses.]—A party attending proceedings in chambers under an administration decree is entitled to cross-examine before an examiner of the court as to matters in question connected with the accounts an executor, whose accounts are being settled by the chief clerk. But notice of such cross-examination should be given before the chief clerk's decision has been given, and the cross-examination should be strictly confined to the particular matter in dispute. Glover v. Ellison, 41 L. J., Ch. 288; 26 L. T. 234; 20 W. R. 408.

Evidence.]—The chief clerk in his certificate stated certain facts, but reserved the point to which they referred for the consideration of the court:—Held, that the evidence used in chambers was admissible before the court. Stott v. Meanock, 31 L. J., Ch. 746; 6 L. T. 592; 10 W. R. 605.

Appeal before Certificate.]—On a summons that in taking accounts the chief clerk might treat a certain statement as conclusive evidence, the judge, after deciding the question, thought fit only to give a direction to his chief clerk without making any formal order:—Held, that no appeal could be brought from his decision, but that the party aggrieved must wait for the certificate. Vyse v. Foster, 44 L. J., Ch. 344; L. R. 10 Ch. 236; 23 W. R. 299.

Hearing Counsel.]—When the question is one that has been reserved by the chief clerk for the opinion of the court on further consideration, the counsel in support of the affirmative has a right to be heard first. Lyle v. Ellwood, 23 W. R. 157.

Appeal from Refusal to vary—Time.] — A summons to vary the chief clerk's certificate was adjourned into court and directed to come on with the hearing of the cause on further consideration. At the hearing on further consideration an order was made refusing to vary the certificate and disposing of the cause:—Held, that the refusal to vary the certificate was distinct from the order on further consideration, and being an interlocutory order, could not be appealed from after twenty-one days from the making of it. Cummins v. Herron, 46 L. J., Ch. 423; 4 Ch. D. 787; 36 L. T. 41; 25 W. R. 325—C. A. See also APPEAL.

Where an order has been made upon the cause coming on for further consideration and also upon a summons to vary the chief clerk's certificate, an appeal by motion as to the latter only is irregular. Bloxam v. Whipham, 8 W. R. 2.

i. Time for Application.

Eight Clear Days.]—A summons to vary a certificate which has been signed and adopted by the judge in chambers, if obtained within eight clear days after the certificate has been filed, although not returnable within that period, is sufficient under the 51st Order of the 16th October, 1852, to arrest the certificate and prevent its being absolute until the summons has been disposed of. Wycherley v. Barnard, 1 Johns. 41; 28 L. J., Ch. 562; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 818; 7 W. R. 254.

Where, under the 52nd rule of the 35th of the Consolidated Orders, it is impossible to move to discharge the chief clerk's certificate on any seal day within eight clear days of the filing, the court will allow notice for some day, not a seal day within the eight days, to save the time. Cross v. Maltby, 8 W. R. 646.

The eight days within which, under the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 80, s. 34, and the 51st Order of October, 1852, an application to vary a chief clerk's certificate must be made, run during vacation. Ware v. Watson, 25 L. J., Ch. 199; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 129; 4 W. R. 223—L.JJ.

It is not sufficient to serve notice of motion to vary the chief clerk's certificate within eight clear days from the filing of the certificate, but the motion itself must be made within that time. Henshaw v. Angell, 39 L. J., Ch. 524; L. R. 9 Eq. 451; 21 L. T. 784.

—— When Inapplicable.]—Ord. LV. r. 70, of the Rules of the Supreme Court, 1883, does not apply to a certificate settling a list of contributories in a winding-up. Liverpool Household Stores Association, In re, Weld-Blundell, Ex parte, 63 L. T. 383.

—— How computed.] — In computing the eight days within which cause must be shewn against confirming a report absolutely, the day on which the order nisi was served must be reckoned; but if the eighth day is a holiday one day more will be allowed. Manners v. Bryan, 5 Sim. 147. Affirmed, 1 Myl. & K. 453.

If the eighth day after service of an order nisi for confirming a report is a Sunday, that day is not to be reckoned. Milburn v. Lyster, 5 Sim. 565. See now Ord. LXIV. and infra, TIME.

Special Circumstances.]—A certificate finding A. to be the purchaser of an estate sold under the direction of the court was filed on the 9th August. On the 29th October a person desirous to become the purchaser took out a summons to have the property resold, offering a considerable advance of price:—Held, that the application could not be granted unless such special circumstances were shewn as would under the old practice have justified the opening the biddings after a report finding A. the purchaser had been absolutely confirmed. Ware v. Watson, 25 L. J., Ch. 199; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 129; 4 W. R. 223—L.JJ.

Where the certificate of the chief clerk is filed, it is absolute after eight days, and will not be discharged or varied except under special circumstances. Howell v. Kightley, 8 De G. M. & G. 325; 25 L. J., Ch. 341; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 455; 4 W. R. 477.

Confirmation of master's report opened, and the report allowed to be excepted to or reviewed, under particular circumstances, although previous exceptions had been disallowed after argument. Hawkins v. Day, 1 Ves. 189.

—— What constitute.]—Leave given to move to vary the chief clerk's certificate, although application was not made until after the expiration of the eight days allowed by the order; the omission to make the application having arisen from pressure of business, and mistake as to time on the part of the solicitor. Briant v. Tibbut, 20 L. T. 62; 17 W. R. 274.

Leave granted (in a suit for specific performance) to move to vary the chief clerk's certificate against the title, although the application was not made until after the expiration of the eight days allowed by the 51st Order of October 16th, 1852, the omission to make this application having arisen from a slip or misapprehension of the practice on the part of the solicitor's clerk

Ashton v. Wood, 8 De G. M. & G. 698; 26 L. J., Ch. 275; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 146; 5 W. R. 271.

Though the chief clerk's certificate has been signed, a final decree made, and an allocation order issued, the court has power to reopen or review the certificate so long as the funds are still in court. Hegarty, In re, Perry v. Twomey, 23 L. R., Ir. 15.

There is a difference in consideration of law, and the strict rules of the court, as to the case of a lunatic being let in to take exceptions to a master's report after its being confirmed, and that of an infant, but it is equally open to the discretion of the court in either case. Bath (Earl) v. Bradford (Earl), 2 Ves. 587.

Effect of—When Time expired.]—The chief clerk's certificate, signed and approved by the judge, becomes, after the eight days, equivalent to a report absolutely confirmed under the old practice. Ware v. Watson, supra.

In Exchequer, if defendant conceives himself aggrieved by master's report, he must file exceptions thereto, and such exceptions must be set down to be argued in court; but if no exceptions are taken, the court confirms the report as of course, and thereupon gives proper directions. Kay v. Bruere, 2 Bro. P. C. 420.

A will contained the following passage: "I forgive my nephew the debt of 2,000*l.* which I advanced to him on loan." The testator had, on occasion of his nephew going into partnership, advanced to him 2,000*l.* for his own use, and had also, at the same time, lent to the partnership different sums, the nephew's proportion of which would have amounted to about 2,000*l.*:—Held, that, whether the 2,000*l.* was to be treated as having been a gift to the nephew or not, the testator intended in the above passage to refer to it, and not to the proportion of the partnership debt due from the nephew. And, on an inquiry directed at the hearing, the chief clerk certified that the advance of the 2,000*l.* was a gift, and not a loan:—Held, that, whatever effect this certificate might have on the hearing on further consideration, it could not be disputed by a party who had neither taken out a summons nor moved to have it varied. Smith v. Armstrong, 6 De G. M. & G. 150; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 359.

A. devised a freehold to his widow for life, and after her death, to trustees to sell and divide the produce amongst B. and others. B. died in the lifetime of the widow, having bequeathed his residue to charities. The certificate having found the residue to be pure personalty:—Held, that it was too late, in the absence of a motion to vary the certificate, to raise an objection that the bequest of B.'s interest in the leasehold was void under the 9 Geo. 2, c. 36. Aspinall v. Bourne, 29 Beav. 462.

On an application by a contributory to vary the certificate by expunging a debt:—Held, that the association in course of winding-up came within the Companies Act, 1862, s. 4, and ought to have been registered; that it was therefore an illegal company, and that an order for winding it up ought not to have been made, but that this objection could not be entertained on the present application. Arthur Average Association, In re, Hargrove, Ex parte, 44 L. J., Ch. 569; L. R. 10 Ch. 542; 32 L. T. 525; 23 W. R. 939.

A party comes too late to complain of a decree after joining in the inquiry directed by it, and the result is against him; and he is not entitled to question the master's report after it is confirmed, having taken no exceptions. Aldborough (Earl) v. Trye, 7 Cl. & F. 436; West, 221.

Extension of Time—Summons.]—On an application upon the further consideration of an action for an extension of the time under r. 71 of Ord. LV. for applying to vary a finding in a chief clerk's certificate:—Held, that the applicant should take out a summons for the purpose. Dove, In re, Bousfield v. Dove, 53 L. J., Ch. 1099; 27 Ch. D. 687; 33 W. R. 197.

ii. Grounds for.

Mistake, Fraud or Surprise.]—The court has power to set right an obvious mistake in the chief clerk's certificate, as it has in the case of a master's report. Cradock v. Owen, 2 Eq. Rep. 381; 2 Sm. & G. 241; 2 W. R. 319.

Mere mistakes in report rectified after confirmation. Turner v. Turner, 1 Swan. 154; 1 Jac. & Walk. 39.

After a report has been confirmed, the master has no authority to correct even clerical errors therein; but it may be done with the authority of the court. Richardson v. Ward, 13 Beav. 110; 20 L. J., Ch. 227.

A report confirmed may be reviewed; but a case must be made of fraud, surprise, or mistake: Lord Chancellor holding that there is no rule of the court not flexible in such a case, if shewn, refused a motion grounded merely on the parties' affidavit with costs, excluding, however, costs of superfluous papers of which notice had been given that they would be used on the motion. Drought v. Redford, 1 Moll. 572.

After the confirmation of a report, a review will not be ordered unless on a very strong case; and objections affecting the substance of it will not be permitted, but mere mistakes may be rectified. Turner v. Turner, 1 Jac. & Walk. 39.

The master ordered to review his report after confirmation. S. C., 1 Swan. 157.

A report was confirmed by orders nisi and absolute:—Held, that the court might still vary the report as to that portion of it which related to the maintenance of infants. Ramsdale v. Ramsdale, 11 Beav. 220.

In a suit of M. v. P., a decree was made whereby the residuary personal estate of a testator in the cause was declared to be divisible into moieties, to one of which P. (the present plaintiff) was entitled, and M. (the present defendant) to the other. It was ordered that the chief clerk should ascertain the residuary personal estate not specifically bequeathed; but instead of having the residue so ascertained, the plaintiff and the defendant undertook to state for themselves what the particulars of the residuary estate were; and the chief clerk thereupon made his certificate, by which he certified that the residuary estate was admitted by the parties to consist of certain particulars. On this admission an order was at chambers made, and various sales, transfers, payments, and carryings over were made in pursuance thereof. The plaintiff, having afterwards discovered that a great error had been made in the amount of the residuary estate stated in the certificate, owing to which the defendant had been largely overpaid, filed a bill setting forth the alleged error and praying that the defendant might be decreed to recoup and pay to him the sum which he had received in excess. The court held itself bound to interfere in the plaintiff's behalf, it being satisfied that an error had really been made in the certificate; that the case was free from the objection of delay on the part of the plaintiff; that the conduct of the plaintiff and the defendant had been such as not to have deprived the former of his right to be relieved; and that the rights of third parties would not be invaded by any interference. The court, however, refused to make an order in the terms prayed, but gave the plaintiff leave to move to vary the certificate in the former suit, and to present a petition of re-hearing of the cause on further consideration upon payment of costs up to the hearing. Purcell v. Manning, 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1070.

Where, on the investigation of a complicated demand for work and labour done, and other matters, or performance of work under a contract with a railway company for works of enormous extent, the chief clerk's certificate, after a laborious examination, ascertained the amount, the court will not allow the amount so certified to be varied as to the whole or any part of it unless a case of clear mistake or manifest abuse is shewn. In such cases the certificate should not be varied on any ground which would not be a ground for moving for a new trial or setting aside the verdict of a jury. Mackintosh v. G. W. Ry., 4 Giff. 683; 6 N. R. 336.

Where the chief clerk in taking accounts has admitted books of account to be taken as primâ facie evidence of their truth, without any order under the 54th section of the act 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, a motion to vary the certificate as to the result of the accounts dismissed without costs, it being a case which, under ordinary circumstances, would have been dismissed with costs. Newberry v. Benson, 2 W. R. 648.

iii. Practice on.

Summons.]—No step can be taken in opposition to a finding in a chief clerk's certificate, even in respect of matters appearing by the record, unless there is a summons or motion to vary the certificate. Leigh v. Turner, 14 L. T. 8; 14 W. R. 361.

—— Setting Down.]—The chief clerk's certificate is no longer varied on motion, but on being set down. Cooper v. Everett, 2 W. R. 388.

Filing exceptions alone does not prevent the confirmation of a report; they must be set down. Mole v. Smith, 1 Jac. & Walk. 670. S. P., Abel v. Nodes, 10 Ves. 730; 2 Cox, 169.

Filing exceptions is not cause against confirmation of report; they must be set down to be argued. Hall v. Mulliner, Dick. 604.

After an order for confirming the report nisi, filing exceptions, and making the deposit with the registrar, are no cause to prevent that order being made absolute, unless an order for setting down the exceptions to be argued is obtained, which may be done either by the plaintiff or defendant. The order confirming the report was discharged on payment of costs. Gildart v. Moss, 4 Ves. 617.

Further Consideration.]—The rule is, that a case coming on before Stuart, V.-C., upon motion to vary the chief clerk's certificate, must at the same time be heard upon further consideration. Crompton v. Huber, 1 Jur. (N.S.) 465; 3 W. R. 347.

After a master's report had been absolutely confirmed, a petition was presented for leave to except to it. The petition was heard with the cause for further directions, and the court, without directing a reference back to the master, made an order in accordance with the prayer of the petition. Jowett v. Board, 16 Sim. 352; 18 L. J., Ch. 53; 12 Jur. 933.

The chief clerk's certificate, when signed and approved of, cannot be objected to at the hearing afterwards. Lambe v. Orton, 29 L. J., Ch. 286; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 61; 8 W. R. 111.

Upon a motion to vary a chief clerk's certificate upon a point which has been already argued before the judge himself, the court will not hear any further argument. The party moving ought to inform the other side that the motion is only made pro formâ, otherwise he will have to pay the costs of the motion. Charlesworth v. Gartsed, 2 N. R. 568.

No Summons.]—Where the chief clerk's certificate carries upon its face the means of rectifying an error in its conclusion, the court on further consideration of the certificate should rectify the error, notwithstanding that no summons to vary the certificate was taken out. Martin v. White, 21 L. R., Ir. 521—C. A.

Where a decree has been made in a suit, and the certificate made under it has been discharged for irregularity, the summons for obtaining a fresh certificate must be taken out upon the original decree, and not upon the order discharging the certificate. Cross v. Maltby, 8 W. R. 646.

Where there was error apparent in the decree and the clerk's certificate, by directing payments out of personal estate, instead of apportionment between real and personal estate, the court altered and corrected the decree and certificate without a re-hearing, notwithstanding the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 80, s. 34, and the 51st of the Orders of the 16th October, 1852. Cradock v. Owen, 2 Sm. & G. 241; 2 Eq. Rep. 381; 2 W. R. 319.

Objections should be Stated.]—One general exception was taken to the master's report of a good title, which did not point out the objections to the title. The court disapproved of this inconvenient mode of proceeding. Flower v. Hartopp, 6 Beav. 476; 12 L. J., Ch. 507; 7 Jur. 613.

Exceptions to the master's report ought to follow, in form as well as in substance, the objections carried in before the master. Upwards of thirty separate objections were taken to the draft report, in respect of the same number of items allowed in an account; one exception, including all the objections, was taken to the report, for that the master ought to have disallowed the same items, or some or one of them:—Held, that this was informal, for the exceptant requiring the judgment of the court on every item, the exceptions should have been in the same form as the objections, and thereby have called for such judgment; that this exception must be allowed, if it should be found that any item ought to have been disallowed; but that, notwithstanding the informality, the court might, if it thought fit, hear the exception upon all the items, and make a special declaration as to any or all which had been improperly allowed. Ballard v. White, 2 Hare, 158; 7 Jur. 506.

Every exception to a report ought to tender some proposition on which the court may decide. The simple allowance of an exception by the court, unaccompanied either by an express declaration or a reference back to the master, implies an adoption by the court of the proposition tendered by the exception. Stocken v. Dawson, 2 Ph. 141.

Objections and exceptions to report should state the exact proposition which the court is called on to decide. Cullen v. Kildare (Dean), 2 Ir. Ch. R. 133.

On a general objection being taken to a chief clerk's certificate, where some only of the items were in dispute, the case was adjourned to chambers, and the plaintiff ordered to furnish a list of the items to which he objected. Maw v. Pearson, 3 N. R. 99.

Parties Heard.]—All persons interested in the master's report, are entitled to be heard in support of it, but none but the excepting party can be heard against it. Bonser v. Cox, 4 Beav. 379. And see S. C., 10 L. J., Ch. 395; 13 Ib., 260.

A party who has not excepted to a master's report cannot be heard in opposition to it on the argument of the exceptions of another party; he may, however, be heard in support of that report. Knight v. Davis, 5 L. J., Ch. 11.

Where one of several defendants takes exceptions to the master's report, he ought to serve them on the other defendants. Milne v. Clegg, 7 Jur. 367.

Bill by parties claiming as next of kin against executors. Report that other persons not parties were the sole next of kin. Exceptions by the plaintiffs to the report. Objection that the plaintiffs before the exceptions were argued must make parties the persons found next of kin by the master, overruled. Topham v. Lightbody, 4 Hare, 312; 9 Jur. 1055.

Where a third person's rights are injured by an ex parte report, he should move to have the report sent back to the master to review it, having regard to applicant's rights. Ivers, In re, 2 Moll. 440.

A creditor, first making himself a party by coming into the master's office and proving his debt, excepted to the master's report. By proving in the cause he acquires a right to except to the report. Wilson v. Wilson, 2 Moll. 328.

Where the master had determined that warrants should be served upon those parties only who were entitled in possession, and accounts were taken in the absence of a party who was at the commencement entitled in remainder, but afterwards became entitled in possession, but who never appealed from the determination of the master, nor ever claimed a right to attend him, a petition presented by him to the effect that the master's report might be discharged and that the accounts might be taken over again, was dismissed with costs, reversing the decision of the court below. Morison v. Morison, 17 L. J., Ch. 65.

Upon the hearing in court of an adjourned summons from chambers to vary the certificate of the chief clerk, parties in the same interest with the party who took out the summons but did not join therein, will not be heard in support. Jaquet v. Jaquet, 7 W. R. 543.

On an application for the confirmation of a report approving a scheme for the administration of a charity estate, of which the churchwardens and overseers of the parish were the trustees (one of the purposes of which scheme was to provide for the repair of the church), it was held, that a churchwarden who had been newly appointed, and had not been served with the proceedings, was at liberty to present a cross-petition for the purpose of opposing the confirmation of the report, upon grounds not appearing upon the report nor brought before the master. Loppington Parish, In re, 8 Hare, 198.

What Evidence Admissible.]—An affidavit, not used before a chief clerk in chambers, was not allowed to be used in court on motion to vary certificate. Hooper, In re. Bayliss v. Watkins, 1 N. R. 46; 32 L. J., Ch. 106; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 570; 7 L. T. 347.

An affidavit as to the conduct of the defendants in chambers, filed on behalf of the plaintiffs after the chief clerk's certificate has been signed, cannot be received at the hearing of a summons to vary that certificate. Pierce v. Hammond, Read, In re, 10 L. T. 261.

After the certificate of a chief clerk has been signed and approved by the judge, no cross-examination upon any affidavit produced before the chief clerk during the proceedings in chambers will be allowed. Dawkins v. Morton, 6 L. T. 214; 10 W. R. 339.

Upon the hearing of a summons to vary the chief clerk's certificate, only such evidence as is mentioned in the certificate is admissible. Budge v. Gummow, 42 L. J., Ch. 22; 26 L. T. 683.

Upon a summons to vary a chief clerk's certificate the court will not have regard to any evidence other than that which is entered in the certificate as the evidence upon which the finding of the chief clerk is based. Miller, In re, Chapman v. Miller, 58 L. J., Ch. 728; 60 L. T. 634.

Where, however, the court was of opinion that the finding of the chief clerk was not warranted by the evidence before him, but further evidence had been adduced upon a summons to vary, the court considering that it had before it all the materials necessary for a decision, instead of sending the matter back to chambers, dealt with it upon the fresh evidence. Ib.

The court will not grant an order to prove exhibits at the hearing of exceptions, because you can offer nothing at the hearing that was not before the master. Anon., 1 Mos. 191.

Upon exceptions to the master's report, affidavits made subsequent to it cannot be read, notwithstanding the affidavits of the adverse party were filed but the evening before the report. Davis v. Davis, 2 Atk. 21.

On the hearing of exceptions to a master's report, no parts of the answer can be read, except those which were read before the master. Rands v. Pushman, 6 Sim. 46.

On the hearing of exceptions to the master's report, those affidavits only in support of or against the original petition can be read, which were used in evidence before the master. Grylls, Ex parte, 2 Deac. & C. 290.

Upon exceptions to a report, it is entirely contrary to the rule of the court to suffer the exceptant to go into a new case. The court acting merely in revision of the report, cannot entertain an objection raised on an extrinsic ground. But a just allowance, the proper time for claiming which has been passed by, may always be got at by independent application. Kilbee v. Sneyd, 2 Moll. 239.

The court refused to treat the master's finding of the age of a party as erroneous, on an affidavit of a person stating the day of the birth, and that the day taken by the master for the birthday was the day of baptism, it not appearing what evidence was before the master. Barnes v. Kemp, 1 Jur. 540.

Order to Vary—Original not Altered.]—Where a formal order is made to vary the chief clerk's certificate, it is not the practice actually to alter the original certificate. Where a trifling error in the certificate is ordered to be amended, the practice is not to draw up a formal order, but to make a note of the amendment in the margin of the certificate. Fox v. Bearblock, 46 L. T. 145; 30 W. R. 342—C. A.

f. When Referred Back.

In what Cases.]—When it is suggested at the bar that the party prosecuting a reference has, since the report was made, acquired information, which, if it had been laid before the master, would probably have led him to a different result, the court, though it will not upon the mere suggestion refer the matter back to the master, will order the cause to stand over, with leave to present a petition on the point; and a sufficient case being stated in the petition, and supported by affidavit, the matter will be ordered to be referred back. Hunt v. Dickenson, 3 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 207.

The respondent, in the affidavit made by him to shew cause against the appointment of a receiver upon a judgment on a bond in a penal sum, admitted that the entire sum due by him on foot of the judgment was a certain specified sum, exceeding the amount of the principal sum mentioned in the bond, and six years' interest thereon, and did not rely on the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 42, as a bar:—Held, that a report, finding that the principal money, with six years' interest thereon only, was due on foot of the judgment, was erroneous, it being contrary to the admission in the affidavit. Tristram v. Harte, 3 Ir. Eq. R. 386; Longf. & T. 186.

Testator bequeathed 5,000*l.* in trust for all and every the child and children of his niece, C. A., and of his nephew, the late James C., to be divided amongst them, if more than one, share and share alike; and if there should be but one such child, then in trust for such only child; the shares of sons to be paid to them at twenty-one, and the shares of daughters at that age, or on their marriage. The testator never having had a nephew named James C. who had died leaving issue, the children of his late nephew Henry C. (who was the only one of his nephews who had left issue) claimed to be interested under the bequest: upon which the master was directed to inquire what persons were meant by the testator. It appeared (amongst other things) from the evidence before the master, that the testator had had four nephews surnamed C.: that two of them were named James, and another Henry: that one James died forty years ago, and the other about sixteen years before the date of the will; and that Henry died about ten years before the date of the will, and was the only nephew of the testator who left issue: and the master found that his children were the persons intended. The court, however, on hearing exceptions to the report, held, that the finding was not warranted by the evidence, and referred it back to the master to review his report. Daubeny v. Coghlan, 12 Sim. 507; 11 L. J., Ch. 177; 6 Jur. 230.

On exceptions taken by the plaintiff to a master's report, it appearing that a material element of the inquiry had been overlooked by the master, the court referred it back to him to review his report, not allowing or disallowing the exceptions, but ordered the deposit of 10*l.* to be returned, although the omitted inquiry had not been suggested, nor any evidence offered upon it by the plaintiff before the master, the court being of opinion that from the nature of the reference, the onus of suggesting such inquiry lay on the defendant rather than on the plaintiff. Mitford v. Reynolds, 1 Ph. 706.

Two suits having been instituted on behalf of the same infant plaintiffs, it was referred to the master to inquire and state whether the bills were for the same matters, and if so, which of the suits it would be most for the benefit of the infants to prosecute; but the order did not give the master liberty to state special circumstances. The master reported that the two bills were substantially for the same matters, and that it would be most for the benefit of the infants to prosecute the first suit; but that as the same person was solicitor both for the next friend and for the defendants in that suit, he was of opinion that some other solicitor should be appointed for the plaintiffs, and that part of the funds in the cause, which were in a country bank, should be brought into court:—Held, that the master had given a qualified answer to the question referred to him, and added suggestions which he was not at liberty to make; and therefore it was referred back to him to review his report. Ganderton v. Ganderton, 13 Sim. 182; 6 Jur. 938.

Where on a reference as to title, the master has reported in favour of the title, but, upon exceptions, the court thinks he has done so erroneously or on insufficient grounds, the course is to give the respondent the option of a reference back to the master to review his report. Curling v. Flight, 2 Ph. 613; 17 L. J., Ch. 359; 12 Jur. 423.

The former reports of the debts of a lunatic having been lost, the master in lunacy was directed to receive and consider any secondary evidence as to the debts. The master made his report accordingly, but did not therein state the grounds upon which he proceeded, whereupon it was referred back to the master to state the evidence on which he based his report. Iredale, In re, 1 H. & Tw. 254.

Exception to the master's report in a tithe cause, on the ground that he had overvalued the tithe of milk, overruled, it not appearing that the master had proceeded on any wrong principle. Olivier v. Adderley, 4 Y. & Coll. 423.

Master by report had refused to allow discharge for want of sufficient evidence. To support exceptions thereto, it must be shewn that from the evidence before him master ought to have allowed it, and a distinct motion must be made to order him to receive additional evidence in support of discharge. Ridifer v. O'Brien, 3 Madd. 43.

Where a decree directed certain accounts to be taken, and in anticipation of difficulty in taking them gave one master liberty to make a separate report, stating the circumstances, and the master reported accordingly, stating that he could not take the accounts further than mentioned in his report; an exception, on the ground that the master ought to have taken the accounts as far as he possessed information, and he ought to have certified that no attempt had been made to take them to that extent, was overruled. Rowley v. Adams, 5 Jur. 906.

A reference was made to the master to ascertain certain facts. Under this reference a witness was examined upon written interrogatories, and his depositions were published. The witness was afterwards examined vivâ voce. The evidence of the witness given vivâ voce was objected to before the master, but not on the ground of his having been examined before on interrogatories. The master received the evidence. Exceptions were taken to the report on this ground. On the hearing of the exceptions :—Held, that the objection to the vivâ voce evidence on the ground of the witness having been examined before, could not be raised. Andrew v. Andrew, 18 L. J., Ch. 222 ; 13 Jur. 400.

5. Further Consideration.

Further consideration may be reserved on motion, without a hearing, on trial of the cause. Bennet v. Moore, 45 L. J., Ch. 275 ; 1 Ch. D. 692 ; 24 W. R. 690. See Ord. XXXVI. r. 39.

An order was made in a suit, and no further consideration was reserved ; one of the parties by whom the order was to have been carried out afterwards died. On a summons by the survivor for the purpose of carrying out the order :—Held, that as no further consideration was reserved, no order could be made on the summons, and a petition must be presented. Lewis v. Allenby, 25 L. T. 785 ; 20 W. R. 198.

b. Liberty to apply.

The rule that an order of the court carries with it "liberty to apply," though not expressly reserved, only applies where the order is one not of a final character. Penrice v. Williams, 52 L. J., Ch. 593 ; 23 Ch. D. 353 ; 48 L. T. 868 ; 31 W. R. 496.

The plaintiff's motion for an interim injunction to restrain a nuisance committed by the defendant was ordered to stand over till the trial of the action, no order being made as to costs. At the trial the judges awarded the plaintiff damages in lieu of an injunction, and ordered the defendant to pay the plaintiff's costs of action, the order reserving liberty to apply. The judgment as passed and entered was silent as to the costs of the previous motion. The taxing officer having refused to allow the costs of the motion without a special order of the judge :—Held, on motion, that the court might order the costs of the motion to be paid by the defendant. Semble, that all orders of the court carry in gremio liberty to apply. Fritz v. Hobson, 49 L. J., Ch. 735 ; 14 Ch. D. 542 ; 42 L. T. 677 ; 28 W. R. 722.

When by a decree the costs of the suit are given to one party, but further consideration is not reserved, the costs of all subsequent accounts and inquiries necessary to the working out of the decree are included, whatever may be the result of the accounts and inquiries. But if the party to whom the costs are given by the decree brings in under an inquiry irrelevant matters not coming within its terms, he will be ordered to pay his opponent's costs of the inquiry, so far as it relates to the irrelevant matters. An application for such an order may be made by motion under the liberty to apply to the court reserved by the decree. Krehl v. Park, 44 L. J., Ch. 286 ; L. R. 10 Ch. 334 ; 33 L. T. 83 ; 23 W. R. 475.

The direction in a decree that "any of the parties are to be at liberty to apply to the court as they shall be advised" :—Held, not to extend to an application by the plaintiff to be allowed costs, as to which there was no express direction given by the decree. Kendall v. Marsters, 2 De G. F. & J. 200.

c. Setting down and Hearing.

Setting down by whom.]—Either party may set down cause for further directions. Carmichael v. Wilson, 2 Moll. 537.

Plaintiff may set down cause for further directions at same time that he excepts to report. Yeo v. Frere, 5 Ves. 424 ; Bowerbank v. Collasseau, Ib.

Notice to Persons who have not appeared after being served with Notice of Judgment.]—It is a matter in the discretion of the court whether notice of the setting down of an action for further consideration should be served on persons who have been served with notice of judgment, but have not entered appearances. Rees, In re, Rees v. George (15 Ch. D. 490), considered. Rolfe, In re, Fyson v. Johnson, 8 R. 335 ; 70 L. T. 624.

Parties Heard.]—A party permitted to intervene as a defendant in a cause after it had been heard on further directions, he having been out of the jurisdiction during the previous proceedings, and now admitting to be bound by them. White v. Hall, 1 Russ. & M. 332. And see also Pitt v. Brewster, Dick. 37 ; Banister v. Way, Dick. 686 ; Capel v. Butler, 2 Sim. & S. 457. S. C., 4 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 69. And dicta in Harford v. Browning, 1 Cox, 307.

Appointees of a fund, not being parties to the suit for administering the fund, are not entitled, adversely to the parties to the suit, to appear by counsel on the hearing of the cause for further directions, for the purpose of claiming their costs of proving their title in the master's office ; they ought, with a view to obtain such costs, to present a petition. Grace v. Terrington, 2 Colly. 53 ; 14 L. J., Ch. 352 ; 9 Jur. 421.

Where, upon a bill filed by a simple contract creditor, the only specialty creditor is restrained by injunction from proceeding in his action at law, and it turns out, upon the master's report, that the assets are insufficient to pay the specialty creditors, the executor will have his costs out of the assets, but not the plaintiff. In such a case the specialty creditor, though not a party to the suit, may appear at the hearing on further directions without presenting a petition, if the case which he has to make depends only upon what appears in the master's report. Young v. Everest, 1 Russ. & M. 426.

—— Priority.]—When the question is one that has been reserved by the chief clerk for the opinion of the court on further consideration, the counsel in support of the affirmative has a right to be heard first. Lyle v. Ellwood, 23 W. R. 157.

Filing Certificate.]—An order founded on a master's report is irregular, if the report be not actually upon the file at the time when the order is obtained. Harris v. Cotter, 1 Myl. & K. 568.

Non-appearance.]—Where the cause is set down on further directions, and the defendant does not appear at the hearing, the plaintiff need not produce an affidavit of service of the order to set down the cause before the rising of the court. It is sufficient if he produce such affidavit to the registrars. Trewick v. Paramore, 7 Jur. 1123.

Where a plaintiff sets down a cause to be heard on exceptions to the master's report, but does not appear at the hearing, the court will, at the defendant's request, overrule the exceptions, and hear the cause on further directions. Rookes v. Rookes, 7 Jur. 1104.

Separate Report.]—A cause ought not to be set down in the paper for further directions, when only a separate report has been made, and there is no general report. Cochrane v. Chambers, 2 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 47.

A cause cannot be set down for further directions on a separate report: an order on a separate report must be sought by petition. Van Kamp v. Bell, 3 Madd. 430.

When unnecessary.]—The decree had reserved further directions and costs; but further directions having become unnecessary, the costs were disposed of upon a petition. Winthrop v. Winthrop, 1 Coop. C. C. 201.

Petition to set down cause for further directions, or such further order as the court should think fit, dismissed, though the parties could not proceed; an inquiry before the master being rendered useless by the event of a verdict upon issue directed, and further directions having been reserved till after trial and report. Dixon v. Olmius, 1 Ves. J. 153; see 9 R. R. 286.

Objection to Certificate.]—In all cases coming before the court, by way of exception to the certificate, the further consideration of the cause will be heard at the same time, unless a special reason be shown to the contrary. Crompton v. Huber, 1 Jur. (N.S.) 465; 3 W. R. 347.

d. Orders made and Matters determinable on.

No Objection taken or Relief asked.]—Upon further directions, a question decided by master was opened without any exception, all the circumstances appearing by report. Adams v. Claxton, 6 Ves. 226; 5 R. R. 263.

A debt of 2,400*l.* having been found due by the master's report, to which no objections or exceptions were taken, and no error appearing upon the face of the report:—Held, that this report could not, by order made upon further directions, be reviewed. Morgan v. Evans, 8 Bligh (N.S.) 777; 3 Cl. & F. 159.

Effect of decree at hearing on the discretion of the court upon the construction of a will on further directions. Clarke v. Lubbock, 1 Y. & Coll. C. C. 492; 6 Jur. 548.

At the hearing on further directions, and on a supplemental suit, the plaintiffs were held bound by the terms of a decree taken by consent in the original suit, and were refused relief inconsistent with it, notwithstanding a change of circumstances. Rome v. Young, 3 Y. & Coll. 199; 4 Ib., 204; 9 L. J., Ex. Eq. 41; 2 Jur. 963.

Where the master's report stated that he had allowed the defendant, in his discharge as executor, payments amounting to a certain sum, "including therein" a particular item, which, from circumstances appearing on the face of the report, clearly ought not to have been allowed:—Held, that inasmuch as the report had been confirmed, and no exceptions taken, the error could not be corrected on further directions. Cooper v. Cooper, 7 L. J., Ch. 253.

In a suit by a vendor for specific performance, the decree, at the original hearing, having directed merely a reference of title, the court will not at the hearing on further directions enter into the consideration of any other objection which the answer has set up against the execution of the contract. Le Grand v. Whitehead, 1 Russ. 309.

In a suit instituted by a solicitor for payment of costs due to him from a client, it appeared by the answer that he had not delivered a signed bill conformably to the act of parliament: a bill duly signed was subsequently delivered, and that fact was put in issue by a supplemental bill:—Held, that the objection, not having been urged at the original hearing, could not be taken at the hearing on further directions. Pritchard v. Draper, 1 Russ. & M. 191; Taml. 332.

A case of breach of trust was alleged on the pleadings against trustees and executors for not having sold an estate, but at the first hearing the common accounts only were directed:—Held, on further directions, that the defendants could not be then charged with the breach of trust, and that inquiries could not be then directed with that object. Green v. Badley, 7 Beav. 274.

If the decree at the hearing make no provision for the costs of a trustee, the court will not entertain any petition in respect of them at the hearing on further directions. Malins v. Greenway, 7 Hare, 391; 18 L. J., Ch. 154.

By the decree, arrears of maintenance were ordered to be paid out of a fund in court, consisting both of corpus and rents of real estate, and it was referred to the master to calculate interest on the arrears. Upon the matter coming before the court upon the master's report:—Held, that it was not then competent for the parties to contend that the arrears and interest were not payable out of the corpus, for the point must be considered settled by the prior decree. Davis v. Browne, 14 Beav. 127.

Matters at issue at the first hearing, which are neither decided, put into a train of investigation, nor reserved, must, on further directions, be regarded either as abandoned, or as points on which the plaintiff was entitled to no order. Passingham v. Sherborn, 9 Beav. 424.

The general rule is, that if the question of wilful default be not raised by the pleadings, it cannot be raised either at the original hearing or on further directions, but where the pleadings do raise the point, it is the duty of the plaintiff, if he can make a case for it, to get a declaration by the decree, or, if he cannot make a case for an immediate decree, to get an inquiry of such a character that on the result of it the court may, on further directions, make a declaration. But if the point is raised in the pleadings, and the court, by its decree, passes it by, and neither makes any declaration nor directs an inquiry, it must be taken that the court did not mean to give any such relief. Jones v. Morrall, 2 Sim. (N.S.) 241; 21 L. J., Ch. 630.

After order made on further directions and enrolled, in a suit to administer the trust of a creditors' deed, a bond creditor seeks to be allowed to come in and prove, alleging certain facts in excuse for not having come in before the order, and that the dissolution deed included the debt in the general words, coupled with the object of the instrument as expressed:—Held, that although the general words might include the debt, and the existence of it was morally certain, the order formed an insuperable obstacle, and petition dismissed with costs. Clowes v. Waters, 2 W. R. 308.

Amendment.]—The master's report had been confirmed, and neither objection nor exception had been taken thereto. The cause came on for further directions, when the court, from the facts stated in the report, entertaining great doubt as to the correctness of the master's finding, declined to act upon it, though it refused then to alter it. Gregory v. West, 2 Beav. 541.

A report was directed to be amended according to the final decree, by substituting a statement that the defendant was seised in fee of premises decreed to be sold, instead of for lives renewable for ever. Hatchell v. Cremorne (Lord), Sau. & Sc. 675.

Want of Parties.]—On further directions, it is competent for the court to entertain a question of liability, if, by reason of want of parties or facts, the suit is not in a condition at an earlier hearing to enable the discussion of such a question in the presence of all persons interested. Puttenden v. Hobson, 22 L. J., Ch. 697; 1 W. R. 282; 17 Jur. 406.

Fresh Facts.]—After hearing and rehearing, a receiver having been refused, the party may be entitled, on the cause coming on for further directions, shewing a new state of facts, as a balance reported in the hands of the defendants, to renew the application for a receiver. Att.-Gen. v. Galway Corporation, 1 Moll. 95.

Compromise.] — After decree and master's report, a motion, founded on a compromise, for payment out and division of money in court between the parties, was refused, the proper course, under such circumstances, being to set down the cause for further directions. Spencer v. Mostyn, 11 Jur. 234.

As to Funds.]—An order for payment to the husband, of money to which his wife is entitled, cannot be inserted in the order on further directions, but must be obtained by petition, although the wife consents. Campbell v. Harding, 6 Sim. 283.

After decree, the bill cannot be dismissed by consent: but an arrangement for disposing of the fund in court may have effect by consent on further directions. Lashley v. Hogg, 11 Ves. 602.

In a creditors' suit for the administration of the estate of a testator it appeared from the master's report that there were forty-eight creditors, that many of the debts were for small amounts, and that the fund distributable among them was small and insufficient to pay the debts in full. Upon the cause coming on for further directions, the court, on the request of the counsel for the defendants, the executors, made an order for the ratable apportionment of the fund among the creditors, on the amounts apportioned being verified by the joint affidavit of the plaintiff and one of the defendants, the executors; and that the sums apportioned under 10*l.* should be paid to the plaintiff's solicitor on his undertaking to pay the same to the creditors respectively. Form of such order. Bear v. Smith, 5 De G. & Sm. 92; 21 L. J., Ch. 176; 16 Jur. 708.

Interest.]—The reference to compute interest, under the 46th Order of August, 1841, on debts not by law carrying interest, may be made on further directions, although not made at the hearing. Flintoff v. Haynes, 4 Hare, 309.

In an administration suit, the pleadings raised questions of wilful default and liability to pay interest on balances in hand against executors; but the decree taken at the original hearing neither contained any declaration against the executors nor any inquiries as to wilful default, but was merely a decree for the common account of what had been received:—Held, that the court could not, on further directions, make any decree for wilful default; but that the question of interest on balances in hand was still open, inasmuch as, although there was no declaration at the hearing, yet, applying the above rule, there was that which was the first step towards it, a direction to take the common account of what had been received, which, if properly answered by the master, ought to show what personal estate had been received from time to time, and then the court might, on further directions, either make an immediate declaration, or direct further inquiry. Jones v. Morrall, 2 Sim. (N.S.) 241; 21 L. J., Ch. 630.

Generally executor making advances for maintenance beyond income in his hands is not entitled to interest, but on further directions the executor may be able to show that common justice requires the allowance of interest. Kilbee v. Sneyd, 2 Moll. 235.

An executor may be charged, on further directions, with interest on his balances, though it be not prayed by the bill. Hollingsworth v. Shakeshaft, 14 Beav. 492; 21 L. J., Ch. 722.

Document set aside—Instruments depending on it.]—When the decree on the hearing declares that a certain indenture ought to be set aside, the decree on further directions will not only set aside such indenture, but all instruments depending upon it conveying estates to parties before the court; nor will the fact that the decree on the hearing directed an inquiry as to the circumstances under which the consideration-money for the conveyance effected by the first-mentioned indenture was paid into court, and that the master found that it was paid in, previously to the execution of such indenture, by the parties claiming under the instruments depending thereon, enable the latter to claim the money as ear-marked against persons in whose favour the original indenture was set aside, though it may as against the original takers under such indenture. Cookson v. Lee, 23 L. J., Ch. 473—L.JJ.

Administration Action.]—In an administration suit, commenced by summons, the chief clerk certified that the testatrix had contracted to sell a house and furniture, that the executors had completed the contract by an assignment of the property, and that they had in such assignment included another house, without having received any additional consideration. On the cause coming on upon further consideration, an attempt was made to charge the executors with a breach of trust in respect of the house :—Held, that this could not be done in a suit commenced by administration summons, but offered to direct an inquiry as to the value of the house. Delevante, In re, Delevante v. Child, 6 Jur. (N.S.) 118 ; 1 L. T. 397.

e. Direction of Further Inquiries.

In what Cases.]—A reference, on further directions, for the purpose of ascertaining whether certain charitable bequests could be carried out, made after the confirmation of a report, certifying that they could not, is irregular. Lyons Corporation v. East India Co., 1 Moore, P. C. 175.

Where administratrix, under usual decree for account, attempted to support her discharge before master by forgery and fraud, court, upon petition and further direction, directed inquiry as to balances in her hands from time to time, and a computation of interest thereon. Parnell v. Price, 14 Ves. 502.

If, at the hearing in a suit by the cestuis que trustent against the trustees, the common accounts only were directed, without any inquiry as to the default or neglect of the executors and trustees in not possessing themselves of the testator's estate, further directions at such an inquiry will not be directed, though a case for such a direction was stated by the bill, and appeared on the report. Garland v. Littlewood, 1 Beav. 527 ; 8 L. J., Ch. 369.

A bill was filed by cestuis que trustent to administer the trusts of a settled fund, and seeking to charge the estate of a deceased trustee with sums which he might have received but for his wilful default. At the hearing the ordinary accounts were only directed, and no inquiry was directed or reservation made with reference to wilful default. In the course of the inquiries in the master's office, some documents were in evidence, which were relied upon by the plaintiffs as leading to an inference that the trustee might have received more than was admitted to have been actually invested on account of the trust fund :—Held, that it was not proper, on further directions, to direct an inquiry as to wilful default. Coope v. Carter, 2 De G. M. & G. 292 ; 21 L. J., Ch. 570.

A bill for partition of a freehold estate stated the death of one tenant in common in fee, having devised her moiety to the defendant's husband, and the death of the other tenant in common intestate leaving the plaintiff her heir-at-law, but that the defendant's husband, who was an illegitimate son of a deceased brother of the intestate, and claimed to be her heir-at-law, concealing his illegitimacy, had entered upon and enjoyed the entirety, and had settled it by an antenuptial settlement, under which the defendant claimed. The bill also sought an account of rents and profits received by the defendant. The defendant by her answer submitted that her settlor was the intestate's heir, but did not claim as a purchaser for value without notice. By the decree a reference was directed to ascertain who was the intestate's heir-at-law, and the result of it was in favour of the plaintiff :—Held, that a further inquiry, whether the defendant was a purchaser without notice, could not be directed on further consideration. Lyne v. Lyne, 8 De G. M. & G. 553.

In a suit to administer the trusts of a settlement, the chief clerk having certified that the most beneficial way of letting the premises which formed the subject of the suit would be to let them on lease, two persons (one of whom was the defendant and also a cestui que trust and the receiver of the property) carried in equally beneficial proposals, and that of the defendant was accepted, and a conditional contract for a lease was signed by him accordingly, and approved by the judge. The defendant, having afterwards declined to perform the contract, the Master of the Rolls, on the hearing of the cause on further consideration, directed an inquiry as to the damages occasioned to the estate by the defendant's breach of contract. On appeal, the court, on the ground that the order of the Master of the Rolls was made without any proper notice to the defendant and without any constat before the court, directed an original notice of motion to be served on the defendant with respect to the inquiry as to damages, and upon the hearing of that motion, affirmed the order of the Master of the Rolls, but gave no costs to either side. Carne v. Brancker, 20 L. T. 797 ; 17 W. R. 837.

Where the decree in a suit instituted by an annuitant against a subsequent mortgagee, with a power of sale, and the mortgagor, ordered the estate to be sold and accounts to be taken, but did not contain any direction as to costs, charges, and expenses incurred by the mortgagee, in respect of certain attempted sales under his power, though there was the usual clause as to costs in his mortgage deed, and he claimed them by his answer :—Held, that the decree having reserved further directions, a further reference might, on petition, be directed to the master, to take an account of such costs, &c. Thompson v. Rumball, 3 Jur. 53.

Evidence—Only such as before Chief Clerk.]—If a document has not been proved, nor has any order been obtained for proving it vivâ voce at the hearing, the court will not allow it to be proved on the cause being heard, either on the equity reserved, or for further directions. Blundell v. Gladstone, 11 Sim. 467 ; 12 L. J., Ch. 225 ; 5 Jur. 481.

An affidavit cannot be received on further directions ; therefore, where a plaintiff on further directions produced an affidavit that certain defendants, having no further interest in the matters, had signed a consent, waiving service on them of any subsequent proceedings, and asked that the decree might be drawn up without an affidavit of service on them, the court rejected such affidavit. Att.-Gen. v. Gell, 8 Beav. 362.

An inquiry was directed to be made by the master ; the master made his report, which was not excepted to. The parties were held to be at liberty, at the hearing of the cause for further directions, to refer to the affidavits and other materials used before the master on his inquiry. Nedby v. Nedby, 5 De G. & Sm. 377 ; 21 L. J., Ch. 446.

The examination of a party may be read on further directions, for the purpose of having inquiries directed, though no foundation for those inquiries appears on the report itself. Dymock v. Ashton, 7 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 120.

In 1843 a tenant in tail joined in resettling one of two family estates. He disputed the validity of the transaction, and subsequently, in 1845, married. On that occasion a settlement was executed, making provision for the younger children only of the marriage. The instructions stated that it was desired to keep his landed estates free from any settlement, and contained this note: "N. B.—The eldest son will take the family estate." In a suit to set aside the resettlement of 1843, affidavits were produced on behalf of the infant eldest son of the marriage, to show that, on the negotiation for the marriage, it was understood, that under existing settlements, the eldest son would become entitled to considerable landed estates, and therefore, that it was only necessary to provide for the younger children:—Held, that these affidavits were inadmissible under Sir George Turner's Act (13 & 14 Vict. c. 35). Hoghton v. Hoghton, 15 Beav. 278; 21 L. J., Ch. 482; 17 Jur. 99.

Affidavits as to matters directly in issue in the cause, which are filed after the filing of the certificate of the judge's clerk, will not be admitted at the hearing on further consideration; but, if necessary, upon the suggestion of counsel, an inquiry may be directed. Fleming v. East, 1 Kay (App.) lii.; 18 Jur. 1112; 2 W. R. 643.

A bill filed for redemption of a mortgage and an injunction to restrain a sale under a power alleged to have been fraudulently inserted in the deed, contained various charges of oppression and misconduct against the defendant, on the ground of which it prayed that he might pay the costs of the suit. On a motion for an injunction, supported by affidavits of those charges, the defendant submitted to an immediate account, the plaintiff undertaking to pay what should be found due, and further directions and costs were reserved:—Held, on a subsequent hearing of the cause for further directions, that the affidavits filed on the former occasion could not be read, the first order having shut out all the merits except the account. And an order, giving the plaintiff the costs of the suit on the ground of those affidavits was, on appeal, dismissed, and the defendant was allowed his costs, according to the ordinary rule. Dunston v. Patterson, 2 Ph. 341; 16 L. J., Ch. 404; 11 Jur. 595.

An affidavit is not receivable in evidence on further directions. Nicholson v. Haines, 1 Colly. 196.

—— On Question of Costs.]—Affidavit filed after the date of the master's report received in evidence, on the ground that it stated circumstances material in guiding the judgment of the court on the question of costs. Fallows v. Dillon (Lord), 2 Eq. Rep. 1181; 2 W. R. 507.

An affidavit as to defendant's conduct in the master's office rejected on a question of costs. Bateman v. Margerison, 2 W. R. 607.

—— Newly Discovered.] — Evidence discovered after the original hearing, and raising a new issue and a new defence, cannot be admitted under the 13 & 14 Vict. c. 35, s. 28, upon the hearing on further directions. But if justice cannot otherwise be done, the court will direct an inquiry. Howard v. Chaffers, 2 N. R. 10; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 634; 11 W. R. 585.

—— Cross-examination.]—After the certificate of the chief clerk has been signed and approved by the judge, no cross-examination upon any affidavit produced before the chief clerk during the proceedings in chambers will be allowed. Dawkins v. Morton, 6 L. T. 214; 10 W. R. 339.

—— "Further Evidence."]—Affidavits admitted at the hearing, under the stat. 13 & 14 Vict. c. 35, s. 28, as evidence that no appointment of trust funds had been made by deceased persons, in support of a suit by a party claiming in default of appointment. Devey v. Thornton, 9 Hare, 233.

The hearing of the cause on further directions was ordered to stand over for the production of evidence, by affidavit, of the value of the houses built, and the approbation of the lessor's surveyor at the time. Hume v. Bentley, 21 L. J., Ch. 760; 16 Jur. 1109.

Affidavits, which had been used before the chief clerk, were rejected by the vice-chancellor, on the ground that no notice of intention to read them had been given by the defendant. The plaintiff in his notice of appeal gave notice of motion for leave to read them on the appeal:—Held, that they were "further evidence" within the meaning of the Judicature Act, Ord. LVIII. r. 5, and leave to read them was given. Chennell, In re, Jones v. Chennell, 47 L. J., Ch. 80; 8 Ch. D. 492; 26 W. R. 595.

Costs.]—By a decretal order specific performance was decreed against a vendor; an inquiry was directed what damage had been sustained by the plaintiff by reason of the acts complained of in the bill, and the defendant was ordered to pay the costs of suit, liberty to apply being given, but further consideration not being reserved. The acts complained of by the bill were commencing to pull down buildings and removing the materials, and cutting and carrying away the crops on the land. The plaintiff carried in a very large claim for damages under various heads, most of which were at once rejected in chambers, but a certificate was made (which the vice-chancellor refused to vary) giving damages for pulling down buildings, and also under four other heads. The lords justices, on appeal, held that no damage was shown, on the ground that, under the peculiar circumstances, pulling down the buildings caused no damage, and that the other heads of damage were not within the scope of the inquiry. The defendant subsequently applied for the costs of the inquiry, on the ground that it had resulted wholly in his favour. This application having been refused by the vice-chancellor:—Held, that the plaintiff, though unsuccessful, was entitled to the costs of the inquiry so far as they related to pulling down buildings, removing materials, and cutting and carrying away crops; but must pay all the other costs of the inquiry. Krehl v. Park, 44 L. J., Ch. 286; L. R. 10 Ch. 334; 33 L. T. 83; 23 W. R. 475.

Varying Orders.]—Under the Judicature Act, 1873, s. 50, an order made on further consideration in chambers may be varied on an adjourned summons. Hodges, In re, Davey v. Ward, 47 L. J., Ch. 335; 7 Ch. D. 754; 26 W. R. 390.

b. JUDGE AT CHAMBERS.

1. Jurisdiction.

Generally.]—The expression, "the court or a judge," in the rules and orders, invariably means a divisional court or a judge at chambers. Baker

v. Oakes, 46 L. J., Q. B. 246 ; 2 Q. B. D. 171 ; 35 L. T. 832 ; 25 W. R. 220—C. A.

Sect. 39 of the Judicature Act, 1873, merely confers on the judges of the supreme court the power to exercise in chambers such of the functions of the court as were exercised in chambers by the judges before the act. Ib.

All powers possessed by the superior courts at common law, as well as those given by statute to the court in general terms, without any special limitations, may be exercised by a single judge, as the delegate of the court. Smeeton v. Collier, 1 Ex. 457 ; 5 D. & L. 184 ; 17 L. J., Ex. 57.

Chancery Division—Discharge of Order in Chambers.]—A judge of the chancery division has still jurisdiction to hear a motion to discharge an order made on a procedure summons in chambers, notwithstanding the Judicature Act, 1894, s. 1 (4) :—Semble, such applications should be discouraged. Boake v. Stevenson, 64 L. J., Ch. 261 ; [1895] 1 Ch. 358 ; 13 R. 171 ; 71 L. T. 722 ; 43 W. R. 189.

When an order has been made by a judge in chambers, the court has no power to alter that order unless upon motion, under s. 50 of the Judicature Act, 1873, to discharge the order. Where all parties concerned have been represented by counsel in chambers, the practice is for the chief clerk to give a certificate, and upon that the parties may go direct to the court of appeal. Att.-Gen. v. Llewellyn, 58 L. T. 367.

See also APPEAL.

Hearing in Judge's Private Room.]—A judge has jurisdiction to make an order, which can be made in judge's chambers, when sitting in the judge's private room at Westminster. Hartmont v. Foster, 51 L. J., Q. B. 12 ; 8 Q. B. D. 82 ; 45 L. T. 429 ; 30 W. R. 129—C. A.

Prohibition.]—An application for a writ of prohibition to a county court may be made to a judge sitting at chambers, notwithstanding Ord. LIX. r. 8a, of the Rules of the Supreme Court, December, 1888, which provides that "every application for a prohibition to a county court . . . shall be brought by notice of motion." King v. Charing Cross Bank, 59 L. J., Q. B. 24 ; 24 Q. B. D. 27 ; 62 L. T. 42 ; 38 W. R. 287.

A judge sitting at chambers has jurisdiction to set aside a writ of prohibition issued out of the petty bag office. Salm Kyrburg v. Posnanski (13 Q. B. D. 218) followed. Amstell v. Lesser, 55 L. J., Q. B. 114 ; 16 Q. B. D. 187 ; 53 L. T. 759 ; 34 W. R. 230.

Attachment.]—A judge at chambers has power to give leave to issue a writ of attachment. Salm Kyrburg v. Posnanski, 53 L. J., Q. B. 428 ; 13 Q. B. D. 218 ; 32 W. R. 752.

Power to refer to Court.]—The transfer of appeals from a judge at chambers in matters of practice and procedure to the court of appeal instead of to a divisional court has taken away the power of the judge to refer matters to the divisional court, and does not empower him to refer them directly to the court of appeal : he should now in every case himself make or refuse the order asked for. Roberts v. Plant, 64 L. J., Q. B. 347 ; [1895] 1 Q. B. 597 ; 14 R. 222 ; 72 L. T. 181 ; 43 W. R. 308—C. A.

Staying Proceedings.]—In an action against a surety upon a bond conditioned for the due payment to the receiver-general of all sums received by a collector of assessed taxes, a judge has no authority to order the proceedings to be stayed as to certain items in the particulars of demand, upon payment of that amount into court. Kepp v. Wiggett, 4 C. B. 678 ; 5 D. & L. 164.

Where a judgment irregularly signed by the plaintiff is set aside with costs, it is competent to a judge to stay the proceedings until such costs are paid. Wenham v. Downes, 5 N. & M. 244 ; 3 A. & E. 450 ; 1 H. & W. 324.

So a judge at chambers has jurisdiction under 15 & 16 Vict. c. 75, s. 219, to order a stay of proceedings, on payment of principal, interest, and costs. Lawrence v. Hogben, 26 L. J., Ex. 55.

Habeas Corpus.]—A writ of habeas corpus ad subjiciendum, issued into the island of Jersey by a baron of the exchequer, returnable in the queen's bench, is well issued under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 45. Carus Wilson, In re, 7 Q. B. 984 ; 14 L. J., Q. B. 105, 201 ; 9 Jur. 393.

It is no objection to an order made by another judge at chambers, under the general jurisdiction given by 1 & 2 Vict. c. 45, that the judge of the court in which the matter was pending was in attendance at the time. Bennett v. Dean, 5 Scott (N.R.) 196.

Procedendo.]—A judge sitting at chambers has power to issue a procedendo. Reg. v. Scaife, 2 Den. C. C. 513 ; 18 Q. B. 773 ; 3 Car. & K. 211 ; 21 L. J., M. C. 221 ; 17 Jur. 232.

Execution against Shareholder.]—Where judgment has been recovered against a company, a judge of any court sitting at chambers has the same jurisdiction, under 7 & 8 Vict. c. 110, s. 68, to order execution to issue against a shareholder, as a judge of the court in which judgment was obtained. Palmer v. Justice Assurance Society, 6 El. & Bl. 1015 ; 26 L. J., Q. B. 73 ; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 44 ; 5 W. R. 55.

Mandamus.]—An order for a mandamus to issue for the examination of witnesses under 43 Geo. 3, c. 63, s. 44, must be made by the court, and cannot be made by a judge at chambers. Clarke v. East India Co., 2 B. C. Rep. 319 ; 6 D. & L. 278 ; 18 L. J., Q. B. 23.

Waiver of Objection to Jurisdiction.]—The acceptance of costs under a judge's order, which otherwise could not have been received at all, or the whole or part of which could not have been received so soon, is a waiver of any objection to the order for want of jurisdiction. Tinkler v. Holder, 7 D. & L. 61 ; 18 L. J., Ex. 429.

Costs.]—A judge at chambers has no power to make an order as to costs under Ord. LV. ; nor to extend the time for making such order under Ord. LVII. r. 6, so as to enable the judge who tried the cause to make such order at any time after the trial. If no application has been made to the judge at the trial, the only way of obtaining such an order is by a substantive application to a divisional court. Baker v. Oakes, 46 L. J., Q. B. 246 ; 2 Q. B. D. 171 ; 35 L. T. 832 ; 25 W. R. 220—C. A.

A judge has jurisdiction to fix the amount of costs to be paid as the condition of making an order. Collins v. Aaron, 6 D. P. C. 423 ; 4 Bing. (N.C.) 223 ; 5 Scott, 595 ; 1 Arn. 54 ; 7 L. J., C. P. 134.

A judge has discretion to allow a plea to be amended on payment of a stated amount of costs, instead of payment of costs generally. Tomlinson v. Bollard, 3 G. & D. 607; 4 Q. B. 642; 12 L. J., Q. B. 257; 7 Jur. 969.

To proceed Ex parte.]—By 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 71, s. 82, it is provided that in case a rent-charge be in arrear and unpaid for the space of forty days next after any half-yearly day of payment, and there shall be no sufficient distress on the premises for payment, it shall be lawful for any of the judges, upon affidavit of the facts, to order a writ to be issued, directed to the sheriff, requiring him to summon a jury to assess the arrears remaining unpaid:—Held, that, upon production of a sufficient affidavit of the facts, a judge may grant such order ex parte, and that no previous summons or notice to the parties is necessary. Hammersmith Rent-charge, In re, 4 Ex. 87; 7 D. & L. 41; 19 L. J., Ex. 66.

Setting aside Judgment.]—A judge has power to make an order setting aside a judgment in ejectment for want of a plea, and admitting the tenant to appear and defend, although possession had been given under the judgment. Doe d. Mullarky v. Roe, 11 A. & E. 333; 3 P. & D. 316; 9 L. J., Q. B. 53; 4 Jur. 314.

As to Evidence of Documents.]—In an action founded upon a document in which both parties had an interest, and which was in the possession of one, but was said by him to have been lost, a judge cannot order that if such party does not produce the document to be stamped, a copy duly stamped shall be read in evidence at the trial, and that the original shall not then be produced on the other side, nor objection taken to the want of a stamp on the original. The court rescinded such an order, after it had been enforced by the judge at nisi prius, and made a rule of court. Rankin v. Hamilton, 15 Q. B. 187; 14 Jur. 930.

Reference to Judge.]—Judgment having been given in an action of trover for a book belonging to the plaintiffs as churchwardens of a parish, and proceedings pending in a court of error, by the consent of the parties an order was made by a judge on the 26th February, 1848, "that the judgment of the common pleas do stand; the costs of both sides to be paid out of the parish funds." This order was made a rule of court on the 22nd March, 1848. Difficulties arose in carrying out this order, and the case was taken to the court of error, which awarded a venire de novo. On the second trial, by an order of nisi prius, with the consent of all parties, it was ordered that the cause, and all matters relating to it, be referred to a judge, who was to have power to direct in what manner the former rule of the 22nd March, 1848, was to be carried into effect, and from time to time to direct and decide what ought to be done. The judge directed the costs on both sides to be taxed as between attorney and client, and on the 10th August, 1852, made an order, by which, after reciting that "doubts had arisen respecting matters relating to the order of the 26th February, 1848, viz. as to how the rule of the 22nd March, 1848, was to be carried into effect, and what from time to time ought to be done for such purpose," the judge "ordered, directed, and decided that the defendant should pay to the plaintiffs on the 1st March, 1853, the sum so taxed as the plaintiffs' costs, unless in the meantime the sum be paid to the plaintiffs out of the parish funds":—Held, first, that as the mode in which the judge was to act was not pointed out in the order of nisi prius, it must have been intended that he should act as a judge usually acts, viz. by order, and that he therefore had authority to make the order. Gibbs v. Flight, 13 C. B. 803; 22 L. J., C. P. 256; 17 Jur. 1034.

Held, secondly, that as the parties had selected him to interpret the order of the 26th February, 1848, they were bound by his decision. Ib.

Amendment.]—A declaration stated that defendant had agreed to pay plaintiff (an actor) a weekly salary during three successive seasons, but had dismissed him without cause during that period; the plaintiff claimed 400*l.* damages. Plea, to the further maintenance of the action, that the defendant after declaration pleaded payment of 32*l.* into court, and paid the 32*l.* into court, which the plaintiff took out of court and replied, accepting the 32*l.* in satisfaction, and that the defendant paid the plaintiff's costs; that afterwards, a judge made an order on the plaintiff's application against the defendant's will, setting aside the replication, and allowing the plaintiff to amend his declaration and the defendant to plead de novo, and directing the plaintiff to pay back the money and costs which he had received from the defendant; that the plaintiff afterwards amended his declaration by claiming 400*l.* instead of 100*l.* and his particulars by claiming 216*l.* instead of 32*l.* Replication that the plaintiff replied accepting the 32*l.* paid in under an erroneous belief that notwithstanding such acceptance, he should be at liberty to bring fresh actions for the remainder of the salary, and as it from time to time became due under the agreement:—Held, that the plea was no answer to the replication, as the judge had jurisdiction to make the order for the amendment, and that the court of error could not interfere to say whether he acted rightly or wrongly in the particular case. Webster v. Emery, 10 Ex. 901; 24 L. J., Ex. 186; 3 C. L. R. 713; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 381; 3 W. R. 250—Ex. Ch.

c. THE MASTERS.

Jurisdiction.]—See Rules of Supreme Court, 1883, Ord. LIV. r. 12.

—— Staying Execution pending Appeal.]—A master has jurisdiction under Ord. LVIII. r. 16, to stay execution on a judgment pending an appeal to the Court of Appeal. Oppert v. Beaumont, 56 L. J., Q. B. 216; 18 Q. B. D. 435; 35 W. R. 266—C. A.

Filing Affidavit—Interlineation.]—A master of the queen's bench division has no jurisdiction to initial an interlineation in an affidavit sworn in support of an application in the chancery division. According to the practice in the chancery division, such an affidavit ought not to be filed without an order of the court. Cloake, In re, 61 L. J., Ch. 69 ; 65 L. T. 455 ; 40 W. R. 74.

Reference to.]—Upon the argument of a rule, facts were not ascertained by the affidavits on either side, and the court referred the matter to the master, to inquire and report as to them. Upon the report being read, the court refused, upon the facts stated in the report, the other parts of the case having been argued previously to the reference, to make the rule absolute. Reg. v. Cheshire JJ., 13 L. J., Q. B. 261 ; 8 Jur. 645.

Reference to Master to Report.]—See ARBITRATION.

Master's Practice not binding on Court.]—No practice of the masters, however long established, however continuous it may have been, is of any legal authority, or in any way binds the court, unless it has been determined by the court itself to be a right practice. The masters of the court, however distinguished they may be, have no authority to determine the law. Their practice ought, no doubt, to be examined with the greatest care, but it is of no authority to bind the court. Stumm v. Dixon, 58 L. J., Q. B. 183 ; 22 Q. B. D. 529 ; 60 L. T. 560 ; 37 W. a. ADVANCES OUT OF.

In General.]—A sum of money being in court to be laid out in lands, which, when purchased, would be subject to the bond debts of testator, the debts decreed to be paid out of the fund in court. Cattell v. Money, 3 Bro. C. C. 256.

The court has no jurisdiction to make an allowance out of the rents of defendant's life estate in possession of receiver, appointed in suit instituted by a creditor, for defendant's maintenance, except by consent of creditors. Hickson v. Aylward, 3 Moll. 35.

Order made upon petition, that part of a small sum of stock bequeathed to an infant should be sold, and the proceeds applied in paying a debt incurred for necessaries on his account, and that the residue of the stock should be transferred into court, and the dividends paid to his mother towards his maintenance. Swift, Ex parte, 1 Russ. & M. 575.

An order was made for payment of the dividends of a fund in court to the executors, for distribution amongst the parties interested, before the accounts of the estate were taken, the executors admitting assets of the testator for all purposes. Shewell v. Shewell, 2 Hare, 154 ; 12 L. J., Ch. 250.

Where the court orders payment of arrears out of a particular fund, it is tantamount to a decision, not only that such fund is liable to make such payment, but also the interest directed to be computed thereon. Davis v. Brown, 14 Beav. 127.

Upon motion to lay out part of the capital of a fund in which children had a reversionary interest :—Held, that the court had no power to deal with the fund. Mills, In re, 1 W. R. 75, 380.

The court will only make an order for advancement of income or principal under s. 57 of 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, where it sees that parties are clearly entitled and there is some pressing reason for so doing. Rawley v. Burgess, 2 W. R. 652.

A married woman, having a life interest to her separate use in real estate, with her husband cut timber. A suit was instituted in one branch of the court to carry into effect the trusts of the settlement. In another branch a suit was in existence, in which a claim was made on the married woman's separate use, in respect of the timber cut :—Held, that in the first suit the court could not decide the question as to the right to cut the timber ; but the married woman, securing the value of the timber cut, was allowed her income pending the suit. Stacey v. Southey, 1 Drew. 400.

The court, where it sees fit, will order money to be paid out of court for past maintenance. Davey v. Ward, 26 W. R. 390.

For Carrying on Litigation.]—Where a pauper claimed as heir-at-law against a will and deed which were disputed, and the bill had been retained with liberty to bring an action, the tenants were ordered to pay plaintiff 150*l.* to enable him to go to trial. Perishal v. Squire, Dick. 31. S. C., Beam. Costs, 379, inserted from the register book, from which it appears that this indulgence was extended also to one of the defendants.

The court has no authority to advance part of the fund in the cause, to enable indigent parties to prosecute. Peck v. Beechey, 2 Sim. 40.

Persons who were found by the master to be the next of kin of the intestate, and were named by the court to be defendants, in an issue directed to try the rights of other persons who claimed also to be the next of kin, were allowed a sum of 500*l.* out of the estate of the intestate, on giving security to account for it. Gregg v. Taylor, 4 Russ. 279; 28 R. R. 87.

Motion that defendants, whose title in trust lands was in question in the cause, might have advanced to them a sum of money to answer the expense of executing a commission in America refused. Tillotson v. Hargreaves, 4 Madd. 172.

The plaintiffs claimed, as next of kin of an intestate, a fund which was in the possession of the defendant as the nominee of the crown; and, after the master had reported against the plaintiff's title, the court directed certain issues for the purpose of trying it. The plaintiffs applied for an advance out of the fund, to enable them to try the issues, but this, which was opposed by the crown, the court refused. Nye v. Maule, 4 Myl. & C. 342; 8 L. J., Ch. 329; 3 Jur. 669.

A proportion of a residue was bequeathed in trust, for A., for life, with remainder to his children who should attain twenty-one, but if he should have no child who attained twenty-one, to B. and her children in a similar manner. The testator had, after making his will, granted underlease, and transferred stock in favour of B. and her children; A. and his children filed a bill to set aside these transactions on the ground that the testator was not, at the date of them, of sound mind. Issues were directed at the hearing. Before any child of A. attained twenty-one, A. and his children presented a petition in a suit for the administration of the testator's estate, seeking an advance out of the capital of their contingent shares to enable them to try the issue:—Held, notwithstanding the opposition of B. and her family, that the advance ought to be made, on an adult petitioner and his solicitor undertaking to abide by any order of the court for its replacement, if the trial should be unsuccessful. Coombs v. Brooks, 3 De G. & Sm. 452; 13 Jur. 784.

The court will not make any order for an allowance to the bankrupt, for the purpose of meeting the expenses of an issue to try the validity of the commission, unless the assignees consent. Chambers, Ex parte, 1 Deac. 197.

Disapproval of the practice of advancing money out of funds in court, to enable parties to try an issue directed by the court. A negotiation for a compromise:—Held, to be a reasonable cause. Johnstone v. Todd, 3 Beav. 218.

—— Inquisition.]—Upon a wife's petition, the court has no power to order money to be paid to her out of the produce of the lunatic's property, to enable her to traverse the inquisition, which she had got leave to do. Nugent, Ex parte, 2 Moll. 486.

Costs incurred or to be incurred.]—When a widow, who was appointed sole executrix and testamentary guardian, had by her conduct made it necessary to have the estate administered and another guardian appointed, and had besides incurred costs of contempt, the court allowed a small sum out of the corpus to be retained by her in payment of such costs, and for the interim maintenance of herself and children. De Coombe v. De Coombe, 3 Jur. (N.S.) 712.

The master approved of some suits being instituted by the receiver, who was to be indemnified out of the estate. The funds appearing by affidavit to be "abundantly ample," the court ordered the institution of the suits, and the payment of costs out of the fund standing to the general credit of the cause, upon service on those only whom the master had authorised to attend him on the reference. Lockhart v. Hardy, 6 Beav. 267.

A suit was instituted before the passing of the Joint-Stock Companies Winding-up Acts, for the winding-up of the affairs of a company. The bill was dismissed, with costs, as against some of the defendants. An order was afterwards made under the Joint Stock Companies Winding-up Acts for the winding up of the company's affairs, and the official manager petitioned to have the money in court in the suit paid to him. The defendants, against whom the bill had been dismissed, with costs, appeared, although not served with the petition, and asked for payment of those costs out of the fund, on the ground that they had no means of getting them from the plaintiff; and the court ordered those costs, and also their costs of appearing on the petition, to be paid out of the fund accordingly. Walworth v. Holt, 15 Jur. 853.

Although the solicitor of a defaulting receiver cannot have the costs of his proceedings, until the sum found to be due from the receiver, with interest, shall have been paid in; yet when at his own proper costs, and under the orders of the court, the solicitor of the receiver brought certain actions at law against defaulting tenants and their sureties, &c.:—Held, that the solicitor was entitled to be paid the costs of such proceedings out of the fund in court. M'Bride v. Clarke, 1 Ir. Eq. R. 203.

The court will not make an order ex directo, that the costs of an attorney be paid out of a fund in court, upon which he has a lien; he must wait until his client applies to be paid the fund, and then insist upon his lien. The reason for not giving the costs to the attorney upon his own motion is, that there are not two litigant parties before the court. Crosbie v. Molloy, 2 Jones, 588.

b. Increment.

Who Entitled to.]—Money lodged in court by plaintiff, afterwards, on the application of the defendant, invested in debentures, defendant entitled to the benefit of a rise on the price, though it exceed the amount of his claim against the plaintiff, the application by defendant amounting to an undertaking to abide the result of a rise or fall of the debentures. Garnett v. Nugent, 2 Ball & B. 434.

A mortgagee having commenced an action against the mortgagor to recover the mortgage money upon a collateral security, the mortgagor obtained an injunction against the action, upon the terms of his paying into court the sum which appeared to be really due upon the mortgage. The sum was accordingly paid in and invested in stock, and that stock was afterwards blended with other stock purchased with another sum of money paid into court in the same suit. The mortgaged property having been afterwards sold under a decree in a different suit between the mortgagee and mortgagor, the mortgagee became the purchaser, and he was allowed to deduct from the purchase-money the amount due to him on the mortgage:—Held, that the mortgagor was entitled to receive back the stock which had been purchased with the sum paid in by him upon obtaining the injunction, and also the accumulated dividends which had accrued on that stock. Taylor v. Waters, 1 Myl. & C. 266; 5 L. J., Ch. 210.

Money paid for the use of a railway, under protest as overcharges, was afterwards paid into court under an order made by consent, and invested in the public stocks to abide final judgment in an action brought to try the legality of the charges, which the judgment declared to be illegal:—Held, that the party who paid the money was entitled to the stocks and dividends and accumulations thereon. Barrett v. Stockton and Darlington Ry., 1 H. L. Cas. 18; 11 Cl. & F. 590. And see S. C., at law, 2 Man. & G. 134; 3 Ib., 956; 8 Scott, 646.

The money brought into court having been, on the motion of the plaintiff, invested in stock:—Held, that he was entitled to the benefit of a rise in the price of stock. Wynn v. Brady, 5 Ir. Eq. R. 239.

c. Retaining.

In what Cases.]—A court will retain moneys decreed to parties, on the applications of persons having claims upon them. Bolton (Duke) v. Williams, 4 Bro. C. C. 430.

Fund in court detained, until the party by whom it has been paid is secured against all conflicting claims to it. Francklyn v. Colhoun, 3 Swan. 309; 19 R. R. 204.

A party entitled at twenty-one to money invested in the name of the accountant-general, petitioned that the money should still continue in his name, but the court refused to make such order, and compelled him to take the money. Isaac v. Gompertz, 1 Ves. J. 44.

Where a decree was made, directing a fund to be paid out of court to a defendant, and afterwards another defendant to the same suit, who claimed an interest in the fund, moved to stay that fund in court, until his claim could be determined, the court refused the motion with costs. D'Alton v. Trimleston (Lord), 9 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 202.

A. conveyed to B. his reversionary interest in a fund in court, and B. obtained a stop-order. When the fund fell into possession, B. presented a petition for payment to him. On the hearing of the petition A. insisted that the purchase was invalid, being a purchase of a reversionary interest at an undervalue. The court would not decide the point, but proposed to retain the funds in court for a limited time if A. would undertake to file a bill to set aside the conveyance. A. not giving the undertaking, the fund was paid out to B. Bethune v. Kennedy, 3 Beav. 462. And see 1 Myl. & C. 114.

Vendor may acquire lien on fund in court under contract for sale, and, if vendee refuses to complete contract, may prevent him by injunction from drawing out of court fund which was appropriated by contract to be applied in part payment of purchase-money. Doyne v. Hervey, 1 Hog. 3.

If a bill filed by a creditor is dismissed, and there is money in bank to the credit of the cause, it will be detained until a defendant, also a creditor, who is about to file a bill, can apply to have it transferred to the credit of his cause. Woods v. Creaghe, 1 Hog. 313.

Stop-order.]—See infra, col. 776 et seq.

d. Transfer and Carrying Over.

To Credit of Cause.]—Where the bankrupt has been ordered to pay a sum into court in a suit in chancery pending at the time of his bankruptcy, it was ordered by the court of review that a claim should be entered for that sum on behalf of the plaintiff in the suit, and that the dividends of that sum should be paid into the court of chancery, and invested in the name of the accountant-general. Hancock, Ex parte, Gilburd, In re, 3 Deac. & C. 523; 1 Mont. & Ayr. 220.

Where a sum had been ordered to be paid into court by the bankrupt in a suit in chancery still pending against him, a claim was ordered to be entered on the proceedings for that amount, and the assignees were directed to reserve dividends on that sum to be paid to the accountant-general to the credit of the suit in chancery. Farden, Ex parte, Peters, In re, 3 Deac. & C. 479; 1 Mont. & Ayr. 219.

Purchase-money paid into the court of exchequer, under the Southampton and London Railway Act, cannot be paid to the accountant-general of the court of chancery, though the property out of which the land is purchased by the company is under the administration of that court. Winchester (Bishop), Ex parte, Southampton and London Railway, In re, 6 L. J., Ex. Eq. 72; 1 Jur. 283.

Upon application for the transfer to the credit of a cause of a fund already paid into court as purchase-money by a public company, under an act of parliament, the practice hitherto has been for notice of the motion to be served on all the parties, and for the company to pay the costs of the appearances of all. In future it will be enough for the plaintiff to move without serving notice of motion upon the defendants. Eden v. Thompson, 4 N. R. 87; 10 L. T. 335, 522; 12 W. R. 789.

By the statute 23 & 24 Geo. 3, of the parliament of Ireland, for securing the moneys of suitors of the courts of chancery and exchequer, by depositing the same in the National Bank, which provides for the appointment of an accountant-general for the court of exchequer, it is enacted, that "so long as he observes the rules thereby or by the court to be prescribed, he shall not be answerable for any moneys which he shall not actually receive, but that the bank be answerable for all moneys deposited with them"; and regulations for the transfer of stock are specified in the act. Under this act, A. was appointed accountant-general of the court of exchequer in 1796. In 1810 A. executed a power of attorney, authorising S. B., his chief clerk, to make transfers in the bank books, of any stock of which A. should first have executed a transfer draft under his hand, of check paper, pursuant to the orders of the court. This power was deposited at the transfer office at the bank. Under this power, S. B. producing a certificate or transfer draft, purporting to be signed by A., but in fact forged, and in several respects not conformable to the particulars required by the power and the statutory regulations, obtained a transfer of stock from one cause to another, for the purpose of supplying deficiencies in the stock in the latter cause, which had been caused by transfers under certificates formerly forged by S. B. Upon the discovery of this transfer from the first to the second cause, two creditors in the first cause, who had proved their debts, made a motion in the cause, calling upon A. to refund the stock transferred, which, after hearing affidavits of the appellant and the Bank of Ireland, was ordered by the court. Upon appeal against this order, it was questioned whether the court of exchequer had jurisdiction to make such order by a summary proceeding not in a cause, and whether the house of lords had jurisdiction to entertain such appeal; but eventually the order was reversed. O'Neill v. Fitzgerald, 3 Bli. (N.S.) 24.

H., being an accounting defendant in one of two suits in different branches of the court and a party to the other, and entitled to a fund under a decree in that suit, is ordered to pay a sum of money as such defendant; but failing so to do, sequestration issues, and there being no return, the sequestrators petition for payment to them of the fund ordered to be paid to H. into the other suit, or a transfer of such fund into the other suit:—Held, that there being no dispute as to H.'s title, a petition might be presented in both suits to the Lord Chancellor, asking for a transfer, this court granting an injunction to restrain H. receiving the fund, with liberty to apply to discharge the injunction in case the superior court should refuse the application. Knight v. Knight, 4 W. R. 771.

A fund ordered to be transferred from one cause to another, upon a petition entitled only in the former cause. Weeding v. Weeding, 1 John. & H. 424; 4 L. T. 616; 9 W. R. 131.

To Irish Court of Chancery.]—Where it is desired to transfer consols standing in the name of the accountant-general to the credit of a suit in Ireland, the court will order it to be transferred into the names of the brokers of the accountant-general in England and of the accountant-general in Ireland, to be by them transferred to the account in Ireland. Massereene (Lord), In re, 10 L. T. 834; 12 W. R. 1095.

When a fund in court in a cause or matter is required to be transferred to the court of chancery in Ireland, the proper form of order is to direct that it be transferred to the accountant-general of the court of chancery in Ireland, to be by him forthwith transferred into his name as such accountant-general, to the credit of the cause or matter to which it is required to be transferred. Vaughan v. Headford (Marquis), 42 L. J., Ch. 456; L. R. 15 Eq. 173.

To Separate Account.]—A. B., being entitled to a fund in court, died, and administration was granted to a person as "the natural and lawful sister" of A. B. It appearing from the proceedings in the cause that A. B. was illegitimate, the court refused to pay the fund to the administratrix, but directed it to be carried over to a separate account, with directions that it should not be paid out of court without notice to the crown. Long v. Wakeling, 1 Beav. 400.

Where eleven grandchildren were entitled on coming of age each to a share of an inconsiderable aggregate fund, the court, to save the expense of costs on each share becoming payable, allowed the fund to be severed and carried to separate contingent accounts. Handley v. Metcalfe, 9 Beav. 445.

When a fund is carried over to a particular separate account, it is released from the general questions in the cause, and becomes marked as being subject only to the questions arising upon the particular matter referred to in the heading of the account. Jervoise, In re, 12 Beav. 209.

In an administration action under an order made in the presence of the plaintiffs, a fund was carried to the separate account of an annuitant and her issue, the dividends thereon to be paid to her for her life, and she charged her interest in favour of persons who obtained stop-orders thereon. She was afterwards found to be indebted to the estate, and the plaintiffs sought to have the dividends applied in satisfaction of her liability in priority to the charges she had created:—Held, that the effect of carrying the fund to a separate account being to release it from the general questions in the cause, the persons who had made the advances on the faith of the order were entitled to priority over the plaintiffs' claim. Eyton, In re, Bartlett v. Charles, 59 L. J., Ch. 733; 45 Ch. D. 458; 63 L. T. 336; 39 W. R. 135.

Where a sum of money, distributable in shares, has been paid into court, on an application for payment out of some of the shares, the petitioner should ask that the other shares may be carried to separate accounts. Hawke's Trust, In re, 2 Eq. Rep. 3; 18 Jur. 33.

Moneys found due to the estate of a deceased person will not be paid over to the representative appointed under s. 44 of 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, but will be carried over to a separate account. Byam v. Sutton, 19 Beav. 646.

A fund bequeathed in aliquot parts, on distinct trusts, ought not to be paid by the trustees to the joint account of the several trusts, but ought to be carried to separate accounts. Tillstone's Trust, In re, 9 Hare (App.) lix.

In an administration suit the court refused to allow the share of a deceased residuary legatee to be paid out to her sole executor for immediate distribution amongst the legatees named in her will, but directed such share to be carried to a separate account of the deceased testator, with liberty to apply at chambers. Gouldsmith v. Luntley, 32 L. T. 535.

—— Service on Parties.]—Where a fund bequeathed to one for life, with remainder to a class (the members of which, as well as their shares, had been ascertained by the master), had been carried to a separate account, the court, on petition, presented after the death of the tenant for life, directed the transfer of one-ninth part of the fund to the persons who appeared on the report to be entitled thereto, without service of the petition on the persons entitled to the other eight-ninths. Lambert v. Newark, 3 De G. & Sm. 405; 13 Jur. 998.

A suit had been instituted for redemption, and the mortgage-money had been paid into court by the mortgagor. The mortgagees were trustees for three infant sisters, and an order had been made that the sums should be divided and carried to their separate accounts; but this order had not been carried out, and the fund remained to the general credit of the cause. Two-thirds had been paid out to two sisters, and the third, having come of age, now applied for payment, serving the trustees only. The registrar objected, that the mortgagor and the other sisters, being parties to the suit, ought to have been served:—Held, that there was no necessity to serve the mortgagor; and with respect to the other sisters, the practice now was in such cases, where the previous orders for payment had been regularly made, that the other parties need not be served. Dallimore v. Ogilby, 16 Jur. 443.

Title of Account.]—The amount of two legacies bequeathed to infants was paid into court by the trustee under the general title of the will of the testatrix, but this affidavit stated that no other person than the legatees was interested in the fund:—Held, that the legatees were entitled to a transfer of the funds without the necessity of altering the title of the account. Coulson's Trust, In re, 4 Jur. (N.S.) 6.

Where it is proposed upon a petition for payment out of part of a fund in court to carry over a share in such fund to the separate account of the person entitled, the account should be in the name of such person, and not in the name of such person or his incumbrancer—i.e. "the account of A. B." not "the account of A. B. or his incumbrancers." Hargrave v. Kettlewell, 55 L. T. 674; 35 W. R. 136.

Application to have some money paid out of court which had been paid in to an account intituled "The Trusts of the Will of J. Robinson, deceased," the application being by the nine children of the testator, all of whom were adult and sui juris, and claimed as residuary legatees. The court, however, declined to pay out to residuary legatees a sum which had been paid in on so general a trust. After consideration of the will, however, the fund was directed to be carried over to an account intituled "The Account Residue," subject to the particular legacies; and then the residuary legatees claiming would be in their right Robinson's Trust, In re, 1 Jur. (N.S.) 750.

Form of Order.]—Form of order where cash and stock not admitting of division below 1*l.* are paid and transferred into court to separate accounts. Perry, In re, 22 W. R. 433.

When the chief clerk in distributing a fund, by consent of all the claimants, waives a question of title as to some of the claimants, the certificate should be made "without prejudice." Waterton v. Burt, 39 L. J., Ch. 425.

Where the title to a fund carried over to a legacy account is clear, the court will on motion order a transfer of such fund. Linford v. Cooke, 6 W. R. 5.

Where a fund to be settled is small, the court, to save expense, inserts the trusts in the order itself. Chamberlain v. Chamberlain, 1 Sm. & G. (App.) xxviii.

See R. S. C., 1883, Ord. XXII. r. 17.

In what Securities.]—Under the provisions of a will, the testator's widow was entitled durante viduitate to the income of his residuary estate (about 10,000*l.*) subject to an annuity of 200*l.* a year for his son. If she married again the corpus became divisible between the son and certain charities. The trustees of the will were given an unlimited power of investment. By electing to take under the will the widow forfeited an income of 120*l.*, to which she would have been otherwise entitled under her marriage settlement. The court, upon the application of the widow, and the son not opposing, sanctioned the investment of the trust fund in India stock. Phelan, In re, 23 L. R., Ir. 336.

In ordinary cases cash in court will be ordered to be invested only in the securities which were sanctioned for that purpose before the rules of court of the 4th February, 1889, came into force. It is only by special permission of the court that the additional securities authorised as investments in these rules can be made available; and it is necessary in every application for this purpose to make a clear case, and to assign such reasons as may be necessary to enable the court to see that the proposed investment will be for the benefit of all persons interested. Where a fund has been transferred to a separate credit it ceases to be the duty of the person having carriage (except under special circumstances) to move for its investment; and the person desiring an investment, whether entitled to the fund as trustee, or having an individual interest therein, should make the application himself and on his own responsibility; if a trustee, he must shew that the investment contemplated would be consistent with the trust; if not a trustee, he must inform the court of the special circumstances under which the application is made, and satisfy it that all persons interested have an opportunity of appearing and expressing their views on the matter. Roberts v. Morgan, 23 L. R., Ir. 118.

In the absence of special grounds influencing the discretion of the court, cash under its control will be invested in the funds, and not in the other securities sanctioned by the rules of court of 4th February, 1889. Dublin, Wicklow and Wexford Ry., In re, 23 L. R., Ir. 562.

Funds in court were ordered to be invested in debenture and guaranteed stocks of Irish railways. What are special circumstances to influence the discretion of the court in dealing with applications under the rule of 4th February, 1889, considered. Nesbitt's Trusts, In re, 25 L. R., Ir. 447—C. A.

See also LANDS CLAUSES ACT.

Costs of Application to Change.]—The costs of the application to change the investment ordered to be paid by the applicants, the tenants for life of the funds. Nesbitt's Trusts, In re, supra.

f. CHANCERY FUNDS ACT, 1872.

In urgent cases, and especially in injunction suits, parties should proceed under the Chancery Funds Act and Rules, 1872, r. 12, and thereby obviate all unnecessary delay in obtaining their orders. Brand v. Blow, 43 L. J., Ch. 528.

Form of order when securities of a miscellaneous character are brought into court under the Court of Chancery (Funds) Act, 1872, ss. 3, 6, 10. Povah v. Walker, L. R. 15 Eq. 316; 21 W. R. 472.

When stock in a public company is transferred into court under the above act, the deed should express the transfer to be made to the account of the paymaster-general, and not to the paymaster-general. Stephens, In re, L. R. 8 Ch. 465; 29 L. T. 7; 21 W. R. 494.

g. ASSIGNMENT OF.

Duty of Assignee as to Notice.]—When an assignment is made of an interest in trust funds, part of which is in court and part in the hands of trustees, the assignee in order to complete his title must, as regards the funds in the hands of the trustees, give notice to the trustees. Notice to the trustees will be ineffectual as regards the fund in court, and as to that fund the priorities of different assignees will be determined by the dates at which they have obtained stop-orders. An assignee who has obtained a stop-order is entitled (as regards the fund in court) to priority over a prior assignee (of whose assignment he had no notice) who had given notice to the trustees before the date of the stop-order, but who had not himself obtained a stop-order. Mutual Life Assurance Society v. Langley, 32 Ch. D. 460; 54 L. T. 326—C. A. Affirming, 53 L. J., Ch. 996; 32 W. R. 791. See also post, STOP-ORDER, col. 776 et seq.

h. PAYMENT OF COSTS.

By an interlocutory order, the defendant was ordered to pay the plaintiff certain costs. The defendant kept out of the way, and the plaintiff, being unable to obtain payment, presented a petition for payment thereof out of rents in court. It was a question in the cause, whether they belonged to the plaintiff or defendant. The court held, that it could make no order. Hargrave v. Hargrave, 13 Beav. 102.

Costs occasioned by the fund being paid into court in the case of a trust for maintenance to come out of the corpus. Reid's Trust, In re, 1 W. R. 13.

Where costs are ordered to be paid out of a particular fund, that does not determine that that fund is ultimately to bear them. Sheppard v. Sheppard, 33 Beav. 129.

Costs had been ordered to be paid out of income instead of out of corpus:—Held, that this did not preclude the matter being afterwards set right. Ib.

But an order to pay over a fund to persons by name is, incidentally, a determination that other persons, who are not named, are not entitled. Ib.

Defendants who have been dismissed from a suit with costs, and have registered the order dismissing them, will not be allowed their costs out of funds subsequently realised in the suit. Miller v. Pridden, 26 L. J., Ch. 183; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 78; 5 W. R. 171.

The costs of all parties were in 1857 ordered to be taxed and paid out of a fund in court, and the residue was directed to be paid to the parties entitled. Solicitors who had acted for some defendants down to 1840, had no notice of the order, and their costs had been omitted in the taxation. Upon their petition these costs were ordered to be taxed, and paid by the parties to whom the residue of the fund had been paid over. Armstrong v. Storer, 27 Beav. 471.

During the progress of a suit the costs were ordered to be paid out of a fund in court, part of which was invested. A. B., who was entitled to a share in the estate and was liable to pay his share of the costs, had in his hands a portion of the assets greater than his share; on finally winding up the suit, he was ordered to repay his share of the costs, with interest at 4*l.* per cent. Bromhead v. Hunt, 5 L. J., Ch. 343.

It is within the discretion of the court to order all costs reasonably incurred in ascertaining the sum due under articles of partnership to be paid out of the fund. Butcher v. Pooler, 52 L. J., Ch. 930; 24 Ch. D. 273; 49 L. T. 573; 32 W. R. 305—C. A.

j. PAYMENT OUT OF COURT.

1. In what Cases.

a. Appointment under Powers.

Bequests to females, some of whom were married and some single, for their separate use for their respective lives, and after their decease to such persons as they should respectively appoint, and in default of appointment to their respective executors, administrators and assigns:—Held, that each of the legatees, whether married or unmarried women, was entitled, upon petition, without executing any formal appointment, to an immediate transfer or payment to herself of the corpus of her share of the fund. Holloway v. Clarkson, 2 Hare, 521; 6 Jur. 923.

Money in court stood limited to a widow for life, and afterwards as she should by deed or will appoint. The court directed payment to her, without requiring an appointment. Cambridge v. Rous, 25 Beav. 574.

Trust moneys settled on such trusts as the plaintiff should by deed or will appoint, ordered to be paid to the plaintiff. Watts v. Campbell, 2 Giff. 112.

The court will never order payment out of a fund in court to a sole trustee, in the absence of any parties interested in the estate, unless such estate is substantially represented. Roberts, In re, 7 Jur. (N.S.) 818; 9 W. R. 758.

Generally.]—The law sees no impossibility of having issue at any number of years. Horsley v. Chaloner, 2 Ves. 84.

No jurisdiction in the court to deal with property given over in default of issue upon any probability of there being no issue. Bills in parliament on such grounds often refused. Anon., 2 Ves. 113.

The court will not direct money to be paid to a party entitled in remainder, upon the improbability of an intermediate event, if such event be possible. Kirby v. Clayton, 2 Ves. 241.

Presumption as to.]—20,000*l.* stock was given to a married woman, for her separate use for life, and after her decease to her children, and in default of issue 12,000*l.* as she should by will appoint; and in case she should neglect or refuse to make an appointment, to A. B., on condition that he should pay 500*l.* each to the children of the testator's brothers and sisters. Her husband having died, and the lady being sixty-five years of age, the court, on the petition of the lady and A. B., ordered payment of the fund after providing for the legacies to the nephews. Hamilton v. Brickwood, 5 L. J., Ch. 144.

A testator gave a fund to A. absolutely, but that only the interest should be paid to her for her separate use for life, and after her death the property should go to her children, and in the event of her not intermarrying, nor having children, the property to be at her disposal by will or otherwise. A. being a widow, sixty-four years of age, and never having had any children, filed a bill for the transfer of the fund:—Held, that she was entitled to it. Mackenzie v. King, 17 L. J., Ch. 448; 12 Jur. 787.

Trust funds were bequeathed to a spinster, coupled with a direction that if she married they were to be settled on herself and her issue, and so as not to be subject to the debts or control of her husband. In 1856, when she was single, and in her forty-seventh year, she was declared absolutely entitled to the funds, but subject to that interest being divested on her marriage, as provided by the will. In 1863, and while unmarried, she presented a petition praying for the transfer and payment to herself of the trust funds:—Held, that she was entitled. Price v. Boustead, 8 L. T. 565.

A sum of 500*l.* stood settled on the trusts of a marriage settlement. The trustees were dead; there were no children; the wife was fifty-eight years old, and had assigned all her interest to her husband, who was one of the cestuis que trustent. On the petition of husband and wife, the court ordered that the right to transfer might vest in the husband, and that he might transfer to himself. Ryan, In re, 9 W. R. 137.

The court will not presume that a married woman, aged forty-nine, is past child-bearing. Overhill's Trusts, In re, 22 L. J., Ch. 485; 17 Jur. 342; 1 W. R. 208.

The court will not treat as past child-bearing a woman of less than fifty years of age, although positive medical evidence that she is past child-bearing be adduced. Groves v. Groves, Whitehead, Ex parte, 9 L. T. 533; 12 W. R. 45.

A fund in court paid out and distributed upon the assumption that a spinster, aged fifty-three years and two months, would never have issue. Haynes v. Haynes, 35 L. J., Ch. 303; 14 L. T. 47; 14 W. R. 361.

Money was ordered to be paid out of court on the presumption that a widow aged fifty-five years and four months, who had never had any children, and a spinster aged fifty-three years and nine months, would not have any children. Widdow's Trusts, In re, 40 L. J., Ch. 380; L. R. 11 Eq. 408; 24 L. T. 87; 19 W. R. 468.

In the administration of an estate, the court refused to act on the presumption that a married lady of fifty-two was beyond the age of bearing issue. Conduit v. Soane, 24 L. T. 656; 19 W. R. 817.

A fund in court was settled upon a married woman absolutely in default of issue. The woman gave birth to a stillborn child on the 1st June, 1871, and her husband died on the 12th of the same month. There was no other issue. On an application by the woman on the 9th December following that the fund be paid to her:—Held, that the application was premature. Att.-Gen. v. Clements, 25 L. T. 739.

Payment out of a fund in court ordered on the presumption that a woman who had been married twenty-six years to her husband without having a child, and whose age was forty-nine years and nine months, would never have a child by her husband. Millner's Estate, In re, 42 L. J., Ch. 44; L. R. 14 Eq. 245; 26 L. T. 825; 20 W. R. 823.

A wife, aged forty-seven, had had six children by her husband, but had not been since pregnant for seventeen years. Medical evidence was adduced to shew that she had fourteen years ago suffered from a disease which, in the opinion of the medical men, rendered it improbable, if not absolutely impossible, that she should have further issue:—Held, that there was sufficient presumption against any future issue for the court to act upon. Summers' Trusts, In re, 30 L. T. 377; 22 W. R. 639.

The presumption that a woman aged fifty-one years and eleven months, who had been married fifteen years and had never had any children, would not have any children, acted upon. Allason's Trusts, In re, 36 L. T. 653.

T. 795; 29 W. R. 350.

A testator bequeathed the dividends of a sum of 10,000*l.* consols unto and equally between his four daughters, and from and immediately after their several and respective deceases he bequeathed the 10,000*l.* to their children respectively—viz. one fourth part thereof unto and equally between the children of each daughter; and, in case any one or more of the daughters should die without leaving issue her or them surviving, he bequeathed the share or shares of the stock so bequeathed to and intended for the issue (had there been such) "unto the survivors or survivor" of the four daughters, equally if more than one, and if but one, to that one absolutely. Three of the daughters married, and died leaving children. The fourth was the longest liver, and was a spinster of the age of fifty-four:—Held, that on her death without leaving issue she would be entitled to her own one fourth share of the 10,000*l.* absolutely; that it might be assumed that she would never have any children; and that the share might be transferred to her at once. Maden v. Taylor (45 L. J., Ch. 569) approved and followed. Davidson v. Kimpton, 18 Ch. D. 213; 45 L. T. 132; 29 W. R. 912.

j. In other Cases.

In Trust for A. until Marriage.]—Bequest of money to trustees in trust to invest in public funds, and pay dividends to A. until marriage, and then to transfer stock to her; but in case she should die unmarried, then as she should appoint by will, and in default of appointment to her executors and administrators. Semble, she is not entitled to have fund transferred while unmarried. Wilson v. Mount, 2 Sim. & S. 493.

Subsequent Marriage.]—The dividends of a fund in court were by an order made in a cause directed to be paid to one of the defendants, an unmarried lady, during her life or until further order, with liberty to apply. The lady having married, she and her husband, by petition stating the marriage and a settlement of the dividends on her to her separate use, prayed an order directing the payment of the dividends to the separate use of the lady, and that the plaintiff might be directed, under the 44th Order of April, 1852, to enter on record a statement of the marriage, and the nature and effect of the marriage settlement. The court held that an order for payment of the dividends might be made, but declined to give any such direction to the plaintiff as asked. Langdale v. Gill, 1 Sm. & G. 24; 16 Jur. 1041; 1 W. R. 51.

Two sisters, one married and the other unmarried, being entitled jointly to certain funds in court, presented a joint petition, praying for payment to the unmarried sister of her share, and for a settlement upon the married sister out of her share :—Held, upon the objection of the husband, that the petition touching the settlement was wrong, and that the unmarried sister ought not to have been made a co-petitioner. Heyes v. Heyes, 8 Jur. 17. And see HUSBAND AND WIFE.

To Lunatic.]—On a petition by a person of unsound mind not so found by inquisition, by his next friend, for payment, until further order, of the dividends on 838*l.* 15*s.* 2*d.* consols to his next friend to be applied for his maintenance, the court made an order as prayed. Perry's Trusts, In re, 31 L. T. 775 ; 23 W. R. 335.

In a case where a partnership had been dissolved by the court in consequence of the lunacy of one of the partners, and large sums had been paid into court to the separate account of the lunatic in respect of his share of the capital and profits of the business ; the Lord Chancellor, on being subsequently satisfied of the complete recovery of the lunatic, ordered the fund to be paid out to him. Leaf v. Coles, 1 De G. M. & G. 417. See LUNATIC.

To Creditors.]—It is competent to a creditor filing a bill on behalf of himself and all other the creditors of a testator, to compromise the suit and dismiss the bill ; and in such a case a fund brought into court by the executors will, with the consent of the executors, be paid to the plaintiffs. Wood v. Westall, Younge, 305.

—— Subsequent Bankruptcy.]—A., B. and C., having agreed for the purchase of certain mines, for 10,000*l.*, and to form a joint-stock company for working them, and that the mines should be sold to the company for 25,000*l.*, of which 10,000*l.* should be paid to F., the proprietor, and the remainder divided amongst themselves and certain of their friends, whom they nominated to be directors and officers of the company ; at a meeting of the persons so nominated, at which A., B. and C. were present, but before the company was established, it was resolved that the company should purchase the mines for 25,000*l.*, to be paid to F. ; and a conveyance was afterwards taken from F., to the trustees of the company, and the 25,000*l.* was paid out of the funds of the company, and distributed in manner agreed upon. A suit having been instituted by some of the shareholders, on behalf of themselves and the others, against the persons who had participated in the 15,000*l.*, the latter were decreed to refund what they had received : and one of the defendants having become bankrupt after he had paid what he had received into court, under an order upon motion :—Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to receive that sum, and were not to be put to prove their demand under the commission. Hichens v. Congreve, 4 Sim. 420.

To Children.]—A fund in court was held in trust for the children of A. A. had been separated from his wife, who, during the separation, had given birth to a child. The court, considering the evidence of non-access sufficient, allowed a share in the fund to be paid to one of the legitimate children on petition, the petition having been served on the bastard, who was still an infant. Sinclair v. Sinclair, 2 W. R. 69.

Bequest of a personal fund to such of the children of I. N. as should live to attain the age of twenty-one years. I. N. had three children, two of whom having attained twenty-one applied for payment of their shares. Under the circumstances of the case, the court declined to pay over to them any part of the capital, but allowed them to receive the interest of two-thirds, without prejudice to the claim of after-born children of I. N. Brandon v. Aston, 2 Y. & Coll. C. C. 30.

Semble, if an infant's legacy has been paid into court, and invested in stock, the stock will be transferred or sold out, and the proceeds paid to the party entitled, at his option. Bromhed, Ex parte, 13 Jur. 113.

A testator bequeathed to his wife 4,000*l.*, to be used for her own and the children's benefit, as she should think best, recommending her not to diminish the principal, but vest it in government or freehold securities. There being two children, one adult and the other a minor, the widow made an appointment of 500*l.* to the minor, and the residue to the adult ; and she and the adult child petitioned for payment out of court of the residue :—Held, that such payment could not be ordered. Hart v. Tribe, 1 De G. J. & S. 418.

Tenant for Life.]—Dividends of a fund in court ordered to be paid to a tenant for life, a professed nun, on petition, without inquiry into the circumstances under which the petition was presented, the court holding the solicitor who filed it responsible. Holdsworth's Trusts, In re, 2 Eq. Rep. 1090 ; 2 W. R. 692.

Where a petitioner prays that the dividends of a fund in court may be paid to several tenants for life, and that the various shares of the corpus may be carried over to the accounts of those entitled in remainder, such remaindermen, if numerous, need not be served or appear. Hodges, In re, 6 W. R. 487.

Repayment to Plaintiff.]—The fact that a bill has been dismissed with costs, and that those costs have not been paid, is no reason why a fund, paid into court by the plaintiff, for a purpose since satisfied in another way, should not be paid out to the plaintiff applying for it. Flockton v. Peake, 10 L. T. 369 ; 4 N. R. 135 ; 12 W. R. 789.

Legatee.]—B. died intestate in 1814, seised of two houses which were purchased in 1829 by the Charing Cross commissioners. As no title could be made to the houses, the purchase-money for them was paid into the court of exchequer, and invested in consols. In 1822 the heir-at-law of B. died, having made a will, under which the respondents to this petition claimed the fund. In 1829 the widow and J. B., his then heir-at-law, presented a petition stating that the widow had, with the consent of the immediate heir-at-law of B., been in possession of the houses from the time of his death till they were sold ; and an order was made directing the dividends on the fund to be paid to the widow for life, and then to J. B. for his life. The widow died in 1834, and J. B. died in 1863, having bequeathed his interest in the fund in court to the party, who presented a petition for transfer of it to him absolutely. It was said that the order made by the court of exchequer in 1829 was obtained by fraud, but that was not proved :—Held, that the petitioner was entitled to the fund. Breach, Ex parte, 10 Jur. (N.S.) 982 ; 10 L. T. 396 ; 12 W. R. 769.

The mortgagees afterwards petitioned for payment of the fund out of court to them, and the order was made. Piddoc v. Boultbee, 16 L. T. 837.

2. Proceedings to Obtain Order.

Petition or Summons.]—Money had been paid into court by executors under the Trustee Relief Act to the credit of an account entitled, "In the matter of the trusts of the sale moneys of certain real estate formerly belonging to E., deceased, and subject to the trusts of a certain royal warrant dated the 6th August, 1861." The fund had originally been about 1,500*l.* On an application by summons under Ord. LV., 600*l.*, part of the fund, was ordered to be paid out, but as to the remainder the summons stood over for further evidence as to the death of an annuitant. The further evidence having been obtained, the application was renewed, the summons asking for payment out of the balance to the applicant :—Held, that the case was not within Ord. LV. at all, and the application ought to be made by petition and not by summons. Evans, In re, 54 L. T. 527.

A sum of more than 1,000*l.* had been paid into court in 1883, under the Trustee Relief Act, representing the share under a will of J. R., who could not be found. The administrator of J. R. now took out a summons for payment out of this sum upon evidence that J. R. had attained twenty-one and died intestate :—Held, that the court would not make the order without a petition. Rhodes' Will, In re, 55 L. J., Ch. 477 ; 31 Ch. D. 499 ; 54 L. T. 294 ; 34 W. R. 270, 501.

The generality of sub-s. 1 of Ord. LV. r. 2, of Rules of Court, 1883, is not cut down by sub-s. 5 of the same rule ; and consequently an application under the Trustee Relief Acts, for the payment out of court of a fund, even though it exceeds 1,000*l.*, where the title of the applicant merely depends upon proof of his birth, should be made by summons and not by petition. Broadwood's Trusts, In re, 55 L. J., Ch. 646 ; 55 L. T. 312.

Where the title to a fund in court depends only upon proof of the identity of the birth, marriage or death of any person, the mere fact that the fund exceeds 1,000*l.* will not justify the making of an application for the payment or transfer of the fund out of court by petition instead of by summons in chambers. Rhodes, In re (31 Ch. D. 499), commented on. Bates v. Moore, 57 L. J., Ch. 789 ; 38 Ch. D. 381 ; 58 L. T. 513 ; 36 W. R. 586.

See also LANDS CLAUSES ACT.

—— Trustee Relief Act—Fund exceeding £500.]—Where the title to a fund in court depends only upon proof of the identity, or the birth, marriage or death of any person, the mere fact that the fund exceeds 500*l.* does not prevent an application, under the Trustee Relief Act, for the payment or transfer of the fund out of court being made by summons in chambers. Campbell's Trusts, In re, 31 L. R., Ir. 434. See TRUST AND TRUSTEE.

Former Practice—Petition, Bill or Motion.]—Under a private act of parliament, money to be paid to certain parties. Upon petition to the court, Lord Chancellor refused to make an order to pay the money to persons deriving title from the original parties, and ordered them to file a bill. King, Ex parte, 2 Bro. C. C. 158.

Money not paid out of court on motion. Shipbrooke (Lord) v. Hinchinbrook (Lord), 13 Ves. 394.

Where a gross sum is required to be paid out of hands of court, it is to be done by petition ; but where interest only is sought a motion is sufficient. Anon., 4 Madd. 228.

Money lodged in bank to the credit of the cause, may be ordered to be paid out at the hearing : it does not require a distinct motion. Brophy v. Holmes, 2 Moll. 1.

An incumbrancer on a fund in court is, in a contested case, only entitled, upon petition, to an order restraining the transfer of the fund and payment of the dividends, and must file a bill for any ulterior relief. Cook v. Collingridge, C. P. Coop. 255.

An application to take money out of court must be by petition. Ponsonby, In re, 2 Con. & L. 30 ; 3 Dr. & War. 27 ; 5 Ir. Eq. R. 268.

The proper mode of obtaining money out of court is by petition ; but the rights of the parties having been ascertained by arbitration, and no decree having been made, the court in this case ordered payment of money out of court upon motion. Oliver v. Burt, 1 Beav. 583.

An order to pay a sum of money out of court should be obtained by petition, and not on motion. Garratt v. Niblock, 5 Beav. 143.

In cases of very small sums, standing to a separate account in court, and where the title is simple, the court, to save expense, will order payment upon petition without attendance in court. Petty v. Petty, 12 Beav. 170.

The court will not make an order for payment of money out of court except upon petition, however small the sum may be. Blind School v. Goren, 21 L. J., Ch. 144.

A party having paid in money in obedience to a decree of the court below, and the decree being varied in such a way that he is entitled to have that money paid out, the same can be directed in the order on the appeal to be so paid out without any petition being presented for that purpose. Robinson v. Robinson, 1 De G. M. & G. 247; 21 L. J., Ch. 111; 16 Jur. 255.

In 1814 W. died intestate seised of a freehold estate. On his death his widow entered into possession, and continued to receive the rents until 1829. W.'s heir-at-law died in 1829. In 1829 the property was taken under an act of parliament, and the purchase-money was paid into court. Upon a petition in 1829, by the widow and J., the heir of the heir-at-law of W., the rents were ordered to be paid to the widow for her life, and then to J. for his life. The widow died in 1834, and J. died in 1863. Upon a petition by those claiming under the will of J. for payment of the money out of court, a claim was made by the devisees of the heir-at-law of W., who alleged fraud and misrepresentation by the petitioners in 1829:—Held, that their claim was barred by lapse of time, and that they could not set up the case of fraud upon the petition; but leave was given them to file a bill, the order upon the petition not to be drawn up for ten days. Breach, Ex parte, 10 Jur. (N.S.) 982; 10 L. T. 396; 12 W. R. 769.

An application for a transfer of consols, purchased by means of a legacy paid into court, under the stat. 36 Geo. 3, c. 52, need not be by petition, but may be made by motion. Bennett, Ex parte, 19 L. J., Ch. 375; 15 Jur. 213.

When a fund the title to which is litigated in the cause has been brought into court, it is contrary to the practice of the court to determine the question of title upon interlocutory application, so far as to direct that the interest of the fund shall be paid to one of the parties claiming it until further order. Nedby v. Nedby, 4 Myl. & C. 367; 3 Jur. 18. Reversing 8 L. J., Ch. 23.

Where the master reported several persons entitled to the fund in court, Ld. Ch. Manners thought the proper practice was to set the cause down upon the report, and at the hearing order each person's share out, not to apply by a distinct motion for each person entitled. M'Mahon v. Wilson, 2 Moll. 343.

When there is a fund in court, and claims upon it reported, the common order to allocate it (to save expense to the estate) is to be obtained only on plaintiff's motion, unless default in him, not by the motion of a reported creditor. Anon., 2 Moll. 335.

A sum of stock, claimed as a legacy by A., was ordered by the decree to be carried over to the account of A. "subject to the further order of the court," with a direction that it should not be sold or transferred without notice to B.:—Held, that the court might upon petition, and without rehearing the former decree, order the money to be paid to B., if his title appeared to be the better of the two. Barksdale v. Abbott, 3 Russ. 186.

—— At Chambers.]—Application for payment out of court to legatees of legacies paid in under the Legacy Duty Act, 36 Geo. 3, c. 52, to be made to the judge in chambers. Batard, In re, 9 Hare (App.) xliii.

The order of the 12th November, 1856, provides that application for payment of dividends or interests of any stock or funds standing to the separate account of any person may be made at chambers, but it does not provide for the payment of principal sums at chambers; and the public notice posted up in chambers states only that no order can be made in chambers for the payment of any principal sum of money or stock above 300*l.* On asking for leave to take out a summons at chambers to obtain payment of arrears of interest above 300*l.*, the court held that the application for payment could only be made by petition. Joad v. Ripley, 3 Jur. (N.S.) 432; 5 W. R. 551.

The court having ordered certain small leaseholds to be sold, and the proceeds distributed, together with a fund in court, among numerous parties, upon the certificate of the chief clerk, in order to save expense, directed the purchasers to be served with a summons to shew cause at chambers why the proceeds should not be distributed pursuant to the order, and no cause having been shewn the proceeds were distributed by the chief clerk. Thorp v. Owen, 2 Sm. & G. Affidavit—No Incumbrances.]—It is not the course of proceedings in the master's office in England, in cases where tenant in tail of lands to be purchased with money applies to have the money paid out to him, to direct the master to advertise for outstanding creditors. T. 486.

The petitioner was tenant for life of certain lands which had been taken by the company under their act. The company having paid the purchase-money into court, and it having been duly invested, the petitioner applied to have the dividends paid to her during her life. The application was supported by the affidavit of her solicitor, stating her title to the dividends. The registrar objected that this was not the proper evidence; that the application ought to be supported by the affidavit of the applicant herself, stating her belief in her title, and that no one else was interested:—Held, that the affidavit by the petitioner in the form mentioned by the registrar, verifying the petitioner's title, and negativing any claim by any other person, is only required when payment out of court of the principal money is sought, and not where the application is for payment of the dividends only; the order was made accordingly. Braye, Ex parte, 9 Hare (App.) vii.; 16 Jur. 1129.

Upon the cause coming on on further directions, the court, on the request of the counsel for the defendants (the executors), made an order for the ratable apportionment of the fund among the creditors, on the amounts apportioned being verified by the joint affidavits of the plaintiff and one of the defendants, the executors; and that the sum apportioned under 10*l.* should be paid to the plaintiff's solicitor, on his undertaking to pay the same to the creditors respectively. An administrator petitioned for transfer and payment to him of funds in court which belonged absolutely to the intestate, who died many years ago, and which had remained standing to his separate account and had not been dealt with for thirty-six years. The school bills remaining unpaid, and the schoolmaster having presented a petition for payment of his claim out of the fund found to be due to M.:—Held, that although the schoolmaster had no lien on the fund, yet, M. having undertaken to pay the amount due to him, the court would see that the undertaking was performed; and payment to the schoolmaster ordered of the amount due, his costs of the petition to be paid by P. Siederfield v. Thacker, 18 Beav. 588.

A legacy of 500*l.* bequeathed to M., an infant, and a legacy of 7,000*l.* settled upon trust for L. and her children, were paid into court by the trustees, on separate occasions, but to one and the same account. A petition was afterwards presented on behalf of L. for the purpose of getting her legacy transferred to a separate account and of obtaining payment of the dividends to her. The petition did not state that the fund in court represented the two legacies, and in consequence of this omission, and of the amount of the fund proposed to be dealt with being stated in blank, an order was erroneously made upon the petition, under which the whole fund was transferred to the account of L.'s legacy and the dividends paid to her during her life. The solicitor who acted for the trustees on the occasion of the payment into court also acted for the petitioners, and had the carriage of the whole proceedings. After L.'s death M. attained twenty-one, and presented a petition for payment out of court of her legacy, with the accumulated dividends thereon:—Held, that the estate of L. was primarily liable for the amount of the dividends erroneously paid to her; but that, failing her estate, the solicitor was personally liable to make good to M. any deficiency there might be, and to pay all the costs occasioned by the mistake as between solicitor and client. Dangar's Trusts, In re, 58 L. J., Ch. 315; 41 Ch. D. 178; 60 L. T. 491; 37 W. R. 651.

—— Extending Time for Appealing.]—A legacy of 500*l.*, given to an infant, was paid into court under the trustee relief act, but not to the separate account of the infant. Afterwards a sum of consols, which under the same will was given in trust for a person for life, and after his death to other persons was also transferred into court under the same act and to the same account. Subsequently the 500*l.* was invested in consols. On the petition of the trustees and the tenant for life, an order was made, which by mistake directed payment of the income of the aggregate of the two sums of consols to the tenant for life. The mistake was not discovered till after the death of the tenant for life, up to which time the whole income was paid to her. The funds were still in court, and the person entitled to the consols representing the 500*l.* applied for leave to appeal from the order, notwithstanding the time for appealing therefrom had long since expired:—Held, without dismissing the application, or saying what relief could be obtained in respect of the income erroneously paid, that the proper course was to present a petition, to be served on the trustees and the legal personal representative of the tenant for life, asking that, notwithstanding the former order, the consols representing the 500*l.* might be transferred to the account of the legatee thereof. Dangar's Trusts, In re, 60 L. T. 402—C. A.

Where a fund had been paid out of court in consequence of a fraudulent representation that one of the parties beneficially interested was dead and buried, the court, on the discovery of the fraud, permitted the person to whom the fund had been paid, and who was clearly no party to the fraud, to retain the money upon his giving security that he would refund it in case it should be required, or that he would deal with it in such a manner as the court might at any time afterwards direct. Foster v. M'Gregor, 9 L. T. 473.

Jurisdiction of Court.]—A fund in court, which has, contrary to the intention of the parties, clearly proved, been included in a settlement, will only be paid out to the parties entitled under that settlement until it has been reformed; and the court has no jurisdiction, upon petition, to reform an instrument. Malet, In re, 30 Beav. 407.

On death of tenant for life the 1,500*l.* was paid into court. On a petition by the reversioners to set aside the securities on the ground of fraud, and for payment out of the fund:—Held, that the mortgage and further charge could stand as security only for the sums actually advanced, with six years' arrears of interest only. Slater's Trusts, In re, 48 L. J., Ch. 473; 11 Ch. D. 227; 40 L. T. 184; 27 W. R. 448.

In a suit instituted to restrain proceedings on bill of exchange, alleged to have been given for moneys lost at play, an injunction until the hearing of the cause or further order was obtained upon the answer of the defendant, the plaintiff paying into court the amount of the bills and interest; but at the hearing, the plaintiff having no evidence in support of his case, and the defendant in his answer denying all knowledge of the gambling transaction, out of which the bills were said to have originated; and having sworn that he gave valuable consideration for them, though as to the particulars of that consideration his statements were vague, and not very satisfactory; the bill was dismissed with costs. Under such circumstances, the decree ought to direct the fund in court to be paid to the defendant without putting him to the further prosecution of the action, or awaiting its result. Wynne v. Jackson, 2 Russ. 351; 5 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 55.

Rep. 1083; 2 W. R. 539.

A sum of 10*l.* is usually allowed, without taxation, for the costs of a petition to obtain money out of court standing to a separate account, and in which no one but the petitioners are interested. Gover v. Stilwell, 21 Beav. 182.

This was replied to by a short affidavit by the defendant, and on the petition he appeared by counsel:—Held, that the defendant was entitled to the costs of appearance. Rudge v. Weedon, 8 L. T. 567.

Where a person entitled to a share in a fund in court, and her incumbrancer or assignee is before the court, and one set of costs only is allowed in respect of that share, those costs are given to the incumbrancer or assignee. Ward v. Yates, 1 Dr. & Sm. 83; 8 W. R. 428.

Upon a petition in suit for payment of the income of a fund in court to the petitioner, the costs must be borne by the applicant. Eady v. Watson, 33 Beav. 481; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 982; 10 L. T. 285; 12 W. R. 682.

Upon a petition by a tenant for life for the payment to her of the income of a fund in court under an administration suit, the costs of all parties were ordered to be paid out of the corpus. Longuet v. Hockley, 22 L. T. 198.

When a testator has given a fund to trustees upon trust for investment in land, which is to be settled to the use of several persons successively for their lives, and the fund is paid into court in an administration suit, and has not been invested in land, the costs of a petition by the tenant for life for payment of the dividends to him are payable out of corpus. Scrivener v. Smith, L. R. 8 Eq. 310.

—— When Payable by Company.]—Where money has been paid into court under a special act providing for the costs of reinvesting the money, but not providing for the costs of any application to get the money out of court, the company must nevertheless pay the costs of an application for getting the fund out of court. Toft's Estate, In re, 2 Jur. (N.S.) 131.

Where lands, settled in the same manner, have been purchased by different railway companies and the purchase-moneys paid into court and invested, and the tenant for life afterwards dies, the orders directing payment of the dividends of the several funds to the person next entitled may all be obtained upon the same petition; and the railway companies will not in future be required to pay the costs of more than one petition. The point being a new one, the petitioner was not deprived of his additional costs out of pocket. Broke's (Lord) Estate, In re, 1 N. R. 568; 11 W. R. 505.

See also LANDS CLAUSES ACT.

—— Out of Income.]—When a fund has been paid into court for the benefit of all persons interested, the costs of all applications for payment of income ought to be paid out of the income. Evans' Trusts, In re, 41 L. J., Ch. 512; L. R. 7 Ch. 609; 26 L. T. 815; 20 W. R. 695.

—— Trustee Relief Acts.]—Respondents who make an unfounded claim to a fund, and so occasion the payment of it into court under the trustee relief acts, will be ordered to pay the costs of getting the fund out of court. Benton, In re, 43 L. J., Ch. 715.

k. STOP-ORDER.

1. When Granted.

In a contested case, the only relief to which an incumbrancer upon a fund in court is entitled, upon petition, is a restraint on the transfer of the fund, or payment of the dividends. Cook v. Collingridge, C. P. Coop. 255.

Covenant on a dissolution of partnership between solicitors, that various debts and costs should only be received by them jointly. In a suit in which some costs, the subject of such covenant, are due, a stop-order only can be obtained, but further relief against breach of the covenant, as regards those costs, must be sought by bill. Sangar v. Gardiner, C. P. Coop. 119.

Stop-order directing that a tin box in court, containing turnpike securities, should not be parted with without notice to the petitioner. Williams v. Symonds, 9 Beav. 523.

A cheque of the accountant-general in favour of A. B., but not delivered out, is not A. B.'s property, so as to be liable to be seized by the sheriff under the provision of the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 12. Leave to seize such a cheque refused, but a stop-order was granted. Courtoy v. Vincent, 15 Beav. 486; 21 L. J., Ch. 291.

Solicitor's Costs.]—No effective proceedings could be taken in a suit, in consequence of the contempt of two defendants:—Held, that the plaintiff's solicitor was entitled to a taxation of his costs, and to a stop-order on the funds. Hobson v. Shearwood, 8 Beav. 486.

Separate Estate.]—Since the Married Woman's Property Act, 1870, a stop-order constitutes a valid incumbrance on a married woman's separate estate in court. Sanger v. Sanger, 40 L. J., Ch. 372; L. R. 11 Eq. 470; 24 L. T. 649; 19 W. R. 792.

Retainer pending further Proceedings.]—By the decree, a sum in court was directed to be paid to the plaintiff. A person, not a party to the suit, claiming a portion of it as against the plaintiff, applied for a stop-order, and, having shewn a sufficient primâ facie case, the court ordered the fund to be retained, on the terms of his filing a bill within ten days to establish his right. Feistel v. King's College (Cambridge), 11 Beav. 254.

A. conveyed to B. his reversionary interest in a fund in court, and B. obtained a stop-order. When the fund fell into possession, B. presented a petition for payment to him. On the hearing of the petition, A. insisted that the purchase was invalid, being a purchase of a reversionary interest at an under-value. The court would not decide the point, but proposed to retain the funds in court for a limited time if A. would undertake to file a bill to set aside the conveyance. A. not giving the undertaking, the fund was paid out to B. Bethune v. Kennedy, 3 Beav. 462. And see S. C., 1 Myl. & C. 114.

No Fund in Court.]—Where there is no fund in court, and no order for bringing any fund into court, the court will not entertain a petition for a stop-order. Wellesley v. Mornington, 1 N. R. 13; 7 L. T. 590; 11 W. R. 17.

Stop-order granted upon a fund of a specified amount not actually in court, but to be paid in to the credit of an action under an order of the court. Shaw v. Hudson, 48 L. J., Ch. 689.

As to Whole or Part of Fund.]—Where several persons are interested in a fund in court, which cannot be immediately carried to their separate accounts, an order obtained by one of the parties interested, to prevent the fund being paid out without notice to him, will extend to the whole fund. Bergman v. Treslove, 5 L. J., Ch. 4.

Five of six children claiming that, under a will, a fund in court was divisible in sixths, and the sixth child claiming the whole, and becoming bankrupt, his assignees advertised the whole for sale. A stop-order granted on the five-sixths. Hawkesley v. Gowan, 11 L. T. 134; 12 W. R. 1100.

Assignment of Fund.]—When an assignment is made of an interest in a trust fund, part of which is in court and part in the hands of the trustees, the assignee, in order to complete his title, must, as regards the fund in court, obtain a stop-order, and as regards the fund in the hands of trustees, give notice to the trustees. Mutual Life Assurance Society v. Langley, 32 Ch. D. 460; 54 L. T. 326—C. A. Affirming 53 L. J., Ch. 996; 32 W. R. 792.

When the assignee of a reversionary interest in a trust fund gives notice of his assignment to the trustee, and the trustee afterwards pays the fund into court under the trustee relief act, setting out in his affidavit the notice so given to him, the assignee should also obtain a stop-order. Miller's Trusts, In re, 6 W. R. 238.

Where a fund in court is assigned to secure the payment of a debt, which becomes the subject of a marriage settlement, the trustees must obtain a stop-order to prevent the payment out of court without notice to them, even though the assignee had already obtained an order to prevent its payment without notice to him. And one share of the fund, belonging to the principal debtor having been paid out of court by means of an improper act of the solicitor acting for the creditor (a surety who owned another share of the fund) and the trustees of the marriage settlement, the share belonging to the surety was held to be discharged. Wheatley v. Bastow, 1 Jur. (N.S.) 222; 3 W. R. 296. And see 3 W. R. 540—L.JJ.

Property of Lunatics.]—Order, in the nature of a stop-order, granted on the application of the assignee of the interest of the sole next of kin of a lunatic. Moore, In re, 1 Macn. & G. 103.

An order, in the nature of a stop-order, to prevent a transfer without notice of funds in court belonging to a lunatic, granted, on the application of the mortgagee of the lunatic's next of kin. Kent, Ex parte, 1 H. & Tw. 214.

Order in the nature of a stop-order granted on the application of the assignees of the interest of the sole next of kin of a lunatic, but dispensing with notice to the assignees of any applications in the matter except those respecting payments to the next of kin. Pigott, In re, 3 Macn. & G. 268.

The court will not make an order in the nature of a stop-order on the estate of a lunatic in favour of an assignee of the next of kin. Wilkinson, In re, 44 L. J., Ch. 328; L. R. 10 Ch. 73; 23 W. R. 51.

Concurrent with Charging Order.]—A court of equity will make a stop-order as auxiliary to a charging order under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110. Hulkes v. Day, 10 Sim. 41; 10 L. J., Ch. 21; 4 Jur. 1125.

By the decree, an arrear of dividends on stock was ordered to be paid to the plaintiff by her trustee; shortly afterwards such arrears were, under the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 14, charged by a common-law judge with the payment of a sum of money to A. B. A petition was presented by A. B. that the trustee might pay the amount into court, and for a stop-order thereon. The petition was dismissed with costs. Newton v. Askew, 11 Beav. 446; 18 L. J., Ch. 42; 12 Jur. 531, 766.

The proviso contained in s. 14 of 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, that no proceeding shall be taken to have the benefit of the charge created under that section until after the expiration of six calendar months from the date of the charging order, does not prevent the creditor from obtaining a stop-order to restrain the debtor from receiving dividends of stock accruing within the six months. Watts v. Jefferyes, 3 Macn. & G. 372; 20 L. J., Ch. 659; 15 Jur. 783.

The correct construction of the proviso is, that although no steps can be taken to enforce immediate payment of the debt by realising the security, yet that the judgment creditor may in the meantime, by force of the order, prevent the security given him by the statute from being defeated or dismissed pro tanto, by stopping payment to the debtor of part of his security. Ib.

It is no longer necessary, as a preliminary to obtaining a stop-order on a fund standing in court to the credit of the chancery division of the high court of justice, by a person who has a judgment in an action in another division of the high court, that he should obtain a charging order in that division. Hopewell v. Barnes, 1 Ch. D. 630.

A judgment creditor may obtain a stop-order upon a fund in court to the credit of an action in the chancery division, without any charging order obtained in the division where the judgment was recovered. Shaw v. Hudson, 48 L. J., Ch. 689.

2. Practice.

Application at Chambers.] — Stop-orders, where assignor and assignee concur, must in future be made at chambers. Edmonson v. Harrison, 1 W. R. 140.

A stop-order upon a fund in court may be obtained by summons in chambers, without the consent of the assignor or person to be affected thereby. The alleged rule, that such an order must be applied for by petition in court, is not founded on authority. Wrench v. Wynne, 38 L. J., Ch. 235; 17 W. R. 198.

An application for a stop-order should be by summons in chambers, even though the mortgagor does not concur. Walsh v. Wason, 30 L. T. 743; 22 W. R. 676.

An incumbrancer presented a petition for a stop-order on a fund in court; he had not applied to the mortgagor to consent to one being granted on summons:—Held, that he must pay the difference between the costs of obtaining a stop-order on a summons at chambers and the costs of the petition. Wellesley v. Mornington, 41 L. J., Ch. 776.

Petition—Trustee Relief Act.]—A petition is the proper means of obtaining a stop-order on a fund paid into court under the Trustee Relief Act, 1847, where the fund is over 300*l.*, and the application is the first which has been made in the matter of the fund. Day's Trusts, In re, 49 L. T. 499.

Where a fund in court, paid in under the Trustee Relief Act, 1847, exceeds 1,000*l.*, and there has been no prior application in the matter of the fund, a petition, and not a summons, is the proper mode of applying, under rr. 12 and 13 of Ord. XLVI. of the Rules of Court, 1883, for a stop-order on the fund so paid in. Toogood's Trusts, In re, 56 L. T. 703.

Service on Parties Interested.] — A party intending to apply for a stop-order must give notice of his application to all other persons having like orders on the fund. Hulkes v. Day, 10 Sim. 41; 10 L. J., Ch. 21; 4 Jur. 1125.

A petition for a stop-order was served not only on the assignor, but on the other parties to the cause. The petitioner was ordered to pay the costs of the latter. Glazbrook v. Gillatt, 9 Beav. 611.

Where a contingent interest in a fund in court has been mortgaged, and the mortgagee places a stop-order on the fund, but the mortgagor dies before his interest vests, the persons ultimately entitled to the fund, upon applying for payment out, need not serve such mortgagee. Vernon v. Croft, 58 L. T. 919; 36 W. R. 778.

The assignor, though party to the cause, must, under the General Order of April, 1841, be served with the petition for a stop-order. Parsons v. Groome, 4 Beav. 521.

Prior to the 5th Order of April, 1841, it was held that an incumbrancer on a portion of an undivided fund in court, cannot obtain a stop-order on it without serving the other parties interested with the petition for that purpose. Trezevant v. Frazer, 3 Beav. 283; 4 Jur. 982.

Principles upon which it was considered necessary, previous to the General Order of 3rd April, 1841, to serve all parties interested with an application for a stop-order. Day v. Croft, 4 Beav. 34.

When notice of stop-order must be given to all persons interested in the fund. Lawrance v. Baldwin, 2 Jur. 151.

Where a petition for a stop-order had not been served in time:—Held, that an order nisi, including a stop-order, might be made upon the petition ex parte. Nowell, In re, 9 Jur. (N.S.) 512; 11 W. R. 658.

Where a judgment creditor has a charging order at law upon the interest of a judgment debtor in a fund in court, a stop-order applied for in the usual way is the proper course, and an order nisi made in the court, upon a petition for a stop-order not served two clear days before the application, was discharged with costs. S. C., 11 W. R. 896.

Evidence—Sufficiency.]—The stop-order can only be obtained upon admission or proof of the incumbrance, even though the party in the cause claiming the fund consents to such order being granted without prejudice. Winchelsea v. Garrety, 1 Beav. 223.

Upon an application for a stop-order, the assignor's right to the fund in court must be shewn either by the proceedings or by affidavit. Quarman v. Williams, 5 Beav. 133.

The court will not grant a stop-order, unless it is stated in the petition how the interest of the party in the fund sought to be affected arose. Lambert v. Hutchinson, 13 L. J., Ch. 336.

Requisites for obtaining the stop-order, under the General Order of April, 1841. Wood v. Vincent, 4 Beav. 419.

Consent of Parties.]—When a stop-order is made in chambers on the application of a mortgagee, with the consent of the mortgagor, such consent may be given by any person acting for the mortgagor under a power of attorney, and it is not necessary that such person should be the mortgagor's solicitor on the record. Lister v. Tidd, 15 W. R. 917.

The court will not, on the petition of the assignor and assignee of a fund in court, grant an order that no part of the fund assigned be paid to the assignor, or any person claiming under him. Symonds v. James, 7 Jur. 11.

Order—Without Prejudice.]—A stop-order does not affect any right, and it is therefore unnecessary to specify that it is made "without prejudice." Lucas v. Peacock, 9 Beav. 177.

Where a fund is paid into court under the trustee relief act, and a creditor of a party interested in the fund applies for a stop-order and serves the trustees, who claim a lien for costs against the same party, the court will not determine the question of lien, but grant the stop-order without prejudice to that question, and give the trustees their costs of the petition as against the petitioner. Blunt, In re, 10 W. R. 379.

—— Confined to specified Portion of Fund.]—A stop-order on a fund in court, however general in its terms, is nevertheless confined in its operations to the specific portion of the fund in respect of a dealing with which the order is made. Macleod v. Buchanan, 4 De G. J. & S. 265; 3 N. R. 623; 33 L. J., Ch. 306; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 223; 10 L. T. 9; 12 W. R. 514.

——Form.]—Form of stop-order when husband and wife join in an assignment of the wife's reversionary choses in action. Moreau v. Polley, 1 De G. & Sm. 143.

Quære, whether in future care should not be taken in drawing up stop-orders to express on the face of them plainly whether capital or income is to be restrained, and whether, in all cases where their operation is not so limited, they ought not to be treated at the paymaster-general's office as extending to both capital and income. Mack v. Postle, 63 L. J., Ch. 593; [1894] 2 Ch. 449; 8 R. 339; 71 L. T. 153.

—— Collateral Matter.]—A married woman became entitled under a will to a sum of about 600*l.*, and in an administration suit she consented to the payment of this sum to her husband; she was also entitled in reversion, upon the death of an annuitant, to a share of a sum of stock, which was set apart for the payment of the annuity, which share amounted to 346*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* During the life of the annuitant the married woman and her husband assigned this reversionary interest for 70*l.*, and the assignee obtained a stop-order upon the fund. The husband subsequently became insolvent:—Held, that upon the death of the annuitant, the married woman may have her equity to a settlement discussed and decided upon petition, although the assignee was not a party to the administration suit; held, also, that the whole fund should be settled on the married woman and her children. Scott v. Spashett, 3 Macn. & G. 599; 21 L. J., Ch. 349; 16 Jur. 157.

Semble, that the assignee, by obtaining a stop-order, brought himself before the court sufficiently to enable it to deal with the case. Ib.

—— Mortgagee a Trustee.]—A. being entitled to a fund in court, mortgaged the same to B. to secure repayment of an advance, and executed to him a bond of even date, in which he was joined by C. and D. as co-sureties. A stop-order on the application of B., and at the request of C. and D., was obtained against the fund. C. was ultimately called on to repay the money; and after the payment by her the stop-order was removed by A., with the consent of B. C. had not taken the precaution of procuring an assignment of the mortgage at the time of payment:—Held, that she was not thereby debarred from claiming the benefit of such mortgage in respect of the fund therein comprised, the mortgagee being a trustee for her of such stop-order as well as of the other securities which he held for the repayment of the debt, which she, as surety, had been compelled to discharge. Allen v. De Lisle, 5 W. R. 158.

Costs.]—Where an incumbrancer of a fund in court obtains an order for payment out of a fund in court of his principal and interest and his costs as mortgagee, the taxing master will not, unless specially directed, include the expenses of obtaining a stop-order; but if the incumbrancer is entitled to those costs, they should be expressly mentioned in the order. Waddilove v. Taylor, 6 Hare, 307; 17 L. J., Ch. 408.

A fund having become distributable, and a mortgagee, with notice that the parties entitled had presented a petition for payment out of court to the mortgagee, and to themselves, having applied for a stop-order, was refused his costs of his application. Hoole v. Roberts, 12 Jur. 108.

D. having a lien on a fund by express agreement with the parties entitled to it, they by their acts depart from that contract, and D. is obliged to get a stop-order, and appears to ask for those costs and claim his lien:—Held, that he was entitled to the costs of the stop-order, and of his appearance. Grimsby v. Webster, 8 W. R. 725.

Parties having a claim upon a fund in court are not entitled as a general rule, and under all circumstances, to the costs of getting a stop-order. Ib.

An incumbrancer presented a petition for a stop-order on a fund in court; he had not applied to the mortgagor to consent to one being granted on summons:—Held, that he must pay the difference between the costs of obtaining a stop-order on a summons at chambers, and the costs of the petition. Wellesley v. Mornington, 41 L. J., Ch. 776.

Solicitors who had obtained a charging order for costs due to them, and had afterwards obtained a stop-order, were not allowed the costs of appearing by counsel at the hearing on further consideration. Mildmay v. Quicke, 46 L. J., Ch. 667; 6 Ch. D. 553; 25 W. R. 788.

3. Priorities.

According to Date of Stop-orders.]—Priority obtained on a fund in court by a puisne incumbrancer who had procured the first stop-order thereon. Swayne v. Swayne, 11 Beav. 463. And see Dearle v. Hall, 3 Russ. 1; 27 R. R. 1; Loveridge v. Cooper, 3 Russ. 30; Timson v. Ramsbottom, 2 Keen, 35.

A., who was entitled to a residuary fund in the hands of his father's army agents, charged it, first, to the agents, and afterwards to M. The agents voluntarily paid the whole fund into court in an administration suit. M. obtained the first stop-order thereon :—Held, that M. had priority over the agents. Ib.

A., being entitled to a reversionary interest in a fund in court, assigns it to B., and afterwards to C. C. obtains an order that the fund shall not be transferred without notice to him, and has the order entered at the accountant-general's office :—Held, that he thereby gained priority over B., who had not taken similar precautions. Greening v. Beckford, 5 Sim. 195.

By his will a testator devised and bequeathed his real and personal estate to two trustees to sell the same, and, after paying an annuity, to divide the proceeds among a certain class, of which F. P. D. was one. A suit was instituted for the administration of the testator's estate. F. P. D., by deed, dated in 1837, assigned his share to B. D. (one of the trustees), to secure advances. By deed, dated in 1844, he assigned his share to S. S., to secure advances, and notice of that deed was given by S. S. to the trustees. By an order in the cause, dated in 1845, the real estates of the testator were directed to be sold, and the produce to be paid into court and invested, and the stock representing the purchase-money stood to the credit of the cause. In 1846 C. J. obtained and registered a judgment against F. P. D., and by a judge's order, under the statutes 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, and 3 & 4 Vict. c. 82, it was ordered that the stock should stand charged with the amount for which the judgment was obtained ; and the judge's order was filed in November, 1848, in the office of the accountant-general. B. D., the first assignee, took no steps beyond his deed, nor did S. S. obtain any stop-order :—Held, under these circumstances, that C. J. did not obtain any priority over S. S. Bearcliffe v. Dorrington, 19 L. J., Ch. 331 ; 14 Jur. 1101.

The priority of incumbrancers on a fund in court is determined by the dates of their stop-orders ; and in ascertaining this priority, the court will disregard all divisions of time less than a day, and allow all incumbrancers who obtain stop-orders the same day to rank pari passu. Kent, Ex parte, Rawlins' Estate, In re, 19 W. R. 596.

A first assignee of A.'s interest in a fund obtained a stop-order which was subsequent in date to a duly registered composition deed, by which he had assigned all his property for the benefit of his creditors. The trustee of the composition deed also obtained a stop-order subsequently to that of the first assignee :—Held, that the first stop-order, although subsequent in date to the registered composition deed, prevailed over it, and entitled the first assignee to the fund. Birmingham Banking Co. v. Carter, 20 W. R. 354.

A legatee of a reversionary interest under a will, which had been paid into court in an administration suit, presented a petition for liquidation in March, 1873, and a trustee was appointed. In July he assigned his interest in the legacy to J., who obtained a stop-order on the fund in court. In November, 1876, he assigned his interest to E., without notice of the liquidation, who also obtained a stop-order on the fund. Afterwards, the trustee in liquidation obtained a stop-order. The plaintiffs purchased the interest of the trustee in liquidation and of J., and contracted to sell the legacy to the defendant. The defendant required E.'s mortgage to be abstracted as an incumbrance on the estate :—Held, by Jessel, M.R., that E. having obtained a stop-order before the trustee in liquidation, his interest was prior to that of the trustees and was an incumbrance on the estate. Bright's Settlement, In re (13 Ch. D. 413 ; 42 L. T. 308 ; 28 W. R. 551), considered :—Held, by the court of appeal, that the question of the priority of E.'s incumbrance was too doubtful to justify the vendor in omitting it from the abstract ; and the decision of the Master of the Rolls was accordingly affirmed. Palmer v. Locke, 18 Ch. D. 381 ; 45 L. T. 229.

The assignee of a fund in court, whether in bankruptcy or otherwise, must obtain a stop-order to perfect his title ; therefore an assignee for value who obtained a stop-order, although not until after the bankruptcy of the assignor, had priority over the assignee in bankruptcy, who had omitted to obtain a stop-order. Stuart v. Cockrell, 39 L. J., Ch. 127 ; L. R. 8 Eq. 607.

"Order and Disposition."]—A person entitled to a contingent reversionary interest in stock (standing in the name of the accountant-general, to the account of himself and others) assigned the same to A., his solicitor, absolutely, who obtained a stop-order. A., acting as solicitor of B., mortgaged the share so assigned to him to B., but neither B. nor A. obtained any stop-order in respect of the mortgage, nor gave any notice of the mortgage to any person having control over the fund. A. became bankrupt, and afterwards the reversion fell into possession, and the fund became distributable, when the share of the party originally entitled was transferred to the account of himself and A., and others, his incumbrancers. The mortgagee of A. petitioned for payment of this share, but the assignees in bankruptcy claimed the funds as being in the order and disposition of A. :—Held, that as the mortgagee had not obtained a stop-order, nor given notice, he was not entitled against the assignees. Bartlett v. Bartlett, 1 De G. & J. 127 ; 26 L. J., Ch. 577 ; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 705 ; 5 W. R. 541.

Where all the interest of a residuary legatee, under a will, was mortgaged, and part of the testator's estate consisted of a fund paid into court, in a suit for the administration of his estate, and another part had been paid into court, not in that suit, but under the trustee relief act, and the mortgagee gave notice to the executor under the will, but did not obtain a stop-order on the funds in court, and the mortgagor became bankrupt :—Held, that the notice to the executor was sufficient, and affected every portion of the estate, although part of such estate might have been paid into court in a suit, or under the trustee relief act, and therefore that it was not necessary for the mortgagee to obtain a stop-order on the funds in court, in order to take those funds out of the order and disposition of the bankrupt. Thompson v. Tomkins, 2 Dr. & Sm. 8 ; 31 L. J., Ch. 633 ; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 185 ; 6 L. T. 305 ; 10 W. R. 310.

The solicitor of the plaintiff in a suit in chancery gave the petitioners a charge upon the costs due to him in the suit, and served notice of the charge on the parties to the suit. Afterwards, the cause coming on for further directions, a certain fund was directed to be paid into court, and the solicitor's costs to be paid out of it. The petitioners obtained no stop-order on the fund. The solicitor having become bankrupt, the petitioners applied to have the fund transferred to them :—Held, that the petitioners had done all that could be reasonably done for rendering their security efficacious ; that the fund was therefore not in the order and disposition of the bankrupt with the consent of the true owners; and the court ordered it to be transferred to the petitioners. Day v. Day, 1 De G. & J. 44; 26 L. J., Ch. 585; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 782; 5 W. R. 701.

Order charging Cash standing to Credit.]—A charging order upon cash standing to the credit of the debtor in the chancery division in the name of the paymaster-general may be made ex parte, and in order to give effect to it it is not necessary to obtain a stop-order; but notice given to the paymaster-general will be sufficient to secure priority. Brereton v. Edwards, 21 Q. B. D. 226; 60 L. T. 5; 37 W. R. 47—C. A. Affirming, on other grounds, 52 J. P. 647.

Where the fund is standing in the name of the accountant-general of the court of chancery, the practice of the office is to enter a memorandum of every charging order left at the office; but such notice is not treated as any restraint, nor as equivalent to a stop-order. No entry is made of the notice of any other assignment. The accountant-general is not a trustee of the funds committed to him, but merely the agent of the court. The trustees who have paid the fund into court are the trustees of it until the court has in some way dealt with it, and then the court becomes the trustee. Therefore, notice to the accountant-general of an assignment of funds in his hands is of no avail against a stop-order afterwards obtained by a subsequent purchaser without notice. Warburton v. Hill, 1 Kay, 470; 23 L. J., Ch. 633; 2 Eq. R. 441; 2 W. R. 365.

Fund carried to separate Account.]—A stop-order upon a person's share of a fund in court, is not affected by the carrying over of the share to the separate account of such person and his incumbrancer. Lister v. Tidd, L. R. 4 Eq. 462; 15 W. R. 975.

In an administration action under an order made in the presence of the plaintiffs, a fund was carried to the separate account of an annuitant and her issue, the dividends thereon to be paid to her for her life, and she charged her interest in favour of persons who obtained stop-orders thereon. She was afterwards found to be indebted to the estate, and the plaintiffs sought to have the dividends applied in satisfaction of her liability in priority to the charges she had created:—Held, that the effect of carrying the fund to a separate account being to release it from the general questions in the cause, the persons who had made the advances on the faith of the order were entitled to priority over the plaintiffs' claim. Eyton, In re, Bartlett v. Charles, 59 L. J., Ch. 733; 45 Ch. D. 458; 63 L. T. 336; 39 W. R. 135.

Administration Action—Creditors.]—In an administration suit all the certified debts were paid, and the residuary legatees were declared entitled to the estate of the testator subject to an annuity, to provide for which a fund was retained in court to the credit of the cause. The fund in court was assigned for value by the residuary legatees, and stop-orders were obtained. Afterwards other creditors of the testator established their claim in another suit, to which the executor of the testator and the residuary legatees were parties:—Held, that these creditors were entitled to payment out of the fund in court in priority to the assignees of the residuary legatees. Hooper v. Smart, 1 Ch. D. 90.

Undertaking to Pay.]—Where a person who is liable to pay a debt obtains an order for payment to him of that sum out of a fund in court on his undertaking to pay it to the proper party, the latter is entitled to receive the amount though it has subsequently been assigned to a person who obtains a stop-order. Siederfield v. Thacker, 18 Beav. 588.

Restraint on Capital or Income.]—A person entitled to a life interest in a fund in court having settled such interest on his marriage, subsequently, without disclosing the settlement, mortgaged his interest, and the mortgagees obtained a series of stop-orders on the fund, in none of which was the income of the fund expressly mentioned:—Held, that, upon the true construction of the stop-orders the mortgagees were entitled to the income of the fund in priority to the trustees of the settlement. Mack v. Postle, 63 L. J., Ch. 593; [1894] 2 Ch. 449; 8 R. 339; 71 L. T. 153.

Assignment of further Share of Fund.]—Assignees of shares in a fund in court obtained a stop-order, which extended over the whole fund; they afterwards became assignees of another share, but obtained no other stop-order:—Held, that a subsequent assignee of that share without notice, who had obtained a stop-order, would have priority over them. Macleod v. Buchanan, 4 De G. J. & S. 265; 3 N. R. 623; 33 L. J., Ch. 306; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 223; 10 L. T. 9; 12 W. R. 514.

Notice to Trustees.]—A first incumbrancer on a reversionary legacy gave due notice to the trustees. A fund was afterwards brought into court to provide for the legacy, and a second incumbrancer obtained the first stop-order on it:—Held, that he did not thereby obtain priority over the first incumbrancer. Livesey v. Harding, 23 Beav. 141.

As against a stop-order obtained by an incumbrancer upon a fund in court in an administration suit, and in respect of which orders have been made directing payment of interest to the parties entitled, notice to the trustees, though given by another incumbrancer before the stop-order was obtained, does not give priority. Pinnock v. Bailey, 52 L. J., Ch. 880; 23 Ch. D. 497; 48 L. T. 811; 31 W. R. 912.

A stop-order on a fund in court, in an action to administer the trusts of an original settlement, obtained by an assignee of a cestui que trust's interest in the fund under a derivative settlement, does not give the assignee priority over an earlier assignee who has given notice, though subsequently to the stop-order being obtained, to the trustee of the derivative settlement. Stephens v. Green, 64 L. J., Ch. 546; [1895] 2 Ch. 148; 12 R. 252; 72 L. T. 574; 43 W. R. 465—C. A.

Notice of Prior Incumbrance to Second Incumbrancer.]—A second incumbrancer of a fund in court, who at the time of taking his security had notice of the existence of the first incumbrance, cannot, by obtaining a stop-order, gain priority over the first incumbrancer, even although the latter never obtains a stop-order. Holmes, In re, 55 L. J., Ch. 33; 29 Ch. D. 786—C. A.

An incumbrancer who obtains a stop-order on a fund in court does not lose his priority over a previous incumbrancer who has obtained no stop-order, by the fact that he had notice of the previous incumbrance at the time of obtaining the stop-order, if he had no notice of it when he took his security. Elder v. Maclean (5 W. R. 447) observed upon. Mutual Life Assurance Society v. Langley, 32 Ch. D. 460 ; 54 L. T. 326 —C. A. Affirming 53 L. J., Ch. 996 ; 32 W. R. 791.

A trustee who had himself made advances on a fund which was being administered by the court should have obtained a stop-order on the fund, and not having done so was postponed to another incumbrancer, who had obtained a stop-order. A. and B. made advances to C. upon his share in a fund which was being administered by the court. A.'s advance was made long prior to B.'s, but A. did not obtain a stop-order but B. did. Between the date of B.'s advance and the date of his stop-order, an order was made directing payment to A. of part of the fund in court in part satisfaction of A.'s debt. B., who was the plaintiff in the cause, had the carriage of this order. On the question whether the debt of A. or B. had priority :—Held, that as B. had notice of A.'s debt by the order directing payment to him, A. was entitled to priority over B. Elder v. Maclean, 3 Jur. (N.S.) 283 ; 5 W. R. 447.

l. PAYMASTER OR ACCOUNTANT-GENERAL.

Duties and Liabilities.]—Where money is directed, by act of parliament, to be paid to the accountant-general, he is bound by the act to receive it, and the court will not make an order for that purpose. Anon., 1 Ves. J. 56.

Where a decree directed a sum to be paid into the hands of the accountant-general, he refused to receive a part of the sum without an order. Payne v. Collier, 1 Ves. J. 170.

The accountant-general of the court of chancery has no right to attend to any order inconsistent with, or varying the order of this court, without its special direction so to do. Gore v. Gore, 4 Ir. Eq. R. 164.

The accountant-general of the court of chancery is not a trustee of the funds committed to him, but merely the agent of the court. Warburton v. Hill, 1 Kay, 470 ; 23 L. J., Ch. 633 ; 2 Eq. R. 441 ; 2 W. R. 365.

Where the fund is standing in the name of the accountant-general of the court of chancery, the practice of the office is to enter a memorandum of every charging order left at the office ; but such notice is not treated as any restraint, nor as equivalent to a stop-order. No entry is made of the notice of any other assignment. The accountant-general is not a trustee of the funds committed to him, but merely the agent of the court. The trustees who have paid the fund into court are the trustees of it until the court has in some way dealt with it, and then the court becomes the trustee. Therefore, notice to the accountant-general of an assignment of funds in his hands is of no avail against a stop-order afterwards obtained by a subsequent purchaser without notice. Ib.

Brokerage.]—Where bank stock is transferred to the accountant-general with a direction to pay the dividends to the tenant for life only a percentage off the dividends is deducted, unless otherwise ordered by the court. Dale v. Hayes, 2 Sm. & G. (App.) vii.

Upon a petition to invest the purchase-money of lands purchased by a railway company, the whole purchase-money was ordered to be invested, without deducting the brokerage thereon, the petitioner undertaking to pay such brokerage, and the railway company was ordered to pay the petitioner the amount of the brokerage paid by him. Kendal and Windermere Ry., In re, Braithwaite's Trust, 1 Eq. Rep. 163 ; 1 Sm. & G. (App.) xv. ; 22 L. J., Ch. 915 ; 17 Jur. 753.

Investment of money paid into court by a railway company was ordered to be made without deduction for brokerage ; such brokerage being paid by the petitioner, and allowed him in his costs against the company. Wilson, In re, 1 W. R. 504.

In the usual railway purchase-money investment petition, the investment is ordered deducting brokerage, the company paying such brokerage to the tenant for life with the other costs. Harborough, Ex parte, 2 Eq. Rep. 320 ; 23 L. J., Ch. 260 ; 17 Jur. 1045 ; 2 W. R. 53.

Railway purchase-money invested in 1844, and asked to be paid out by trustees of a settlement to mortgagees on the property, and that the company might pay brokerage both of investment and selling out, as well as costs of tenant for life and mortgagees appearing separately :—Held, that the investment being made before the recent rule of deducting brokerage made no difference, but it would be payable by the company, except in this case there had been no taxation of costs of investment, and therefore the company were only liable to brokerage on selling out ; and that mortgagees and tenants for life had a right to appear separately and have their costs. Legh's Settled Estate, In re, 2 W. R. 109.

On the usual petition for investment of railway purchase-money, a reference to the brokerage as payable by the company forms part of the order. New College (Oxford) Ex parte, Buckinghamshire Ry., In re, 2 W. R. 2.

Cheques.]—A cheque of the accountant-general was alleged to have been accidentally destroyed. The court, though not satisfied with the evidence of its destruction, directed the issue of a new cheque, on the ground that the other cheque, being more than a year old, would not be paid if presented. Taylor v. Scrivens, 1 Beav. 571.

The accountant-general had drawn a cheque in favour of a party who was entitled to a sum of money standing in the bank to the credit of the cause. Upon the application of a judgment creditor, an order was made to prevent the cheque from being delivered, without further order, to the party entitled to the fund. Robinson v. Wood, 5 Beav. 388 ; 12 L. J., Ch. 93.

W. C., being in receipt of an annuity payable out of stock standing in the name of the accountant-general, became indebted to F. C., who brought an action against him and obtained a judgment, upon which a fieri facias was issued, but nothing was found upon which to execute it. Upon half-a-year's annuity falling due, F. C. obtained an order stopping the accountant-general from parting with the cheque, but upon a petition the court declined to make an order authorising the sheriff to seize the cheque, or to direct it to be dealt with as if it was standing in the name of a trustee, and the petition was dismissed. The court, however, continued the order stopping the accountant-general from parting with the cheque. Courtoy v. Vincent, 15 Beav. 486 ; 21 L. J., Ch. 291.

A judgment creditor, on ascertaining that a sum of money was about to be paid in a cause to his debtor, applied by petition to the court that the sheriff might be at liberty to seize in the accountant-general's office a cheque, by means of which the sum of money was to be paid out to the debtor:—Held, that under s. 12 of 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, the cheque was liable to seizure, and that inasmuch as the cheque was in the hands of the accountant-general the application to the court was proper. Watts v. Jefferyes, 3 Macn. & G. 422; 15 Jur. 435.

In a creditors' suit an order is made for payment to four persons named in the master's report, and the cheque is drawn payable at the accountant-general's office in favour of the four. Two of those parties being dead, the accountant-general refuses to pay to the two:—Held, that the words "survivor or survivors of them" may be inserted in the order. Jefferys v. Smith, 11 W. R. 479.

Effect of Judicature Acts.]—In all cases at common law which are not provided for by the judicature acts, the proceedings are to be as they were before those acts; in all cases within the judicature acts, where no special steps in proceedings are provided, the proceedings are to be as nearly like as they can be to analogous proceedings before those acts—Per Brett, L.J. Jackson v. Litchfield, 51 L. J., Q. B. 327; 8 Q. B. D. 477; 46 L. T. 518; 30 W. R. 531.

The judicature acts and rules deal with procedure only, and do not confer any new right of action. British South Africa Co. v. Companhia de Moçambique, 63 L. J., Q. B. 70; [1893] A. C. 602; 6 R. 1; 69 L. T. 604—H. L. (E.)

An action in respect of a sum of less than 10*l.* cannot be maintained in the chancery division, the judicature acts not having enlarged the jurisdiction of the high court. Westbury-on-Severn Sanitary Authority v. Meredith, 55 L. J., Ch. 744; 30 Ch. D. 387; 52 L. T. 839; 34 W. R. 217—C. A. [By Rules of Supreme Court, 1883, the Chancery Consolidated General Orders of 1860 are repealed.]

—— Most Convenient Practice adopted when no express Provision.]—In cases where no rule of practice is laid down by the new orders, and there is a variance in the old practice of the chancery and common law courts, that practice is to prevail which is considered by the court most convenient. Newbiggin-by-the-Sea Gas Co. v. Armstrong, 49 L. J., Ch. 231; 13 Ch. D. 310; 41 L. T. 637; 28 W. R. 217—C. A.

When the rules of practice at common law and in equity do not agree, the more convenient practice is to be adopted. Thomas v. Palin, 21 Ch. D. 367; 47 L. T. 208; 30 W. R. 716—C. A.

"Cause then pending."]—A judgment was delivered before the rules of 1883 came into operation, by which the action was dismissed and the plaintiff was ordered to pay the costs. The taxing-master's certificate was made after the rules of 1883 had come into operation:—Held, that the latter rules applied as the action was a "cause then pending" within the meaning of the preface of the latter rules. Boswell v. Coaks, 57 L. J., Ch. 101; 57 L. T. 742; 36 W. R. 65—C. A.

Cause or Proceeding pending.]—A decree was made upon motion for decree by a vice-chancellor before the judicature act came into operation. No petition of appeal had been presented:—Held, that there was no cause, matter or proceeding pending within the Judicature Act, 1873, s. 22; that the appeal must be prosecuted in accordance with the new practice, and that no direction of the court as to the form and manner of proceeding was necessary. Bartlam v. Yates, 1 Ch. D. 13; 33 L. T. 338; 24 W. R. 19.

—— Whether New or Old Practice applicable.]—An answer prepared previously to the 1st November, but sworn on the 3rd November, 1875, was entitled "In Chancery." The clerk of records and writs objected to file it, on the ground that it should have been entitled "In the High Court of Justice, Chancery Division":—Held, that under the provisions of the directions of the 3rd November, 1875, the heading was correct, and that the answer should be filed. Barwick v. Yeadon Local Board, 33 L. T. 322; 24 W. R. 23.

In a suit pending on the 1st November, 1875, in which notice of motion has not been given under the old practice, the plaintiff must, at the time when he would have given such notice, join issue under the new practice, without filing affidavits in support of his case, unless by consent or special leave obtained on notice for the purpose. Att.-Gen. v. Willshire, 1 Ch. D. 89.

When a defendant in a suit pending on the 1st November, 1875, had not appeared, and failed to put in an answer:—Held, that the cause should proceed under the new practice, and the bill be treated as a statement of claim, so that the plaintiff might set down the cause on motion for judgment, under the Judicature Act, Ord. XXIX. r. 10. Provident Permanent Building Society v. Greenhill, 45 L. J., Ch. 272; 1 Ch. D. 624.

In a suit to set aside a settlement on the ground of fraud and surprise on the plaintiff, evidence was filed in reply tending to shew that he, at the time of executing the settlement, was of infirm mind. Upon the hearing of a motion for leave to use this evidence (which had been objected to as not being properly evidence in reply), the plaintiff asked for leave to amend the bill and go into fresh evidence. The cause was at issue before the 1st November, 1875; and the hearing had been fixed, and only accidentally postponed. Leave was given to the plaintiff to amend the bill, and go into further evidence. Roe v. Davies, 2 Ch. D. 729; 23 W. R. 606.

The court will not, on an ex parte application, direct proceedings in a pending suit to be continued under the old practice. Perkins v. Slater, 1 Ch. D. 83; 24 W. R. 39.

An application for leave to issue a writ of attachment, for the enforcement of an order perfected before the commencement of the judicature acts, cannot be made ex parte, but only upon notice, in accordance with the Judicature Act, 1875, Ord. XLIV. r. 2. Anon., 24 W. R. 103.

In a suit pending on the 2nd November, 1875, the defendant, being infirm, could not put in an answer nor be attached for contempt. Leave was given to proceed to take the bill pro confesso, under the old practice. Culley v. Buttifant, 45 L. J., Ch. 200; 1 Ch. D. 84: 24 W. R. 55.

A suit in which a decree had been made, and which had become abated before the judicature act, revived according to the old practice. Crane v. Loftus, 24 W. R. 93.

Semble, that applications for an order to carry on proceedings under the Judicature Act 1875, Ord. L. r. 4, may be made to a judge at chambers. Ib.

In a suit pending on the 1st November, 1875, an attachment for want of answer may issue against a defendant under the old practice. Garling v. Royds, 45 L. J., Ch. 56; 1 Ch. D. 81; 25 W. R. 123.

—— Power to Order Transfer.]—The court of appeal has no jurisdiction to order the transfer of a suit instituted in the court of chancery before the judicature acts came into operation from the court of one vice-chancellor to that of another. The Lord Chancellor alone has jurisdiction to make such an order. Hutley, In re, Beards v. Putt, 33 L. T. 337.

The court of appeal has no jurisdiction to make an order for the transfer of a matter commenced by petition under the statutory jurisdication of the court of chancery before the Judicature Act, 1873, came into operation, from one judge to another. Boyd, In re, 1 Ch. D. 12.

Power of Judges to make Rules.] — The 22 & 23 Vict. c. 21, s. 26, gave power to the barons of the exchequer to make rules as to the process, practice and mode of pleading on the revenue side of the court, and to apply the common law procedure acts to that side of the court:—Held, that this power did not authorise the barons to make a rule giving a right of appeal on motions for a new trial, for a power to regulate the practice of a court implies no power to alter the extent or nature of the jurisdiction, and it is not to be presumed, without the clearest language of the legislature, that an inferior court should be entitled at discretion to impose jurisdiction on a superior court. Att.-Gen. v. Sillem, 4 N. R. 29; 10 H. L. Cas. 704; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 446; 10 L. T. 434; 12 W. R. 641.

The rules of Reg. Gen., H. T., 16 Vict., change the practice only as to written rules and rules by statute; all unwritten rules remain unchanged in so far as they are not inconsistent with the new rules. Begg v. Forbes, 13 C. B. 614; 2 C. L. R. 856; 23 L. J., C. P. 222.

The Lord Chancellor cannot, under the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, make orders altering the practice of the court as regulated by the consolidated general orders, without the advice and assistance of three other judges in chancery. The general orders of the court of the 6th October, 1866, are therefore invalid. Short v. Roberts, L. R. 2 Ch. 13; 15 L. T. 238. Affirming 12 Jur. (N.S.) 991; 15 W. R. 91.

The general orders in bankruptcy are made by the Lord Chancellor under the act of 1869, s. 78, and no question as to their validity can be entertained by the court. Davies, In re, 21 L. T. 685.

By the 33rd order of the 8th of May, 1845, having, under 3 & 4 Vict. c. 94, and 4 & 5 Vict. c. 52, the force of parliamentary enactment, power was given to the court in all suits to order service of a subpœna upon a defendant residing abroad. The 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, abolished the subpœna and substituted for it the service of a copy of the bill, and empowered the judges of the court to make general rules and orders for carrying the purposes of the act into effect, and for regulating the times and mode and form of procedure. By the 7th rule of the 10th of the consolidated orders, the court is authorised to order service of a copy of the bill upon a defendant residing abroad:—Held, that this, being only an adaptation of the practice to the existing course and form of procedure, was an order which it was within the power of the judges of the court to make. Drummond v. Drummond, 36 L. J., Ch. 153; L. R. 2 Ch. 32; 15 L. T. 337. Affirming 14 W. R. 828.

The consolidated orders, and all other orders of the court made since the 3 & 4 Vict. c. 94, derive a statutory force from that act. Ib.

The general orders of 1860 have an equal statutory force with those of 1845. Ib.

The order of November 11th, 1862, r. 26, allowing interest on simple contract debts from the date of a winding-up order, is invalid, as not authorised by the Companies Act of 1862. Herefordshire Banking Co., In re, 36 L. J., Ch. 806; L. R. 4 Eq. 250; 17 L. T. 58; 15 W. R. 1056.

The 26th rule of the general order of November, 1862, is ultra vires. East of England Banking Co., In re, L. R. 4 Ch. 14; 19 L. T. 299; 17 W. R. 18.

Rule 2 (7) of Ord. LV. of the Rules of the Supreme Court, 1883, though it affects the jurisdiction, and not merely the procedure of the court, is not ultra vires, being in accordance with the power conferred by 18 & 19 Vict. c. 136, s. 16, and in fact intended to be made under the powers of that act, as well as under those conferred by the judicature acts. London Corporation, Ex parte, 53 L. J., Ch. 6; 25 Ch. D. 384; 49 L. T. 437; 32 W. R. 87.

Inherent Powers of Court of Chancery.]—The court of chancery has an inherent power, quite independently of statutory authority, to make orders regulating its own procedure. Beavan v. Mornington (Countess), 8 H. L. Cas. 525; 30 L. J., Ch. 663; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1123; 8 W. R. 669.

By the 5th section of the General Order of the Court of Chancery of the 7th August, 1852, it is provided, "that no inrolment of any decree, order or dismission shall be allowed after the expiration of five years from the date thereof." B., for the purpose of appealing to the House of Lords, applied to the Lord Chancellor for leave to inrol a decree, notwithstanding the lapse of five years. The application was refused:—Held, that although the order of 1852 was practically to shorten the time of appeal allowed by the standing orders of the House of Lords, the order of 1852 was not ultra vires and void. Ib.

The time for inrolling decrees is matter of mere procedure, which the court of chancery, by its inherent authority, may regulate. Ib.

Dispensing with Compliance—By Court.]—Jurisdiction or discretionary power of the court by the effect of the statute 8 & 9 Vict. c. 105, s. 2, to vary or relax the terms of the general orders of August, 1841. Medhurst v. Allison, 4 Hare, 479.

To prevent a supersedeas under the General Order in Bankruptcy (26th June, 1793), the strongest proof required of the purpose bonâ fide to prosecute the commission prevented by accident, illness, adjudication too late for the Gazette, &c. Freeman, Ex parte, 1 Ves. & B. 43.

Particular circumstances would take a case out of the general order (26th June, 1793). Ib.

It is no objection to the granting the certificate that the date of the signatures was attached by third person, if it be so done before the creditor signs his name. General orders may be dispensed with under circumstances in discretion of court. Reynolds, Ex parte, 1 Deac. & C. 459; Mont. 508; 1 Mont. & Bli. 263.

The orders of 26th August, 1841, having been made in pursuance of the provisions of 3 & 4 Vict. c. 94, and 4 & 5 Vict. c. 52, are obligatory upon the court with the force and effect of a statutory enactment, and the court has no discretionary power of dispensing with a literal compliance with their requisitions. Calvert v. Gandy, 14 L. J., Ch. 141; 9 Jur. 122.

Therefore, where a plaintiff had permitted the period limited by the 39th order of August, 1841. to expire before setting down the cause for argument, upon an objection taken by the answer for want of parties, the court refused to order the cause to be set down, on the ground that it had no jurisdiction. Ib.

Semble, that the court has power to relax the operation of its general rules of March, 1834. Atkinson v. Ball, 3 Jo. & Lat. 374.

The general orders of the court are to be regarded as part of the statute under the authority of which they were made, and not to be departed from on special considerations, but bind the court, unless there is something in the conduct of the party insisting on them which disentitles him from relying on them. Davies v. Davies, 10 Ir. Eq. R. 614.

The general orders are not so absolutely binding on the court that they cannot be in any instance relaxed. The general merits of the case and the like are no grounds for departing from them, but only the conduct of the parties or events in the course of the suit; and if in the case there appear the ordinary grounds of equitable relief, such as fraud, surprise or accident, the court may give relief against the strict construction of the orders. Downing v. Hodder, 12 Ir. Eq. R. 371.

The orders of the court are to be considered as laying down general rules, but not as being so imperative as that they can, under no circumstances, be departed from. The time allowed by the 12th order, for procuring the report as to the insufficiency of an answer extended, the drawing up of the order having been delayed by the offices being closed, and the plaintiff having through inadvertence omitted to obtain the master's certificate that further time was necessary to enable him to make his report. Burrell v. Nicholson, 6 Sim. 212.

The general orders are not imperative; but the court, on a special case being made, has the power of departing from the strict rule. Daniel v. Falmouth, 5 L. J., Ch. 69.

The affidavit of the plaintiff's solicitor cannot, in any case, be dispensed with, if expressly required by the orders of the court. Christ's Hospital v. Grainger, 10 Jur. 37.

The court has power to dispense with the general orders, if the circumstances and justice of the case require it. Ferrand v. Bradford Corporation, 21 Beav. 422; 8 De G. M. & G. 63; 25 L. J., Ch. 389; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 360; 4 W. R. 350.

The authority of the 40th order of the 7th of August, 1852, does not, by expressly reserving power to the court to enlarge the time for doing certain specified acts, abridge the inherent authority of the court to dispense with the orders in cases where that order does not apply. Ib.

Any judge of the court may dispense with the general orders of the court where justice requires it, and this jurisdiction is not impliedly excluded by the 40th order of August, 1852, from cases not within it. Ib.

—— By Masters.]—The masters have no power to dispense with or relax the general orders of the court. Smith v. Webster, 3 Myl. & C. 244; 1 Jur. 914.

Under the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 94, s. 13, and the 13th amended order of 1828, the master is put in place of the court, with respect to enlargement of publication, amendment of bill and time to plead, answer or demur, and may dispense with the order of 1828. Miltown v. Stewart, 1 Jur. 940.

Under the statute 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 94, s. 13, the masters have the same jurisdiction to dispense with the strict letter of the general orders, in the cases mentioned in the act, as the court itself has. Milbanke v. Stevens, 8 Sim. 160; 7 L. J., Ch. 107; 2 Jur. 759. But see Lloyd v. Wait, 4 Myl. & C. 257; 3 Jur. 668.

Exceptions to the answer filed 16th March, the time for obtaining the order of reference commenced on the 24th, which was Good Friday, but the secretary's office was closed on the 23rd, and continued closed till the 3rd of April. The order was obtained, and served, and left at the master's office on the 4th, and the warrant obtained on the 6th, and appointed for the 12th:—Held, that the order might be carried into effect (relaxing the 5th order of April, 1828); but that the application should be made to the court, and not to the master. Smith v. Webb, 1 Jur. 524.

Effect of Practice upon.]—Effect of continued practice against an order of court. Boehm v. De Tastet, 1 Ves. & B. 327.

Repeated decisions, forming a series of practice, may amount to the reversal of an order. Ib.

Rules of practice will always yield to special circumstances verified by evidence. Butler v. Bulkeley, 2 Swanst. 374.

In equity, the rules of court, in respect of practice, are to be strictly observed only where the occasions which rendered them requisite are pressing and require their observance. Vinter v. Bickley, 12 Price, 460.

Where indulgence cannot be given without doing what is most unusual, the court will adhere to the practice intended to be established by the general order. Wilson v. Parker, 1 Coop. C. C. 346.

The general order of 1725, limiting the time of appeal to one month, cannot prevail against the practice contrary to it. Wood v. Griffith, 19 Ves. 550.

One of sworn clerks of chancery files bill against all the six clerks, praying that agreement between them regulating practice might be set aside, order of Master of Rolls rescinded, and other regulations established. Demurrer allowed, that plaintiff had shewn no title for court to interfere. Hill v. Sewell, 2 Bro. P. C. 541.

An order made for the regulation of the practice of the court may be superseded by a long and uniform practice, establishing a different and more convenient rule; and, therefore, where it was certified by the clerks of records and writs, that for seventy years it had been the uniform practice to allow six calendar months for inrolment of decrees and orders:—Held, that that period had been substituted for the period limited for the same purpose by Lord Clarendon's Order of 1661. Mann v. Ricketts, 9 Jur. 543.

Form in Schedule—Sufficiency.]—When the forms given in the schedule to the orders do not in words meet the case under consideration, counsel should alter them to meet it, if it be within the spirit of the order. Hanson v. Games, 19 L. J., Ch. 571; 14 Jur. 543.

A statement of claim in a salvage action was drawn in the Form No. 6, of appendix C. to the Rules of the Supreme Court, 1883; on motion by the defendants under Ord. XIX. r. 7, for a further and better statement of claim or particulars:—Held, that the plaintiffs must deliver a fuller statement of claim, and that in salvage actions a fuller form than that given in appendix C., No. 6, should generally be followed. The Isis, 53 L. J., P. 14; 8 P. D. 227; 49 L. T. 444; 32 W. R. 171; 5 Asp. M. C. 155.

"The forms used in the appendix shall be followed with such variations as circumstances may require," means that those forms can only be varied for the purpose of making them to be in accordance with the terms of the order. Boswell v. Coaks, 57 L. J., Ch. 101; 57 L. T. 742; 36 W. R. 65—C. A.

Costs—New Orders.]—On a fair question upon new orders, upon which there has been no decision, the parties, in point of costs, are entitled to indulgence. Watts v. Penny, 11 Beav. 435; 18 L. J., Ch. 150; 13 Jur. 578.

b. Irregularity and Noncompliance with.

1. General Principles.

See R. S. C., 1883, Ord. LXX.

Amending Pleading.]—The irregular amendment of a bill is not a ground for taking it off the file, if the record can be restored to the state in which it was before the amendment was made; but if, in effecting such irregular amendment, a new ingrossment has been made, such new ingrossment may be ordered to be taken off the file. Att.-Gen. v. Cooper, 3 Myl. & C. 258; 8 L. J., Ch. 19; 2 Jur. 917.

Applicants also Irregular.]—The court will not suffer the proceedings in a cause to be impeached on the ground of irregularities, of which the persons claiming have been themselves the authors; and if all persons interested in the subject-matter of the suit have been substantially parties to all subsequent proceedings, none of them can be permitted to escape from the effect of such subsequent proceedings, by shewing prior irregularities; and no difference in this respect is caused by the circumstance that some of such parties are infant plaintiffs. Morison v. Morison, 4 Myl. & C. 215.

During the long vacation, the defendant, for the purpose of obtaining a reference to the master, procured the record and writ clerk's certificate, which was marked at the public office with the name of the master in rotation. He neglected, however, to return it to the record and writ clerk to be filed. In the next term, the plaintiff obtained a reference of exceptions, as to insufficiency, to another master, as if there had been no previous reference, and who certified the answer insufficient:—Held, that the latter proceeding was irregular, and that the defendant was not bound by the certificate; but as the defendant himself had been irregular, the court would not discharge the certificate simply so as to dissolve the injunction and make the answer sufficient, but did so without prejudice to the injunction, and referred the exceptions to the proper master on the usual terms. Suffield (Lord) v. Bond, 10 Beav. 146.

Bad Faith.]—Persons guilty of bad faith will not be allowed by the court to avail themselves of the strictness of the rules; and where an order to dismiss had been so obtained it was discharged with costs. Talbot v. Keay, L. R. 8 Eq. 610.

Effect on Jurisdiction.]—Mode in which a petition presented, under an act of parliament, by which the court derives its jurisdiction, ought to be intituled. By irregularity in the hearing of such petition, the court does not lose its jurisdiction therein. Law, In re, 4 Beav. 509; 11 L. J., Ch. 118; 6 Jur. 615.

Sustaining irregular Order.]—The rule is general, that the court will not, on an application to discharge an order of course, for irregularity, sustain it as an order obtained adversely on merits. Brooks v. Purton, 4 Beav. 494.

Order cannot be abandoned.]—A party who has served, and proceeded on an irregular order of course, is not at liberty to abandon it upon tender to his adversary of the costs. The order must be considered as a valid and subsisting order, until it is disposed of in some regular course, and when costs are due to a party the amount must be ascertained in a regular course. Pearce v. Gray, 4 Beav. 127; 10 L. J., Ch. 353.

Where an irregular order has been obtained, no subsequent order to the same effect can be had until the former has been discharged. Ib.

Order cannot be disregarded.]—A party served with an order obtained ex parte may be guilty of contempt for disobedience thereof, in a case where the order ought not to have been made. Fennings v. Humphrey, 4 Beav. 1; 10 L. J., Ch. 251; 5 Jur. 455.

A party is not at liberty to disregard an order of the court, although it is irregular, but ought to move to discharge it. Wilkins v. Stevens, 10 Sim. 617; 9 L. J., Ch. 299; 5 Jur. 403. S. P., Chuck v. Cremer, 2 Ph. 113; 1 Coop. C. C. 338; 16 L. J., Ch. 92; Blake v. Blake, 7 Beav. 514.

Chancery—Common Law.]—Court of chancery less indulgent than courts of common law to parties neglecting to comply with rules of procedure. Magan v. Magan, 16 Jur. 587; 1 Coop. C. C. 15.

Dispensing with strictness of Rules.]—See supra, col. 793.

2. Waiver.

Erroneous Acts.]—The principle of waiver applies to irregularity only, and not to erroneous acts. Levi v. Ward, 1 Sim. & S. 334; 1 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 77.

By taking Step.]—Whoever, after notice of an irregularity, takes any steps in the cause, or lies by whilst his adversary takes steps, in confidence that he is regular, precludes himself from redress when the irregularity is merely technical. Riky v. Kemmis, Beat. 322.

Mistake in title of process rectified, defendant by putting in answer having acquiesced. Bennet v. Button, Dick. 135.

Acquiescence—Delay.]—An objection of mere form, not going to the substance of the case, should be taken speedily; or if a party, being aware of such objection, allows his adversary to take consequential proceedings without noticing it, he will not be allowed afterwards to raise it. Steele v. Plomer, 2 Ph. 780. S. P., Tarbuck v. Tarbuck, 4 Beav. 149. Bartrum, In re, 10 L. T. 257; 12 W. R. 660.

See ante, WRIT OF SUMMONS, col. 144.

Where the master has taken an account, according to the old method, by charge and discharge, and not in the form of debtor and creditor, as directed by the 61st order of April, 1828, a party who has once acquiesced in the proceeding cannot afterwards object to that course. Weale v. Rice, 4 L. J., Ch. 17.

Waiver of irregularity by examining before the master without a previous state of facts. Willan v. Willan, 19 Ves. 590; G. Coop. 291. See 2 Dow, 274.

A defendant, whose answer had been referred on exceptions for insufficiency, attended a warrant before one of the masters, and then objected that the cause was referred to one of the other masters, but raised no other objection. He afterwards moved to discharge the order, referring the exceptions on the ground that it had not been served within the time allowed by the orders of the court:—Held, that he had waived this objection by not bringing it forward in the first instance. Hunter v. Capron, 12 L. J., Ch. 142; 7 Jur. 785.

Where a defendant who had been served out of the jurisdiction with a writ appeared and objected to the power of the court to issue it under the circumstances:—Held, that the application was too late under Ord. LXX. r. 2. Tozier v. Hawkins, 15 Q. B. D. 650.

Waiver of irregularity in an order to sue in formâ pauperis by laches. St. Victor v. Devereux, 9 Jur. 519.

Where in a proceeding before the master, the defendant, by acquiescence or omission to object, permits the other party and master to proceed as if he did acquiesce, he comes too late if he does not come at the first opportunity to complain of the irregularity. Davis v. Franklin, 2 Beav. 369; 9 L. J., Ch. 139.

Objection to Jurat.]—Objections to the form of a jurat of an answer cannot be waived by the parties to the suit. Pilkington v. Himsworth, 1 Y. & Coll. 612; 5 L. J., Ex. Eq. 47.

Plea of matter of record, with averments of matter in pais, must be filed upon oath: therefore, plea of the statute 32 Hen. 8, c. 9, against selling pretended titles, with the necessary averments of want of possession, &c., not being on oath, ordered to be taken off the file, though set down by the plaintiff for argument; this irregularity not admitting waiver. Wall v. Stubbs, 2 Ves. & B. 354; 15 R. R. 210.

An insufficient attestation not waived by answer. Hutchinson, Ex parte, Weller, In re, Mont. 130.

Taking Office Copy.]—To prevent decree pro confesso, defendant should have not only the answer on file, but also a receipt for costs. The answer being actually filed without payment or tender of costs, the defendant was remanded to give an opportunity of moving to take it off the file for irregularity, but, plaintiff having taken an office copy of answer, that course failed. Sidgier v. Tyte, 11 Ves. 202.

Taking an office copy of an answer, not knowing of an irregularity in its title, is not a waiver. Fry v. Martell, 4 Beav. 485; 5 Jur. 1194.

A defendant, being in contempt for want of an answer, filed a demurrer and answer, and the plaintiff took an office copy:—Held, that the filing the demurrer and answer being irregular they ought to be taken off the file with costs, and that the taking an office copy was no waiver of the irregularity. Att.-Gen. v. Shield, 11 Beav. 441; 18 L. J., Ch. 176; 13 Jur. 330.

Irregularity of subpœna to hear judgment waived, by appearing on a motion to advance the cause, and not then taking the objection. Carvick v. Young, Jac. 524.

Obtaining Time.]—A formal objection to a notice of motion is waived by the party appearing and requesting further time to oppose it. Morland, Ex parte, 3 Deac. & C. 248.

Under a decree in a special form directing the master to take trust accounts, the master allowed special interrogatories without requiring a previous state of facts:—Held, that there was no irregularity, and also that there had been a waiver by the accounting party obtaining time to put in his examination thereto. Allfrey v. Allfrey, 12 Beav. 292; 19 L. J., Ch. 199; 14 Jur. 427.

Appearance.]—A defendant, having filed a plea and answer, obtained at the rolls an order nisi to dissolve the common injunction:—Held, irregular; but the plaintiff having afterwards appeared before a vice-chancellor, and undertaken to shew cause on the merits, held, secondly, that this was a waiver of the irregularity; and, thirdly, that the waiver might be taken notice of on a motion to discharge the order of course at the rolls. St. John v. Phelps, 12 Beav. 606. S. P., Wavell, In re, 22 Beav. 634.

An order was made by the vacation judge, on the ex parte application of the plaintiffs, for service of the writ and notice of motion on the solicitors and at the place of business in England of a foreigner residing out of the jurisdiction. Without formally entering an appearance the defendant filed affidavits in opposition to the motion and instructed counsel, who opposed the motion on the merits:—Held, that the defendant had thereby waived the right to raise any objection as to the irregularity of the order, and must be treated as if he had been properly served and had formally appeared; that the fact that the ex parte order had been passed and entered did not prevent the right of the defendant to move to discharge it; but that r. 12 of Ord. LXIII. did not apply to such a case, and that the proper mode of proceeding (if there had been no such order as aforesaid) would have been to apply not to the court of appeal or the vacation judge, but to the judge to whose court the action was assigned, to discharge the order of the vacation judge. Boyle v. Sacker, 58 L. J., Ch. 141; 39 Ch. D. 249; 58 L. T. 822; 37 W. R. 68—C.A.

And see WRIT OF SUMMONS, supra, A. 9, and APPEARANCE—MOTIONS, B. 3.

By inadvertence, an order referring an answer upon exceptions was directed to Master K. as the master in rotation, the cause being already in the possession of Master B. The exceptions were argued on both sides, before Master B., acting for Master K., who, after overruling an objection to the regularity of the order, allowed the exceptions, and gave further time to answer:—Held, upon motion to discharge the order, that the irregularity had been waived by the defendant arguing the exceptions. Lloyd v. Peers, 20 L. J., Ch. 87. S. P., McRae, In re, Forster v. Davis, 53 L. J., Ch. 1132; 26 Ch. D. 16; 49 L. T. 544; 32 W. R. 304.

Answering Affidavit.]—If a party answer an affidavit not filed until after the notice of motion, it cures the irregularity, and he cannot object to its being used on the motion. O'Brien v. Peebles, 7 Ir. Eq. R. 558.

Answering an affidavit is a waiver of any objection which might be taken to it on the ground of notice not having been given that it was to be used. Blackmore v. Glamorganshire Canal Co., 5 Russ. 151.

Affidavits in support of petition, filed after petition day, cannot be read; but if a party knowing of the irregularity answers them, the objection is waived; but secus, if he did not know of it. Bury, Ex parte, Buck, 393. S. P., Smith, Ex parte, id. 395.

Filing affidavits in answer is a waiver of the objection to the affidavits in support of the petition that they were filed before the petition was presented. Gilpin, Ex parte, 1 Glyn & J. 183.

Acceptance of Costs.]—Where the plaintiff amended without requiring further answer, and omitted to call for the defendant's office copy:—Held, that the acceptance by the defendant's clerk of the 20*s.* costs of amendment was a waiver of the plaintiff's irregularity, and a motion for leave to answer, notwithstanding the replication, refused, but without costs. Boswell v. Tucker, 2 Keen, 188.

The acceptance of the 20*s.* costs, by the clerk in court of the defendant, is a waiver of the irregularity of a second order obtained as of course. Tarleton v. Dyer, 1 Russ. & M. 1. S. P., Hair v. Woodbridge, id. 5, n.

3. Particular Cases.

Judgment irregularly signed.]—A judgment irregularly signed is not a mere noncompliance with the rules which can be remedied under Ord. LXX. r. 1. Anlaby v. Prætorius, 57 L. J., Q. B. 287; 20 Q. B. D. 764; 58 L. T. 671; 36 W. R. 487.

Notice of Motion.]—A party served with an irregular notice of motion is not bound to appear and will not receive his costs of so doing. Daubney v. Shuttleworth, 45 L. J., Ex. 177; 1 Ex. D. 53; 34 L. T. 357; 24 W. R. 321.

A notice of motion that did not state that leave had been obtained to serve short notice is irregular, but such irregularity may be disregarded by the court. Dawson v. Beeson, 52 L. J., Ch. 563; 22 Ch. D. 504; 48 L. T. 407; 31 W. R. 537.

Attachment of Person.]—See ATTACHMENT.

Service of Affidavits.]—On motion to set aside an award, the omission to serve affidavits with the notice of motion was disregarded. Wyggeston Hospital and Stephenson, In re, 54 L. J., Q. B. 248; 52 L. T. 101; 33 W. R. 551.

Form and Service of Writs.]—See ante, WRIT OF SUMMONS, cols. 126 et seq.

Writ—Service on wrong Person.]—Where a writ has been served on a wrong person, and service is possible on the right person, leave will not be given under Judicature Act, Ord. LXX. r. 1, to amend the irregularity, but the faulty service will be discharged with costs upon the application of the person intended to be served. Nelson v. Pastorino, 49 L. T. 564.

Notice of Trial.]—See supra, TRIAL, col. 451.

Judgments and Orders.]—See supra, JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS, cols. 590 et seq.

XXIII. COURT FEES.

"Entering Cause or Matter for Trial or Hearing"—Rule to Justices.]—Under the Order as to Supreme Court Fees, 1884, schedule 52—which directs that a fee of 2*l.* shall be paid on entering or setting down, or re-entering or re-setting down an appeal to the court of appeal, or a cause or matter for trial or hearing in any court in London or Middlesex, or at any assizes—such fee is payable though the matter for hearing does not arise in an action, as in the case of a rule nisi against a justice, under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 44, s. 5. Hasker, Ex parte, 54 L. J., M. C. 94; 14 Q. B. D. 82.

—— Appeals from Chambers.]—Schedule 52 of the Order as to Supreme Court Fees, 1884, which provides for the payment of a fee of 2*l.* on entering or setting down a cause or matter for trial or hearing, does not apply to appeals from chambers. Hasker, Ex parte, supra, distinguished. Dudley, Ex parte, Solicitor, In re, 33 W. R. 750.

Percentage — Managers' Accounts.]—In the case of accounts rendered periodically in chambers by managers of a business, a percentage will be payable, under item 72 of the schedule to the order as to court fees, 1884, upon the amounts found to have been received, and not on the amounts found to be due, notwithstanding the use of the words "the amount found to be due" in the note (d) relating to item 72. If an account has been merely lodged, and no further steps are taken with regard to it, no fee will be payable. Crawshay, In re, Dennis v. Crawshay, 57 L. J., Ch. 923; 39 Ch. D. 552; 59 L. T. 598; 37 W. R. 25.

—— Sale of Property with Approbation of Judge.]—By item No. 69 in the schedule to the order as to Supreme Court Fees, 1884, it is provided that: "On the sale or mortgage of any land or hereditaments pursuant to any order directing a sale or mortgage with the approbation of the judge, made in any cause or matter for the purpose of raising money to be dealt with by the court in such cause or matter, for every 100*l.* or fraction of 100*l.* of the amount raised—2*s.*" It is also provided in the same schedule that: "The amounts for or in respect of which the following fees are payable shall be limited to 200,000*l.* in the following cases: (a) The amount raised at any time or times in the same cause or matter in the cases to which the fee No. 69 is applicable." Upon a sale by the court of lands and hereditaments belonging to a company in liquidation the purchase-moneys of all the lands exceeded 200,000*l.*, and were paid upon a sale made under several orders of court. The question arose between the solicitors of the company and the treasury whether the limit of 200,000*l.*, applied where there were several orders of such a nature as would make the sale fall within item No. 69, or whether it only applied where there was one order:—Held, that the limit of 200,000*l.* applied to cases where the limit had been reached irrespectively of the number of orders under which the sale was effected. Oriental Bank Corporation, In re, 56 L. T. 731.

—— Separate Accounts.]—A testator made two persons his executors, and the same persons, with one other, the trustees of his real and personal estate. A decree was made for the administration of the estate, and the usual accounts ordered to be taken. The chief clerk required separate accounts to be taken of the receipts and payments of the executors, and of the receipts and payments of the trustees:—Held, that the accounts of the executors and trustees were rightly taken separately, and that the percentage for court fees was payable both on the gross receipts of the executors and on the gross receipts of the trustees: and that the receipts of the trustees properly included (1) the residue handed over to them by the executors; (2) temporary loans advanced to them by their bankers; and (3) sums transferred from the trustees' deposit account at their bankers to their drawing account. Armitage v. Elworthy, 13 Ch. D. 91; 41 L. T. 608; 28 W. R. 283.

The percentage on taking accounts imposed by the order as to court fees of October 28th, 1875, is not payable on accounts begun to be taken before commencement of the judicature acts. Where payable it is in substitution for the old certificate and other fees. Meredith v. Treffry, 45 L. J., Ch. 162; 33 L. T. 715; 24 W. R. 199.

Plaintiff suing in formâ pauperis.]—Chief clerk's certificate ordered to be delivered out without payment of court fees, the plaintiff since it was ready having obtained an order to sue in formâ pauperis. Thomas v. Ellis, 8 Ch. D. 518; 26 W. R. 839—C. A.

A plaintiff suing in formâ pauperis who has obtained a verdict, is entitled to have judgment signed without payment of fees. Hoare v. Coupland, 1 L. M. & P. 57; 19 L. J., Q. B. 150; 14 Jur. 247.

Document required by Court.]—Where the court requires for its own information the production of a document from the record office, no fee ought to be paid for the same. Drysdale v. Mace, 2 Eq. Rep. 386; 23 L. J., Ch. 518; 2 W. R. 341.

c. Vacations, 806.

a. GENERALLY.

Extension of—Notice of Motion.]—Where notice of motion has not been given in sufficient time, owing to a bonâ fide mistake, the court may, in its discretion, allow the party in default to shew the reason of the mistake by affidavit, and allow the motion to be made on a later day. Smith v. Smacksmen Insurance Co., 32 W. R. 184.

A party ordered to take a step within a fixed time, or that the bill should be dismissed, if desirous of an extension of the time, must give notice of motion, so as to enable him to bring it on before the expiration of the time fixed. Huntingtower (Lord) v. Sherborn, 5 Beav. 380.

—— Redemption Action—Order dismissing Action in Default of Payment into Court within a Specified Time—Mistake.]—Where in a redemption action liberty is given to lodge a sum of money in court before a certain day, and in default that "the action be dismissed with costs," the action will not be treated as wholly dead and at an end if the money is not lodged before the specified day, so as to preclude an application made after that day for extension of the time for lodgment. If the failure to make the lodgment within the time limited is due to an honest mistake the court will favourably consider an application for extension of time. Collinson v. Jeffery, 65 L. J., Ch. 375; [1896] 1 Ch. 644; 74 L. T. 78; 44 W. R. 311.

—— Motion for New Trial.]—The court of appeal has power under Ord. LVIII. r. 5, to enlarge the time for moving for a new trial. Purnell v. G. W. Ry., 45 L. J., Q. B. 687; 1 Q. B. D. 636; 24 W. R. 720—C. A.

Where a motion for a new trial is to be made conditionally on the result of a decision pending in the court of appeal in a similar cause, notice of motion should be given within the usual time, and application be then made to the court to postpone the hearing till the decision in the court of appeal has been obtained. The court has a full discretion over such applications, and is not limited to cases only where parties have been misled. Peckett v. Short, 32 W. R. 123. See supra, NEW TRIAL, ante, col. 538.

—— For Indorsement on Writ of Date of Service.]—Under r. 6 of Ord. LVII. of Rules of Court, 1875, the court has power to extend the time fixed by r. 13 of Ord. IX. for the making an indorsement on a writ of the date of service out of the jurisdiction. Hastings v. Hurley, 50 L. J., Ch. 577; 16 Ch. D. 734; 44 L. T. 176; 29 W. R. 440.

Where, through inadvertence, the date of the service of a writ has not been indorsed upon the writ, within the time prescribed by Ord. IX. r. 13, the court can extend the time, so as to make an indorsement made after the proper time, and all subsequent proceedings, valid. Sproat v. Peckett, 48 L. T. 755.

—— For Pleading.] — See PLEADING, post, col. 863.

—— For Appeal.]—See APPEAL.

—— Discretion of Judge.]—By a master's order an action was to be dismissed, unless notice of trial were delivered by a certain day. Through a mistake of the solicitor's clerk, notice of trial was not delivered within the required time. A judge at chambers refused, in the exercise of his discretion, to extend the time fixed by the master's order, and the divisional court declined to interfere with the judge's discretion. Gilder v. Morrison, 30 W. R. 815.

Power to abridge Time.]—Ord. XXXVI. r. 12, provides that, if the plaintiff does not within six weeks after the close of the pleadings, or within such extended time as the court or a judge may allow, give notice of trial, the defendant may, before notice of trial given by the plaintiff, give notice of trial, or may apply to the court or a judge to dismiss the action for want of prosecution. Ord. LXIV. r. 7, provides that the court or a judge shall have power to enlarge or abridge the time appointed by the rules, or fixed by any order enlarging time, for doing any act or taking any proceedings, upon such terms (if any) as the justice of the case may require:—Held, that the period of six weeks mentioned in Ord. XXXVI. r. 12, is not a time appointed for doing any act or taking any proceeding within Ord. LXIV. r. 7, and consequently that the court could not make an order giving the defendant leave to give notice of trial, if the plaintiff did not give such notice within a shorter period than six weeks from the close of the pleadings. Saunders v. Pawley, 54 L. J., Q. B. 199; 14 Q. B. D. 234; 51 L. T. 903; 33 W. R. 277.

Expiration of, on Sundays, &c.]—A specially indorsed writ was served on Friday, the 27th of March, consequently the eight days for entering an appearance expired on Friday, the 3rd of April. That day being Good Friday:—Held, that the defendant was not bound to enter an appearance until the following Wednesday. Mumford v. Hitchcocks, 14 C. B. (N.S.) 361; 32 L. J., C. P. 168; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1200; 8 L. T. 282; 11 W. R. 645.

Sect. 27 of the Common Law Procedure Act, 1852, empowers a plaintiff, in case of non-appearance by the defendant, where the writ is indorsed in the special form, on filing an affidavit of personal service, at once to sign judgment, "and the plaintiff, upon such judgment, to issue execution at the expiration of eight days from the last day of appearance." In such a case, if Sunday is the last of such eight days, it is to be reckoned in the computation as one of those days. Rowberry v. Morgan, 9 Ex. 730; 23 L. J., Ex. 191; 18 Jur. 452; 2 W. R. 431.

Where a judge's order made in a cause directs that one party shall pay to the other a certain sum, by way of instalments of so much a month, judgment to be signed for the whole in case of default in payment of any one of the instalments, and the day of one of the payments falls upon a Sunday, the party has the whole of Monday following to pay in. Morris v. Barrett, 7 C. B. (N.S.) 139; 29 L. J., C. P. 102; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 609; 1 L. T. 38; 8 W. R. 45.

When the time for doing an act or taking a proceeding is expressly fixed by act of parliament, r. 12 of Ord. XXXVII., of Consolidated General Orders (providing for cases where the time for doing an act or taking a proceeding expires on a day on which the offices are closed), does not enable such act or proceeding to be done or taken after the expiration of the time so fixed. Flower v. Bright, 2 John. & H. 590; 10 W. R. 558. See Ord. LXIV. r. 3.

Expression of.]—An order of the court for the delivering up of a deed "forthwith" is a sufficient expression of time within the meaning of Consolidated Ord. XXIII. r. 10. Thomas v. Nokes, L. R. 6 Eq. 521; 16 W. R. 995.

Computation — Eight Days.] — Attachment returnable within eight days after the purification. The eight days mean eight days entire. Mootham v. Washett, 1 Mer. 243. See Ord. LXIV. r. 12, and ante, col. 714.

—— Week.]—The word "week," in the 79th Order of May, 1845, means any period of seven consecutive days, and not the particular seven days commencing with Sunday. Where, therefore, the last notice of motion to take a bill pro confesso under that order was inserted in the "Gazette" on a Tuesday, and the day for which the notice was given was the Thursday week following, it was held not to be a sufficient compliance with the order. Bazalgette v. Lowe, 3 Eq. R. 491; 24 L. J., Ch. 368, 416; 3 W. R. 356.

—— Month.]—In most orders of the courts of law and equity, "month" means a lunar month, and it so means in an order for payment of money. Att.-Gen. v. Newbury Corporation, C. P. Cooper, 383. See now Ord. LXIV. r. 1.

—— Vacation, whether included.]—See infra, col. 808.

Three successive Weeks.]—Interpretation put on a judge's order that advertisements be inserted in certain newspapers for three successive weeks. Browne v. Pennefather, Monkton Farleigh Estate, In re, 4 N. R. 221.

Terms.]—By 36 & 37 Vict. c. 66, s. 26, "terms" are abolished, but they may continue to be referred to in all cases in which they were used as a measure for determining the time within which an act is required to be done. An award was made on the 28th of March, 1877. An application to set it aside under 9 & 10 Will. 3, c. 15, s. 2, was made in the Easter sittings on a day after the 8th of May. Easter term in 1877, under the former procedure, would have begun on the 15th of April and ended on the 8th of May:—Held, that the application ought to have been made on a day before the 8th of May, for "terms" still exist as a measure for determining the time within which an award should be set aside under 9 & 10 Will. 3, c. 15, s. 2. Christ's College, Brecknock v. Martin, 46 L. J., Q. B. 591; 3 Q. B. D. 16; 36 L. T. 537; 25 W. R. 637—C. A.

When all the days included between the Thursday before, and the Wednesday after Easter-day (both inclusive), fall within Easter term, that term must be prolonged by five business days, and Trinity term commence five days later accordingly. Downes v. Bostock, 5 Jur. 103.

Effect of Rules on Mercantile Transactions.]—The plaintiff in the action sued on a promissory note at three months, dated the 11th March, 1874; the note was therefore primâ facie due on the 14th June of the same year. The 14th of June was a Sunday. The writ in the action bore date 14th June, 1880, which was a Monday. It was contended that the right of action was barred by the Statute of Limitations:—Held, that Ord. LVII. r. 3, of the Judicature Act of 1875 did not apply to such a case as the present one, as it was not intended to extend the time fixed by the Statute of Limitations. Morris v. Richards, 45 L. T. 210; 46 J. P. 37.

See further cases, sub tit. TIME.

b. NOTICE TO PROCEED.

Month's Notice.]—See R. S. C., 1883, Ord. LXIV. r. 13.

In what Cases Applicable—Judgment.]—Where a defendant had failed to appear to a writ indorsed for a liquidated demand and no proceeding had been taken for more than a year after service of the writ:—Held, that the case came within Ord. LXIV. r. 13, and the plaintiff could not enter final judgment under Ord. XIII. r. 3, but was bound to give defendant a month's notice of his intention to proceed. Webster v. Myer, 54 L. J., Q. B. 101; 14 Q. B. D. 231; 51 L. T. 560; 33 W. R. 407—C. A.

Rule 176 of Hilary term, 1853, applies to the signing of judgment for not proceeding to trial under 15 & 16 Vict. c. 76, s. 101. Metcalf v. Hetherington, 3 H. & N. 755; 28 L. J., Ex. 155.

After interlocutory judgment had been entered for 25*l.* for default, the rest of the action was referred and an award made. There was no power of entering up judgment on the issues referred. After the lapse of a year the plaintiff gave the defendant notice that the court would be moved in a week. Within a month from the date of the notice, the plaintiff applied for a rule calling on the defendant to pay the 25*l.*, or why the plaintiff should not be allowed to sign final judgment. There was a proper demand of the money. The rule was discharged on the ground that there had not been a month's notice of proceeding. A subsequent notice was given by the plaintiff that he would after a month proceed in the action by applying to sign final judgment. After the month had expired, the plaintiff applied for a rule similar to the previous one. There had been no fresh personal demand of the money since the discharge of the last rule. The court made the rule absolute. Burlington v. Richardson, 22 L. J., Q. B. 385.

—— Motion to Dismiss for Want of Prosecution.]—A motion to dismiss for want of prosecution is not a proceeding within the Irish Ord. LXIV. r. 11 [which corresponds to the English Ord. LXIV. r. 13], so as to require a month's notice of intention to proceed "where there has been no proceeding for one year from the last proceeding had," in the action. Warnock v. Mann, [1896] 2 Ir. R. 630.

—— Execution.]—Execution may issue in an action in which no proceeding has taken place for more than a year without a month's notice of intention to proceed. Ord. LXIV. r. 13, does not apply to execution or proceedings after judgment. Taylor v. Roe, 62 L. J., Ch. 391; 3 R. 306; 68 L. T. 253.

Several Defendants.]—Where no proceedings have been taken against a defendant within a year, the cause is out of court as to that defendant, although proceedings have been taken within that time against other defendants. Bartley v. Davis, Fl. & K. 620.

In other Cases.]—The rule that a term's notice was necessary where no proceeding had been taken in a cause for a year, did not apply to proceedings had after verdict. Newton v. Boodle, 4 D. & L. 664; 3 C. B. 795; 16 L. J., C. P. 135; 11 Jur. 148.

Where a rule had been made absolute to set aside a verdict found for the defendant, and for a new trial on payment of costs by the plaintiff, and the plaintiff for more than a year failed to pay the costs, or to take any steps towards availing himself of the rule, the defendant could not move to discharge it without previously giving a term's notice of his intention so to do. Lord v. Wardle, 3 C. B. 295; 15 L. J., C. P. 259.

The rule did not apply to a motion to set aside proceedings for irregularity, but only to any steps taken towards judgment. Lumley v. Thompson, 3 M. & W. 632; 6 D. P. C. 558; 7 L. J., Ex. 142.

A term's notice was not necessary if the delay had taken place at the defendant's request. Evans v. Davies, 3 D. P. C. 786. S. P., Bland v. Darley, 3 Term Rep. 530.

A term's notice was not necessary in case of a trial by proviso after a lapse of four terms. Theobald v. Crichmore, 2 B. & Ald. 594.

Or before motion for costs of the day. French v. Burton, 2 C. & J. 634; 1 L. J., Ex. 257.

An order to change an attorney was not a proceeding in a cause dispensing with a term's notice of proceeding. Deacon v. Fuller, 3 Tyr. 382; 1 C. & M. 349; 1 D. P. C. 675; 2 L. J., Ex. 175.

A term's notice was not necessary to revive proceedings against a defendant who had stayed them by obtaining an injunction. Bosworth v. Phillips, 3 W. Bl. 784.

Where proceedings are stayed for a time certain above a year, proceedings might go on at the expiration of the time, without a term's notice. Watkins v. Haydon, 2 W. Bl. 762.

A motion for a commission to examine a witness resident abroad is a proceeding in the cause, and therefore prevents the necessity of the notice to proceed. Waring v. Rea, 17 W. R. 681.

Where a cause has been at issue for more than four terms and no proceedings taken, the defendant must give the plaintiff a term's notice of his intention to proceed before he rules the plaintiff to enter the issue. Lord v. Hillier, 9 B. & C. 621; 7 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 307.

c. VACATIONS.

See R. S. C., 1883, Ords. LXIII. and LXIV.

Jurisdiction of Vacation Judge.]—The jurisdiction of the vacation judge under Ord. LXI. r. 7, extends to the adjournment of sittings by a judge of the chancery division, during the sittings of the division. Wilson v. Watson, 38 L. T. 380.

Although the long vacation does not commence until the 10th August, the duties of the vacation judge may arise before that period in respect of business connected with any court which may have risen for the vacation. Francis v. Brown, 31 L. J., Ch. 560; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 785; 6 L. T. 799; 10 W. R. 811.

When a judge has risen for the long vacation, the jurisdiction of the vacation judge, as to that court, immediately arises. Bank of Hindostan, India, China, and Japan, In re, 16 L. T. 790.

Where the vice-chancellor, with whose name a cause is marked, has risen for the long vacation, an order may be made by another vice-chancellor. Bean v. Griffiths, 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1045; 3 W. R. 640. See Price v. Gardner, 1 Jur. (N.S.) 975.

—— Absence of Judge temporarily during Term Time.]—Whenever during the regular sittings of the high court of justice any judge is absent from any cause, as, for instance, through having risen for a few days' vacation, applications of an urgent nature in any action pending before such judge will be heard and disposed of by the Master of the Rolls or any other judge of the court of appeal, under s. 51 of the Judicature Act, 1873, upon a request being obtained from the Lord Chancellor. Chapman v. Real Property Trust, 7 Ch. D. 732; 26 W. R. 587.

What is Long Vacation Business.]—An application for payment out of a parliamentary deposit not previously payable is long vacation business. Wigan Junction Railway Act, In re, 44 L. J., Ch. 774; L. R. 10 Ch. 541.

Court will not issue attachment in the long vacation, unless there is fear of the party absconding. Hunt, Ex parte, Fox, In re, 4 Deac. & C. 503.

The Lord Chancellor can issue the writ of habeas corpus at common law in vacation. Crowley's Case, 2 Swanst. 1; Buck. 264.

Injunction granted in vacation. Temple v Bank of England, 6 Ves. 771.

A prohibition may issue in the vacation. Ireson v. Harris, 7 Ves. 257.

A defendant may be brought to the bar of the court by writ of habeas corpus, and remanded in vacation as well as in term time. Needham v. Needham, 10 Jur. 81.

Bill ordered to be taken pro confesso in vacation under the stat. 1 Will. 4, c. 36, s. 15, r. 2. Simmons v. Wood, 2 Hare, 644.

Vacation Masters.]—As to common matters which occur in the vacation, the vacation master acts, and is considered as acting for the several masters in rotation to whose offices such matters respectively may belong; and therefore, in the vacation, the production to the vacation master of the certificate is a sufficient compliance with the 17th Order of December, 1833, which requires its production to the master in rotation. Suffield (Lord) v. Bond, 10 Beav. 146.

A reference to the vacation master is a reference to a master excepting the case from the operation of the 15th and 25th Orders of December, 1833. Kelsey v. Larken, 4 Jur. 363.

Hearing Counsel.]—There is no rule that only one counsel on each side shall be heard in long vacation causes. Henry v. G. N. Ry., 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1117.

Leave to serve Short Notice of Motion.]—Leave to serve short notice of motion cannot be given by the chief clerk in vacation any more than during the sitting. Conacher v. Conacher, 29 W. R. 230.

Order to take Effect in Vacation.]—When a person entitled to a vested interest in trust funds in court, to be paid at twenty-one, would attain that age in the long vacation, a prospective order was made for the payment out of the fund to her at such date. Penn, In re, 42 L. J., Ch. 880; 21 W. R. 865.

When included in Computation of Time.]—See Ord. LXIV. r. 5.

—— Former Practice.]—The long vacation is not to be excepted in the computation of the six days for referring exceptions for impertinence to a bill. Sloggett v. Sorel, 5 Beav. 378; 12 L. J., Ch. 16.

Where a defendant, who is in custody on contempt for not answering the bill, has been brought up and remanded under the stat. 1 Will. 4, c. 36, s. 15, the two months and six weeks given by the 13th rule is not interrupted by, but will run in, the vacation; although, if the thirty days allowed by the 5th rule for first bringing the defendant up after he is actually in custody should expire in vacation, that time is extended to include the first four days of the following term. Simmons v. Wood, 2 Hare, 644.

The exclusion of the time of vacation from the computation of time for filing replication, in the fourth article of the 14th Order of May, 1845, does not apply to the time of filing replications generally, but only to the time for filing replications under the exigency of the forty-first article of the 16th Order of May, 1845. Stinton v. Taylor, 4 Hare, 608; 15 L. J., Ch. 321; 10 Jur. 386.

The 19th Order of April, 1828, although it excludes Michaelmas and Christmas vacations from being reckoned in the time allowed for amending bills, has not, in a case where the answer must be deemed sufficient before the vacation, and the plaintiff has obtained no order to amend, the effect of excluding the vacation from being counted in the second period of two months, at the end of which, according to the 4th and 16th Orders of April, 1828, the defendant may move to dismiss for want of prosecution. The 26th Order of December, 1833, makes no difference in that respect. Goldsworthy v. Crossley, 2 Hare, 639; 13 L. J., Ch. 98; 8 Jur. 642.

A month's time to answer obtained by the service of a notice in the vacation, is considered as if obtained by an order on the usual terms. A defendant, who has obtained an order for a month's time to answer, and gained another month by the service of a notice in the vacation, will be made to pay the costs of an application for a second order for time to answer, though it should not be granted, unless he makes a special case for it. Gregg v. Hutton, 2 Hog. 32.

In counting the time within which a demurrer must be filed under the 10th Order of December, 1833, the intervention of holidays makes no difference, as a demurrer may be filed in vacation. Boys v. Morgan, 9 Sim. 262.

Under the 19th Order of 1828 (as amended in 1831), if there be no seal between the long vacation and the first day of Michaelmas term, the computation of a fortnight allowed for obtaining the master's report upon exceptions to an answer for insufficiency, is not to begin until the first day of that term, although the vice-chancellor may have been sitting during the interval, and may have then made the order of reference. When the fortnight would expire on a Sunday, the time is extended throughout the Monday following. Angell v. Westcombe, 1 Myl. & C. 48.

The three months mentioned in the 29th Order of August 7th, 1852, as to moving to dismiss for want of prosecution, are not to be reckoned exclusively of vacation. Bothomley v. Squire, 7 De G. M. & G. 246 ; 24 L. J., Ch. 437 ; 3 W. R. 498.

The eight days within which, under the 51st Order of October 16th, 1852, made pursuant to s. 34 of the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 80, an application must be made to vary the chief clerk's certificate are to be calculated inclusive of vacations. Ware v. Watson, 7 De G. M. & G. 739 ; 25 L. J., Ch. 199 ; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 129 ; 4 W. R. 223.

Ex parte Order of Vacation Judge—Application to Discharge.]—An order was made by the vacation judge, on the ex parte application of the plaintiffs, for service of the writ and notice of motion on the solicitors and at the place of business in England of a foreigner residing out of the jurisdiction. Without formally entering an appearance the defendant filed affidavits in opposition to the motion, and instructed counsel, who opposed the motion on the merits :—Held, that the defendant had thereby waived the right to raise any objection as to the irregularity of the order, and must be treated as if he had been properly served and had formally appeared ; that the fact that the ex parte order had been passed and entered did not prevent the right of the defendant to move to discharge it ; but that r. 12 of Ord. LXIII. did not apply to such a case, and that the proper mode of proceeding (if there had been no such waiver as aforesaid) would have been to apply, not to the court of appeal or the vacation judge, but to the judge to whose court the action was assigned, to discharge the order of the vacation judge. Boyle v. Sacker, 58 L. J., Ch. 141 ; 39 Ch. D. 249 ; 58 L. T. 822 ; 37 W. R. 68—C. A.

Order made during Vacation—Time for Appeal.]—On an appeal from the decision of a judge at chambers given in vacation, two clear days' notice of motion must be given within five days, and for a day within eight days, after the decision, although no divisional court sits within the eight days. Steadman v. Hakim, 58 L. J., Q. B. 57 ; 22 Q. B. D. 16 ; 37 W. R. 208—C. A. Affirming 59 L. T. 607. S. P., Hobbs v. Mead, 53 J. P. 40.

See also APPEAL.

Before Judicature Acts—Notice of Sittings.]—The notice of sittings in vacation pursuant to 1 & 2 Vict. c. 32, must specify with accuracy and precision the nature of the business to be proceeded with. Field v. Mackenzie, 6 C. B. 384.

At the post-terminal sittings in banc, no business can be taken, except that of which notice has been given. Sabor v. Edwards, 3 C. B. (N.S.) 64.

On the last day of term, a rule was made absolute on an affidavit of service. The master, next day discovering that the affidavit was defective, refused to draw up the rule. The court considering the rule as a pending rule, allowed a motion to be made in the sittings after term to make the rule absolute on an amended affidavit of service. Dow v. Bell, 4 Ex. 259 ; 18 L. J., Ex. 391.

A writ of inquiry in a personal action may be tested in vacation under 2 Will. 4, c. 39, ss. 11, 12. Collett v. Curling, 5 D. & L. 605 ; 17 L. J., Q. B. 216.

See R. S. C., 1883, Ord. XIX.

Indorsement on Writ — Whether a "Pleading."]—The indorsement on a writ is not a "pleading" so as to entitle a plaintiff, without the consent of the defendant, to move thereon for an order on admissions in the pleadings under Rules of Court, 1875, Ord. XL. r. 11, in a case where the defendant, admitting the plaintiff's claim, has given notice that he does not require the delivery of a statement of claim. Wallis v. Jackson, 52 L. J., Ch. 384 ; 23 Ch. D. 204 ; 31 W. R. 519. See now Rules of Supreme Court, 1883, Ord. XX. r. 1.

Statement and Allegation of Facts.]—Semble, though by the Rules of Court, 1875, pleadings must be concise and should not contain any unnecessary accounts or evidence, a defendant is entitled to have the plaintiff's case presented in an intelligible form, so that he may know how to meet each particular charge that is made against him. Harbord v. Monk, 38 L. T. 411.

When in an action in the queen's bench division the defendant relies upon such a defence as before the Supreme Court of Judicature Acts, 1873 and 1875, was deemed equitable, he is entitled (subject to the modifications introduced by those statutes) to state the facts in his pleadings in such manner as they might have been stated in an answer to a bill in the court of chancery ; and a defence stating many distinct facts, which taken as a whole would in equity have constituted ground for relief against the action, is not liable to be amended or struck out as embarrassing. Heap v. Marris, 46 L. J., Q. B. 761; 2 Q. B. D. 630.

Under the present system of pleading the facts must be stated, and then it is the duty of the court to decide what is the legal result of the facts stated; whereas the former system required the parties to set forth the legal result of the facts, and not the facts themselves. Hanmer (Lord) v. Flight, 35 L. T. 127; 24 W. R. 346. S. C. in C. A., 36 L. T. 279.

Contributory negligence may be pleaded in a general form without setting out in detail the particular facts constituting the alleged contributory negligence. Rattray v. Cork and Macroom Ry., 4 L. R., Ir. 386.

It is not necessary, in declaring upon a written contract, to use a single word that is in the contract itself, provided its legal effect be properly stated. Magor v. Wilks, 5 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 308.

Nor to aver any matter which happens to be part of the contract, if such matter would be implied by law. Ib.

A statement of claim alleged that an intestate "two days before his death made a good and valid donatio mortis causâ to the plaintiff of the whole of his moneys standing on deposit to his account at the Ellesmere Savings Bank," but did not state any facts amounting to a donatio mortis causâ. Demurrer allowed, on the ground that the facts alleged in the statement of claim did not shew a valid donatio mortis causâ. Townsend v. Parton, Parton, In re, 45 L. T. 755; 30 W. R. 287.

A party is entitled to the benefit of any point which can be suggested by the bill, though it be not expressly insisted upon by the pleadings. Knowles v. Clayton, 2 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 181.

"Material Facts"—What are.]—With reference to L.'s claim in respect of lights, B. alleged that in another action (a new trial of which was still pending) L. had sworn that the lights in question were not ancient, and was therefore estopped from alleging in the present action that they were ancient:—Held, that the words "material facts" in Ord. XIX. r. 4, do not mean merely facts which must be proved in order to establish the existence of the cause of action, but include also any facts which the party pleading is entitled to prove at the trial, but that the above allegation did not come within this definition, and was calculated to prejudice the fair trial of the action. Lumb v. Beaumont, 49 L. T. 772.

Rules 4 and 15 of Ord. XIX. apply to such facts as are material to the cause of action or defence, and not to damages. Wood v. Durham (Earl), 57 L. J., Q. B. 547; 21 Q. B. D. 501; 59 L. T. 142; 37 W. R. 222.

A statement of claim, after alleging a promise by the defendant to marry plaintiff, went on to allege in paragraph 4, that "the plaintiff relying upon the said promise permitted the defendant to debauch and carnally know her, whereby the defendant infected her with a venereal disease." It then alleged a breach of the said promise:—Held, that the facts alleged in the paragraph complained of were "material facts" within the meaning of Ord. XIX. r. 4, and as such were properly pleadable. Millington v. Loring, 50 L. J., Q. B. 214; 6 Q. B. D. 190; 43 L. T. 657; 29 W. R. 207; 45 J. P. 268—C. A.

In an action for libel published in a newspaper, the statement of claim alleged that the defendant published the libel knowing that the same would be, and it in fact was, published in editions of the same newspaper published in France and elsewhere:—Held, that evidence in support of this allegation would be admissible at the trial, and that therefore the allegation was properly made in the statement of claim. Whitney v. Moignard, 59 L. J., Q. B. 324; 24 Q. B. D. 630.

Denials and Admissions by not specifically denying Statement.]—The rules of pleading, that facts not denied are to be taken as admitted, that specific denial of facts is necessary, and that denial of facts must not be evasive, are to be strictly enforced, as having for their object the bringing of parties to definite issues. Thorp v. Holdsworth, 45 L. J., Ch. 406; 3 Ch. D. 637.

A statement of claim in an action for specific performance stated that the predecessor in title of the plaintiff, by his agent lawfully authorised, signed an agreement with H., the predecessor in title of the defendant. The defence denied this in words following the words of the statement of claim, and then proceeded to state that H., the predecessor in title of the defendant, was of unsound mind, and did not lawfully authorise any one as his agent to sign an agreement, and in a subsequent paragraph denied that any agreement was signed by H., or any person by him lawfully authorised:—Held, that under the defence raised, the defendant could only enter into evidence to shew the unsoundness of mind of H., and could not enter into evidence to shew that the agent was not duly authorised. Byrd v. Nunn, 47 L. J., Ch. 1; 7 Ch. D. 284; 37 L. T. 585; 26 W. R. 110—C. A.

In action for damages for an alleged infringement of copyright in a song, the defendant, by his defence, alleged that the song had not been registered at Stationers' Hall until the 9th of December, 1876, and added, "the defendant denies that the song has been duly registered. The time of the first publication thereof is not truly entered on the register":—Held, that under this pleading the defendant was only entitled to prove that the time of first publication had been untruly entered, and that he was not at liberty to prove that the name of the publisher had been untruly stated. Collette v. Goode, 47 L. J., Ch. 370; 7 Ch. D. 842; 38 L. T. 504.

Although the plea of the general issue has been abolished by the Rules of the Supreme Court, a defence will not be struck out simply because it is not in strict accordance with the form as required by the wording of the rules, so long as it is not embarrassing and in effect specifically denies each and every material allegation in the statement of claim. Adkins v. North Metropolitan Tramway Co., 63 L. J., Q. B. 361; 10 R. 600.

Every allegation of fact stated in a pleading not to be admitted must be so stated separately. Harris v. Gamble, 47 L. J., Ch. 344; 7 Ch. D. 877; 38 L. T. 253.

A defendant by his defence simply "put the plaintiffs to proof of the several allegations in their statement of claim." He did not appear at the trial, but service of a notice of trial upon him was proved:—Held, that the defendant had admitted the facts alleged in the statement of claim, and that the plaintiffs were entitled to judgment, without adducing any evidence in support of their case. Ib.

In an action against a lessee to set aside a lease granted under a power, the statement of claim stated that the donee of the power had received from the lessee a certain sum as a bribe, and stated the circumstances: the defence denied that that sum had been given, and denied each circumstance, but contained no general denial of a bribe having been given:—Held, that the giving the bribe was not sufficiently denied under Judicature Act, Ord. XIX. r. 22, and must, under Ord. XIX. r. 17, be taken to have been admitted; judgment for the plaintiff given; leave to amend being refused. Tildesley v. Harper, 47 L. J., Ch. 263; 7 Ch. D. 403; 38 L. T. 60; 26 W. R. 263. But leave to amend given by Court of Appeal. See S. C., 48 L. J., Ch. 495; 10 Ch. D. 393; 39 L. T. 552; 27 W. R. 249.

Evidence not to be Pleaded—Admissions.]—The rule that evidence is not to be pleaded applies to admissions as well as to other evidence. Davy v. Garrett, 47 L. J., Ch. 218; 7 Ch. D. 473; 38 L. T. 77; 26 W. R. 225—C. A.

Matters of Law.]—Statements in pleading which are not demurrers, but allege only matters of law that might be raised by demurrer, are embarrassing, and may be struck out under Ord. XXVII. r. 1. Stokes v. Grant, 4 C. P. D. 25; 40 L. T. 36; 27 W. R. 397. See now Rules of Supreme Court, 1883, Ord. XXV.

Statement that Agreement is in Writing.]—An allegation in the plaintiff's pleadings, which simply stated that there was a promise to pay a debt barred by the Statute of Limitations, but did not aver that such promise was in writing, is sufficient. The fact that the promise was in writing is a matter to be shewn by evidence at the trial. Pascal or Pascoe v. Richards, 50 L. J., Ch. 337; 44 L. T. 87.

See also Futcher v. Futcher, 50 L. J., Ch. 735; 45 L. T. 306; 29 W. R. 884.

When by law an agreement in order to be valid must be in writing, it is unnecessary (whether in a declaration or in a plea) to allege that it is so, as it will be intended that by an agreement is meant an agreement valid by law and therefore in writing. Young v. Austen, 38 L. J., C. P. 233: L. R. 4 C. P. 553; 20 L. T. 396; 17 W. R. 706.

A plea alleging a contract, must aver it to be in writing, if required by a statute to be so. Taylor v. Hilary, 1 Gale, 22.

Setting out Documents.]—The court allowed documents to be set out in a bill in the French language, without appending a translation. Cassoux v. Great Luxembourg Ry., 18 W. R. 646.

If the declaration sets out the legal operation and effect of the demise, it is sufficient. Wilson v. Bramhall, 1 Y. & J. 2.

Except in deducing title, a deed or a will may, at the option of the party pleading it, be set out either in its terms, leaving the court to construe it, or according to its legal effect. Newborough (Lord) v. Schroder, 7 C. B. 342; 18 L. J., C. P. 200; 13 Jur. 611. S. P., Robertson v. Showler, 13 M. & W. 609; 2 D. & L. 687; 14 L. J., Ex. 120.

Setting out Agreement.]—It is not necessary in declaring on a parol agreement to set out the whole of the instrument; it is sufficient to set out that part of it only to which the particular breach applies. Ward v. Smith, 11 Price, 19.

If the part omitted does not qualify that which is stated. Tempest v. Rawlings, 13 East, 18.

So, it is sufficient if a declaration shews so much of the terms beneficial to the plaintiff in a contract as comprehend the point for the failure of which the plaintiff sues. Cotterill v. Cuff, 4 Taunt. 285.

In declaring upon a contract, not under seal, consisting of several distinct parts and collateral provisions, it is sufficient to state so much of it as contains the entire consideration for the act, and the entire act or duty which is to be done (including the time, manner, and other circumstances of its performance), in virtue of such consideration, the breach of which act or duty is complained of; but such part of the contract, which respects only the liquidation of damages, after a right to them has accrued by a breach of the contract, is not necessary to be set forth in the declaration, but is only matter of evidence, to be given to the jury in reduction of damages. Clarke v. Gray, 6 East, 564; 2 Smith, 622; 4 Esp. 177.

Consideration.]—Where the promise of the defendant is alleged to have been made in consideration of a certain service to be performed by the plaintiff, amongst other things; the omission to specify the other branches of the consideration included under the term "other things," is no ground of nonsuit, unless upon the production of the agreement in which such other branches of the consideration are specified they appear to contain matter in the nature of a condition precedent. Clark v. Morrell, 2 Scott (N.R.) 17; 1 Man. & G. 841; 9 D. P. C. 461.

Where a declaration states several matters as a condition for the defendant's promise, though all are not good, yet, if a sufficient consideration remains, it is enough to support the promise laid in the declaration. King v. Sears, 2 C., M. & R. 48; 5 Tyr. 587; 1 Gale, 241; 4 L. J., Ex. 181.

Signing by Counsel.]—It is very desirable that every statement of claim should be signed by counsel, although, under Ord. XIX., such signature is not obligatory. Duckitt v. Jones, 33 L. T. 777. See now Rules of Supreme Court, 1883, Ord. XIX. r. 4.

The court does not approve of filing any pleading without the sanction of counsel's signature. Barford v. Barford, 3 W. R. 41.

The omission to print counsel's name upon a claim requiring his signature will not prevent its being filed. Coppeard v. Mayhew, 22 L. J., Ch. 408; 1 W. R. 157.

—— By whom.]—Where draft of amended bill is signed by same counsel who signed original bill, and no new engrossment is necessary, counsel's name need not be repeated on the amendment. Otherwise if by different counsel. Webster v. Threlfall, 1 Sim. & S. 135; 1 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 109.

The answer may be signed by the counsel who signed the bill. Anon., 8 L. J., Ch. 319.

A counsel who draws and signs the bill may sign the answers, and act as counsel for the other parties to the suit, unless retained for the plaintiff. Anon., 3 Jur. 603.

—— Forging or Tampering with.]—Solicitor fined 20*l.* for forging counsel's signature to scandalous answer. Whitlock v. Marriot, Dick. 16.

Bill dismissed, counsel's signature counterfeited. Gristing v. Hore, Cary, 82.

Where counsel's name to an answer is forged, court will not order it off file to prejudice of innocent plaintiff. Bull v. Griffin, 2 Anstr. 563.

If counsel discovers that a bill has been tampered with after being signed by him, he should apply to have it taken off the file, with costs to be paid by the plaintiff. Troup v. Ricardo, 34 L. J., Ch. 91 ; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 1161 ; 11 L. T. 399 ; 13 W. R. 137, 147.

Printing—Poverty.]—The court will not dispense with the general orders, requiring the answers to be printed, simply on account of the poverty of the parties. Meux v. Watkins, 7 Jur. (N.S.) 704 ; 9 W. R. 779.

Allegation of Fraud.]—A general allegation of fraud, however strong the words used, where there is no statement of the circumstances relied on as constituting the alleged fraud, is insufficient even to amount to an averment of fraud of which any court ought to take notice. Therefore, an account directed to be taken in this case, where such an allegation had been made, was directed to be taken without regard to this insufficient allegation of fraud. The judgment and execution were ordered to stand as security. Wallingford v. Mutual Society, 50 L. J., Q. B. 49 ; 5 App. Cas. 685 ; 43 L. T. 258 ; 29 W. R. 81—H. L. (E.)

Where, in an action of contract, the defendant in one paragraph of the defence pleaded fraud generally, an order was made, on the application of the plaintiff, for particulars of the acts of fraud relied upon in that paragraph, although the defence in subsequent paragraphs specifically set out certain alleged fraudulent representations. Bastow v. Bradshaw, 8 L. R., Ir. 30.

In an action by the collector-general of Dublin upon a guarantee for the fidelity of a rate collector, the guarantors pleaded that the contract was entered into by them on the faith of a certain statement and representation made by the plaintiff and the person employed, that there had been no balance outstanding from the latter, nor any irregularity in his accounts, and that such representation was untrue :—Held bad, on demurrer, for not alleging either that the statement was fraudulent, or circumstances from which fraud could be inferred as matter of law. In a defence founded upon an alleged false and fraudulent misrepresentation as avoiding a contract, it is not sufficient to allege matters which may be fraudulent, or from which an inference of fraud may be drawn. If the word "fraudulently" be omitted, there must be allegations of fact which necessarily and per se amount to fraud. Byrne v. Muzio, 8 L. R., Ir. 396.

—— Particulars of Fraud, &c., must be upon the Pleadings.]—It is not enough in a statement of claim to refer to particulars of fraud, misrepresentation, breach of trust, wilful default, or undue influence previously furnished to the defendant. Such particulars must, under Ord. XIX. r. 6, be stated on the face of the pleadings. Kingston v. Corker, 29 L. R., Ir. 364.

A statement of claim alleged that the defendants (brokers) had notice of the relations between the plaintiffs (merchants) and their agent, and that the latter had no right to pledge certain goods ; that advances of the brokers were not made bonâ fide within the Factors Acts, but were the result of an arrangement by which the brokers and the agent exchanged cheques :—Held, that this was equivalent to a charge of fraud. Kaltenbach v. Lewis, 45 L. T. 666 ; 30 W. R. 356.

Malice or Fraud alleged but not essential.]—If a declaration discloses a state of facts, upon which an action is maintainable although there is neither malice nor fraud, the plaintiff is not bound to prove either, though both are alleged, and may recover on the liability which the facts disclose, though both fraud and malice are disproved. Swinfen v. Chelmsford (Lord), 5 H. & N. 890 ; 29 L. J., Ex. 382 ; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1205 ; 2 L. T. 406 ; 8 W. R. 545.

Allegation of Duty.]—Where a declaration, after stating facts, alleges that it thereupon became the duty of the defendant to do a certain act, such allegation is to be understood as a mere exposition of the legal liability supposed to result from the previously-stated facts, as an assertion that the defendant became thereby bound by law to do the act, and not as a distinct substantive allegation. Brown v. Mallett, 5 C. B. 599 ; 17 L. J., C. P. 227 ; 12 Jur. 204.

The allegation of duty is superfluous where the facts stated show a legal liability, and it is useless where they do not. Ib.

A declaration, which charges a breach of duty, must contain an allegation from which the duty can be inferred, otherwise the declaration is bad. Metcalfe v. Hetherington, 11 Ex. 257 ; 24 L. J., Ex. 314.

A declaration upon a charter-party between the plaintiffs, the owners of a ship, and the defendant, a merchant at Liverpool, by which it was agreed that the ship should receive on board a cargo from the defendant, and should proceed to a port of discharge, and there deliver it agreeably to the bills of lading, alleged that the defendant should deliver the cargo alongside, and should pay for the hire of the vessel a lump sum, and that the master should sign bills of lading. That the defendant put up the ship as a general ship ; that goods were shipped by him, and that eight bills of lading were made out by the shippers, and signed by the captain ; that it was usual at Liverpool for the shippers to make out and deliver to the captain a copy of each bill of lading, and that the shippers of the cargo by the ship made out copies of the eight bills of lading for the captain, and delivered them to the defendant for the captain ; that the defendant kept them, and that the plaintiffs had no copies, nor was it in their power to obtain any, except from the defendant ; that it was necessary, as the defendant well knew, for the purposes of the voyage, and to enable the plaintiffs to deliver the goods, that a consular manifest should be made out, in which an accurate account of the goods should be given ; that it was the duty of the defendant as charterer, and under the charter-party, upon request to the owners, to hand over the captain's copies of the bills of lading for the purpose of enabling a consular manifest to be made out ; that the defendant, negligently and carelessly, only handed over to the agent of the plaintiff six of the copies ; that, therefore, an incomplete manifest was made out, and consequently the ship was detained at the port of discharge, and the plaintiffs sustained injury by having to pay double dues :—Held, that a general allegation of duty was not sufficient, and therefore the declaration was bad for not shewing that the duty of the defendant to hand over to the plaintiffs the copies of the bills of lading arose from an express contract in the charter-party, or was incorporated in it by mercantile usage, or arose from the circumstances stated. Dutton v. Powles, 2 B. & S. 174; 30 L. J., Q. B. 169; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 725. Affirmed, 2 B. & S. 191; 31 L. J., Q. B. 191; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 970; 6 L. T. 224; 10 W. R. 408—Ex. Ch.

Unprosecuted Felony disclosed.]—Where a civil action claiming damages for acts which, on the face of the pleadings, amount to a felony, was instituted and came before the court upon an interlocutory matter:—Held, that the court should not of its own motion, where no application is made by the defendant, and where no prosecution was pending, stay the action on the ground of the felony not having been prosecuted. A. v. B. or S. v. S., 24 L. R., Ir. 235; 16 Cox, C. C. 566.

A statement of claim is not demurrable on the ground that it shews the cause of action to be a felony for which the felon has not been prosecuted. Roope v. D'Avigdor, 10 Q. B. D. 412; 48 L. T. 761; 47 J. P. 248.

Foreign Law.] — A plea held bad for not with sufficient certainty, but only inferentially, averring what the law of France was by which a bond was invalid. Benham v. Mornington (Earl), 4 D. & L. 213; 3 C. B. 133; 15 L. J., C. P. 221; 10 Jur. 618.

If the law of a foreign country or of a colony is stated in any pleading, the allegation may be traversed as matter of fact. Astley v. Fisher, 6 C. B. 572; 18 L. J., C. P. 59; 12 Jur. 1051.

Performance or Excuse.]—In an action on a special agreement, the plaintiff must aver performance of what is to be done on his part, or shew that he was ready to perform it. Collins v. Gibbs, 2 Burr. 899.

But where a defendant has incapacitated himself from performing his contract, it renders anything further to be done by the plaintiff unnecessary. Knight v. Crockford, 1 Esp. 190; 5 R. R. 729.

To a declaration for a debt due on a foreign contract entered into with a plaintiff abroad, a plea of a composition deed made and registered whilst the plaintiff resided abroad, by which the defendant covenanted to pay a composition in the pound to his creditors on a day passed, must shew that he paid or tendered such composition to the plaintiff, notwithstanding the plaintiff was abroad when it became payable, and the want of an averment in such plea is not cured by an averment that the defendant was always ready and willing to pay to the plaintiff the composition according to the provisions of the deed, and that all conditions having been performed, and all things having happened necessary in that behalf, the plaintiff became bound by the deed as if he had executed the same. Fossard v. Mugnier, 18 C. B. (N.S.) 286; 34 L. J., C. P. 126; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 283; 11 L. T. 635.

Readiness and Willingness.] — Where concurrent acts are to be done by the plaintiff and the defendant, a declaration against the defendant for not performing the act upon his part should allege that the plaintiff was ready and willing to do the concurrent act on his part. Kemble v. Mills, 2 Scott (N.R.) 121; 1 Man. & G. 757; 9 D. P. C. 446.

In a declaration for non-delivery of goods purchased, an averment of performance by the plaintiff of all conditions precedent, and that all things have been done and happened to entitle him to have the goods delivered, is sufficient without an averment of his readiness and willingness to pay. Bentley v. Dawes, 2 C. L. R. 1070; 9 Ex. 666; 23 L. J., Ex. 220.

In an action for not delivering bonds and other securities pursuant to an agreement, where the consideration-money was to be paid on the receipt of the securities; it is not necessary to aver an actual tender of the money, an allegation of the plaintiff being ready and willing to pay is sufficient. Levy v. Herbert (Lord), 1 Moore, 56; 7 Taunt. 314.

Action for not accepting and paying for goods according to contract, with an averment of the plaintiff's readiness and willingness to deliver the goods, of which the defendant had notice:—Held, that the declaration was sufficient, and that it was not necessary that it should allege a tender or offer to deliver. Boyd v. Lett, 2 D. & L. 847; 1 C. B. 222. S. P., Jackson v. Allaway, 7 Scott (N.R.) 875; 6 Man. & G. 942; 13 L. J., C. P. 84; 8 Jur. 63.

A declaration stated that the plaintiff was lawfully possessed for the residue of a term, whereof twenty-one years from the 24th June, 1841, were unexpired, of a house; and thereupon, on the 21st March, 1841, it was agreed that the plaintiff should, on or before the 24th June, 1841, let the same to the defendant by a lease to be granted to the defendant for twenty-one years, the term to commence from the 24th June, 1841. The declaration stated general performance by the plaintiff, and that he was ready and willing to let the house to the defendant, and to grant and execute a lease; yet that the defendant did not nor would become the tenant, nor accept the lease:—Held, that the averment of the plaintiff's readiness and willingness to grant the lease was equivalent to an averment of his having a title to grant it. De Medina v. Norman, 9 M. & W. 820; 2 D. (N.S.) 239; 11 L. J., Ex. 320.

In an action for a breach of contract in refusing to accept, at the time appointed by the contract, and to pay for certain shares in a water, gas and market company (such shares being by the company's act of parliament made personal estate, and a form of transfer under seal being given), it is sufficient to aver that the vendor "had always been ready and willing to do all things, and that all things had happened, &c., necessary to entitle him to the performance by the defendant of his agreement;" and notice to the defendant of the plaintiff's readiness and willingness to transfer the shares is not necessary, or a condition precedent to the plaintiff's right to recover, it being, on the contrary, the duty of the purchaser to prepare and tender a transfer for execution by the plaintiff and a plea of want of such notice is bad, and no defence to the action. Cobbold v. Peto, 27 L. T. 130.

A declaration stated a contract, whereby the plaintiff, the owner of a lighter, was to convey goods for lighterage, to be landed and delivered to the defendant at a certain dock; and the defendant was to receive the goods at the dock from the plaintiff, "in a reasonable time after he should have notice of the plaintiff being ready to land and deliver the same." It then averred that the lighter afterwards arrived with the goods at the dock; "and that the plaintiff was ready to land and deliver them to and for the defendant, of which the defendant had notice;" alleging that the defendant, although requested to receive the goods, neglected and refused so to do for an unreasonable time after such notice:—Held, that the averment that the plaintiff was ready to land and deliver was insufficient; the declaration should have averred that the plaintiff was always ready to land and deliver for a reasonable period after notice. Granger v. Dacre, 1 D. & L. 573; 12 M. & W. 431; 13 L. J., Ex. 93.

In an action on an agreement, by "which the plaintiff agreed to sell, and the defendant to buy, all that messuage, farm and lands, as comprised in an indenture of lease for the residue of a term of fourteen years, and it was further agreed that the plaintiff, on receiving 5*s.*, and such sums as should be the reasonable value of the fixtures, would execute an assignment; and that upon the execution of such assignment and payment made as aforesaid, the defendant should be put in possession of the premises, fixtures, &c.":—Semble, that the execution of the assignment, and the putting of the defendant into possession of the premises, &c., were acts to be done by the plaintiff contemporaneously with the payment of the money by the defendant; and, therefore, performance by the plaintiff, or a readiness and willingness to perform them, should be averred in the declaration. Nash v. Breese, 2 D. (N.S.) 1015; 11 M. & W. 352; 12 L. J., Ex. 305.

To an action for breach of a contract, by which the defendant agreed with the plaintiff to purchase of him all the articles required for working a patent, the court refused to allow a traverse of the readiness and willingness of the plaintiff to supply the defendant with such articles, and that the articles which he was so ready and willing to supply were not reasonably fit for the working of the patent. Griffith v. Selby, 9 Ex. 393; 2 C. L. R. 486; 23 L. J., Ex. 226; 18 Jur. 178; 2 W. R. 221.

In an action for dismissing the plaintiff from the defendant's service before the expiration of a year, the declaration alleged that the plaintiff had always been ready and willing and offered to remain in the defendant's employ for a year. Plea, that the plaintiff did not offer to remain as alleged:—Held, that the plea raised an immaterial issue, the gist of the averment being the readiness which implied the ability and willingness of the plaintiff to continue his services. Wallis v. Warren, 7 D. & L. 58; 4 Ex. 361; 18 L. J., Ex. 449.

To a declaration on an agreement, setting out that the plaintiff had agreed to sell and that the defendant had agreed to purchase of the plaintiff one-fourth share in a mining sett for 250*l.*, and that the plaintiff and the defendant agreed forthwith to form a company, to be registered with limited liability, for working the mining sett, and that, so soon as the company should be registered with limited liability, the defendant would pay to the plaintiff the 250*l.*, assigning as a breach nonpayment of the 250*l.*; the defendant pleaded that the plaintiff never has been at any time ready and willing to convey the one-fourth share to the defendant according to the agreement:—Held, a good answer to the action. Marsden v. Moore, 4 H. & N. 500; 28 L. J., Ex. 288.

A plaintiff agreed to serve the defendant for the term of ten years, in the capacity of a brewer; in consideration of the premises, and of the due, full, and complete service of the plaintiff, "the defendant agreed to pay him 20*l.* on execution of the agreement, to furnish him with a house and coals during the whole of the term of ten years, and to pay him the weekly sum of 2*l.* 10*s.* during the term." The plaintiff entered into the service under the agreement. Some years afterwards the plaintiff fell ill, and was unable to attend personally to business; but during that time he instructed the defendant in the art of brewing. The defendant refused to pay the plaintiff his wages for the period during which he had been ill, but retained him in the service; and, after he was able to attend again personally to business, paid him as before under the agreement. To an action by the plaintiff to recover wages for the period during which he had been ill, the defendant pleaded that the plaintiff was not, during any part of the time for which such wages were claimed, ready and willing or able to render, and did not, in fact, during any part of such time render, the agreed or any service:—Held, a good plea, the readiness and willingness to perform the service being a condition precedent to the right to wages; and the gist of the plea being that the plaintiff wilfully refused or omitted to serve. Cuckson v. Stones, 1 El. & El. 248; 28 L. J., Q. B. 25; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 337; 7 W. R. 134.

Where issue is taken on an averment in a declaration, that the plaintiff was ready and willing and able to do a certain act, the defendant may show thereunder any circumstance, such as the insanity of the plaintiff, which disqualified him from doing the act in question. Kirtley v. Copeland, 1 Car. & K. 319.

Construction of.]—A pleading is to be taken most strongly against the pleader, and where a bill contains general and specific allegations as to the same matter, the general allegation must be referred to the particular and specific one. Ellis v. Colman, 25 Beav. 662.

A pleading is to be taken most strongly against the pleader, and a general allegation of the defendant being a trustee cannot support a bill, unless there are facts alleged shewing the trust. Eran v. Avon Corporation, 29 Beav. 144; 30 L. J., Ch. 165; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1361; 3 L. T. 347; 9 W. R. 84.

The plaintiff as the widow and administratrix of a deceased person claimed damages for her husband's death caused by the defendant's negligently letting fall upon her husband from their boiler a certain "corrosive liquid or other dangerous substance." At the trial it was proved that what fell on the deceased must have been scalding water:—Held, that no amendment of the statement of claim was necessary. Bull v. Baldwin, 56 J. P. 729—C. A.

Where a declaration or other pleading is susceptible of a construction that will make it good, it is not competent to the party pleading it to insist upon a construction that will make it bad. Moore v. Foster, 5 C. B. 220; 5 D. & L. 352.

It is a general rule in pleading that an equivocal expression shall be construed against the party using it; but if the other party pleads over, it shall be construed in that sense which will support the previous pleadings. Hobson v. Middleton, 9 D. & R. 249; 6 B. & C. 295; 5 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 160.

A plea is to receive a fair and a reasonable construction, and if ambiguous, is to be construed most strongly against the party pleading. Goldham v. Edwards, 18 C. B. 389; 25 L. J., C. P. 223; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 493; 4 W. R. 550—Ex. Ch.

The rule that pleadings are to be taken most strongly against the party pleading, is subject, both at law and in equity, to an exception as to the pleading of matters that are peculiarly within the knowledge of the opposite party. Murphy v. Glass, 6 Moore, P. C. (N.S.) 1; L. R. 2 P. C. 408; 20 L. T. 461; 17 W. R. 592.

Recourse cannot be had to a replication for the purpose of curing a defect in a plea. Lockwood v. Nash, 18 C. B. 536.

A party may avail himself of admissions or statements of particular facts in the pleadings of the opposite party, and one pleading may be cured by admissions in another, although the latter may have been demurred to. Hyde v. Watts, 1 D. & L. 479; 12 M. & W. 254; 13 L. J., Ex. 41.

If a declaration contains allegations capable of being understood in two senses, and in one sense it will sustain the action, and in the other it will not, after verdict it must be construed in the sense which will sustain the action. Emmens v. Elderton, 4 H. L. Cas. 624; 13 C. B. 495; 18 Jur. 21.

Publication to Third Parties.]—If a statement of claim in an action contains charges injuriously affecting the defendant's character, and if the plaintiff, before the hearing of the action, sends copies of the statement to persons not parties to the action, he is guilty of a contempt of court, and will be restrained from further publishing the statement, and ordered to pay the costs of a motion to commit him. Bowden v. Russell, 46 L. J., Ch. 414; 36 L. T. 177.

Waiver of Forfeiture by Pleading.]—A landlord suing in respect of breaches of covenants agreed to be inserted in a lease contracted for, claimed an injunction and possession; his pleadings stated that he was willing to grant the lease:—Held, that forfeiture was waived by the pleadings. Evans v. Davis, 48 L. J., Ch. 223; 10 Ch. D. 747; 39 L. T. 391; 27 W. R. 285.

Taking Copies of.]—The practice of the record and writ clerk's office is to produce the bill in a suit, or furnish a copy of it, after decree to any person who desires it, but not before—except in a representative suit to members of the class represented—unless with the plaintiff's consent, or under special circumstances. Coates v. Brown, 42 L. J., Ch. 378.

When, in a suit for specific performance of a contract to sell, it was discovered that some other specific performance suit had been commenced against defendants, but compromised:—Held, that plaintiffs were entitled to a copy of the bill in the compromised suit, notwithstanding the opposition of plaintiffs in that suit to any copy being furnished. Ib.

The clerk of records and writs is bound to furnish certified copies of chancery pleadings on application under the 14th section of the 14 & 15 Vict. c. 99. Reeve v. Hodson, 10 Hare (App.) xix; 22 L. J., Ch. 696; 17 Jur. 344; 1 W. R. 244.

Taking an office copy of an answer is not a waiver of an irregularity in its title. Fry v. Mantell, 4 Beav. 485; 11 L. J., Ch. 68; 5 Jur. 1194.

b. STATEMENT OF CLAIM.

See R. S. C., 1883, Ord. XX.

Form in Schedule—Insufficiency.]—A statement of claim in a salvage action was drawn in the Form No. 6 of Appendix C. to the Rules of the Supreme Court, 1883; on motion by the defendants under Ord. XIX. r. 7, for a further and better statement of claim or particulars:—Held, that the plaintiffs must deliver a fuller statement of claim, and that in salvage actions a fuller form than that given in Appendix C., No. 6, should generally be followed. The Isis, 53 L. J., P. 14; 8 P. D. 227; 49 L. T. 444; 32 W. R. 171; 5 Asp. M. C. 155.

Differing from Writ.]—By the writ in a partnership action the plaintiff claimed an account, and an injunction restraining the defendant from dealing with the partnership assets. The statement of claim alleged (i.) misrepresentations on the faith of which he paid the defendant a premium, and (ii.) a course of conduct on the part of the defendant entitling him to damages, and claimed, in addition to the relief sought by the writ, the return of the premium, and damages:—Held, that the statement of claim, inasmuch as it sought relief substantially different from that claimed by the writ, and prevented a reference to arbitration, was not "an alteration, modification, or extension" of the writ within the meaning of Ord. XX. r. 4, and that it must be struck out. Cave v. Crew, 62 L. J., Ch. 530; 3 R. 401; 68 L. T. 254; 41 W. R. 359.

In a creditors' action for administration of real estate, it is sufficient that the statement of claim should express that the plaintiff sues on behalf of all creditors. Eyre v. Cox, 24 W. R. 317.

A writ being general, and the declaration special, as assignee:—Held, no ground for setting them aside as irregular. Knowles v. Johnson, 2 D. P. C. 653.

An allottee of shares brought an action for fraudulent misrepresentation against directors of his company, and by the indorsement on the writ he claimed indemnity and rescission of his contract to take shares. The company was ordered to be wound up. The plaintiff by his claim asked for indemnity, but not rescission. An application to determine whether the plaintiff was to be a contributory stood over pending this trial:—Held, that the plaintiff could not obtain rescission on the pleadings, and leave to amend was refused. Cargill v. Bower, 47 L. J., Ch. 649; 10 Ch. D. 502; 38 L. T. 779; 26 W. R. 716.

Writ Incorporated with.]—When a plaintiff sues in a representative capacity, the statement of claim is to be read for the purposes of a demurrer, as if that fact was stated therein. Johnson v. Burges, 47 L. J., Ch. 552.

When Necessary to Deliver.]—When an action by a cestui que trust under a will against executors and devisees in trust, for administration of the real and personal estate of the testator, was to be heard as a short cause, the court considered it unnecessary for the plaintiff to deliver a statement of claim. Green v. Coleby, 45 L. J., Ch. 303; 1 Ch. D. 693; 24 W. R. 246.

When an action is brought by a legatee for the administration of the estate of his testator, and it is desired to take judgment short in the first instance, a statement of claim should be delivered. Breton v. Mockett, 33 L. T. 684.

When an action is brought to carry into execution the trusts of a deed, or other written instrument, a statement of claim should be delivered. Boyes v. Cook, 33 L. T. 778.

A defendant not appearing and proceeded against under Ord. XIII. r. 9, is not to be taken to have dispensed with the delivery of a statement of claim. Minton v. Metcalfe, 46 L. J., Ch. 584; 36 L. T. 683.

Information—Title of Claim.]—In an action by the attorney-general at the relation of a plaintiff, the title information should no longer be used. Att.-Gen. v. Shrewsbury Bridge Co., 42 L. T. 79.

Notice in lieu of—Writ specially Indorsed.]—The plaintiff, a barrister, issued his writ on the 30th August, 1879, indorsed for an injunction and other relief, and for payment of a sum of 1,000*l.*, alleged to have been received by the defendant as his solicitor. On the 12th December, 1879, the plaintiff was ordered to deliver a statement of claim on or before the 12th January. On the 10th January he delivered a statement of claim in person; on the 12th his solicitor, who had been that day served with a summons to set aside the statement of claim for irregularity, delivered a notice that his claim appeared by the indorsement on the writ in the form prescribed by Ord. XXI. r. 4:—Held, that the writ was not specially indorsed within the meaning of Ord. III. r. 6, and the statement of claim delivered by the solicitor must be set aside. Yeatman v. Snow, 42 L. T. 502; 28 W. R. 574.

—— Objection on ground of Insufficiency.]—A writ was specially indorsed, "The plaintiff's claim is against the defendant as the acceptor of a bill of exchange. The following are particulars:—Bill of exchange for 180*l.*, dated 27th of March, 1882, drawn by C. upon and accepted by defendant, payable three months after date." The plaintiff having delivered a notice under Ord. XXI. r. 4, that his claim was that which appeared by the indorsement on the writ, the defendant demurred on the ground that the statement was insufficient, and disclosed no cause of action:—Held, that there was no ground of demurrer, and that the defendant's remedy, if any, was to apply for a further statement under the rule. Robertson v. Howard (3 C. P. D. 280) disapproved. Fawcus v. Charlton, 52 L. J., Q. B. 710; 10 Q. B. D. 516.

A specially indorsed writ, together with a notice in lieu of a statement of claim under Ord. XXI. r. 4, are equivalent to a statement of claim for all purposes, and a defendant is, therefore, entitled to demur to them, if the claim on the writ shews no cause of action. Robertson v. Howard, 47 L. J., C. P. 480; 3 C. P. D. 280; 38 L. T. 715; 26 W. R. 683.

In an action for money alleged to have been obtained from the plaintiffs by fraudulent misrepresentation, the nature of which misrepresentation and the particulars of the sums sued for being set out in the indorsement of the writ of summons, the plaintiff delivered a notice in lieu of statement of claim under Ord. XX. r. 2:—Held, sufficient, and motion by the defendant to compel a statement of claim to be delivered, refused. Young v. Beattie, 16 L. R., Ir. 192.

Joinder of Alternative and Inconsistent Claims.] — See JOINDER OF CAUSES OF ACTION, ante, col. 121 et seq.

Title, Allegation of—Action for Recovery of Land.]—In an action for the recovery of land, of which the plaintiff has never been in possession, the statement of claim must allege the nature of the deeds and documents upon which he relies in deducing his title from the person under whom he claims; and a general statement that by assurances, wills, documents, and crown grants in the possession of the defendants, without further describing them, the plaintiff is entitled to the land, is embarrassing, and liable to be struck out under the Rules of the Supreme Court, Ord. XXVII. r. 1. Philipps v. Philipps, 48 L. J., Q. B. 135; 4 Q. B. D. 127; 39 L. T. 556; 27 W. R. 436—C. A. S. P., Sutcliffe v. James, 40 L. T. 875; 27 W. R. 750.

The statement of claim in an action for the recovery of land, after alleging facts which would shew a title in Frances Evelyn, contained a statement that "the said Frances Evelyn died intestate as to real estate and leaving Sir Hugh Evelyn her heir-at-law," and then stated facts which shewed a title in the plaintiff to Sir Hugh Evelyn's estate:—Held, on a summons to strike out the paragraph above stated, that it was not embarrassing, and was a sufficient statement of the facts on which the plaintiff relied under Ord. XIX. r. 4. Evelyn v. Evelyn, 42 L. T. 248; 28 W. R. 531.

In an action for the recovery of land, a statement of claim, simply alleging that the plaintiff was wrongfully dispossessed of the lands by the defendant, was set aside. In such an action the plaintiff must, in his pleading, state such facts as would (if true) shew that he had an interest in the land entitling him to recover. O'Connor v. O'Hara, 8 L. R., Ir. 249.

The statement of claim, in an action to recover possession of land for nonpayment of rent, alleged that, prior to 1874, defendant was tenant to the plaintiff of certain premises (being those to which the action related) in the possession of the defendant, at a yearly rent, payable on every 1st of May and 1st of November; that the defendant paid the rent for said premises up to the 1st of May, 1874, but had not paid any rent since the 1st of May, 1874; and that, at the time of action brought, eight years' rent was due and owing to the plaintiff. The arrears of rent as well as possession were claimed:—Held, that the statement of claim was embarrassing for not averring with sufficient particularity any still subsisting contract of tenancy between the plaintiff and the defendant, and for pleading evidence. Molly v. Lewers, 12 L. R., Ir. 39—C. A.

In an action to recover possession of land for nonpayment of rent, semble, an allegation in the statement of claim that the defendant paid rent is unnecessary and embarrassing, as either wholly immaterial or as pleading evidence merely; but if payment of rent be alleged, the allegation may be traversed by the defendant in his statement of defence. Rowley v. Laffan, 10 L. R., Ir. 9.

In an ejectment for nonpayment of rent, brought by the assignee of the reversion against a lessee, it is sufficient for the plaintiff in his statement of claim to aver generally that the estate of the lessor became vested in him without more particularly stating the intermediate devolution of title. Musgrave v. Walsh, 6 L. R., Ir. 335.

In an action to recover possession of land for nonpayment of rent by a plaintiff claiming under a derivative title, the statement of claim set out a lease, and alleged that the defendant entered into possession under it, and then stated that, on the death of the lessor, all his estate and interest came to and was now vested in the plaintiff. The defendant having moved to set aside the statement of claim as embarrassing :—Held, that the statement of the devolution of the plaintiff's title was sufficient. Beatty v. Leacy, 16 L. R., Ir. 132 —C. A.

Where in an action for the recovery of land a document is relied upon in the pleadings as establishing the claimant's title, the effect only of the document need be stated. The precise words are not material. Darbyshire v. Leigh, 65 L. J., Q. B. 360 ; [1896] 1 Q. B. 554 ; 74 L. T. 241 ; 44 W. R. 452—C. A.

In an action by the tenant in possession against a wrong-doer, it is sufficient to declare generally, without disclosing any title. Grimstead v. Marlow, 4 Term Rep. 717.

But if a defendant justifies under a right, it must be formally set out in the plea. Ib.

—— Easement.]—In an action to recover damages caused to the plaintiff's reversion in a dwelling-house by interference with an easement, it is not sufficient to allege in the statement of claim that the plaintiff is entitled to such easement ; the plaintiff must shew how he is so entitled, whether by grant, or prescription, or otherwise, and must set out the facts upon which he relies as entitling him to such easement. Farrell v. Coogan, 12 L. R., Ir. 14.

—— Right of Way.]—A plaintiff who claims to be entitled to a right of way over a road, and seeks an injunction to restrain its obstruction, should state in his statement of claim the way in which he claims to be entitled to the right, and the route and limitations of the road over which he claims it. A general statement, therefore, that there is a road over a certain farm connecting two other farms, and that the plaintiff and his tenants are entitled to a right of way over it, is embarrassing. Harris v. Jenkins, 52 L. J., Ch. 437 ; 22 Ch. D. 481 ; 47 L. T. 570 ; 31 W. R. 137.

The plaintiff was entitled to a right of way on foot through a passage across the defendant's premises. This passage had been formerly level throughout, with the exception of a three-inch step. The defendants raised part of the passage to a height of seven inches, or thereabouts, with an ascent of four and a descent of three steps. The plaintiff brought an action for the obstruction to his right of way caused by this alteration, and in his statement of claim alleged that his servants had been in the habit of carrying bales and other heavy goods along the passage. Semble, that the allegation in the statement of claim that the plaintiff's servants, in using the passage, frequently carried bales and other heavy goods, was embarrassing. Austin v. Scottish Widows' Fund, 8 L. R., Ir. 197.

In an action for interfering with the plaintiffs' right of way to a certain quarry, the plaintiffs alleged, in the first paragraph of their statement of claim, that they were entitled to a right of way from the public highway through a certain gateway along a certain passage to the said quarry, and back again from the said quarry to the public highway, for themselves, their agents, servants and licensees, on foot and with horses, carts and carriages, at all times of the year ; and in the second paragraph they alleged that they were entitled to a right of way from the public highway through a certain gateway, along a certain passage to the said quarry, and back again from the said quarry to the public highway, for themselves, their agents, servants and licensees, on foot and with horses and carts, at all times convenient and necessary for the working of the said quarry, and for removing stones, gravel and other material therefrom. On motion to set aside the first and second paragraphs of the statement of claim :—Held, that the statement of claim was sufficient. Kenmare (Lord) v. Casey, 12 L. R., Ir. 374.

—— Reversion — Action on Covenants in Lease.]—In an action upon covenants in an expired lease, the plaintiff stated the lease ; that the term had expired ; that at its expiration the defendants were the assigns of the lease, and liable to perform the lessee's covenants ; that the plaintiff became, and at the expiration of the term was, entitled to the immediate reversion in the demised property, subject only to the term ; that he was and is entitled to enforce all the lessee's covenants, and that the defendants had for eight years paid him rent :—Held, such pleading was insufficient, that the plaintiff ought also to have shewn what the reversion was which the lessor had, and how the plaintiff derived his title to that particular reversion, and that the statement of claim must be struck out under Ord. XIX. r. 27, as a pleading tending to embarrass the fair trial of the action. Philipps v. Philipps (4 Q. B. D. 127) followed. Davis v. James, 53 L. J., Ch. 523 ; 26 Ch. D. 778 ; 50 L. T. 115 ; 32 W. R. 406.

Heirship.]—Semble, that in a claim of heirship the pedigree, if relied on, should, as a rule, be set out in the statement of claim as the material fact on which the claim is grounded. Palmer v. Palmer, 61 L. J., Q. B. 236 ; [1892] 1 Q. B. 319.

Plaintiff's Name.]—A plaintiff having declared as Henry H. Lindsey, instead of setting forth his second name in full, the court refused to set aside the declaration as irregular. Lindsey v. Wells, 3 Bing. (N.C.) 777 ; 4 Scott, 471 ; Hodges, 97 ; 5 D. P. C. 618 ; 6 L. J., C. P. 237.

No advantage can be taken at the trial of a misnomer of the plaintiff, though there is a person of the name erroneously used. Moody v. Aslatt, 1 C. M. & R. 771 ; 5 Tyr. 492 ; 1 Gale, 47 ; 4 L. J., Ex. 78.

It is a question of fact who is the real plaintiff. Ib.

Where a single vowel immediately precedes a surname, the court will understand such vowel to be the christian name of the party. Kinnersley v. Knott, 7 D. & L. 128 ; 7 C. B. 980 ; 18 L. J., C. P. 281 ; 13 Jur. 658.

Allegations of Time.]—It is not necessary to shew on the face of a declaration, that the cause of action accrued before the writ issued. Owen v. Waters, 5 D. P. C. 324 ; 2 M. & W. 91 ; 6 L. J., Ex. 13.

The plaintiffs declared, that theretofore, to wit, on the 24th December, 1835, by an agreement in writing made, it was agreed that certain bills, which had been drawn upon a company of which the defendant was a member, should be paid by the plaintiffs; that the plaintiffs should have the option of taking shares in the company; and that in the event of their declining so to do, the defendant and certain other persons should repay the sum so advanced by the plaintiffs at any time after the 1st October then next, on the company having three calendar months' previous notice requiring the same. The declaration, which was dated 16th December, 1837, averred, that after the making of the agreement, and more than three calendar months before the action, the plaintiffs gave the company notice that they declined to take the shares, and required payment, at the expiration of three calendar months, of the sum advanced by them: —Held, that, notwithstanding the date of the agreement was laid under a videlicet, it sufficiently appeared, on the face of the declaration, that the action was not prematurely brought, although it was not alleged that the 1st of October next after the making of the agreement had elapsed before the action. Harrison v. Heathorn, 6 Scott (N.R.) 121; 5 Man. & G. 322; 12 L. J., C. P. 158. Contra, Parkinson v. Whitehead, 2 Scott (N.R.) 620; 2 Man. & G. 329; 11 L. J., C. P. 241.

A declaration stated that the plaintiff, being possessed of a bill of exchange, the defendant bought of the plaintiff, and the plaintiff sold to the defendant, the bill for 200*l.*; and it was agreed, that upon E. handing over to the plaintiff the 200*l.*, the bill should be delivered to E. It then alleged that the plaintiff was ready and willing to deliver the bill; and that, although the defendant had paid 50*l.*, parcel of the 200*l.*, yet (although requested) he had not paid the residue:—Held bad, for want of an averment that a reasonable time had elapsed since the making of the agreement, notwithstanding the defendant had pleaded over. Stavert v. Eastwood, 2 D. (N.S.) 988; 11 M. & W. 179; 12 L. J., Ex. 268.

A declaration stated that the defendant shipped on board the plaintiff's barge goods to be landed and delivered at a particular dock, and in consideration thereof the defendant promised to receive the goods in a reasonable time after notice of the plaintiff being ready to deliver them. It then alleged, that afterwards the plaintiff was ready to deliver the goods, but the defendant refused to receive them for an unreasonable time:—Held, that the declaration need not shew that the lapse of such reasonable time took place before the commencement of the action. Granger v. Dacre, 1 D. & L. 573; 12 M. & W. 431; 13 L. J., Ex. 93.

Exceptions and Qualifications.]—In an action by the freighter against a shipowner for breach of a charter-party of affreightment, the declaration stated that it was agreed that the ship should sail to S. H., and there load coals, and proceed to L. and deliver the cargo; freight being payable per ton (the act of God, the Queen's enemies, fire and all and every dangers and accidents of the seas, rivers and navigation of whatsoever nature and kind during the voyage, always excepted). That the charter-party should be in force for six voyages, and that they should not be later than the last day of February, 1853. Averment, that the plaintiff did all things necessary to entitle him to have the six voyages performed, and had always been ready and willing to do all things required, yet the ship did not make the six voyages, and that the defendant did not permit the vessel for the fourth time, or for any time except three times, to proceed to S. H. and load coals:—Held, that the declaration was good, it not being necessary for the plaintiff to negative the fact of the defendant being within any of the exceptions in the charter-party, it being the duty of the defendant if he relied upon such exceptions to plead it. Wheeler v. Bavidge, 9 Ex. 668; 2 C. L. R. 1077; 23 L. J., Ex. 221.

Action against Husband—Ante-nuptial Debt—Allegation of Assets unnecessary.]—In an action against a husband and wife married since the Married Women's Property Act, 1874, for the recovery of a debt of the wife contracted before the marriage, it is not necessary that the statement of claim should allege that the husband has received assets of the wife; it is sufficient to allege that the husband is liable for the debt, leaving it to the husband to exercise his option of pleading non-liability under the provisions of the act. Matthews v. Whittle, 49 L. J., Ch. 359; 13 Ch. D. 811; 43 L. T. 114; 28 W. R. 822.

Defamation—Innuendo—Sufficiency of.]—In an action for slander the statement of claim alleged that the defendant falsely and maliciously spoke and published the following of the plaintiff: "Did he (meaning the plaintiff) have a fire twice?" (meaning thereby that the plaintiff had upon two occasions set his business premises on fire or caused them to be set on fire). "He (meaning the plaintiff) has had two fires, and is a dangerous man to have on your premises" (meaning thereby that the plaintiff had upon two occasions wilfully set on fire his business premises, or caused them to be set on fire, and was likely to do so again):—Held, that the plaintiff must be nonsuited on the ground that the innuendo was insufficiently alleged to give a good cause of action. Jacobs v. Schmaltz, 62 L. T. 121. See also DEFAMATION.

Assignment—Statute.]—It is sufficient for the assignee of a bail-bond to state in his declaration that the sheriff assigned the bond to him according to the form of the statute, without adding "that the assignment was under the hand and seal of the sheriff"; for under that general allegation he must prove that it was under hand and seal if traversed. Dawes v. Papworth, Willes, 408.

Defendant not concerned in whole Relief.]—When plaintiffs have a common interest in all the matters comprised in a suit, the objection of a defendant that he is not concerned in the whole subject-matter, is one the allowance of which is in the discretion of the court, which will be guided by considerations of convenience under the particular circumstances of the case. Coates v. Legard, 44 L. J., Ch. 201; L. R. 19 Eq. 56; 31 L. T. 625; 23 W. R. 40.

By a marriage settlement real estate was limited to such uses as the husband and wife should appoint, and, in default of appointment, to the use of the trustees during the life of the wife on trust for her, for her separate use, with remainder to the husband in fee. The husband entered into a contract to sell the property, the purchaser having notice of the provisions of the settlement. The purchase-money was paid to the trustees of the settlement, and a draft conveyance was approved, in the form of an appointment by the husband and wife to the purchaser; but before the conveyance had been executed the husband suddenly died, having, by a will dated before the contract, devised all his real estate to trustees for his widow for life, and after her death to sell and divide the proceeds as therein directed. The widow, who was one of the executors, brought an action against the purchaser, the other executors and the devisees in trust under the husband's will, asking the court to determine whether she could be compelled to concur in the conveyance to the purchaser, what was the effect of the contract for sale, what would be the devolution of the purchase-money if the contract should be completed, and whether, if the contract was completed by the trustees of the settlement alone, the purchaser would be entitled to compensation out of the purchase-money in respect of her life interest:—Held, that the statement of claim was not open to demurrer by the purchaser, on the ground that he was not interested in all the questions raised, or on the ground that only a declaratory decree was asked for. Cox v. Barker, 3 Ch. D. 359; 35 L. T. 635—C. A.

Wilful Default—Specific Acts.]—A plaintiff seeking relief against wilful default must allege in his pleading some specific act of wilful default, or at least make out a strong case for inquiry. Moore v. M'Glynn, [1894] 1 Ir. R. 74.

General Relief.]—The rule is that relief may be given under the general prayer if a proper case is made by the bill, different from the specific relief prayed for, but not inconsistent with it. Accordingly, where the bill prayed that the defendant might refund certain dividends, and be restrained from receiving others till the other creditor had received as much as he had by means of a security, and the bill also stated that he was endeavouring, by virtue of the adjudication of a foreign court, to procure payment to himself of certain debts due to the bankrupt, it was held that the defendant was entitled, under the circumstances, to realise his security without prejudice to his right of proof. But it was held, nevertheless, that under the prayer for general relief the plaintiffs might obtain an injunction to restrain him from receiving further dividends till he had abandoned the proceedings against the debtors. Cockerell v. Dickens, 1 Mont. D. & D. 45; 3 Moore, P. C. 98.

Under a prayer for general relief the court is at liberty to give relief consistently with the case stated, but it never gives relief inconsistent therewith; as, for instance, directing the execution of a deed different from that of which the execution was prayed. Stewart v. Gloag, Macl. & R. 721.

A plaintiff cannot obtain relief inconsistent with the case made by the bill. Mathers v. Green, 35 L. J., Ch. 1; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 845; 13 L. T. 420; 14 W. R. 17.

Relief not specifically prayed may be within the prayer for general relief. Beaumont v. Boulthee, 5 Ves. 495. See Palk v. Clinton, 12 Ves. 48; 8 R. R. 283.

Relief under the general prayer if consistent with the case made by the bill. Hiern v. Mill, 13 Ves. 114; 9 R. R. 149.

The prayer for general relief is not available for the purpose of obtaining a decree at variance with the case made by the statements of the bill. Hill v. G. N. Ry., 5 De G. M. & G. 66; 23 L. J., Ch. 524; 18 Jur. 685; 2 W. R. 335.

The prayer for general relief contained in a bill implies that the plaintiff desires that everything may be done which is necessary for the purposes of the relief which he expressly prays. Jervis v. Berridge, L. R. 8 Ch. 351; 28 L. T. 481; 21 W. R. 395.

A bill need not contain a specific allegation of the grounds for relief, but it will be sufficient if these grounds are by a reasonable deduction deducible from the facts stated in the bill. Knox v. Gye, 16 L. T. 76; 15 W. R. 628.

Interest refused because not prayed by bill. Weymouth v. Boyer, 1 Ves. J. 417.

Executors charged with interest on balances though not prayed by the bill. Turner v. Turner, 1 Jac. & Walk. 39.

Assignment of Facts to Prayer.]—Facts stated in a pleading need not be assigned to any particular prayer, so long as they tend to shew that the party relying on them is entitled to any one of the reliefs claimed, the paragraph containing them is not demurrable. Watson v. Hawkins, 24 W. R. 884.

So long as they entitle the party pleading them to any relief at all, whether expressly prayed for or not, the paragraph is not demurrable. Ib.

c. Defence.

See R. S. C., 1883, Ord. XXI.

What is—Signing Judgment in Default.]—The plaintiff issued a writ for the recovery of possession of certain premises against the defendant on 2nd February, and on the 13th of that month the defendant delivered at the office of the plaintiff's solicitor a document dated and signed by the defendant, setting out the terms under which he alleged that he held the premises. The plaintiff's solicitor signed judgment on the ground that no defence had been delivered. On a summons to set aside the judgment as irregular:—Held, that the document so delivered was not a defence, and that the judgment must stand. Marshall v. Jones, 52 J. P. 423.

Plea to Damages.]—The plaintiff, a professional jockey, sought to recover damages for a libel which stated that he was in the habit of pulling horses belonging to a certain stable. The defendant pleaded a justification, but sought leave to amend his defence by stating that the plaintiff was commonly reputed to have been in the habit of so unfairly and dishonestly riding horses (generally and not of a particular stable) as to prevent their winning races:—Held, that the amendment could not be allowed, since it was a plea to damages only. Wood v. Durham (Earl), 57 L. J., Q. B. 547; 21 Q. B. D. 501; 59 L. T. 142; 37 W. R. 222.

Where special damage is alleged in the declaration, and is essential to the maintenance of the action, such special damage may be traversed, and if not traversed is admitted. Perring v. Harris, 2 M. & Rob. 5.

But where the special damage is not the gist of the action, but a consequence only of the right of action, a traverse of such allegation is immaterial and improper. Smith v. Thomas, 2 Bing. (N.C.) 380; 1 Hodges, 355; 4 D. P. C. 333; 5 L. J., C. P. 52.

Inconsistent Defence.]—In an action for nuisance, payment into court, together with a denial of the right of action in respect of which the payment is made cannot be allowed. Spurr v. Hall, 46 L. J., Q. B. 693; 2 Q. B. D. 615; 37 L. T. 313; 26 W. R. 78. But see following cases.

Where a defendant has so pleaded, the defence will be amended as embarrassing under Ord. XXVII. r. 1. Ib.

As a general rule, a defendant may, by his defence, deny the plaintiff's causes of action, and at the same time plead payment into court in respect of the whole or any part of them. Berdan v. Greenwood, 47 L. J., Ex. 628; 3 Ex. D. 251; 39 L. T. 223; 26 W. R. 902—C. A.

Quære, whether this general rule may under special circumstances include actions brought to try a right of or in respect of property which is denied, or to establish character which has been assailed, and actions where the plaintiff is by the defence charged with fraud. Ib.

Quære, whether the case of Spurr v. Hall, supra, was rightly decided. Ib.

The defendant, in an action for a libel published in a newspaper, admitted the publication of the alleged libel, but pleaded that, with the exception of certain innuendoes alleged in the statement of claim, the libel was true. In the alternative he pleaded the insertion of a full apology in the newspaper, and payment into court of 40*s.*:—Held, that the offering of an apology and payment into court and a justification could be pleaded together. Hawkesley v. Bradshaw, 49 L. J., Q. B. 333; 5 Q. B. D. 302; 42 L. T. 285; 28 W. R. 557—C. A. See now Rules of Supreme Court, 1883, Ord. XXII. r. 1.

It is no objection to pleas that they are inconsistent. Wilkinson v. Small, 3 D. P. C. 564; 1 H. & W. 214.

Inconsistent pleas may be pleaded if intended bonâ fide to support different substantial grounds of defence. Triebnerr v. Duerr, 3 D. P. C. 133; 1 Scott, 102; 1 Bing. (N.C.) 266.

A defendant may, in some cases, plead several pleas, shewing different legal conclusions arising out of the same state of facts. Currie v. Almond, 5 Bing. (N.C.) 224; 7 Scott, 172; 7 D. P. C. 249; 1 Arn. 483; 8 L. J., C. P. 103; 3 Jur. 171.

A defendant will not be allowed to plead several matters where the defence is vexatious, and some of the pleas are technical, and beside the merits. Cooling v. G. N. Ry., 15 Q. B. 486; 19 L. J., Q. B. 529; 14 Jur. 875.

Payment into Court specifying Items.]—Where a plaintiff claims for distinct pieces of work and labour, alleged in separate paragraphs of the statement of claim, a defendant who has paid money into court generally need not specify in his defence how much is paid in respect of each head of claim. Puraire v. Loibl, 49 L. J., C. P. 481; 43 L. T. 427—C. A. See PAYMENT INTO COURT, supra, col. 249.

The defendants in an action for libel admitted part of the innuendo and denied the other; they added a plea under Lord Campbell's Act, with a payment into court generally:—Held, that the defence ought to state to what part of the libel the payment was intended to apply. Mackay v. Manchester Press Co., 54 J. P. 22.

Statute of Frauds—How Raised and Pleaded.]—By Ord. XIX. r. 23, a defence under the Statute of Frauds, or any other special statute, must in all cases be specially pleaded; and such a defence cannot be constructively set up by traversing various allegations in the statement of claim. Clarke v. Callow, 46 L. J., Q. B. 53—C. A. S. P., Towle v. Topham, 37 L. T. 308. Dawkins v. Penrhyn (Lord), 48 L. J., Ch. 304; 4 App. Cas. 51; 39 L. T. 583; 27 W. R. 173—H. L.

The defence of the Statute of Frauds cannot now be raised by demurrer. Catling v. King, 46 L. J., Ch. 384; 5 Ch. D. 660; 36 L. T. 526; 25 W. R. 550—C. A.

The rule that the objection of the Statute of Frauds must be taken upon the pleadings was sufficiently complied with if it was taken by demurrer; and if the demurrer was overruled it was not necessary for the defendant to repeat the objection by plea or answer in order to entitle him to avail himself of it at the hearing. Johnasson v. Bonhote, 45 L. J., Ch. 651; 2 Ch. D. 298; 34 L. T. 745; 24 W. R. 619—C. A.

Where a defendant relies on the Statute of Frauds as a defence to an action he must not only state in his defence that he relies on such statute, but the facts which make the statute applicable must distinctly appear on the pleadings. To an action for goods sold and delivered and for work and labour, a statement that the defendant will avail himself of the statute 29 Car. 2, c. 3, without stating facts which would bring the case within the statute, was ordered to be struck out as embarrassing. Pullen v. Snelus, 48 L. J., C. P. 394; 40 L. T. 363; 27 W. R. 534.

The Statute of Frauds must be pleaded if intended to be relied on as a defence; but it is not necessary to plead any particular section. James v. Smith, [1891] 1 Ch. 384; 63 L. T. 524; 39 W. R. 396. Affirmed on other grounds, 65 L. T. 544—C. A.

The plaintiffs brought an action upon a written guarantee signed by the defendant. The defendant did not plead the Statute of Frauds. At the trial the plaintiffs gave notice of a verbal contract, and in answer to the case so set up the defendant sought to rely upon the Statute of Frauds:—Held, that, if the evidence was admissible at all, the defendant was not debarred from relying on the statute by the fact that he had not pleaded it in the first instance, and that the judge should have directed the necessary amendments to be made in the pleadings. Brunning v. Odhams, 75 L. T. 602—H. L. (E.)

In an action for specific performance of an agreement when the statement of claim is silent as to whether the agreement was in writing or not, a defence founded on the Statute of Frauds cannot be raised by demurrer specifically relying on the statute. Futcher v. Futcher, 50 L. J., Ch. 735; 45 L. T. 306; 29 W. R. 884.

A defence founded on the Statute of Frauds could not, since the Judicature Acts, be raised by demurrer. Morgan v. Worthington, 38 L. T. 443.

The Statute of Frauds is not available as a defence to a suit to establish a trust, where it would be fraud to deny the trust. Haigh v. Kaye, 41 L. J., Ch. 567; L. R. 7 Ch. 469; 26 L. T. 675; 20 W. R. 597.

The defence that there was no note in writing under 29 Car. 2, c. 3, ss. 4 & 17, need not have been specially pleaded, as the plaintiff was bound, under non assumpsit, to prove, as part of his case, the existence of a contract in writing sufficient to satisfy the terms of the statute.

Buttemer v. Hayes, 7 D. P. C. 489. S. P., Leaf v. Tuton, 2 D. (N.S.) 300; 10 M. & W. 393; 12 L. J., Ex. 69. Turnley v. Macgregor, 1 D. & L. 510. Eastwood v. Kenyon, 3 P. & D. 276; 11 A. & E. 489; 9 L. J., Q. B. 409. Reed v. Lamb, 6 Ex. 130.

Statute of Limitations.]—D. claimed, under a will executed in 1779, a certain estate, and the mesne profits accruing from the date when his father's title under that will first arose. The statement of claim itself set forth dates which shewed his grandfather's title to have first arisen in 1840, and his father's title on the death of the grandfather in 1852. His father died in 1864, and he alleged that he himself first knew of his own title in February, 1875. He asserted the existence of an express trust under the will. The defendant put in a demurrer, alleging that "the statement of claim was bad in law," denying that there was a trust so as to defeat the estates limited over on the death of the first tenant in tail without issue male, and it concluded with these words, "and on other grounds sufficient in law to sustain this demurrer":—Held, that this last sentence was sufficient to raise the defence of the statute of limitations. Dawkins v. Penrhyn (Lord), 48 L. J., Ch. 304; 4 App. Cas. 51; 39 L. T. 583; 27 W. R. 173—H. L. (E.)

There is a distinction between the statute of limitations and the statute of frauds. The latter must be pleaded. The title to the estate, not the mere right to proceed for its recovery, is affected by the former. If the plaintiff's statement of claim shews, on the face of it, that the time within which a title to land must be asserted has gone by, the defence of the statute of limitations may be raised on demurrer. Ib.

The statute of limitations must, under the new procedure, be pleaded, and cannot be raised by demurrer. Wakelee v. Davis, 25 W. R. 60.

A defence under the statute of limitations may in all cases be raised by demurrer. Noyes v. Crawley, 48 L. J., Ch. 112; 10 Ch. D. 31; 39 L. T. 266; 27 W. R. 109.

In an action for partnership accounts brought more than six years after the termination of the partnership, the defence of the statute may be raised by demurrer. Ib.

At the hearing of a claim a defendant is at liberty to avail himself of the benefit of the statute of limitations without pleading it. Sneed v. Sneed, 20 L. J., Ch. 630.

Illegality.]—If a good cause of action at common law appears in the declaration, the defendant must plead any statutable illegality in the contract on which it is founded in answer. Burnett v. Glossop, 3 D. P. C. 625; 1 Bing. (N.C.) 633; 1 Scott, 621; 4 L. J., C. P. 174.

A declaration stated that the plaintiffs were the promoters of a railway company, and the defendants members of a managing committee of a provisionally-registered railway company, and that the defendants were indebted to the plaintiffs in 3,000*l.* for plans, sections and books of reference, sold and delivered by the plaintiffs to the defendants, and by them used, and for work and materials. Plea, that each of the companies was a joint stock company within the meaning of the joint stock companies registration act, and not being a banking company; that it consisted of more than twenty-five members; and that a contract was made between the plaintiffs as such promoters, on behalf of the same company, and the promoters, of whom the defendants were two, of the secondly-mentioned company, whereby the plaintiffs agreed that the plaintiffs and the first-mentioned company should perform services for the secondly-mentioned company, which services and the payment of which were not necessarily required for the establishing of the company, and the work was done by the plaintiffs in their character of promoters, and an account was stated in the same character, and that neither of the companies was completely registered, or incorporated by statute or charter, or authorised by statute or letters patent to sue and be sued in the name of any officer or person, and that the plans, sections and books of reference at the time of the making of the contract, and at the time of the sale, and using of the plans, sections and books of reference, were stores not necessarily required for the establishing of the company, of all which premises the plaintiffs had notice at the time of the making of the contract, and at the time of doing the work and providing the materials, and selling and delivering, depositing, appropriating, and using the plans, sections and books of reference, and paying the money:—Held, that as the contract for services and work was forbidden by the act, and was therefore illegal, the plea was not bad as amounting to non assumpsit; and that it was a good answer to the action. Bull v. Chapman, 8 Ex. 444; 22 L. J., Ex. 257.

Illegality of the consideration of a contract cannot be objected to unless specially pleaded. Clutterbuck v. Coffin, 4 Scott (N.R.) 509; 1 D. (N.S.) 479; Car. & M. 273; 3 Man. & G. 842; 11 L. J., C. P. 65; 6 Jur. 131. S. P., Haigh v. Kaye, 41 L. J., Ch. 567; L. R. 7 Ch. 469; 26 L. T. 675; 20 W. R. 597.

In an action for goods sold and delivered, the witnesses for the plaintiff proved a sale and delivery of fireworks to the defendant:—Held, that the defendant, under non assumpsit only pleaded, could not object that the sale of fireworks was illegal under 9 & 10 Will. 3, c. 7. Fenwick v. Laycock, 1 G. & D. 27; 1 Q. B. 414; 10 L. J., Q. B. 177; 5 Jur. 459.

Illegality of sale or contract must, in all cases, be specially pleaded. Ib.

Although such illegality appears on the plaintiff's pleadings, or by the plaintiff's own evidence. Ib.

In an action by the plaintiff, for wages as a female servant, the defendant pleaded the general issue, and the plaintiff gave evidence of acts of service. The defendant proposed to go into evidence to shew that the plaintiff had cohabited with him:—Held, that he might do so under this plea, as this went to shew that there was no contract between the parties, and not to invalidate any contract on the ground of illegality. Bradshaw v. Hayward, Car. & M. 591.

If facts are pleaded which shew that an agreement relied on must necessarily be simoniacal, it need not be alleged that the agreement was made corruptly, in order to bring it within the 31 Eliz. c. 6, s. 8. Goldham v. Edwards, 16 C. B. 437; 24 L. J., C. P. 189; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 684; 3 W. R. 551. S. P. and S. C., 17 C. B. 141.

Statute.]—To a declaration for differences of prices of railway shares, the defendant pleaded a plea that the contract declared upon was a contract by way of gaming, contrary to the form of the statute:—Held, on special demurrer, a bad plea, for too great generality of allegation. Grisewood v. Blane, 2 L., M. & P. 638; 11 C. B. 538; 21 L. J., C. P. 46.

To an action by a seaman for wages, a defence that the Merchant Shipping Act, 1854, s. 189, prohibits any suit in a superior court for the recovery of wages under 50*l*. is not open under never indebted, but must be pleaded specially. Johnston v. Hilberry, 3 H. & C. 328.

A declaration stated that the defendants erected a bridge across a canal, part of the bed of which belonged to the plaintiff, and also erected walls adjoining, and caused the bridge and walls to be so constructed as to project over parts of the land of the plaintiff. Plea, that the several acts, matters, and things complained of were lawfully done by the defendants, under and by virtue of powers given to them by a certain act of parliament (setting out the year and title):—Held, that this general form of plea was good, and that it was not necessary to allege the particular facts upon which the defendants relied as bringing them within the statute. Bearer v. Manchester Corporation, 8 El. & Bl. 44; 26 L. J., Q. B. 311; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 23.

In an action against a railway company for the full compensation claimed because of a default by the company to summon a jury within twenty-one days, a plea that the claim was not a bonâ fide claim within the statute, but in fraud of the company, and without any reasonable cause, will not be allowed. Hooper v. Bristol Port Ry. and Pier Co., 35 L. J., C. P. 299.

Condition in Contract.]—In an action upon a contract, the averments in the declaration and the breach being sufficient, according to the contract as stated, any defence arising out of a condition not stated in the declaration must, if not supplied in law from the contract as stated, but capable of express proof, be specially pleaded, though, if implied, it may be raised on a denial of the averment of performance, or by demurrer, for want of such averments. Coulson v. Attwood, 26 L. J., Ex. 244.

General Issue by Statute — When Person entitled to Plead.]—If a party bonâ fide, and not absurdly, believes that he is acting in pursuance of a statute, he is entitled to the special protection which the legislature intended for him, although he has done an illegal act. Spooner v. Juddow, 6 Moore, P. C. 257. See Order XXI. r. 19.

Where a statute gives the plea of the general issue for anything done in pursuance of the act, the plaintiff cannot oust the defendant of this plea by waiving the tort, and suing in contract. Calvert v. Moggs, 2 P. & D. 543; 10 A. & E. 632; 8 L. J., Q. B. 339; 3 Jur. 1171.

See NOTICE OF ACTION, ante, col. 14 et seq.

—— When allowed.]—The 5 & 6 Vict. c. 97, s. 3, is by its preamble confined to actions "for any matter done in pursuance of or under the authority of the said acts," and therefore does not repeal 11 Geo. 1, c. 30, s. 43, by which the Royal Exchange Assurance and the London Assurance corporations are enabled, in all actions of covenant against them upon any policy, to plead generally that they have not broken the covenants in such policy. Carr v. Royal Exchange Assurance Co., 1 B. & S. 956; 31 L. J., Q. B. 93; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 384; 6 L. T. 105; 10 W. R. 352.

The provisions of s. 3 of 5 & 6 Vict. c. 97, do not apply to statutes passed afterwards. Boden v. Smith, 18 L. J., C. P. 121; 13 Jur. 428.

—— Local and Personal Acts.]—The Building Act (14 Geo. 3, c. 78) and the 7 & 8 Vict. c. 84, for regulating the construction and use of buildings in the metropolis and its neighbourhood, are acts of a local and personal nature. Richards v. Easto, 15 M. & W. 244; 3 D. & L. 515; 15 L. J., Ex. 163; 10 Jur. 695.

The Metropolitan Police Acts (2 & 3 Vict. c. 47; 2 & 3 Vict. c. 71, and 3 & 4 Vict. c. 84) are not local and personal acts within 5 & 6 Vict. c. 97, s. 5. Barnett v. Cox, 9 Q. B. 617; 2 New Sess. Cas. 487; 16 L. J., M. C. 27; 11 Jur. 118.

An act for establishing a court of requests, empowering commissioners to adjudicate on demands, not exceeding a certain amount, by any persons against defendants resident within certain limits, and having a clause making it a public act, is a public local and personal act. Cock v. Gent, 12 M. & W. 234; 1 D. & L. 413; 13 L. J., Ex. 24.

The Ramsgate Harbour Acts (32 Geo. 3, c. lxxiv. and 55 Geo. 3, c. lxxxiv.) are acts of a local and personal nature. Shepherd v. Sharp, 1 H. & N. 115; 25 L. J., Ex. 254; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 617; 4 W. R. 570—Ex. Ch. S. P., Moore v. Shepherd, 10 Ex. 424; 3 C. L. R. 54; 24 L. J., Ex. 28; 3 W. R. 57.

—— Must be pleaded.]—The defence, that the venue in an action against a person for an act done in pursuance of the Building Act (14 Geo. 3, c. 78), was not laid in Middlesex, pursuant to s. 100, is one which must be specially pleaded, and cannot be taken advantage of under not guilty. Richards v. Easto, 15 M. & W. 244; 3 D. & L. 515; 15 L. J., Ex. 163; 10 Jur. 195.

—— Insertion of Statute in Margin of Plea.]—A noncompliance with rule 21 of Trinity Term, 1853, deprives a defendant of all benefit he might otherwise be entitled to under any statute giving protection to parties for acts done in pursuance or execution thereof. Bartholomew v. Carter, 3 Scott (N.R.) 529; 3 Man. & G. 125; 9 D. P. C. 896; 10 L. J., C. P. 257; 5 Jur. 552.

Where, in an action for hunting over the plaintiff's land, the defendant pleaded not guilty by statute, the court, on an affidavit of the plaintiff, that he could not discover the statute under which the defendant meant to justify, made absolute a rule upon the defendant, to point out within three days the statute under which the plea was pleaded, or else that the words "by statute" should be struck out of the margin. Coy v. Forester (Lord), 8 M. & W. 312; 9 D. P. C. 770; 10 L. J., Ex. 262.

If a defendant does not add the words "by statute" in the margin of his plea of not guilty, he cannot give special matter in evidence to bring himself within the act of parliament, which allows a plea of not guilty; but if at the end of the plaintiff's case it appears that the defendant was entitled to notice of action, and the venue is in a wrong county, this is not aided by the defendant having omitted to add the words "by statute" in the margin of the plea. Mason v. Newland, 9 Car. & P. 575.

A defendant pleaded not guilty by statute, and in the margin of the plea referred to several statutes. In addition, he relied at the trial on a section of one of the statutes not referred to, but no objection was taken:—Held, that the objection, that this section was not mentioned in the margin of the plea, was not available on the argument of a rule to enter a nonsuit in pursuance of leave reserved. Burridge v. Nicholetts, 6 H. & N. 383; 30 L. J., Ex. 145; 3 L. T. 703; 9 W. R. 345.

Under 15 & 16 Vict. c. 76, s. 222, the judge at a trial has clearly power to amend a plea of not guilty by statute by inserting in the margin additional statutes to those marked there; not supplying a totally new and different defence, but making out completely the defence relied on, and founded on the statute or statutes originally marked in the margin; and the court, even after trial, and during or after argument, can allow the plea to be further amended (on such terms as it may think fit) by inserting in the same manner additional statutes which are necessary to the defence relied on at the trial and founded on the statutes originally marked. Edwards v. Hodges, 15 C. B. 477; 3 C. L. R. 472; 24 L. J., M. C. 81; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 91; 3 W. R. 112. S. P., Eggington v. Lichfield Corporation, 1 Jur. (N.S.) 908.

—— Effect of Plea.]—Where a defendant is entitled to plead not guilty by statute, he may go into any defence that could be specially pleaded, whether such defence is founded entirely on the statute, or partly on the statute and partly not, or is a defence wholly independent of the statute. Maund v. Monmouthshire Canal Co., Car. & M. 606.

Under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 1, an overseer sued for taking A.'s goods may still prove, under not guilty, that he, as overseer, distrained the goods for a poor-rate due from B., and that they were B.'s and not A.'s. Haine v. Davey, 4 A. & E. 892; 6 N. & M. 356; 2 H. & W. 30; 5 L. J., K. B. 167.

In an action for breaking the outer door and entering the plaintiff's dwelling-house, and seizing his goods, the defendant may give in evidence, under not guilty by statute, that he had entered under a warrant of distress for rent, and was forcibly turned out of possession, and thereupon broke the door and entered, in order to seize the goods. Eagleton v. Gutteridge, 11 M. & W. 465; 12 L. J., Ex. 359.

The 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 76, provides that constables appointed for a borough shall, not only within the borough, but also within the county in which such borough is situated, have all such powers and privileges, and be liable to all such duties, as any constable duly appointed has within his constablewick, by virtue of the common law or of any statute; and by s. 133, in all actions against any person for anything done in pursuance of the act, he may plead the general issue and give the special matter in evidence. A borough constable was sued in replevin for an act done in discharge of his duty as a constable under that act, beyond the limits of the borough, but within the county in which the borough was situate:—Held, that he was entitled, under non cepit, to give the special matter of defence in evidence. Mellor v. Leather, 1 El. & Bl. 619; 22 L. J., M. C. 77; 17 Jur. 709.

By 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 63, s. 39, "in all actions for anything done in pursuance of the act, or in execution of the powers or authorities thereof, the defendant may plead the general issue, and give the special matter in evidence, and that the acts were done in pursuance or by the authority of this act; and if they shall appear to have been so done . . . the jury shall find for the defendant." By s. 40, no plaintiff shall recover "for any irregularity, trespass or other wrongful proceeding, made or committed in the execution of this act, if tender of sufficient amends shall have been made" before action brought; and in case of no such tender made, that the defendant shall be at liberty, by leave of the court, before issue joined, to pay money into court, as in other actions:—Held, that an inspector, who had illegally seized a weighing-machine under a bonâ fide belief that he was acting at the time under the authority of the act, was entitled to the protection afforded by s. 39; but that, considered with s. 40, such protection did not extend to entitle the inspector to a verdict in an action against him for the illegal seizure. Thomas v. Stephenson, 2 El. & Bl. 108; 22 L. J., Q. B. 258; 17 Jur. 597; 1 W. R. 325.

Nature of Defence stated in the Pleadings.]—In an action to restrain the defendants from erecting a urinal in Old Burlington Mews, the statement of claim alleged that the soil of the mews was vested in and was the absolute property of three of the plaintiffs. The defence did not admit this allegation; but alleged that the mews had long been a highway dedicated to the public, and belonged to the parish as one of the public streets thereof. At the trial of the action several witnesses were examined on both sides; and, at the close of the defendant's evidence the plaintiffs applied leave to call evidence in reply, to shew that the soil of the mews had not been dedicated to the public:—Held, that, as the plaintiffs were distinctly apprised by the pleadings before the trial of the action what the nature of the defence would be, the application must be refused. Vernon v. St. James' Vestry, 49 L. J., Ch. 130; 42 L. T. 82.

Facts must be stated or Defence shut out.]—Evidence is rightly rejected where the particular facts and circumstances sought to be proved are not stated or referred to in the defence. Scott v. Sampson, 51 L. J., Q. B. 380; 8 Q. B. D. 491; 46 L. T. 412; 30 W. R. 541; 46 J. P. 408.

An objection to the jurisdiction, although not raised in the pleadings, was allowed to be taken at the hearing, the state of the law on the question of jurisdiction having been unsettled at the time of filing the bill. Stone v. Thomas, 39 L. J., Ch. 168; L. R. 5 Ch. 219; 22 L. T. 359; 18 W. R. 385.

Nonsuit in Former Action, how Pleaded.]—Where a plaintiff has been nonsuited in a former action, but brings a second action, relying upon the same causes of action, the defendant should (except when the action is one of ejectment) plead the nonsuit in bar of the second action, a nonsuit under Ord. XL. r. 6, being of the same effect as a judgment on the merits for the defendant. Bywater v. Dunne, 10 L. R., Ir. 380.

Plea of Accord and Satisfaction.]—A plea which does not in terms admit or deny the breach alleged in the declaration, but sets up a certain agreement come to between the parties, which does not appear necessarily upon the face of it to be an agreement in accord and satisfaction, and is not alleged to have been accepted by the parties in accord and satisfaction of the causes of action in the declaration mentioned:—Held, bad on demurrer. Barclay v. Bank of New South Wales, 5 App. Cas. 374; 42 L. T. 196—P. C.

Libel—Plea of Justification—Particulars.]—A general plea of justification in an action of libel, where the libel complained of consists of a general charge against the plaintiff, is bad, unless the defendant, in his particulars, states specifically the facts upon which he relies in support of the charge. Zierenberg v. Labouchere, 63 L. J., Q. B. 89; [1893] 2 Q. B. 183; 4 R. 464; 69 L. T. 172; 41 W. R. 675; 57 J. P. 711—C. A.

General Denial—Contract.]—To a statement of claim, or a counter-claim setting out a contract, and alleging a breach or several breaches, a general denial cannot be pleaded either in the form that the party so pleading "does not admit," or that "he denies the statements" in the statement of claim or counter-claim; but the making of the contract must be traversed or performance must be pleaded as the case may require. A traverse of the alleged breach is inadmissible. Sed per Palles, C.B.:—A pleading which denies the making of an alleged contract is in all cases unobjectionable in point of form. Dunne v. Clancy, 6 L. R., Ir. 395.

—— That Libel was Falsely and Maliciously Published.]—In an action for libel the defendant may not in his defence deny generally that he "wrote or published the same falsely or maliciously, as alleged," but must set out the facts upon which he relies, either to shew justification or privilege. Belt v. Lawes, 51 L. J., Q. B. 359.

—— Action for Recovery of Land.]—In an action to recover possession of land for nonpayment of rent, the defendant denied, first, that he became, or was, or is, tenant to the plaintiffs, or any of them; and, secondly, that he paid rent to the plaintiffs, or any of them:—Held, embarrassing and defective, in not answering the substance of the claim by a denial that there was a subsisting tenancy in any person under the plaintiffs. In such an action, when the pleader wishes to traverse the alleged tenancy it is necessary for him to negative any tenancy, whether subsisting in the defendant specially named or any other person under the plaintiffs. Rowley v. Laffan, 10 L. R., Ir. 9.

In an action for the recovery of land, a statement of defence alleging that the defendant is in possession operates (by virtue of Ord. XIX. r. 15, of the Rules of Court, 1875) as a denial of the allegations in the plaintiff's statement of claim, and requires the plaintiff to prove them. Danford v. McAnulty, 52 L. J., Q. B. 652; 8 App. Cas. 456; 49 L. T. 207; 31 W. R. 817—H. L. (E.)

In an ejectment on the title by the assignee of a lease against the assignors, the statement of claim alleged an assignment by deed by the defendants to the plaintiff: and the defendants, in their defence, denied "that they assigned or made over the premises" to the plaintiff:—Held, that the defence put in issue the execution only of the instrument of assignment, and that it was not open to the defendants upon the pleading to contend that the assignment, though in fact made by deed executed, was illegal and void, as contrary to a covenant against alienation in the lease. Hayes v. Corcoran, 8 L. R., Ir. 75.

The statement of claim, in an action to recover possession of land for nonpayment of rent, alleged a lease of the lands, that it was subsisting, that the lessee entered under it, that the defendant entered under the lessee, and was, at the time of action brought, in possession. The defence stated:—"That the defendant did not, at the commencement of this action, nor does he now, nor does any other person, hold the said lands and premises, or any part thereof, as tenant or subtenant to the plaintiff":—Held, that the defence was embarrassing, and should be set aside. Barnes v. Barnes, 8 L. R., Ir. 165—C. A.

Where the statement of claim, in an ejectment for nonpayment of rent, alleged that the plaintiff let the premises to the defendant at a rent, and that one year's rent was due and unpaid, a defence, denying that "the defendant is or was tenant to the plaintiff, or any other person, for the said premises," was set aside as embarrassing. Hildige v. O'Farrell, 8 L. R., Ir. 158—C. A. See Rules of Supreme Court, 1883, Ord. XXI. r. 21.

—— Traverse.]—Under non assumpsit the consideration for the promise is not traversed. Passenger v. Brooks, 1 Scott, 560; 1 Bing. (N.C.) 587; 1 Hodges, 123; 7 Car. & P. 110; 4 L. J., C. P. 195.

Want of consideration, or any matter other than a direct denial of the contract, cannot be given in evidence under non assumpsit. Ib.

In an action on a contract founded on an executory consideration the plaintiff averred in his declaration that the consideration had been performed, and the defendant pleaded non assumpsit:—Held, that on this plea the question whether or not the consideration was in fact performed could not be gone into, and that to entitle the defendant to go into that question, he should have pleaded that the consideration had not been performed. Gibson v. Harris, 8 Car. & P. 378.

In an action on a guarantee the defendant may shew, under the general issue, that the consideration alleged in the declaration is not the actual consideration to be inferred from the instrument. Raikes v. Todd, 1 P. & D. 138; 8 A. & E. 846; 8 L. J., Q. B. 35.

To an action on a guarantee, the defendant pleaded non assumpsit:—Held, that under this plea he could not give in evidence, that, subsequently to the execution of the agreement, and whilst it was in the possession of the plaintiff, a seal was affixed to the defendant's signature, so as to make the instrument purport to be a deed, but that such defence ought to be pleaded specially. Davidson v. Cooper, 1 D. & L. 377; 11 M. & W. 778; 12 L. J., Ex. 467.

The 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 52, s. 108, required that previously to the unloading of goods carried coastwise, a written notice of the ship's arrival, signed by the master, should be given to the collector or controller of customs by the master, owner, wharfinger, or agent of the ship, and that certain documents should be obtained. In an action for demurrage:—Held, that noncompliance by the plaintiff with these provisions could not be given in evidence under the general issue. Alcock v. Taylor, 6 N. & M. 296; 2 H. & W. 58; 1 Jur. 513.

In an action on an express contract, which, on production at the trial, contains an interlineation in a material part, if the plaintiff proves that the instrument was originally executed without the interlineation, and in the form declared upon, the defendant cannot, under non assumpsit, contend that it has been avoided by the subsequent alteration. Hemming v. Trenery, 1 P. & D. 661; 9 A. & E. 26; 8 L. J., Q. B. 160.

A declaration against a steamboat company, for refusing to receive the plaintiff as a passenger, stated that they were common carriers of passengers for hire from Southampton to a place beyond the seas. Plea, that they were not common carriers of passengers for hire :—Held, that the plea put in issue only the fact of the company being common carriers of passengers from and to the places named, without reference to the question whether the custom of the realm extended to a carrying beyond the seas. Benett v. Peninsular and Oriental Steamboat Co., 6 C. B. 775.

So, in an action for goods sold and delivered, evidence is admissible under non assumpsit to shew that the article was a machine for which nothing was to be paid unless it worked well, and the defendant is entitled to a verdict, if he shews that the machine did not work well. Groundsell v. Lamb, 2 Gale, 28 ; 1 M. & W. 352 ; 5 L. J., Ex. 154.

Where a declaration was for goods sold and delivered, and an account stated, the defendant pleaded that by a deed the plaintiff released the defendant, to which the plaintiff replied non est factum :—Held, that under this issue the plaintiff was not entitled to shew that the cause of action accrued subsequently to the date of the release; but should have made it the subject of a new assignment. Jubb v. Ellis, 3 D. & L. 346 ; 15 L. J., Q. B. 94 ; 9 Jur. 1057.

Action pending Abroad.]—In a transitory action a plea in abatement of an action pending in a foreign court is bad. Scott v. Seymour (Lord), 31 L. J., Ex. 457 ; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 568 ; 6 L. T. 607 ; 10 W. R. 739. Affirmed, 1 H. & C. 219 ; 32 L. J., Ex. 61 ; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 522 ; 8 L. T. 511 ; 11 W. R. 169—Ex. Ch.

To an action on an American judgment, the defendant pleaded that it was erroneous according to the law of New York, and was liable to be reversed, and that he was prosecuting proceedings in appeal, which were pending :—Held, that though the pendency of an appeal might afford ground for an equitable interposition of the court, and on proper terms to stay execution, it was no bar to the action itself. Scott v. Pilkington, 2 B. & S. 783 ; 31 L. J., Q. B. 81 ; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 557 ; 6 L. T. 21.

A Scotch steamer ran down an English vessel in the Humber. An action was commenced in the court of admiralty in England by the owner of the English vessel against the owner of the steamer, and a warrant of arrest issued against the ship ; but before the ship could be arrested she had sailed for Scotland. A suit was then commenced by the owner of the English vessel against the owner of the steamer, in the court of session in Scotland, for the damage, and the steamer was arrested under process of that court, but subsequently released upon bail. The proceedings in the court of session were still pending, when the steamer, having come within the jurisdiction of England, was again arrested under process of the high court of admiralty in England, and an action for damage commenced in that court for the same cause of action as was still pending in Scotland, the proceedings in the court of session being abandoned. The owner of the steamer appeared under protest in the admiralty court, and pleaded lis alibi pendens :—Held, that the plea of lis alibi pendens was bad, as the suit in Scotland was, in the first instance, in personam, the proceedings being commenced by process against the person of the owner of the vessel, and the arrest of the steamer only collateral to secure the debt, while the proceedings in the admiralty court in England were, in the first instance, in rem, against the vessel, and therefore the two suits being in their nature different, the pendency of one suit could not be pleaded in suspension of the other. Harmer v. Bell, 7 Moore P. C. 267.

Another Action pending.]—In an action against one of several joint contractors, the defendant cannot plead in abatement the pendency of another action for the same cause against another of the joint contractors, and in which he was not himself a defendant. Henry v. Goldney, 15 M. & W. 494 ; 4 D. & L. 6 ; 15 L. J., Ex. 298 ; 10 Jur. 439.

d. SET-OFF AND COUNTER-CLAIM.

1. When Allowed—Nature and Effect of, &c.

Judicature Act, 1873, s. 24, sub-s. 3. See R. S. C., 1883, Ords. XIX., XXI.

Difference between Set-off and Counter-claim.]—The 2 Geo. 2, c. 22, relieved a party who owed another a debt from the obligation to pay and seek his remedy by a cross-action, by enacting that where there are mutual debts one may be set off against the other. If the debt due to the defendant exceeded that due from him to the plaintiff, that act gave him no remedy for the excess, he must have sued for that in a separate action. The judicature act alters this so far as to authorise the court to give judgment for the excess. But that is all ; the set-off is not an independent action, it is still a defence, and nothing more. If the plaintiff, before the judicature act, chose to discontinue his action, the defendant could not claim to have his set-off tried. It fell with the action, to which it was and still is an adjunct.—Per Lush, L.J. Gatliercole v. Smith, 50 L. J., Q. B. 681 ; 7 Q. B. D. 626 ; 45 L. T. 106 ; 29 W. R. 577 ; 45 J. P. 812—C. A.

To my mind, the legislature has made no distinction whatever between counter-claim and set-off. A set-off is a counter-claim, and a counter-claim is a set-off.—Per Bramwell, L.J. Ib.

I do not quite, as at present advised, feel satisfied that a set-off and counter-claim are intended by the rules to be the same thing ; I am disposed to think that the two things are differently regarded in those rules, but it is unnecessary to refer to the rules that have reference to it for the purpose of shewing it.—Per Baggallay, L.J. Ib.

Whether Counter-claim an Independent Action.]—Semble, that a counter-claim is an independent action, and not part of the original action, though for convenience the two are tried together. Varasseur v. Krupp (15 Ch. D. 474) questioned. Beddall v. Maitland, 50 L. J., Ch. 401 ; 17 Ch. D. 174 ; 44 L. T. 248 ; 29 W. R. 484.

A counter-claim is not equivalent to a separate action. Where, therefore, a defendant has delivered a defence, and counter-claimed, and the plaintiff has then discontinued his action, the defendant cannot proceed with his counter-claim. Varasseur v. Krupp, 15 Ch. D. 474 ; 28 W. R. 366.

By discontinuing an action after a counter-claim has been delivered, a plaintiff cannot put an end to it so as to prevent the defendant from enforcing against him the causes of action contained in the counter-claim. Tavasseur v. Krupp (15 Ch. D. 474) overruled. McGowan v. Middleton, 52 L. J., Q. B. 355; 11 Q. B. D. 464; 31 W. R. 835—C. A.

An action commenced in the high court cannot be sent down for trial in a county court under s. 65 of the County Courts Act, 1888, where the plaintiff has discontinued and only a counter-claim by the defendant remains to be tried. Reg. v. City of London Court Judge, 60 L. J., Q. B. 575; [1891] 2 Q. B. 71; 64 L. T. 869.

—— No Order on Counter-claim until Plaintiff's Claim disposed of.]—In an action for an account of rents and profits, the defendant delivered a defence and a counter-claim, to set off money due to him from the plaintiff under an award. The plaintiff in his reply simply joined issue generally, and the defendant then, treating the counter-claim as admitted, moved under Judicature Act, Ord. XXXIII. and Ord. XL. rr. 10 and 11, for an account of what was due to him under it:—Held, that the case was not one for an account under Ord. XXXIII.; and that no order could be made on the counter-claim before the principal claim of the plaintiff was dealt with. Rolfe v. Maclaren, 3 Ch. D. 106; 24 W. R. 816.

An order will not be made upon a counter-claim until the original claim has been dealt with. Aitken v. Dunbar, 46 L. J., Ch. 489; 25 W. R. 366.

Therefore, when in answer to a statement of claim a defence and counter-claim had been delivered, and some months after the expiration of the period allowed to the plaintiff for applying a motion was made for a decree according to the prayer of the counter-claim, the motion was dismissed. Ib.

Need not equal Plaintiff's Claim.]—It is not essential to a good counter-claim that it should show a claim to an amount equalling the plaintiff's claim. Mostyn v. West Mostyn Coal Co., 45 L. J., C. P. 401; 1 C. P. D. 145; 34 L. T. 324; 24 W. R. 401.

Separate Counter-claims against Joint Plaintiffs.]—When two or more sue for a joint claim, the defendant may set up against each individual plaintiff separate counter-claims sounding in damages. Manchester, Sheffield and Lincolnshire Ry. v. Brooks, 46 L. J., Ex. 244; 2 Ex. D. 243; 36 L. T. 103; 25 W. R. 413.

Two railway companies having, as joint lessees of a railway, sued for statutory tolls, the defendant set up against each company separate counter-claims for damages in respect of delay in the delivery of goods. The plaintiffs applied to strike out the counter-claims, but no reasons were alleged why they could not be conveniently disposed of in the action:—Held, that the counter-claims ought not to be struck out. Ib.

Counter-claim must be against Plaintiff.]—A counter-claim must seek some relief against the plaintiff, and is not the proper form for a defendant's claim against a co-defendant for indemnity. Furness v. Booth, 46 L. J., Ch. 112; 4 Ch. D. 586; 25 W. R. 267. See infra, col. 854.

Effect of Judicature Act and Rules.]—Rule 3 of Ord. XIX., Rules of Court, 1875, was not intended to give rights against third parties which did not exist before; but it is a rule of procedure designed to prevent the necessity of bringing a cross-action in all cases where the counter-claim may conveniently be tried in the original action. Milan Tramways Co., In re, Theys, Ex parte, 52 L. J., Ch. 29; 22 Ch. D. 122; 48 L. T. 213; 31 W. R. 107. Affirmed, 53 L. J., Ch. 1008; 25 Ch. D. 587; 50 L. T. 545; 32 W. R. 601—C. A.

"Connected with the Original Cause or Matter"—Third Party.]—An action asking relief as in detinue was brought against a sole defendant, who had seized goods which B. had assigned to the plaintiff under a bill of sale. The sole defendant filed a defence and a counter-claim impeaching the bonâ fides of the plaintiff's bill of sale, and alleging a bill of sale by B. to himself, and by such counter-claim claimed, (1) relief against the plaintiff, and (2) as against B. the money due under the bill of sale from B. to himself, and damages for the alleged fraud. The counter-claim against the plaintiff was abandoned at the hearing:—Held, that the relief asked by the defendant against B. was not a matter sufficiently "relating to or connected with the original cause or matter" to be the subject of a claim under s. 24 of the Judicature Act, 1873. Barber v. Blaiberg, 51 L. J., Ch. 509; 19 Ch. D. 473; 46 L. T. 52; 30 W. R. 362.

Ord. XIX. r. 3, is sufficiently general to allow a counter-claim by way of defence whether or not it is connected with or of the same character as the plaintiff's claim, and whether it sounds in damages or not. Gray v. Webb, 51 L. J., Ch. 815; 21 Ch. D. 802; 46 L. T. 913; 31 W. R. 8.

The plaintiff, the trustee of a settlement, by his statement of claim pleaded that the defendant, a cestui que trust of the settlement, had, by deed, covenanted to indemnify him against an innocent breach of trust in consequence whereof he had been compelled to bring 10,000*l.* into the settlement, and had incurred costs; and he claimed 11,000*l.* The defendant delivered a defence and two counter-claims, making the plaintiff and A. defendants to the counter-claims. By the defence he denied that any claim had been made upon or loss sustained by the plaintiff, and he impeached the validity of the deed of covenant. By his first counter-claim, he stated that the plaintiff and A. were the executors of the will of his father, who had joined in the covenant, and had also given to him a covenant of counter-indemnity, and he claimed that the plaintiff must be held to have admitted assets, and to have retained the amount of his claim out of his testator's estate, or otherwise that such estate might be administered for the purpose. By the second counter-claim, he stated that his father had appointed 10,000*l.* to A. on a secret trust to satisfy the liability as to the 10,000*l.* and he claimed performance of this trust accordingly:—Held, that both counter-claims must be excluded as not being sufficiently connected with the original subject-matter of the action, and as calculated unduly to embarrass and delay the plaintiff. Paduich v. Scott, 45 L. J., Ch. 350; 2 Ch. D. 736; 24 W. R. 723.

The relief claimed by a counter-claim must relate to the specific subject-matter of the action. Harris v. Gamble, 46 L. J., Ch. 768; 6 Ch. D. 748.

—— Foreign Government — Submission to Jurisdiction.]—Where in an action for the appointment of new trustees of a fund the defendant counter-claims for damages for libel, the court will as a rule strike out the counter-claim and leave the defendant to bring an independent action in respect of the libel. The fact that the plaintiffs are a foreign government against whom the defendant cannot bring an action for libel is not sufficient reason for allowing him to proceed by counter-claim so as to take advantage of the circumstance that the plaintiffs have, by bringing their action, submitted to the jurisdiction of the court. South African Republic v. La Compagnie Franco-Belge, 66 L. J., Ch. 747; [1897] 2 Ch. 487; 77 L. T. 241; 46 W. R. 67—C. A.

Counter-claim in respect of Matter for which Action not Maintainable.]—To an action by an administrator for the balance of the intestate's banking account at the time of his death, the defendants in their defence sought to avail themselves, either by way of set-off or of counter-claim, of a debt due to them from the intestate as one of several makers of a promissory note for 1,000*l.* which did not become due until after the intestate's death. Reply, that before action an order was made in an administration suit in the chancery division, to take an account of the debt and liabilities affecting the personal estate of the deceased, of which the defendants before action had notice; and that, under 23 & 24 Vict. c. 38, s. 14, equity would restrain any proceedings on the note until the account had been taken:—Held, that the claim in respect of the promissory note could not be relied on as a set-off; and that in accordance with the practice in equity, the defendants must under the circumstances be restrained from setting it up by way of counter-claim, and be left to prove for it in the administration suit. Newell v. National Provincial Bank of England, 45 L. J., C. P. 285; 1 C. P. D. 496; 34 L. T. 533; 24 W. R. 458.

Counter-claim and Set-off in Reply.]—A plaintiff may, in his reply to a counter-claim of the defendant, counter-claim in respect of a cause of action accrued after the issue of the writ, but arising at the same time and out of the same transaction as the counter-claim of the defendant. Toke v. Andrews, 51 L. J., Q. B. 281; 8 Q. B. D. 428; 30 W. R. 659.

Equity to set aside Deed.]—Where in an action for rent due under a lease of coal mines it was shewn in the defence that the plaintiff had no title to part with the mines, and that he knew this when he granted the lease, but that the defendant did not know and had not the means of knowing it, and that he had not entered into possession or done anything to prevent his repudiating the lease:—Held, that as equity under such circumstances would set aside the lease, although there had been no actual fraud on the part of the plaintiff, the defendant was entitled to repudiate, and the defence so shown was a good answer to the action. Mostyn v. West Mostyn Coal Co., 45 L. J., C. P. 401; 1 C. P. D. 145; 34 L. T. 324; 24 W. R. 401.

There being a breach of the covenant for title, and the defendant being entitled to some damages for such breach:—Held, that he might claim such damages by way of counter-claim to the action for rent, though there had been no eviction, and the want of title related to only a portion of the demised property. Ib.

Claim against Separate Estate of Wife—Counter-claim for Debt due to Wife.]—In an action against a wife to enforce against her separate estate an alleged debt, the husband was joined as a formal defendant. By their joint defence the husband and wife denied the debt, and by way of counter-claim claimed a debt due to the wife, and also the restitution of four pictures belonging to the husband, and alleged to be retained by the plaintiff against their claim on the wife:—Held, that the husband and wife's claim was properly raised by counter-claim. Hodson v. Mochi, 47 L. J., Ch. 604; 8 Ch. D. 569; 38 L. T. 635; 26 W. R. 590.

Claim by Plaintiff in her own Right—Counter-claim against her as Executrix.]—Where a plaintiff sues in her own right, a defendant will not be allowed to set up, by way of counter-claim, a claim against the plaintiff as executrix. Macdonald v. Carington, 48 L. J., Ch. 179; 4 C. P. D. 28; 39 L. T. 426; 27 W. R. 153.

Action by Executor—Counter-claim against Testator's Estate.]—The executors of M., a holder of debentures of a company, commenced an action to have the trusts of a deed for securing payment of the debentures of the company carried into execution. The company delivered a defence and counter-claim, alleging that M. had been a director and promoter of the company, and while filling those characters had joined with other persons in selling an estate to the company at a profit, concealing the fact of his interest in the estate, and that he had received more than the claim as his share of the profit of the transaction. The plaintiffs applied to have the counter-claim excluded on the ground that it could not be conveniently disposed of in the present action. The application was refused. Huggons v. Tweed, 10 Ch. D. 359; 40 L. T. 284; 27 W. R. 495—C. A.

Leave to enforce Judgment of another Division.]—In a counter-claim a defendant may refer to statements of fact in the pleadings on which he intends to rely, without setting them out again in full. An action was commenced in the chancery division to set aside a mortgage. The defendant subsequently commenced an action in the queen's bench division for payment of his mortgage debt, and obtained judgment, which, however, by order of the judge of that division, was not to be enforced without the leave of the judge of the chancery division. The defendant counter-claimed in the action in the chancery division, for leave to enforce his judgment, or in the alternative for judgment for what was due under his mortgage deed. On motion to exclude the counter-claim:—Held, that by analogy to the old practice, in a suit where, on a primâ facie case being made out, an injunction would, under such practice, have been granted to restrain the defendant proceeding to enforce his judgment, the order made by the judge of the queen's bench division was a proper and convenient form of order to make under the present practice:—but held, secondly, that inasmuch as no action could have been brought to enforce the judgment, the counter-claim was wrong, and must be struck out, and that the proper way for the defendant to enforce his judgment was to apply for leave to do so at the trial of the action in the chancery division. Birmingham Estates

Co. v. Smith, 49 L. J., Ch. 251; 13 Ch. D. 506; 42 L. T. 111; 28 W. R. 666.

Action by Assignee of Policy—Set-off by Insurers of Claims against Assured.]—In an action by the assignee of a policy of marine insurance, the insurers are not entitled to set off a debt incurred with them by the assured for premiums on policies effected with them by the assured after the date of the assignment; for the claim under a policy for a loss is for unliquidated damages to which no set-off could be pleaded at law under the statutes of set-off in an action by the insured, nor in equity in a suit by the assignee, and therefore the debt incurred by the assured is not a "defence" open to the insurers under 31 & 32 Vict. c. 86, s. 1, that statute being intended merely to amend procedure and not to alter the rights of the parties to the policy; nor is the debt incurred by the assured the subject of "set-off" or "counter-claim" within the meaning of the Rules of the Supreme Court, Ord. XIX. r. 3. Pellas v. Neptune Marine Insurance Co., 49 L. J., C. P. 153; 5 C. P. D. 34; 42 L. T. 35; 28 W. R. 405—C. A.

Action by Assignee of Debt—Claim against Assignor.]—As a defence to a claim by the plaintiff as assignee of the balance of a debt due from the defendant to D. for work done under a contract, the defendant counter-claimed against the plaintiff for damages for breach of the contract by D.:—Held, that the defendant was entitled to counter-claim for such damages, but only as a set-off to the plaintiff's claim. Young v. Kitchin, 47 L. J., Ex. 579; 3 Ex. D. 127; 26 W. R. 403.

In such a case the counter-claim should shew on the face of it that the defendant does not seek damages against the plaintiff, but only to set them off against the plaintiff's claim. Ib.

Claim for Dissolution of Partnership—Counter-claim for Services rendered.]—To an action for dissolution of partnership the defendant, after denying the partnership, set up a counter-claim stating transactions which raised an altogether different cause of action, and claiming remuneration from the plaintiff for his services. Such transactions were totally unconnected with the partnership, the subject of the plaintiff's claim:—Held, that such a claim was not convenient to be disposed of in the present action, and that the defendant could not be allowed to avail himself of it; but that it was a proper subject for a cross-action. Naylor v. Farrer, 26 W. R. 809.

Action for Calls by Liquidator—Claim for Debt from Company.]—A person who has been duly settled on the list of contributories of a company, and on whom calls have been duly made, cannot (even in the case of a voluntary liquidation), in an action for calls by the liquidators of the company, counter-claim for a debt or damages due to him from the company. The defendant, a newspaper proprietor, agreed to take fully paid-up shares in payment of advertisements inserted in his newspaper by the company, and duly performed his part of the contract, but the company omitted to register the contract. The company went into voluntary liquidation, and the defendant was settled on the list of contributories as the holder of shares not paid for in cash. Calls were duly made, and the defendant sought, in answer to an action by the liquidator for money due on calls, to counter-claim for the price of the advertisements or damages for neglect to register the agreement to give him fully paid-up shares:—Held, that no such set-off or counter-claim could be pleaded. Mumford's Case (14 Ch. D. 643) followed. Government Security Investment Co. v. Dempsey, 50 L. J., Q. B. 199.

Rights of one Surety sued alone—Joint Debt of Defendants — Debt due from Plaintiff to Co-Surety.]—Action on a covenant to pay all liabilities which the plaintiff might incur under a deed of assignment made between the plaintiff and other parties. The defendant pleaded that the covenant was the joint and several covenant of himself and one Wilson, and that before action the plaintiff was indebted to Wilson in an amount exceeding the plaintiff's claim against the defendant; and that Wilson had assigned the plaintiff's debt to himself and the defendant in equal shares as tenants in common. As to one-half of the plaintiff's claim the defendant claimed to set off one-half of the debt so assigned, and as to the other half, the defendant said that he was entitled to be exonerated by his co-surety Wilson, and to call upon him to contribute in equal shares to the payment of the plaintiff's claim, and was entitled to set off the share remaining vested in Wilson against this part of the plaintiff's claim:—Held, that the defence was no answer to the plaintiff's claim. Bowyear v. Pawson, 50 L. J., Q. B. 495; 6 Q. B. D. 540; 29 W. R. 664.

Action delayed—Breach of Trust—Bill of Exchange.]—An action was brought by a tenant for life and other cestuis que trusts against the trustees of a settlement for breaches of trust. One of the trustees alleged as a defence that the breaches of trust had been sanctioned by the tenant for life; and also set up a counter-claim upon a bill of exchange for 45*l.*, claiming payment of that amount, and that the income of the tenant for life, arising from the property subject to the settlement, might be applied towards payment of the 45*l.*, and any other sums which the trustee might be ordered to pay:—Held, that the counter-claim must be struck out under Ord. XXI. r. 15. Fendall v. O'Connell, 52 L. T. 538.

Set-off—Defendant against Principal—Action by Agent.]—In an action of trover and for goods sold and delivered a defendant cannot set off a claim for unliquidated damages which he has against a third party on another transaction, although the third party happens to be the plaintiff's principal. Tagart v. Marcus, 36 W. R. 469.

Action for Rent—Counter-claim for Damages for Libel.]—In an action for rent, the court refused to allow the defendant to set up a counter-claim for damages for a libel not connected with the subject-matter of the action. Rotherham v. Priest, 28 W. R. 277.

In Action for Recovery of Land.]—In an action to recover possession of land for nonpayment of rent, a counter-claim cannot be made. And where such a counter-claim was delivered, the court, upon motion, set it aside; and there being no other defence or demurrer, gave liberty to sign judgment. FitzGerald v. Day, 6 L. R., Ir. 326.

In an action to recover the possession of land for nonpayment of rent, a counter-claim, in the absence of special circumstances, will not be allowed. Hildige v. O'Farrell, 8 L. R., Ir. 158—C. A.

In an action by the assignee of the lessor to recover possession of demised land for nonpayment of rent, the defendant, the assignee of the lease, delivered a counter-claim for a sum exceeding the rent in arrear, and consisting partly of arrears of annuities claimed by the defendant, and partly the sums which the defendant alleged she had been compelled to pay for head rent of the premises. The annuities were, under the will of the original lessor (according to the construction of the will for which the defendant contended), chargeable on the lessor's interest in the premises. The court refused a motion by the plaintiff to set aside the counter-claim, but directed the counter-claim to be amended by setting out the material portions of the will in extenso, with liberty to the plaintiff to reply and demur to the amended pleading. Whitton v. Hanlon, 16 L. R., Ir. 137.

In an ejectment for nonpayment of rent, brought by the devisee of a deceased lessor against a person claiming the interest in the lease, the defendant made a counter-claim, in substance alleging that through a mutual mistake of the lessor and lessee a bulk instead of an acreable rent was reserved, that such acreable rent at the stipulated rent per acre would have been less by 45*l*. yearly than the rent reserved in the lease, and that by taking credit for the excess paid in respect of the rent actually reserved, all rent properly due and claimable under the lease had been paid, up to the time of action brought, and the defendant counter-claimed to have the lease rectified by reducing the rent thereon from the bulk rent of 119*l*. 15*s*. 3*d*. to the sum of 74*l*. yearly, being the alleged acreable rent:—Held, that the counter-claim should be set aside. Carew v. Christopher, 10 L. R., Ir. 38—C. A.

Where, in an action to recover possession of land for nonpayment of rent, the defendant traversed the contract of tenancy, and counter-claimed for damages for breach of that contract, and it appeared that there was no defence to the claim for possession, the court, upon the defendant's refusal to withdraw his defence, ordered the counter-claim to be struck out. Loughrey v. Maguire, [1897] 2 Ir. R. 140.

In respect of Matters arising after Action brought.]—A counter-claim founded on facts which have arisen since the action was brought must be pleaded as so arising, so that the plaintiff may be able to confess the plea; and if it is not so pleaded the plaintiff should take out a summons to strike it out, unless it is amended. Ellis v. Munson, 35 L. T. 585—C. A. S. P., Bourke v. Nichol, infra.

When a defendant delivers a counter-claim any damages thereby claimed must be limited to the date when the writ of summons was issued. Original Hartlepool Collieries Co. v. Gibb, 46 L. J., Ch. 311; 5 Ch. D. 713; 36 L. T. 433.

Relief can be given on a counter-claim in respect of a cause of action accrued to the defendant subsequently to the issue of the writ in the original action. Original Hartlepool Collieries Co. v. Gibb (5 Ch. D. 713) not followed. Beddall v. Maitland, 50 L. J., Ch. 401; 17 Ch. D. 174; 44 L. T. 248; 29 W. R. 484. See also Toke v. Andrews, 51 L. J., Q. B. 281; 8 Q. B. D. 428; 30 W. R. 659.

Leave to set up refused on Ground of Delay.]—When a defendant in a foreclosure suit obtained an order for leave to file a counter-claim by way of set-off, and through the negligence of his solicitor no counter-claim was delivered, and a decree of foreclosure was made in his absence, an application more than six months afterwards for leave to file the counter-claim was refused on the ground of delay. Wilkins v. Bedford, 35 L. T. 622.

Refusal to Allow—Discretion.]—It is in the discretion of the judge under Ord. XIX. r. 3, to refuse permission to a defendant to avail himself of a counter-claim, which cannot be conveniently disposed of in the action. Naylor v. Farrer, 26 W. R. 809. See Huggons v. Tweed, 10 Ch. D. 359; 40 L. T. 284; 27 W. R. 495—C. A.

The court has a discretion to exclude a counter-claim which may unduly delay the action. Gray v. Webb, 51 L. J., Ch. 815; 21 Ch. D. 802; 46 L. T. 913; 31 W. R. 8.

Order made to exclude a counter-claim, on the ground that in it such a joinder of causes of action had been made, without the leave of the court, that the fair trial of the action would be embarrassed. Compton v. Preston, 51 L. J., Ch. 680; 21 Ch. D. 138; 47 L. T. 122; 30 W. R. 563.

Setting Aside.]—In an action to recover possession of land for nonpayment of rent, and for a year's rent, amounting to 346*l*. 2*s*. 6*d*., due the 29th September, 1883, the defendant, inter alia, pleaded, as to 21*l*., part of the rent claimed, eviction by the plaintiff from a portion of the lands, in 1877, the value of which the defendant alleged was 21*l*.; as to 10*l*. 18*s*. 10*d*., other part of the rent claimed, a set-off for poor rate, to which the plaintiff, as landlord, was liable, and he brought the residue of the rent claimed into court. The defendant also delivered a counter-claim, as to so much of the plaintiff's claim as claimed payment of the said sum of 346*l*. 2*s*. 6*d*., for 84*l*. for the plaintiff's use and occupation of the seven acres for four years; and, secondly, for 100*l*. damages for breach of an alleged contract by the plaintiff, in consideration of the surrender of the said seven acres, to grant a reasonable abatement of the rent of the residue of the lands during the defendant's unexpired term. The poor rate was paid after action brought. On motion by the plaintiff to strike out so much of the defence as relied on the set-off and payment into court as embarrassing, on the grounds that the payment relied on by way of set-off was made after the commencement of the action, and the payment into court was irregular and not in compliance with the statute and Ord. XXX. r. 5, and that the counter-claim could not be conveniently tried in the action, the court granted the motion, and set aside these portions of the defence and counter-claim. Bourke v. Nichol, 12 L. R., Ir. 415.

A motion to set aside a counter-claim and a motion for judgment upon admissions of fact in the defence cannot be entertained simultaneously. Church Temporalities Commissioners v. M'Ivor, 3 L. R., Ir. 433.

Application for Separate Trial.]—Where a defendant counter-claims instead of bringing a new action he is not entitled, under rules of court, 1875, Ord. XXXVI. r. 6, to have the issue in his counter-claim tried before the other issues in the action. Piercy v. Young, 15 Ch. D. 475; 42 L. T. 292.

Whether the issues raised by a claim and counter-claim shall be tried together or separately is a matter of convenience. Woodfine, In re, Thompson v. Woodfine, 47 L. J., Ch. 832; 38 L. T. 753; 26 W. R. 678.

Proceedings at Trial.]—When the court was of opinion that it would be more convenient that the claim and counter-claim should be tried separately, on the ground that the questions raised by the counter-claim were distinct from and independent of those raised by the claim:—Held, that on the trial of the claim the defendant's counsel should confine his cross-examination of the plaintiff's witness to the questions raised by the claim, and that upon the trial of the counter-claim he might call the plaintiff's witness, but must examine such witness in chief as his own witness. Woodfine, In re, Thompson v. Woodfine, supra.

—— Evidence in reply to Counter-claim.]—The issues of fact on the claim and the counter-claim being identical:—Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to adduce fresh evidence in reply on the counter-claim. Green v. Sevin, 13 Ch. D. 589; 41 L. T. 724.

—— "Balance."]—The balance in favour of the defendant mentioned in Ord. XXI. r. 17 (1883), in case a set-off or counter-claim is established against the claim, is the balance upon the hearing of the action. Rolfe v. Maclaren, 3 Ch. D. 106; 24 W. R. 816.

—— Findings, how entered.]—Where, in an action, certain questions on the facts are left to the jury, the answers to which amount to a finding for the plaintiff on his claim, and for the defendant on his counter-claim, and the judge directs a verdict to be entered for the plaintiff for the balance, upon a summons to vary the entry of the verdict by stating what the plaintiff and the defendant respectively recovered in order to enable the defendant to recover the costs of his counter-claim, the court will not interfere. Potter v. Chambers, 48 L. J., C. P. 274; 4 C. P. D. 69; 39 L. T. 350; 27 W. R. 414.

Inferior Court—Excess of Jurisdiction.]—Under the Judicature Act, 1873, ss. 89 & 90, an inferior court has jurisdiction to entertain a claim set up by way of counter-claim, although it is in respect of matters which arose beyond its local jurisdiction; but the power to grant relief in respect of such counter-claim is limited to the same amount which the plaintiff has claimed in the action. Davis v. Flagstaff Silver Mining Co., 47 L. J., C. P. 503; 3 C. P. D. 228; 38 L. T. 769; 26 W. R. 431—C. A.

2. Form of.

See R. S. C., 1883, Ord. XIX. r. 3, &c.

Statement of Facts.]—The same rules apply to a counter-claim as to a statement of claim; therefore the facts on which the defendant relies must be stated in the body of his counter-claim, and cannot be inferred from the plaintiff's statement, and if the defendant wants alternative or general relief, the counter-claim must ask it. Holloway v. York, 25 W. R. 627.

A counter-claim must contain in itself a specific statement of the facts upon which reliance is placed for the relief claimed. Crowe v. Barnicot, 46 L. J., Ch. 855; 6 Ch. D. 753; 37 L. T. 68; 25 W. R. 789.

It is not sufficient that the facts relied upon appear in the defence, even though that and the counter-claim form one continuous document. Ib.

A counter-claim defective in this respect was dismissed with costs, leave to amend being, under the circumstances of the case, refused. Ib.

When a defendant in his defence claims a right to set off, he need not separate the set-off from the defence by a marked line, nor need he state the facts relied upon as giving the right to set off in paragraphs differently numbered. It is only necessary that such facts should be specifically stated. Lees v. Patterson, 47 L. J., Ch. 616; 7 Ch. D. 866; 38 L. T. 451; 26 W. R. 399.

A counter-claim may refer to statements of fact in the pleadings on which the defendant relies without setting them out in extenso. Birmingham Estates Co. v. Smith, 49 L. J., Ch. 251; 13 Ch. D. 506; 42 L. T. 111; 28 W. R. 666.

3. Against Persons not previously Parties to Action.

See Judicature Act, 1873, s. 24, sub.-s. 3; Rules of Supreme Court, 1883, Ord. XXI. r. 11, et seq.

A counter-claim cannot be set up which does not seek relief against the plaintiff. Warner v. Twining, 24 W. R. 536. S. P. Furness v. Booth, 46 L. J., Ch. 112; 4 Ch. D. 586; 25 W. R. 267.

A defendant must not bring a third party before the court as defendant to a counter-claim against the plaintiff unless the relief to be obtained against him relates specifically to or is connected with the subject-matter of the action. Padwick v. Scott, 45 L. J., Ch. 350; 2 Ch. D. 736; 24 W. R. 723.

A second mortgagee brought an action against the first mortgagee for accounts and the application of the proceeds of sale of the security. The first mortgagee filed a counter-claim for specific performance against the purchaser and the concurrence of the second mortgagee in the sale on the ground that they had consented to the sale:—Held, a good counter-claim. Dear v. Sworder, 46 L. J., Ch. 100; 4 Ch. D. 476; 25 W. R. 124.

A person cannot be joined as a defendant to a counter-claim against whom there is only a claim for relief in one of two inconsistent alternatives. Evans v. Buck, 46 L. J., Ch. 157; 4 Ch. D. 432; 25 W. R. 392.

Where an action was brought by trustees of a settlement to inforce payment of a sum of money against the representative of a covenanting party, and the representative, by her defence and counter-claim, averred that according to the true construction of the settlement, the sum was not payable, and claimed that if the sum was payable according to the true construction, the settlement might be rectified, making the surviving tenant for life under the settlement a defendant to the counter-claim for that purpose only :—Held, on demurrer by the tenant for life, that she was improperly made a party. Ib.

A defendant may bring in as defendants to his counter-claim, in addition to the plaintiff, all such persons as he could if he had sued the plaintiff in a cross action have joined with the plaintiff as defendants to such action, that is to say, all persons against whom he could claim relief along with the plaintiff, whether jointly, severally or in the alternative. Turner v. Hednesford Gas Co., 47 L. J., Ex. 296 ; 3 Ex. D. 145 ; 38 L. T. 8 ; 26 W. R. 308—C. A.

To an action for breach of contract the defendants alleged that, as the plaintiff had not executed the contract as specified by the agreement, they had thereby become entitled to put an end to the contract, and they sought by way of counter-claim, to recover damages from the plaintiff for the expenses caused by his default. They also made R., who, as surety for the due execution of the contract by the plaintiff, had entered into a bond with the defendants, a defendant to the counter-claim, and they sought to recover the amount of his bond as damages. R. applied to have so much of the counter-claim as related to him struck out :—Held, that the whole of the counter-claim must be allowed, as it raised a question between the defendants and the plaintiff, along with R. the surety, and that R. was properly served with the counter-claim. Ib.

A counter-claim must claim relief against the plaintiff, and he must be made a party to it. The relief claimed by a counter-claim must relate to the specific subject-matter of the action. Harris v. Gamble, 46 L. J., Ch. 768 ; 6 Ch. D. 748. S. P., Furness v. Booth, 46 L. J., Ch. 112 ; 4 Ch. D. 586 ; 25 W. R. 267.

Relief will not be given in a counter-claim against a third party which does not relate to the subject-matter of the original action. Barber v. Blaiberg, 51 L. J., Ch. 509 ; 19 Ch. D. 473 ; 46 L. T. 52 ; 30 W. R. 362.

In an action for money lent the defendant set up a counter-claim, in which he joined one T. as defendant to the counter-claim under Ord. XXII. r. 5, and alleged a contract between himself and T., and a breach thereof by T. ; that the contract had been transferred from T. to the plaintiffs ; and that the plaintiffs had broken it. He then claimed damages against the plaintiffs, and, in the alternative, against T. :—Held, that T. was not properly joined as co-defendant to the counter-claim under Ord. XXII. r. 5, but that the defendant should have applied to have the question determined as against T., under Ord. XVI. r. 17. Central African Trading Co. v. Grove, 48 L. J., Ex. 510 ; 40 L. T. 540 ; 27 W. R. 933—C. A.

Third Party cannot Counter-claim against Plaintiff.]—When in an action a counter-claim is made by a defendant against a plaintiff and a third party, such third party has only a right of reply and cannot himself set up a counter-claim. Street v. Gover, 46 L. J., Q. B. 582 ; 2 Q. B. D. 498 ; 36 L. T. 766 ; 25 W. R. 750.

A person not a party to an action, who is brought in by the original defendant as a defendant to a counter-claim, cannot counter-claim against the original plaintiff and defendant. Street v. Gover (2 Q. B. D. 498) followed. Take v. Andrews (8 Q. B. D. 428) distinguished. Alcoy and Gandia Ry. v. Greenhill, 65 L. J., Ch. 99 ; [1896] 1 Ch. 19 ; 73 L. T. 452 ; 44 W. R. 117—C. A. S. P., Eden v. Weardale Coal and Iron Co., 54 L. J., Ch. 384 ; 28 Ch. D. 333 ; 51 L. T. 726 ; 33 W. R. 241—C. A.

Appearance before Service.]—A defendant set up a counter-claim in which he asked for relief against a third party, as well as the original plaintiffs, but on delivery of the statement of defence and counter-claim to the plaintiff's solicitors, who were also the solicitors of the third party, the defendant's solicitor told them that they must not take it as a service upon them as representing the third party, as the defendant was not sure whether he would proceed with his counter-claim against the third party, though, owing to the time for delivering the statement of defence and counter-claim to the plaintiffs having nearly expired, he was obliged to deliver it as it was. The third party entered an appearance to the counter-claim, and delivered a statement of defence. The defendant having made up his mind not to proceed with his counter-claim against the third party, moved to discharge his appearance :—Held, that, until service of the counter-claim, no one can consider himself as a defendant to it ; that the third party was therefore wrong in appearing without being served ; and that on the defendant amending his counter-claim by omitting all mention of the third party, the third party's appearance should be discharged. Fraser v. Cooper, 52 L. J., Ch. 684 ; 23 Ch. D. 685 ; 48 L. T. 754 ; 31 W. R. 714.

4. Claims and Questions between Co-Defendants.

Between Co-Defendants.]—Questions between co-defendants may be raised by a pleading which states both a defence as against the plaintiff and a claim against a co-defendant ; but such pleading is not a counter-claim under Ord. XXII. r. 5, and should not be so intitled. Furness v. Booth, 46 L. J., Ch. 112 ; 4 Ch. D. 586 ; 25 W. R. 267.

Delivery of such pleading to the co-defendant is sufficient notice under Ord. XVI. r. 17. Ib.

A counter-claim must seek some relief against the plaintiff, and is not the proper form for a defendant's claim against a co-defendant for indemnity. Ib.

Plaintiff, jointly with defendant B., entered into a contract with defendant E. to work a trading adventure on lands belonging to E. Plaintiff by his claim alleged that E. had obtained the contract from him and defendant B. by misrepresentation, and asked for rescission, and in the alternative for dissolution. Defendant B. delivered a pleading, which was at the same time his defence in the action, a reply to a counter-claim by E., and a new claim as in an action against E. :—Held, that he was entitled to prosecute in this action his claim against E. ; and that delivery to the defendant E. of the said pleading should be notice, under the statute, of the claim of defendant B. against him. Bagot v. Easton, 11 Ch. D. 392 ; 27 W. R. 404.

Counter-claims raised by a defendant against a co-defendant are to be delivered to the plaintiff and co-defendant, and formal notice need not be given to the co-defendant. Shephard v. Beane, 45 L. J., Ch. 429 ; 2 Ch. D. 223 ; 24 W. R. 363. See now, however, preceding Cases.

Cf. Cases, THIRD PARTIES, supra, col. 239.

e. REPLY AND SUBSEQUENT PLEADINGS.

See R. S. C., 1883, Ord. XXIII.

Counter-claim and Set-off in Reply.]—A plaintiff may, in his reply to a counter-claim of the defendant, counter-claim in respect of a cause of action accrued after the issue of the writ, but arising at the same time and out of the same transaction as the counter-claim of the defendant. Toke v. Andrews, 51 L. J., Q. B. 281; 8 Q. B. D. 428; 30 W. R. 659.

Confession and Avoidance.]—Where a plaintiff desires to state facts by way of confession and avoidance of the defence, he should do so in his reply, and not by amendment of the statement of claim. Hall v. Eve, 46 L. J., Ch. 145; 4 Ch. D. 341; 35 L. T. 926; 25 W. R. 177—C. A.

A plaintiff may by his reply traverse, confess and avoid, or combine both. Ib.

To an action for specific performance of an agreement to grant a lease, the defendants pleaded that the plaintiff had committed breaches of the agreement, giving the defendants power to determine the same, and that they had determined. The plaintiff by his reply denied the alleged breaches, and further said that even if the lessee did break the provisions of the agreement as alleged, yet the defendants were not nor was any of them entitled, by reason of the alleged breaches, to determine the agreement for certain reasons which the reply proceeded to state at length. On an application by the defendants to strike out the reply as irregular and erroneous in form and point of pleading:—Held, that there was nothing in the rules of court to limit the plaintiff's right to state what facts he pleased in his reply to meet a defence by confession and avoidance, so that they were not irrelevant or scandalous. Ib.

A reply, which begins by joining issue with the defendant in his defence, and then goes on to confess and avoid, is erroneous in form. Earp v. Henderson, 45 L. J., Ch. 738; 3 Ch. D. 254; 34 L. T. 844.

When, after statement of claim and defence, the plaintiff replied, joining issue on the defence, and then pleading in confession and avoidance, and the defendant took no further step till long after notice of trial had been served; leave was, under the powers of the court for extending time, given to the defendant to join issue on the second pleading in the reply. Ib. But see Hall v. Eve, supra.

A declaration stated, that the defendant agreed to hire the plaintiff for a year, as a teacher of French and drawing, and not to discharge him without reasonable notice, and then averred that the defendant did discharge him without reasonable notice. Plea, that when the plaintiff was retained by the defendant, the plaintiff promised to serve the defendant as teacher, and not to absent himself without just cause; that the plaintiff wrongfully absented himself, whereby the defendant was much hindered and delayed in divers matters of business, and compelled to endeavour to get the assistance of some other person:—Held, first, that this plea sufficiently confessed and avoided the contract stated in the declaration; secondly, that the plea was bad in arrest of judgment, as it did not shew either that the contract was put an end to or that the defendant had a right to dissolve it. Fillieul v. Armstrong, W. W. & D. 616; 7 A. & E. 557; 2 N. & P. 406; 7 L. J., Q. B. 7; 1 Jur. 921.

Introducing fresh Matter into.]—A railway company was defendant to an action which raised the question whether or not a piece of land was included in an agreement, the plaintiffs asserting that it was not included, and that the agreement conferred no title on the defendant to take it, and that the defendant had given no statutory notice of an intention to take it. The defendant pleaded that the piece of land was comprised in and shewn on the plans deposited with the railway bill, of which the plaintiffs had full knowledge; that the company was empowered to take compulsorily the piece of land and to enter upon it for the purposes of the agreement, and denied that the agreement conferred no title on the company to take it. The plaintiffs by their reply joined issue generally on the statement of defence, and then pleaded fresh matter:—Held, that the plaintiffs had no right to introduce fresh matter into their reply, and that the same was irrelevant to the issue, and must be struck out. London and St. Katharine Docks Co. v. Metropolitan Ry., 35 L. T. 733. But see preceding Cases.

In an action for rent in respect of a tenancy described in the statement of claim as still subsisting, the defendant made a counter-claim for money had and received, to which the plaintiff replied that by reason of the defendant overholding part of the premises after the expiration of his tenancy therein, the plaintiff, whose interest as a middleman had also determined, was compelled to pay to the head landlord damages and costs, which he sought to set off against the counter-claim:—Held, that the reply was a departure from, and inconsistent with, the statement of claim, and should be set aside as irregular: and that the reply introduced a new ground of claim, which the plaintiff could only be allowed to raise by amendment of the statement of claim. Duckworth v. M'Clelland, 2 Ir. L. R. 527.

If a plaintiff in his declaration avers the performance of a condition precedent, and the defendant denies this, and the plaintiff replies matter of excuse for not performing the conditions, this is a departure. Perry v. Smith, Car. & M. 554.

To an action on a charterparty, the defendant pleaded that at the time it was made the plaintiff represented to him that the ship was then at W., and that he entered into the charterparty, confiding in that representation, and that the ship was not at that time at W. Replication, that the plaintiff, when he made the representation, believed it to be true, and that the ship at the time was in fact on her homeward voyage from W. Rejoinder, that the representation was contained in the charterparty, and was part of the contract:—Held, a departure from the plea. Elliott v. Von Glehn, 18 L. J., Q. B. 221.

A declaration alleged that a railway company wrongfully raised, made and formed, and caused to be raised, made and formed, an embankment of earth near a house, and wrongfully continued the same, by reason whereof quantities of water ran and flowed to and into the house, whereby the same became greatly injured, wetted and damaged. Plea, that the embankment was raised, made and formed and continued by the company, under and by virtue of acts of parliament. Replication, that the running and flowing of the water to and into the house were occasioned by the wrongful construction, negligent and improper raising, making and forming of the embankment, and the want of proper and sufficient drains to the same :—Held, that the replication was no departure. Brine v. G. W. Ry., 2 B. & S. 402 ; 31 L. J., Q. B. 101 ; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 410 ; 6 L. T. 50 ; 10 W. R. 341.

A replication, on equitable grounds, to a plea of infancy, that the defendant fraudulently contracted the debt by means of a false and fraudulent representation that he was of age, is bad, on the ground of departure, and disclosing no answer in equity. De Roo v. Foster, 12 C. B. (N.S.) 272. S. P., Bartlett v. Wells, 1 B. & S. 836 ; 31 L. J., Q. B. 57 ; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 762 ; 5 L. T. 607 ; 10 W. R. 229.

For other instances of departure, see Meyer v. Haworth, 3 N. & P. 462 ; 8 A. & E. 467 ; 7 L. J., Q. B. 211. Wilders v. Stevens, 15 M. & W. 208 ; 15 L. J., Ex. 108.

Claim against Separate Estate to Defence of Coverture.]—In an action against a married woman she pleaded coverture. The reply set out that, until after action brought, the plaintiff was not aware of the coverture ; that the defendant obtained credit by representing herself to be entitled to an annuity ; and that the plaintiff had since discovered that under a separation deed she was entitled to an annuity :—Held, that the reply did not raise a new ground of claim or contain an allegation of fact inconsistent with the previous pleading within Ord. XIX. r. 19. Collett v. Dickinson, 26 W. R. 403.

Reply of Married Woman to Plea of Coverture that Action in respect of Separate Estate.]—In an action for breach of contract by a married woman against her bankers, the first count was for not presenting for payment a bill of exchange deposited with them for that purpose : the second count was for not giving her notice of the dishonour of a bill of exchange entrusted to them for collection, and the third count was for dishonouring a cheque drawn by her upon them, they having at the time funds to meet it. Plea, that the plaintiff was a married woman. Replication, that the causes of action arose exclusively from earnings, money, chattels and property within the meaning of the Married Women's Property Act, 1870, and that the bankers knew when they accepted her banking account that she was a married woman carrying on her business separately from her husband :—Held, that the replication was good as shewing that she was seeking a remedy for the protection of her earnings and property within the meaning of the Married Women's Property Act, 1870, s. 11. Summers v. City Bank, 43 L. J., C. P. 261 ; L. R. 9 C. P. 580 ; 31 L. T. 268.

Explaining Mistake in Document set up in Claim.]—Whenever the pleadings show that a contract was erroneously reduced into writing by the mutual mistake of both parties, the court will at once treat the writing as reformed, although the plaintiff has never asked that it should be so reformed. Thus, where the statement of claim set up a charter-party made between the plaintiff and the defendant, and the replication stated that the charter-party on the face of it appeared to be made between the defendant and a stranger, but that the stranger's name was inserted by mistake of both parties, who treated it as representing the plaintiff's name :—Held, that this was no variance ; and that there was no need for the plaintiff to ask to have the instrument actually altered to correspond with his statement of claim. Breslauer v. Barwick, 36 L. T. 52 ; 24 W. R. 901.

Action of Trespass—Justification—Excess—New Assignment.]—In an action for trespass to the plaintiff's dwelling-house, and conversion of his goods, the statement of claim containing allegations that the defendant put bailiffs in the house, stayed therein a long time, and on two different days brought in a concourse of people ; the defendant justified the acts complained of as done in execution of a fieri facias, and the plaintiff replied that in continuing in the house for a long time, posting auction bills, and introducing a concourse of people as in the statement of claim mentioned, the defendant stayed more than a reasonable time, and brought in more people, and made a greater noise and disturbance upon the plaintiff's premises than was reasonable in order to levy under the fi. fa. :—Held, that the reply was either a new assignment, and therefore inadmissible under Ord. XVIII. r. 7, or was embarrassing ; and that in either view it should be set aside, with leave to amend the statement of claim. Byrne v. Duckett, 10 L. R., Ir. 24.

Facts by Reference to Independent Document.]—A reply must not refer to an independent document, such as plaintiff's answer to interrogatories, as containing facts on which the pleader relies, without setting out such document itself as part of the reply. Williamson v. L. & N. W. Ry., 48 L. J., Ch. 559 ; 12 Ch. D. 787 ; 27 W. R. 724.

Reply to Counter-claim.]—When a defendant in his defence and counter-claim does not comply with Ord. XIX. r. 10, it is sufficient for the plaintiff, who wishes to put in issue the facts alleged by the defendant, to join issue under r. 21 of Ord. XIX., as in such case r. 20 of the same order will not apply to the reply of the plaintiff. Hill v. Mayhew, 24 W. R. 485.

A reply joining issue generally will not, upon the application of the defendant, be ordered to be struck out or amended either under Ord. XXVII. r. 1, or Ord. LIX., because it does not deal specifically with the allegations of a counter-claim. Rolfe v. Maclaren, 3 Ch. D. 106 ; 24 W. R. 816.

The defendants having repeated, by way of counter-claim, paragraphs 1 to 13 of their defence, the plaintiffs by their reply (paragraph 1) joined issue upon the defence, and (paragraph 2) pleaded as follows :—"With respect to the statements contained in the defendants' counter-claim, the plaintiffs join issue upon paragraphs 1 to 13 inclusive of the defence therein repeated and relied on, as if the same were repeated verbatim." Upon a motion by the defendants to strike out paragraph 2 of the reply :—Held, that the plaintiffs were not at liberty merely to join issue upon the counter-claim, but must deal specifically with the statements contained in it. Rolfe v. Maclaren (3 Ch. D. 106) not followed upon that point. Benbow v. Low, 49 L. J., Ch. 259 ; 13 Ch. D. 553 ; 42 L. T. 14 ; 28 W. R. 384. See Rules of Supreme Court, 1883, Ord. XXIII. r. 4.

—— General Denial.]—The defendant to an action delivered a statement of defence and counter-claim. The defence contained various admissions and allegations of fact, and then, by way of counter-claim, the defendant repeated "the several matters hereinbefore stated and admitted," and claimed certain relief. The plaintiff, by his reply, after making certain admissions and joining issue on the rest of the statement of defence, "in reply to the statements alleged by way of counter-claim" repeated "the several matters stated in the statement of claim and the admissions hereinbefore made," and said that "save as stated in the statement of claim or hereinbefore admitted, each of such allegations is untrue":—Held, that this amounted to an admission of all the statements alleged by way of counter-claim. But leave to amend was given. Green v. Sevin, 13 Ch. D. 589; 41 L. T. 724. See also Dunne v. Clancy, 6 L. R., Ir. 395.

Leave to plead Special Rejoinder.]—Application for leave to rejoin specially, when the court in the exercise of its discretion considered a rejoinder unnecessary, refused. Norris v. Beazley, 35 L. T. 845.

An application for leave to plead a special rejoinder under Ord. XXIII. r. 2, should be made on notice. Monck v. Smythe, [1895] 1 Ir. R. 200.

f. Pleading Matters arising after Action brought.

See R. S. C., 1883, Ord. XXIV.

Bankruptcy.]—On the 1st of February, 1877, the plaintiff brought an action for the recovery of property against a debtor and the trustee of his estate under a composition. On the 2nd of July, 1877, the defendant delivered a defence stating an adjudication in bankruptcy made against him on the 1st of June, 1877, on an act of bankruptcy committed on the 11th of November, 1876, and that the property was then in the order and disposition of the bankrupt with the consent of the plaintiff. Thereupon the plaintiff delivered a confession of the defence and signed judgment for his costs under Ord. XX. r. 3. On a summons by the trustee to set aside the judgment:—Held, that the adjudication in bankruptcy was a ground of defence which had arisen since action brought, notwithstanding that it related back to an act of bankruptcy committed before action brought, and the summons was dismissed with costs. Champion v. Formby, 47 L. J., Ch. 395; 7 Ch. D. 373; 26 W. R. 391.

A defendant was adjudged bankrupt on the 3rd of September; an action was commenced against him on the 11th of November; and on the 27th of November he obtained his order of discharge, and then pleaded, under the Bankruptcy Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 134), s. 161, in the general form, that he became bankrupt before action brought, and that the cause of action accrued before the bankruptcy. Issue having been joined:—Held, that the plea was not proved: for that it was the order of discharge, and not the adjudication, which was the bar; and that, therefore, the defence arose after action brought, and ought to have been pleaded according to the fact, as required by the Common Law Procedure Act, 1852, s. 68. Jones v. Hill, 39 L. J., Q. B. 74; L. R. 5 Q. B. 30; 21 L. T. 784; 18 W. R. 453.

Counter-claim.]—A counter-claim founded on facts which have arisen since the action was brought must be pleaded as so arising, so that the plaintiff may be able to confess the plea; and if it is not so pleaded the plaintiff should take out a summons to strike it out, unless it is amended. Ellis v. Munson, 35 L. T. 585—C. A. S. P., Bourke v. Nichol, 12 L. R., Ir. 415.

When a defendant delivers a counter-claim any damages thereby claimed must be limited to the date when the writ of summons was issued. Original Hartlepool Collieries Co. v. Gibb, 46 L. J., Ch. 311; 5 Ch. D. 713; 36 L. T. 433.

Relief can be given on a counter-claim in respect of a cause of action accrued to the defendant subsequently to the issue of the writ in the original action. Original Hartlepool Collieries Co. v. Gibb (supra) not followed. Beddall v. Maitland, 50 L. J., Ch. 401; 17 Ch. D. 174; 44 L. T. 248; 29 W. R. 484.

A plaintiff may, in his reply to a counter-claim of the defendant, counter-claim in respect of a cause of action accrued after the issue of the writ, but arising at the same time and out of the same transaction as the counter-claim of the defendant. Toke v. Andrews, 51 L. J., Q. B. 281; 8 Q. B. D. 428; 30 W. R. 659.

Deed Registered.]—By 6 Anne, c. 2, s. 4 (Ir.), a registered deed is to be taken as good and effectual according to the time of the registration of the memorial thereof. By s. 5, all deeds paid on date, but unregistered, are to be absolutely void as against the registered deed:—Held, that under a plea which was in form in bar of the action, and which alleged the time of registration under a videlicet, proof of the registration of a deed which really defeated the action might be given, though the deed was not in fact registered till after the commencement of the action, but before plea pleaded. Carlisle v. Whaley, L. R. 2 H. L. 391; 16 W. R. 229.

Defence of Statute.]—A plea in bar, justifying under a statute which affords a defence arising subsequently to the commencement of the action, is good after verdict. Cobbett v. Grey, 4 Ex. 729; 19 L. J., Ex. 137.

Decree or Judgment.]—Liberty given to file a supplemental answer putting in issue a decree pronounced subsequently to the filing of the original answer. Blake v. O'Kelly, Ir. R. 8 Eq. 67.

An executor may plead puis darrein continuance unreversed judgments on simple contract of the testator, recovered against the executor in suits commenced since he pleaded the general issue in bar in the principal case; and though he might have demurred to such actions, he is not bound so to do. Prince v. Nicholson, 5 Taunt. 665; 1 Marsh. 280; 15 R. R. 612.

Material Facts.]—When facts material for the defendants to put in issue have occurred since the filing of their answer, the court will give leave to file a supplemental answer. Southall v. British Mutual Life Assurance Society, 38 L. J., Ch. 711.

A defendant may state in his answer, and take issue upon, matters which happened after the bill was filed; but the court will not deal with the subject of the suit by interlocutory order founded upon matters which occur after the answer has been filed, and are not brought forward by amendment, by supplemental bill, or by supplemental answer. Stamps v. Birmingham, Wolverhampton & Stour Valley Ry., 7 Hare, 258; 12 Jur. 720. Affirmed, 2 Ph. 673; 6 Railw. Cas. 123; 17 L. J., Ch. 431.

Time for Pleading.]—A defendant may plead puis darrein continuance where an issue remains to be tried, notwithstanding there are other issues upon which the plaintiff has already obtained judgment. Wagner v. Imbrie, 2 L. M. & P. 333; 6 Ex. 380; 20 L. J., Ex. 235; 15 Jur. 405.

Amendment of Plea.]—A plea of the bankruptcy of the plaintiff, pleaded puis darrein continuance, is amendable. Holroyd v. Reed, D. & M. 483; 5 Q. B. 594; 13 L. J., Q. B. 130; 8 Jur. 81.

Effect of Confession of Defence.]—When a plea is pleaded with an allegation that the matter of defence arose after the last pleading, and the plaintiff has confessed such plea, and has signed judgment for the costs of the cause up to the time of pleading such plea, such confession is not equivalent to the entry of a nolle prosequi, but puts an end to the litigation altogether as it stands at the time of the confession, so that the plaintiff is estopped from afterwards asserting in a fresh action any claim which he might have set up in the action, the plea in which he has confessed. Newington v. Levy, 39 L. J., C. P. 334; L. R. 5 C. P. 607; 23 L. T. 70; 18 W. R. 1198. Affirmed, 40 L. J., C. P. 29; L. R. 6 C. P. 180; 23 L. T. 595; 19 W. R. 473—Ex. Ch.

—— One Defendant.]—If one of two defendants pleads bankruptcy puis darrein continuance, the plaintiff cannot at nisi prius confess this plea to be true, and go on as to the other defendant. Pascall v. Horsley, 3 Car. & P. 372.

Costs on Confessing Defence.]—In an action for rent and for damages for breach of covenant in not building a wall, and also claiming an injunction, the defendant paid money into court to satisfy the claim for rent, and pleaded performance of the covenant by building the wall after action, and paid money into court in respect of the breach before action. The plaintiff took the money out of court, confessed the defence as to the wall, and claimed costs under Ord. XX. r. 3:—Held, that he was not entitled to such cost, for the statement did not amount to a defence within the meaning of that rule; but that he was entitled to the costs of the action under Ord. LV., or under the County Courts Act, 15 & 16 Vict. c. 54, s. 4. Callendar v. Hawkins, 2 C. P. D. 592; 26 W. R. 212.

A defendant pleaded pleas in bar of the action, and afterwards by leave of a judge, under the Common Law Procedure Act, 1852, s. 142, pleaded in addition the bankruptcy of the plaintiff since action, and the plaintiff confessed the plea:—Held, that under rr. 22 and 23 of T. T., 1853, the plaintiff was entitled to judgment for his costs up to the time of such pleading. Foster v. Gamgee, 45 L. J., Q. B. 576; 1 Q. B. D. 666; 34 L. T. 248; 24 W. R. 319.

Semble, that the effect of Ord. XX. rr. 1—3, is the same. Ib.

An action was brought by a member of a club "on behalf of himself and all other members" of such club, "except the defendant," against the committee of the club, charging them with breaches of trust in making profits out of contracts entered into by them on behalf of the club. The defence, in addition to other matters, stated that since action brought a meeting of the club had been held at which the contracts had been ratified by every member except the plaintiff, and that resolutions expressing confidence in the committee had been passed. The plaintiff delivered a confession of defence, and signed judgment for his costs of the action. The defendants moved to set aside the judgment and dismiss the action:—Held, that the plaintiff could not avail himself of Ord. XXIV. r. 3, as the above grounds of defence did not amount to a waiver of the other pleas. Foster v. Gamgee (1 Q. B. D. 666) distinguished. Harrison v. Abergavenny (Marquis), 57 L. T. 360.

A plaintiff became insolvent after issue joined, and the defendant, by leave of a judge, under 15 & 16 Vict. c. 76, s. 142 (the plaintiff's assignees not giving security for costs), pleaded a plea of the plaintiff's insolvency, withdrawing his former pleas. The plaintiff confessing the plea and giving notice to tax his costs, the court held that the plaintiff was entitled to costs under the above rule if the plea of insolvency stood, but allowed the defendant to withdraw that plea, and to substitute his former pleas, and go on with the action. Plummer v. Hedge, 24 L. J., Q. B. 24.

When a plea that the plaintiff since the last pleading had been convicted of felony is pleaded puis darrein continuance, he may confess the plea and sign judgment for his costs. Barnett v. L. & N. W. Ry., 5 H. & N. 604; 29 L. J., Ex. 334; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 559; 8 W. R. 500.

So when a defendant pleads a matter of defence which, in fact, arose after the last pleading, the plaintiff may confess the plea, and sign judgment for his costs, although it contains no allegation that the matter of defence arose after the last pleading. Howarth v. Brown, 1 H. & C. 694; 32 L. J., Ex. 99; 7 L. T. 638; 11 W. R. 270.

A defendant, after pleading his bankruptcy and certificate puis darrein continuance, cannot force the plaintiff to reply, and the latter may discontinue the action without payment of costs. Wollen v. Smith, 1 P. & D. 374; 9 A. & E. 505; 2 W. W. & H. 79; 8 L. J., Q. B. 122.

—— Setting aside Order.]—Defendants delivered a further defence of matter arising since the delivery of the defence. The plaintiffs delivered a confession of the amended defence, and signed judgment for costs against the defendants. The judgment for costs was set aside on terms of the defendants withdrawing their amended defence. Bridgetown Waterworks Co. v. Barbados Water Supply Co., 57 L. J., Ch. 1051; 38 Ch. D. 378; 59 L. T. 314; 36 W. R. 852.

—— Appeal from Order.]—By Ord. XX. r. 3 [Ord. XXIV. (1883) r. 3], the plaintiff may, after delivering a confession of defence, "sign judgment for his costs up to the time of the pleading of such defence, unless the court or a judge shall, either before or after the delivery of such confession, otherwise order":—Held, that there is no appeal, without leave, to a divisional court from the refusal of a judge at chambers to deprive the plaintiff of his costs under the above rule. It is an appeal as to costs only, left to the discretion of the judge within the meaning of s. 49 of the Judicature Act, 1873. Perkins v. Beresford, 47 L. T. 515.

g. TIME FOR DELIVERY—PROCEEDINGS ON DEFAULT.

Defence—Specially-indorsed Writ.]—The service of a writ specially indorsed under Ord. III. r. 6, is delivery of a statement of claim to the defendant within the meaning of Ord. XXI. r. 6; so that the defendant has ten days from the time limited for appearance within which to deliver his defence. Anlaby v. Praetorius, 57 L. J., Q. B. 287; 20 Q. B. D. 764; 58 L. T. 671; 36 W. R. 487—C. A.

The time for appearing to a specially-indorsed writ expired on March 23, on which, being Good Friday, the offices of the court were closed, and they did not re-open until the 28th, on which day an appearance was entered:—Held, that the time for delivering a defence did not begin to run until the 28th. M'Kibbin v. M'Clelland, [1894] 2 Ir. R. 654.

—— Ord. XIV.]—A defendant having entered an appearance requiring a statement of claim, the plaintiff moved, in vacation, for final judgment under Ord. XIII., and the judge made "no rule" on the motion, no special time being limited for the delivery of the defence:—Held, that, after the lapse of eight days from the termination of the vacation, the plaintiff might sign judgment by default without delivering a statement of claim, or notice in lieu thereof. Rae v. Langford, 10 L. R., Ir. 108.

Reply—Counter-claim.]—Where a counter-claim is pleaded with a defence, the plaintiff has twenty-one days within which to deliver his reply to the defence and counter-claim. Rumley v. Winn, 58 L. J., Q. B. 128; 22 Q. B. D. 265; 60 L. T. 32; 37 W. R. 285. S. P., Page v. Gilmore, 30 L. R., Ir. 47.

Several Defendants — Time for Pleading Enlarged as to Some by Consent.]—Where one of several defendants in an action has delivered his defence, and the time for the plaintiff to deliver his reply to such defence has expired, but the plaintiff has, without the knowledge of that defendant, agreed in writing with the other defendants to extend the time for delivering their defences, that defendant cannot move to dismiss the action as against him for want of prosecution, the pleadings not yet being closed within the meaning of Ord. XXIX. r. 12, and Ord. XXXVI. rr. 4, 4a, of the Rules of Court, 1875. A defendant's proper course under such circumstances is to write to the plaintiff's solicitor, and inquire how the action stands as regards the other defendants. Ambroise v. Evelyn, 48 L. J., Ch. 686; 10 Ch. D. 759; 27 W. R. 639.

"Defence"—What is.]—In an action for recovery of land, a document, dated and signed by the defendant, setting out the terms under which he alleged that he held the premises, and delivered by him at the office of the plaintiff's solicitor, is not a "defence." Marshall v. Jones, 52 J. P. 423.

Non-delivery of Defence—Practice on.]—When a defendant has made default in delivering a defence, the action may be set down on motion for judgment without previous notice of motion. Gillatt v. Ker, 24 W. R. 428.

If a defendant makes default in delivering a defence, and the plaintiff has set down the action on motion for judgment, the motion for judgment may, by consent of all parties, be taken as an ordinary motion, and the order taken at once. Bowen v. Bowen, 24 W. R. 246.

When a defendant was in default the court ordered two clear days' notice of the intention to set down the action on motion for judgment to be given him. Roupell v. Parsons, 34 L. T. 56; 24 W. R. 269.

When an action is set down on motion for judgment in default of pleading, the court will fix an early day for the hearing. Meakin v. Sykes, 24 W. R. 293.

When three defendants had made default in delivering defence and another defendant had, by his defence, practically admitted the correctness of the statement of claim, and it was important to have the action tried against all at the same time, an order was made to set down the action on motion for judgment against the defendants in default, with liberty to give notice of motion, under Ord. XL. r. 11, for the same time against the defendant who had pleaded. Smith, In re, Bridson v. Smith, 24 W. R. 392.

If, in an action on a replevin bond, the plaintiff, instead of claiming damages, claims the amount for which the bond is given, and becomes entitled to judgment by default, his proper course is to enter final judgment under Ord. XXIX. r. 2, and not interlocutory judgment under r. 4 of that order. Dix v. Groom, 49 L. J., Ex. 430; 5 Ex. D. 91; 28 W. R. 370.

—— Failure by Infant Defendant.]—Where several defendants to an action, one of whom was an infant, failed to put in any defence, the court ordered that the action should be set down on notice of trial as against the infant defendant, and on notice of motion for judgment on the statement of claim as against the adult defendants. National Provincial Bank v. Evans, 51 L. J., Ch. 97; 30 W. R. 177.

In an action for sale in lieu of partition, the sole defendant was an infant. The facts were simple, and no defence was put in. The plaintiffs moved for judgment, and supported their motion by affidavits which verified the statement of claim. The guardian ad litem did not object to the proposed minutes of judgment:—Held, that under the circumstances the plaintiffs had taken the proper course, and that notice of trial need not be given. There is nothing in the Rules of Court, or in Ellis v. Robbins (50 L. J., Ch. 512), or National Provincial Bank v. Evans (51 L. J., Ch. 97), to the contrary. Fitzwater, In re, Fitzwater v. Waterhouse, 52 L. J., Ch. 83.

Semble, the court will not make an order for judgment for want of defence in the case of infant defendants making default in filing a statement of defence. Byrne v. Byrne, 5 L. R., Ir. 134.

Where there are minor defendants who do not file any defence, the proper course is to move for judgment against such defendants under Judicature Act, Ord. XXXIX. r. 1, grounding the motion upon affidavits verifying the statement of claim. Wallis v. Wallis, 13 L. R., Ir. 258.

Motion for Judgment—Proof of Case.]—An action was brought by a vendor for specific performance of an agreement against a purchaser who was in possession. The statement of claim set out the agreement. The defendant had not put in any defence. A motion was made on behalf of the plaintiff for judgment in default of defence, the action being set down as a short cause. The agreement had not been proved; but it was contended that the defendant, by making default in defence, had admitted the agreement as alleged, and that evidence of it was consequently unnecessary:—Held, that the agreement must be duly verified by affidavit, and the action was ordered to stand over for that purpose. Holmes v. Shaw, 52 L. T. 797.

In a creditor's suit for administration, the giving of judgment for administration upon default of pleading, under Ord. XXVIII. r. 10, and directing the usual account, does not relieve the plaintiff from the onus of proving his claim in chambers. Boak v. Moore, 7 L. R., Ir. 322—C. A.

On a motion for judgment in default of pleading, under Ord. XXVIII. r. 10, the plaintiff, where his title depends on documents, must produce and prove them. Crisford v. Dodd, 15 L. R., Ir. 83.

On an application to sign final judgment in default of defence in an action for cancelling an allotment of shares, where there has been no appearance under Ord. XXVII. r. 11, no evidence need be filed. Webster v. Vincent, 77 L. T. 167.

Where in a partition action some of the plaintiffs and some of the defendants were infants, and the plaintiffs moved for judgment in default of defence:—Held, that no affidavit verifying the statement of claim was necessary. Ripley v. Sawyer, 55 L. J., Ch. 407; 31 Ch. D. 494; 54 L. T. 294; 34 W. R. 270.

In a foreclosure action against a mortgagor and subsequent mortgagees, the mortgagor made default of appearance, and the remaining defendants appeared but made default in pleading. Upon motion for judgment under Ord. XXVII. r. 11, the plaintiffs filed an affidavit in support of their claim:—Held, that the costs of the affidavit must be disallowed against all the defendants. Jones v. Harris, 55 L. T. 884.

The court does not require evidence upon motion for judgment in default of pleading. Bagley v. Searle, infra.

—— Delivery of Minutes.]—In a vendor's action for specific performance, the plaintiff moved for a common form judgment against the defendant, he having made default in pleading. The notice of motion did not state the terms of the proposed judgment:—Held, having regard to the form of the notice of motion, that minutes must be prepared and a copy delivered to the defendant. Bagley v. Searle, 56 L. T. 306; 35 W. R. 404.

Upon a motion for judgment in default of pleading in a specific performance action, the plaintiff asked for an order in the usual form, but no minutes of the proposed judgment had been left with the judge's clerk before the cause was put into the paper:—Held, that, in such a case, where a copy of the minutes has not been delivered, the plaintiff should state in his notice of motion the precise words of the judgment for which he asks. De Jongh v. Newman, 56 L. T. 180; 35 W. R. 403.

—— Judgment confined to Statement of Claim.]—Where a married woman is the defendant to an action on a contract, and has made default in delivering a defence, the plaintiff's statement of claim must contain an allegation that the defendant has a separate estate; otherwise the court will refuse to make an order against the defendant on the statement of claim under Ord. XXVII. r. 11. Tetley v. Griffith, 57 L. T. 673; 36 W. R. 96.

By his statement of claim the plaintiff asked for specific performance and ancillary relief, but not for any declaration of lien. Upon a motion for judgment as in default of defence:—Held, that the plaintiff could not have any declaration of lien. Tacon v. National Standard Investment Co., 56 L. J., Ch. 529; 56 L. T. 165.

In an action for specific performance, the statement of claim alleged an agreement (to which agreement the plaintiff claimed leave to refer) whereby the defendant agreed to purchase from the plaintiff certain hereditaments situate in the parish of St. Peter the Great, otherwise sub-deanery, in the city of Chester and described in the schedule to the said agreement. The schedule was not set out in the statement of claim. The defendant appeared, but did not put in a defence. On the motion for judgment in default of delivery of a defence:—Held, that the evidence was admissible as to the agreement. Held also, that the property not being sufficiently described in the statement of claim, the statement of claim must be amended, setting out the property sufficiently to enable the court to give judgment in accordance with the pleadings, and the amended statement of claim must be re-served. Smith v. Buchan, 58 L. T. 710; 36 W. R. 631.

On a motion for judgment in default of defence in a foreclosure action, the plaintiff (an equitable mortgagee of leaseholds) asking for a personal judgment against the defendant, the mortgagor, for the amount which the plaintiff, by his statement of claim, alleged to be due, on the ground that the defendant, by not putting in a defence, had admitted that that amount was due from him. The plaintiff had not asked for a personal judgment by his statement of claim. The defendant did not appear at the hearing:—Held, that the defendant's admission by not pleading could only be treated as made for the purpose of the relief asked by the statement of claim. The court, therefore, merely directed an account of what was due to the plaintiff for principal and interest under his mortgage. Faithfull v. Woodley, 59 L. J., Ch. 304; 43 Ch. D. 287; 61 L. T. 808; 38 W. R. 326.

Where a plaintiff, in an action for infringement of a patent, upon motion for judgment, heard as a short cause, asked for such judgment as upon his statement of claim the court should consider him entitled to, and his statement of claim stated "Particulars of breaches are delivered herewith":—Held, that the particulars of breaches might be regarded as forming part of the statement of claim. United Telephone Co. v. Smith, 61 L. T. 617; 38 W. R. 70.

—— Interlocutory or Final Judgment—Discretion.]—Under Ord. XXVII. r. 11, which provides that "if the defendant makes default in delivering a defence, the plaintiff may set down the action on motion for judgment, and such judgment shall be given as upon the statement of claim the court . . . shall consider the plaintiff entitled to," the court may, in its discretion, refuse to give judgment, or may give an interlocutory judgment instead of a final judgment. Charles v. Shepherd, 61 L. J., Q. B. 768; [1892] 2 Q. B. 622; 67 L. T. 67—C. A.

If a defendant makes default in delivering a defence, and the plaintiff has set down the action on motion for judgment, the motion for judgment may, by consent of all parties, be taken as an ordinary motion, and the order taken at once. Bowen v. Bowen, 24 W. R. 246.

—— Notice.] — When a defendant was in default, the court ordered two clear days' notice of the intention to set down the action on motion for judgment to be given him. Roupell v. Parsons, 34 L. T. 56; 24 W. R. 269.

When a defendant has made default in delivering a defence or demurrer, the action may be set down on motion for judgment without previous notice of motion. Gillot v. Ker, 24 W. R. 428.

—— Hearing.]—When an action is set down on motion for judgment in default of pleading, the court will fix an early day for the hearing. Meakin v. Sykes, 24 W. R. 293.

—— Discretion to deprive Successful Plaintiff of Costs.]—The court, in giving judgment in favour of a plaintiff, where the defendant has made default in delivering a defence, has a discretion to deprive the plaintiff of the costs of the action, and in dealing with the question of costs the court is not bound to look only at the statement of claim. Young v. Thomas, 61 L. J., Ch. 496; [1892] 2 Ch. 134; 66 L. T. 575; 40 W. R. 468—C. A.

Striking out Defence—Application for Judgment — Defendant out of Jurisdiction.] — An English testator had executed a deed in favour of creditors which comprised real estate in Trinidad, but, though valid according to the law of England, did not pass the legal estate of the land in Trinidad to the trustees of the deed, because it was not executed as required by the law of Trinidad. The testator died intestate as to real estate, and the legal estate was vested in M., a British subject residing in Trinidad, and in the other defendants who resided in England. An action was brought by the trustee of the deed and another creditor to enforce the trusts of the deed against the real estate in Trinidad. The plaintiffs had been advised by a barrister practising in Trinidad, and they alleged in their stasement of claim that under the law of Trinidad the deed bound the beneficial interest of the debtor, and of all persons claiming through him in the real estate in Trinidad; and the plaintiffs claimed to have such estate vested in the trustee of the creditor's deed, and to have that property sold under the direction of the court to pay the creditors under the trusts of the deed. Pursuant to leave the writ was served in Trinidad on M., and he appeared and delivered a defence denying the plaintiffs' allegation that the beneficial interest in the land was bound. This defence was afterwards struck out under r. 21 of Ord. XXXI., because the defendant failed to obey an order to give discovery. By arrangement with the other defendants the action came on for trial, when the plaintiffs contended that M. was in the same position as if he had admitted the allegation in the statement of claim:—Held, that as the defence had only been struck out for a collateral reason, the law of Trinidad had not been sufficiently proved to justify the court in deciding; and that the action must stand over generally, with liberty to apply, with a view to proceedings being taken against M. in Trinidad. Jenney v. Mackintosh, 61 L. T. 108—C. A.

Non-delivery of Reply—Counter-claim.]—The plaintiff having made default in delivery of reply to the defendant's defence and counter-claim:—The court ordered final judgment to be entered for the defendant in respect of both the claim and counter-claim under Ord. XL. r. 11. Lumsden v. Winter, 51 L. J., Q. B. 413; 8 Q. B. D. 650; 30 W. R. 751; 46 J. P. 487.

The defendant in an action delivered a counter-claim. The action was dismissed for want of prosecution, the plaintiff having failed to deliver a reply:—Held, that, under Ord. XXVII. r. 11, the defendant was entitled to set down the action on motion for judgment on his counter-claim. Roberts v. Booth, [1893] 1 Ch. 52; 3 R. 151; 67 L. T. 646; 41 W. R. 220.

Judgment for default of pleading cannot be entered upon a counter-claim unless upon motion for judgment under Rules of the Supreme Court, 1883, Ord. XXVII. r. 11. Jones v. Macaulay, 60 L. J., Q. B. 258; [1891] 1 Q. B. 221; 64 L. T. 621; 39 W. R. 211—C. A.

Upon an application by a defendant who has delivered a counter-claim to dismiss an action for want of prosecution, he is entitled in default of reply to judgment on his counter-claim. London Road Car Co. v. Kelly, 18 L. R., Ir. 43.

Ord. XXIII. r. 4, and XXVII. rr. 11, 12, of the Rules of 1883, apply to a case where a defendant to a counter-claim has made default in pleading to it, and entitle the plaintiff in the counter-claim to move for judgment against the defaulting defendant. Street v. Crump, 25 Ch. D. 68; 49 L. T. 397; 32 W. R. 89.

Where a plaintiff fails to deliver a defence to a counter-claim, and his action is dismissed under a master's order, judgment on the counter-claim can only be signed by the defendant upon a motion for judgment under Ord. XXVII. r. 11. Higgins v. Scott, 58 L. J., Q. B. 97; 21 Q. B. D. 10; 58 L. T. 383. S. P., Aitken v. Dunbar, 46 L. J., Ch. 489; 25 W. R. 366.

Where the plaintiff makes default in delivery of reply to the defendant's defence and counter-claim, the court will order final judgment to be entered for the defendant in respect of both the original claim and the counter-claim, under Ord. XXXIX. r. 9. Thornton v. Clinch, 10 L. R., Ir. 378.

The plaintiff having made default in delivery of a reply to the defendant's defence and counter-claim, the court held that under Ord. XXIX. r. 12, and Ord. XL. r. 11, the defendant was entitled to an order dismissing the plaintiff's action with costs, and an order on the counter-claim for the relief thereby claimed with costs of the counter-claim. But as there were no positive admissions of fact on the pleadings, but only constructive admissions by reason of the absence of a reply, the action was ordered to be set down on motion for judgment, and notice of the setting down was directed to be given. Caroli v. Hirst, 48 L. T. 759; 31 W. R. 839.

Default in delivering Reply.]—Where the plaintiff made default in delivering a reply to a defence which, as to part of a claim for goods sold, alleged that the goods were not up to sample, and had been returned, and, admitting the residue of the claim, paid the amount of such residue into court; the defendant was allowed on motion to enter final judgment, with the costs of the action, and 3*l.* 3*s.* costs of the application. Fussell v. O'Boyle, 14 L. R., Ir. 53.

A defendant is entitled under Ord. XXXIX.

r. 9, to judgment on admissions of facts in the pleadings, by reason of the plaintiff not delivering a reply to the defence. Elliott v. Harris, 17 L. R., Ir. 351. See Ord. XXVII. r. 13.

Delivery of Pleadings after Prescribed Time.]—Notwithstanding the lapse of six weeks from appearance, requiring a statement of claim, the plaintiff may deliver a statement of claim without obtaining an order for that purpose, at any time before application by the defendant to dismiss for want of prosecution. O'Connell v. O'Connell, 6 L. R., Ir. 470. S. P., Sampson v. O'Donnell, 6 L. R., Ir. 471.

If a defendant does not deliver a defence within fourteen days after the statement of claim, the plaintiff is entitled to proceed with a motion for judgment under Ord. XXVIII. r. 10, notwithstanding that a defence is delivered subsequently to the service of notice of motion. Potts v. Deane, 11 L. R., Ir. 396.

In an action to recover possession of land a defendant may deliver his defence at any time before judgment entered against him, notwithstanding that the time limited by Ord. XXI. r. 1 (Ir.), has elapsed. Harding v. Lyons, 14 L. R., Ir. 302.

In an action to recover possession of land, a defendant may deliver his defence at any time before judgment entered against him, notwithstanding that the time limited by Ord. XXI. r. 1, has elapsed. Kennane v. Mackey, 24 L. R., Ir. 495.

Where, after the time for delivery of the defence had expired, and an order had been made fixing the mode of trial, a defendant delivered his defence without leave, the court, on motion by the plaintiff, set the defence aside. Wilson v. Noble, 11 L. R., Ir. 546.

In an action of ejectment on the title, a defendant applied for leave to deliver a defence after the time limited for doing so had expired; and such application having been refused, but before judgment entered, he delivered and filed a defence. The court, on motion by the plaintiff, set it aside as irregular. Meehan v. Meehan, 14 L. R., Ir. 300.

S. gave to G. a charge upon costs due from B. to S. G. brought his action against S. and B., asking for an account and foreclosure against S., and that B. might be ordered to pay the amount of the bill of costs (359*l.*) into court. The time for delivering defence was enlarged from the 1st of August to the 16th of August, 1882. No defence having been delivered, notice of motion for judgment was served on the 18th of November. On the 2nd of December B. took out a summons for leave to deliver defence, which was dismissed on the 6th. The defence which he proposed to put in alleged that there were other dealings between B. and S., and that no substantial part of the bill of costs was due, and moreover that B. was going to have the bill taxed. On the 19th of February, 1883, the motion for judgment came on for hearing. The court refused to look at the defence, and gave a judgment directing an account against S., and ordering B. to bring the 359*l.* into court. B. appealed:—Held, that on motion for judgment for want of defence, if a defence had been put in, though irregularly, the court will not disregard it, but will see whether it sets up grounds of defence which, if proved, will be material, and if so, will deal with the case in such manner that justice can be done, and that in the present case the order for bringing the 359*l.* into court must be discharged, and an account directed of what was due from B. to S. in respect of the bill of costs. Gibbings v. Strong, 26 Ch. D. 66; 50 L. T. 578; 32 W. R. 757—C. A.

The defendants in an action having obtained leave for further time to put in their defence suffered that time to expire. The plaintiff accordingly moved, under Ord. XXVII. r. 11, of the Rules of Court, 1883, for judgment on his statement of claim in default of defence. The defendants being served with notice of motion delivered their defence, but did not appear at the hearing of the motion:—Held, that the defence which had been delivered ought not to be treated as a mere nullity, though the plaintiff had rightly declined to state it to the court; but that, as the defence was not duly in form, the judgment would be according to the statement of claim, with a direction that the order was not to be drawn up for a week, and that the order now made was to be served on the defendants with notice that they were to be at liberty, within seven days from such service, to move to discharge the order. Montagu v. Land Corporation of England, 56 L. T. 730.

A defendant made default in putting in a defence under Ord. XXIX. r. 10 (1875), and the plaintiff gave notice of motion for judgment in default of defence. But before the motion was heard the defendant put in a defence:—Held, that, though put in after time, it could not be treated as a nullity, and that the plaintiff was not entitled to judgment in default of defence. But as the defence disclosed no real defence to the action, the court of appeal ordered the notice of motion to be amended and judgment to be given for the plaintiff on the admissions in the defence. Gill v. Woodfin, 53 L. J., Ch. 617; 25 Ch. D. 707; 50 L. T. 490; 32 W. R. 393—C. A.

The plaintiff delivered his reply after three weeks had elapsed from delivery of the defence, and subsequently the defendant, treating the facts stated in the defence as admitted, under Ord. XXIX. r. 12, by reason of the plaintiff's failure to reply in time, gave notice of motion for judgment under Ord. XL. r. 11:—Held, that the reply having been actually delivered before the notice of motion was given, the defendant was not entitled to judgment. Graves v. Terry, 51 L. J., Q. B. 464; 9 Q. B. D. 170; 30 W. R. 748.

A reply delivered more than three weeks after the delivery of the defence is irregular, unless the time for delivering the reply has been extended by the court. Webb v. Kerr, 14 L. R., Ir. 294.

Extension of Time by Court.]—A plaintiff being bound to deliver a statement of claim, and not having done so within the six weeks allowed by Ord. XXI. r. 1 (a), the defendant moved, under Ord. XXIX. r. 1, to dismiss the action with costs for want of prosecution. The court gave the plaintiff one week's time to take further proceedings, he paying the costs of the motion. Higginbottom v. Aynsley, 3 Ch. D. 288; 24 W. R. 782.

A writ was issued in August, 1877, in respect of a claim which would have become statute-barred in November, 1877. Appearances were entered in February, 1878. By a mistake of the clerk of the plaintiff's solicitor, the statement of claim was served too late by two days. The court allowed the plaintiff further time to deliver his statement of claim. Canadian Oil Works Corporation v. Hay, 38 L. T. 549.

—— Grounds for.]—The court was moved for further time to plead to a penal action; the affidavit was to the effect that the defendant and others were about to petition parliament for a remission of the penalty:—Held, that as the right to sue had completely accrued, the court was estopped by the concessions of Magna Charta to delay the plaintiff in his suit: "Nulli differemus justitiam vel rectum." Grant v. Ridley, 5 Man. & G. 201; 6 Scott (N.R.) 176; 12 L. J., C. P. 151; 7 Jur. 883.

Where a plaintiff by his bill states documents to be in his possession, and it is necessary for the defendant to see them in order to put in his answer, the court, though it cannot compel their production, will extend the time for answering until after the plaintiff has produced them. Taylor v. Heming, 4 Beav. 235; 10 L. J., Ch. 369; 5 Jur. 766.

Pending the proceedings in the cause, the plaintiff indicted the defendants in respect of the same transactions; the time for answering was extended until after the trial of the indictment. Lee v. Read, 5 Beav. 381; 12 L. J., Ch. 26; 6 Jur. 1026.

A plaintiff, being indicted for felony, sued a banker for money the plaintiff had paid him, which was surmised to be the produce of the felony; the court, on application, will give time to plead in a month after the trial of the indictment. Deakin v. Praed, 4 Taunt. 825.

Extension of Time by Consent without Order.]—If a plaintiff consents in writing to grant a defendant an extension of time for the delivery of his defence under Ord. XXII. r. 1, an order for the purpose is unnecessary. Ambroise v. Evelyn, 48 L. J., Ch. 686; 10 Ch. D. 759; 27 W. R. 639.

Effect of Order when Time allowed to Expire.]—An order was made under Ord. XXIX. r. 1, dismissing an action for want of prosecution, unless a statement of claim should be delivered within a week. The week having expired, and no statement of claim having been delivered:—Held, that the action was at an end, and there was no jurisdiction to make an order subsequently extending the time for delivery of the statement of claim. Whistler v. Hancock, 47 L. J., Q. B. 152; 3 Q. B. D. 83; 37 L. T. 639; 26 W. R. 211.

An order having been made on the 6th of May dismissing the action for want of prosecution, if the statement of claim were not delivered within fourteen days, on the 19th of May the plaintiff took out a summons, returnable the next day, the last of the fourteen days, for further time to deliver statement of claim. The summons was, on the 20th, adjourned, by the consent of the parties in writing indorsed thereon, till the 21st, and on the 21st a master made an order giving seven days more for delivery of statement of claim. Pollock, B., having rescinded the order of the master on the ground that he had no jurisdiction, the action being at an end on the 20th of May:—Held, that the decision of the learned judge was correct. King v. Davenport, 48 L. J., Q. B. 606; 4 Q. B. D. 402; 27 W. R. 798.

By the combined operation of Ord. LIV. r. 4, and Ord. LVII. r. 6, the court or a judge has power to enlarge the time limited by an order of a master for doing an act, even after the expiration of the time so limited, and the lapse of the four days' time for appealing, where the justice of the case requires it. On the 25th of March a master made an order dismissing an action for want of prosecution, unless an affidavit in answer to interrogatories was filed on the 31st. The affidavit was not filed on that day, but on the day following a summons was taken out "for further time to answer the interrogatories":—Held, that it was still competent to the court or a judge to enlarge the time for moving to set aside or vary the order of the 25th of March. Whistler v. Hancock (supra), distinguished. Burke v. Rooney, 48 L. J., C. P. 601; 4 C. P. D. 226; 27 W. R. 915.

Leave to Deliver after Time Expired.]—The time for delivering a reply which would have expired on the 25th July was extended to the 22nd of August, and then to the 19th of September. On the 26th of September, no reply having been delivered, the defendant served notice of motion for judgment. On the same day the plaintiff, by leave of the judge, served notice of motion for the following day for leave to deliver a reply, and on the 27th the judge refused the plaintiff's motion on the ground of unexplained delay:—Held, on appeal, that the application ought to have been granted on the terms of the plaintiff's paying the costs of it. Eaton v. Storer, 22 Ch. D. 91; 48 L. T. 204; 31 W. R. 488—C. A.

When a defendant in a foreclosure suit obtained an order for leave to file a counterclaim by way of set-off, and through the negligence of his solicitor no counter-claim was delivered, and a decree of foreclosure was made in his absence, an application more than six months afterwards for leave to file the counterclaim was refused on the ground of delay. Wilkins v. Bedford, 35 L. T. 622.

"Party Applying for Relief"—Who is.]—A defendant delivered a defence which, if uncontradicted, was a good defence to the plaintiff's claim; and the plaintiff did not reply or obtain further time within the three weeks limited by Ord. XXIV. r. 1. The defendant then, before the expiration of the six weeks within which a plaintiff must give notice of trial, moved under Ord. XL. r. 11, that the action might be dismissed with costs, on the ground that, by not replying, the plaintiff had admitted the defence within that rule:—Held, that a defendant seeking to dismiss an action under such circumstances was not a party applying for relief within the meaning of the rule. Linton v. Linton, 46 L. J., Ch. 64; 3 Ch. D. 793; 24 W. R. 962.

Setting Aside Judgment obtained by Default.]—A defendant obtained an order to set aside a judgment which had been entered against him in default, with liberty to appear and defend the action upon terms of paying to the plaintiff all his costs of the action subsequent to delivery of the statement of claim. Williams v. Brisco, 29 W. R. 713.

An order was made on the defendant in an action to produce certain documents for inspection. The defendant wilfully refused production, and accordingly an order was made under Ord. XXXI. r. 21, to strike out the defence, and judgment was given against the defendant in default of pleading. On an application by the defendant, under Ord. XXVII. r. 15, the court refused to set aside the judgment. Haigh v. Haigh, 55 L. J., Ch. 190; 31 Ch. D. 478; 53 L. T. 863; 34 W. R. 120.

Motion for Judgment—Chambers.]—Quære, whether a motion for judgment for default in pleading should not be made in chambers. Rumley v. Winn, 58 L. J., Q. B. 128; 22 Q. B. D. 265; 60 L. T. 32.

Summons for Time.]—A judgment signed after a summons for further time to plead is returnable is irregular. Morris v. Hunt, 2 B. & Ald. 355; 20 R. R. 472.

When further time to plead was given by a plaintiff's attorney, upon being served with a paper which purported to be a summons for time to plead:—Held, that the attorney was justified in signing judgment for want of a plea, after he had discovered that no summons had been issued. Lowne v. Loader, 3 Hodges, 55.

A judgment signed on the morning after the time for pleading has expired, whilst the parties are attending a judge on a summons for time to plead, returnable before the judgment is actually signed, is irregular. Abernethy v. Paton, 6 Scott, 586.

A defendant served two consecutive summonses for leave to plead several matters, neither of which was attended by the plaintiff. On the return of the second summons, on which day the time for pleading expired, he took out a third summons, returnable the following day. The plaintiff did not attend this summons, but signed judgment after it was returnable:—Held, that the third summons was no stay of proceedings, and that the judgment was regular. Hawkins v. Wilkinson, 2 Ex. 340; 17 L. J., Ex. 230.

Order "Peremptory" for Delivery.]—By Ord. XIX. r. 8, of the Rules of the Supreme Court, 1883, "the party at whose instance particulars have been delivered under a judge's order shall, unless the order otherwise provides, have the same length of time for pleading after the delivery of the particulars that he had at the return of the summons":—Held, that where, upon an application for extension of the time for delivering a pleading, an order "peremptory" is made for delivery of the pleading within a time limited by the order, the time continues to run, notwithstanding that the applicant subsequently obtains an order for particulars. Falch v. Axthelm, 59 L. J., Q. B. 161; 24 Q. B. D. 174; 38 W. R. 196—C. A.

A summons for further time to plead after an order for time to plead peremptorily is regular, and, if returnable at the opening of the office on the day after the order expires, it operates as a stay of proceedings till disposed of. Beazley v. Bailey, 16 M. & W. 58; 5 D. & L. 271; 16 L. J., Ex. 1; 10 Jur. 906.

Former Practice.] — Signing judgment for want of a plea is an act to be done by the plaintiff at his peril. Anon., 1 Chit. 356.

Judgment for want of a plea may be signed on a holiday. Bennett v. Potter, 2 C. & J. 622; 1 L. J., Ex. 258.

But not on a dies non juridicus. Harrison v. Smith, 9 B. & C. 243; 7 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 171.

A plaintiff cannot treat a plea pleaded in the name of a person who was not an attorney, as a nullity. Hill v. Mills, 2 D. P. C. 696.

A defendant obtained an order for leave to plead several matters, but at the time the order was obtained he was not enabled to draw up the rule, the rule office being then closed. He delivered the pleas, with notice that the rule would be drawn up and delivered as soon as it could be obtained. On the morning of the following day, the time for pleading having expired, the plaintiff signed judgment as for want of a plea:—Held, that the judgment was regular. Glen v. Lewis, 22 L. J., Ex. 24; 8 Ex. 132; 16 Jur. 1121.

A misstatement of a defendant's christian name in the commencement of his plea does not entitle the plaintiff to treat it as a nullity, and to sign judgment as for want of a plea. Anon., 7 D. & R. 511.

If a defendant, who is an attorney, really appears in person, but in point of form, as attorney, a plea in the name of another attorney cannot be treated as a nullity, on the ground of no order for change of attorney having been served. Kerrison v. Wallinghorough, 5 D. P. C. 564.

A plea delivered after the time for pleading expired, but before judgment has been actually signed, is regular. Ampthill v. Semple, 2 Tyr. 312; 2 C. & J. 358; 1 D. P. C. 316; 1 L. J., Ex. 102.

After the time for pleading expired, the defendant's attorney tendered a plea at the plaintiff's attorney's office; the plaintiff's attorney's clerk had just set out to sign judgment at the proper office; the defendant's attorney pursued, and, arriving immediately after judgment had been signed, again tendered the plea:—Held, that the judgment was regular. Stafford v. Nichols, 4 Bing. (N.C.) 693; 6 Scott, 577; 1 Arn. 262.

Where the time for pleading expired on the 19th, and a summons to stay proceedings was made returnable at eleven o'clock on the 20th, the plaintiff could not sign judgment for want of a plea before the return of the summons; and a plea delivered by the defendant before that time operated as a waiver of the summons. Barton v. Warren, 3 D. & L. 142; 14 L. J., Q. B. 312; 10 Jur. 375.

—— Setting Aside.] — The court will not restrain a defendant from pleading the statute of limitations on setting aside an interlocutory judgment. Maddocks v. Holmes, 1 Bos. & P. 228.

The court will set aside a regular interlocutory judgment on affidavit of merits, though it is defendant's intention to plead his infancy. Delafield v. Tanner, 1 Marsh. 391; 5 Taunt. 856.

So, the court will set aside a regular judgment on an affidavit of merits, though bankruptcy is intended to be pleaded. Evans v. Gill, 1 Bos. & P. 52.

To set aside a judgment signed for want of a plea upon payment of costs, the affidavit must state that the defendant has a good defence upon the merits; that he has a good and meritorious defence is not sufficient. Bower v. Kemp, 1 C. & J. 287; 1 D. P. C. 281; 9 L. J. (o.s.) Ex. 80.

The mere fact of a plea being clearly insufficient in point of law is not a ground for signing judgment as for want of a plea. Cowper v. Jones, 4 D. P. C. 591.

If a defendant seeks to set aside an interlocutory judgment for irregularity, he must come within a reasonable time from his knowing that it is signed. Grant v. Flower, 5 D. P. C. 419; 2 H. & W. 326.

Time—How calculated.] — When a plaintiff obtains an order to amend his declaration, and the defendant at the same time, by the same or another order obtains time to plead, that time must be calculated from the time that the plaintiff amends, and not from the date of the order for time, although the latter order does not refer to the former. Davies v. Stanley, 8 D. P. C. 433.

A month's time to plead means a lunar month. Tullett v. Linfield, 3 Burr. 1455. S.C., nom. Talbot v. Linfield, 1 W. Bl. 450.

Where three months' time to plead is given generally, they are to be reckoned by lunar months, and not by calendar months. Soper v. Curtis, 2 D. P. C. 237.

Before the regular time of pleading expired the defendant obtained an order for seven days' time to plead, the defendant then being under terms to take short notice of trial at the sittings:—Held, that the further time ought to be reckoned from the date of the order, as the cause could not otherwise be tried at the sittings. Simpson v. Cooper, 2 Scott, 840; 1 Hodges, 448.

A defendant obtained four days' time to plead:—Held, that the time given by the judge's order was to be computed from the date of the order, and not from the expiration of the original time to plead. Lane v. Parsons, 3 Bing. (N.C.) 264; 3 Scott, 652; 5 D. P. C. 359; 2 Hodges, 277; 6 L. J., C. P. 26.

A defendant who has a day's time to plead from the happening of an event, has the whole of the day following that on which the event happens in which to plead. Connelly v. Bremner, 1 H. & R. 612; 35 L. J., C. P. 319; L. R. 1 C. P. 557; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 762; 14 L. T. 520; 14 W. R. 781.

Where time to plead is given, such time is to be reckoned from the expiration of the rule to plead, and not from the date of the order. Aspinal v. Smyth, 2 Moore, 655.

h. Amendment and Striking out Pleadings.

1. Amendment by Parties of their own Pleadings.

a. In what Cases.

Claim introducing a new Cause of Action—Amendment of Writ.]—In amending a statement of claim without leave, under Ord. XXVI. r. 1, a plaintiff is not justified in adding a new and distinct cause of action uncovered by the indorsement of the writ of summons; and such an amendment is liable to be set aside. Where it becomes necessary to make an amendment of this nature, the plaintiff should first obtain leave (on notice to the defendant) to amend the writ of summons. Large v. Large (W. N. 1877, 198) and Johnson v. Palmer (4 C. P. D. 258) observed on. Moore v. Alwill, 8 L. R., Ir. 245. S. P., United Telephone Co. v. Tasker, 59 L. T. 852.

Extent of Power of Court.]—There is no kind of error or mistake which if not fraudulent or intended to overreach, the court ought not to correct, if it can be done without injustice to the other party. Courts do not exist for the sake of discipline, but for the sake of deciding matters in controversy, and I do not regard such amendment as a matter of favour or of grace. —Per Bowen, L.J. Cropper v. Smith, 53 L. J., Ch. 891; 26 Ch. D. 710; 51 L. T. 733; 33 W. R. 60.

It is the duty of a plaintiff to come fully prepared at the hearing to ask the court for a decree; and if he is not so prepared, and the suit appears defective from his default, it is then a matter of discretion or indulgence to grant him leave to supply the defect. Bierdermann v. Seymour, 1 Beav. 594.

The court will allow an amendment of pleadings where a party to the action would not be seriously and irremediably damnified by such amendment being allowed, or where no injury would be caused which could not be compensated for by costs. Claparede v. Commercial Union Association, 32 W. R. 262—C. A. S. P., Trufort, In re, Trafford v. Blanc, 53 L. T. 498; 34 W. R. 56.

In an action against a lessee to set aside a lease granted under a power, the statement of claim stated that the donee of the power had received a specified sum as a bribe, and stated the circumstances; the defence denied that that particular sum had been given, and denied each circumstance, but contained no general denial of a bribe having been given. Fry, J., having held that the denial was evasive, and amounted to an admission that some bribe had been given, and having refused leave to amend the statement of defence:—Held, by the court of appeal, that leave to amend the statement of defence ought to be given. Tildesley v. Harper, 48 L. J., Ch. 495; 10 Ch. D. 393; 39 L. T. 552; 27 W. R. 249—C. A.

Per Bramwell, L.J.: As a general rule, leave to amend ought not to be refused unless the court is satisfied that the party applying is acting mala fide, or that his blunder has done some injury to the other side, which cannot be compensated by payment of costs, or otherwise. Ib.

All such amendments in pleadings are to be allowed as may be necessary for enabling the real question at issue to be tried, subject to the limitation that the whole nature of the action may not be changed by amendment. Where, therefore, an action was brought for the rescission of a contract for the sale of land, and one of the defendants, who had entered into the contract on behalf of others of the defendants, who were the real vendors, disclaimed by his defence all interest in the contract:—Held, that such defendant's defence should be amended by confining the disclaimer to any beneficial interest in the contract, and stating that he only contracted as agent, and that such defendant should be added as a plaintiff, in a counter-claim by the real vendors, to compel the specific performance of the contract. Blenkhorn v. Penrose, 43 L. T. 668; 29 W. R. 237.

Reasonable and bonâ fide Cause of Action.] —An amendment in a statement of claim, under Ord. XXVI. r. 1, will not be allowed, unless the court is satisfied that there are reasonable grounds for the cause of action sought to be saved by the amendment, and that such cause of action is presented bonâ fide for the benefit of the plaintiff. Dillon v. Balfour, 20 L. R., Ir. 600.

Prejudice to Plaintiff.] — The defendants, a tramway company, were sued in respect of injuries alleged to have been occasioned to the plaintiff through their not having maintained a road upon which their tramway ran, in a safe and proper condition. Six months after the close of the pleadings the defendants applied for leave to amend their defence by setting up a contract under s. 29 of the Tramways Act, 1870, by which the liability to maintain the road was shifted from them to the vestry, the road authority of the district. Since the close of the pleadings the statutory period of limitation within which the plaintiff could have sued the vestry had elapsed :—Held, that the defendants ought not to be allowed to amend their defence, because the plaintiff could not be placed in the same position as if the defendants had pleaded correctly in the first instance. Steward v. North Metropolitan Tramways Co., 55 L. J., Q. B. 157 ; 16 Q. B. D. 556 ; 54 L. T. 35 ; 34 W. R. 316 ; 50 J. P. 324—C. A.

Claim barred by Statute of Limitations.]—A plaintiff will not be allowed to amend by setting up fresh claims in respect of causes of action which since the issue of the writ have become barred by the Statute of Limitations. Weldon v. Neal, 56 L. J., Q. B. 621 ; 19 Q. B. D. 394 ; 35 W. R. 820—C. A.

No Title to sue when Writ issued.]—Where there has been no title to sue at the time of filing an original bill or information, a decree cannot be founded upon a right of suit subsequently acquired and brought forward by a supplemental bill, or by way of amendment, the rule applying not only in cases where the title to sue in respect of the whole matter of the suit is acquired subsequently to filing the original bill, but also in cases where the title to sue in respect of any of the matter of the suit is so acquired ; and the principle being that there must be a right of suit when the suit is commenced ; and a supplemental bill is not the commencement, but the continuance of the suit. Att.-Gen. v. Avon (otherwise Aberavon) Corporation, 3 De G. J.& S. 537.

If a plaintiff has no title to maintain his suit at the time when the bill is filed, he cannot carry on the suit by subsequently acquiring a title and amending the bill accordingly. Evans v. Bagshaw, 39 L. J., Ch. 145 ; L. R. 5 Ch. 340 ; 18 W. R. 657.

Unintentional Omission.]—When to a declaration on contract there is a plea of payment which could not have been intended to admit the liability contended for by the plaintiff, the court will allow the defendant to amend. Henderson v. Squire, 10 B. & S. 183 ; 38 L. J., Q. B. 73 ; L. R. 4 Q. B. 170 ; 19 L. T. 601 ; 17 W. R. 519.

If the plaintiff in a suit omits to put facts in issue by his original bill, or by amendment, leave to file a supplemental or amended bill, after the suit is at issue, ought not to be granted by the court, on the ground of inadvertence. A petition to obtain such leave ought to make out a case of new evidence lately discovered, material to the plaintiff's equity, and which, with reasonable diligence, could not have been discovered before ; but in such case the suit ought to be disposed of without prejudice to the matter omitted to be put in issue, which the plaintiff may prosecute in any future suit. M'Neill v. Cahill, 2 Bligh, 229.

Where pleadings are informal, and do not raise the question the parties intended to raise, the court or a judge is bound to alter them, so as to make them in accordance with the intention of the parties. Ritchie v. Van Gelder, 9 Ex. 762 ; 18 Jur. 385 ; 2 W. R. 418.

But when pleadings raise the question in dispute between the parties, it is discretionary with the court or judge whether they will allow others to be substituted in order to raise some other question. Ib.

Therefore, where issue was joined on never indebted, the court held itself not bound to allow a plea of illegality of consideration for the contract between the parties to be substituted for never indebted, although it was sworn that that illegality was the real question in controversy between the parties. Ib.

Leave to amend will be granted where a slip appears in the pleadings, but not so as to raise a fresh cause of action. Clarke v. York, 47 L. T. 381 ; 31 W. R. 62.

Fraud and Misrepresentation.]—Amendments as a rule at the trial are not allowed to raise a charge of fraud at a time when the case has been launched independently of fraud. Hendriks v. Montagu, 50 L. J., Ch. 257 ; 17 Ch. D. 642 ; 44 L. T. 89 ; 30 W. R. 168.

A judge has an absolute discretion to allow any amendment of the pleadings. Therefore, where, in the middle of the trial of a probate suit before the court and a jury, one party applied to amend, by adding a plea of fraud :—Held, that the judge had the right to exercise his discretion in favour of the party applying to add the plea. Riding v. Hawkins, 58 L. J., P. 48 ; 14 P. D. 56 ; 60 L. T. 869 ; 37 W. R. 575.

The statement of claim in an action for fraudulent misrepresentation in a prospectus relating to a company, contained a general allegation, that the prospectus comprised many untrue and misleading statements, and then set out certain specific instances of alleged misrepresentation, amongst others the following : "That the plastic or surface clay on the Fletton property was of an average depth of thirteen feet, whereas, in fact, at the deepest part such clay was only eleven feet or thereabouts in depth, diminishing to two feet." At the trial the plaintiff proposed to adduce evidence that there was an average depth of six feet of clay, that only four feet of this could be used for making the best bricks, and that instead of there being thirty-three acres in the property, as stated in the prospectus, there were in reality only eighteen acres :—Held, that evidence of these alleged misrepresentations could not be admitted as they had not been specifically pleaded, and that leave to amend would not be granted. Symonds v. City Bank, 34 W. R. 364.

Undue Influence.]—M. A. D., the testatrix, in 1853, made her will, by which she gave her property equally between the plaintiffs, defendants and interveners. In an action by the plaintiffs propounding this will, it appeared that in 1874 she gave instructions for another will, which would have deprived the plaintiffs of all interest in her estate. In the course of the plaintiffs' case some evidence was given tending to shew that the testatrix was prevented by force and threats from executing the proposed will. The court allowed the pleadings to be amended by adding statements to that effect, and praying for a declaration that the plaintiffs held their shares as trustees for the defendants and interveners. Betts v. Doughty, 48 L. J., P. 71 ; 5 P. D. 26 ; 41 L. T. 560.

To Raise Fruitless Inquiry.]—I do not think I ought to allow an amendment for the purpose of directing what would probably be a fruitless inquiry—Per Kay, J. Yorkshire Railway Waggon Co. v. Maclure, 51 L. J., Ch. 259 ; 19 Ch. D. 489 ; 45 L. T. 751 ; 30 W. R. 291.

Cause of Action not entirely changed.] — The plaintiff and the defendant each had a lease of a field from each of two tenants in common. The defendant entered the field, and cut, made into hay and removed a crop of growing grass. He also put a lock on the gate of the field, but the gate was not always kept locked. In an action of trespass and trover by the plaintiff against the defendant :—Held, that it would not lie, as they were tenants in common, and nothing amounting in law to an ouster having occurred, and that the plaintiff could not amend his declaration by changing the action into one of account, under 4 Anne, c. 16, s. 27, since that would be to change the entire character of the action and the questions at issue. Jacobs v. Seward, 41 L. J., C. P. 221 ; L. R. 5 H. L. 464 ; 27 L. T. 185. Affirming 18 W. R. 953—Ex. Ch. S. P., Smurthwaite v. Richardson, 15 C. B. (N.S.) 463.

Semble, an amendment converting a claim on the footing of a subsisting lease into a claim on the footing of eviction, ought not to be allowed. Newby v. Sharpe, 47 L. J., Ch. 617 ; 8 Ch. D. 39 ; 38 L. T. 583 ; 26 W. R. 685.

Where, to an action on a cheque, the defendant pleaded but one plea, which admitted the making the cheque, the court refused to permit him also to plead that the cheque required a stamp. Jenkins v. Creech, 5 D. P. C. 293.

Amendment allowed in a penal action which does not introduce any new substantive cause of action. Maddock v. Hammet, 7 Term Rep. 55.

Where a defendant pleaded never indebted to an action for money lent, and issue was joined thereon, the court refused to allow him to substitute a plea, that the money was lent for the purpose of purchasing shares in a foreign lottery and reselling them in England. Ritchie v. Van Gelden, 9 Ex. 762 ; 18 Jur. 385.

Where an amendment merely consists in a correction of a blunder in the statement of the contract, and does not vary the real question the parties came to try, the judge is warranted in allowing it without imposing any condition. St. Losky v. Green, 9 C. B. (N.S.) 370 ; 2 F. & F. 106 ; 30 L. J., C. P. 19 ; 7 Jur. (N.S) 394 ; 3 L. T. 297 ; 9 W. R. 119.

A declaration that the defendant contracted to sell to the plaintiff "a cargo of Merthyr coal of the description called through and through to be hand-picked." This description being proved to be inconsistent and unintelligible, and the real contest being whether or not the contract was for "hand-picked coal," the judge amended it by striking out the words in italics, the costs being the defendant's costs in the cause. The jury having found for him :—Held, that the amendment was properly made. Ib.

To an action for false imprisonment, the defendant pleaded a justification of several facts which constituted reasonable and probable cause for his suspecting that the plaintiff had stolen his goods. He failed to prove all the allegations, and the judge amended it by altering one and striking out others :—Held, that the amendment was properly made, the facts stated in the plea, as amended, affording sufficient reasonable and probable cause for the suspicion. Hailes v. Marks, 7 H. & N. 56 ; 30 L. J., Ex. 389 ; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 851 ; 4 L. T. 805 ; 9 W. R. 808.

A declaration that the plaintiff entered into the service of the defendant as a commercial traveller at a yearly salary, and that he agreed to continue him in his employ for a whole year, and that he discharged him. It was proved that there was a usage in the trade that commercial travellers should be dismissed with a three months' notice :—Held, that the contract was not proved, the condition as to the notice not being in defeasance of the contract, but forming part of it, but that the plaintiff ought to have been allowed to amend at the trial, without costs. Metzner v. Bolton, 9 Ex. 518 ; 2 C. L. R. 685 ; 23 L. J., Ex. 130 ; 2 W. R. 302.

A plaintiff declared as for an injury to land in his possession, which, however, turned out on the trial to have been in the possession of his tenant. The real question in controversy between the parties was, whether the land was the plaintiff's property, and whether there was a right of way across it :—Held, that the judge had power to amend the declaration, so as to adapt it to an injury to the plaintiff's reversionary interest. May v. Footner, 5 El. & Bl. 505 ; 25 L. J., Q. B. 32 ; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1019 ; 4 W. R. 9.

Explanatory Words.]—A declaration that the defendant published of the plaintiff that "a receipt was obtained from the defendant by fraudulent means, and that the plaintiff was cognisant of such fraud." The judge allowed an amendment, by introducing the letter alleged to contain the libel, with the words "meaning thereby" immediately before the libel charged :—Held, properly made. Saunders v. Bate, 1 H. & N. 402.

—— And Particulars.]—A declaration that the defendant, by falsely representing that he was paying 70*l.* a month for stock consumed, and was taking 100*l.* a month as receipts from his business as a publican, induced the plaintiff to purchase the business. At the trial it appeared that the payments and receipts were as alleged, but the business was chiefly out-door business, and that the representation was that it was done over the counter. The judge amended the declaration by inserting the words, "and that the business was a bar business, carried on at home, and chiefly over the counter, and not a business done elsewhere or out of the house" :—Held, that he had power to make the amendment, under s. 222 of the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 76. Roles v. Davis, 4 H. & N. 484 ; 1 F. & F. 563 ; 28 L. J., Ex. 287.

Insertion of Particulars.]—A plea of justification in an action for a malicious prosecution, on a charge of receiving stolen goods, alleged that the goods had been stolen by "some persons unknown," and the evidence shewed that the plaintiff had received the goods from a servant of the defendant, named John Press :—Held, that the judge had properly exercised his discretion in allowing the plea to be amended, by striking out the words "some person unknown," and substituting the words "one John Press."

Pratt v. Hanbury, 14 Q. B. 190; 19 L. J., Q. B. 17; 13 Jur. 1003.

At the trial of an action for alleged infringement of a patent by the importation into British waters of a material manufactured abroad according to the patent process, for the purpose of having it transhipped for exportation, evidence was given that the defendants had acted as custom-house agents for the foreign manufacturing firm, in getting the goods landed and stored in this country. Leave was given to the plaintiff, at the hearing of the trial, to amend the statement of claim by alleging this practice, and that such practice was an infringement. Nobel's Explosive Co. v. Jones, 49 L. J., Ch. 726; 17 Ch. D. 721; 42 L. T. 754; 28 W. R. 653.

Involving Different Cause of Action.]—An amendment will not be allowed at the trial, where, in tort, the plaintiff has stated one cause of action, and the evidence, failing to sustain it, has endeavoured to raise another one. Bradworth v. Foshaw, 10 W. R. 760.

Leave at the hearing to amend a bill by the introduction of matter which will make a new case, although not formerly granted, may now, under Judicature Act, Ord. XXVII. r. 1, be given in a suit brought to a hearing upon motion for decree under the old practice. Budding v. Murdoch, 45 L. J., Ch. 213; 1 Ch. D. 42; 24 W. R. 23.

Amendments as a rule at the trial are not allowed to raise a charge of fraud at a time when the case has been launched independently of fraud. Hendriks v. Montagu, 50 L. J., Ch. 257; 17 Ch. D. 642; 44 L. T. 89; 30 W. R. 168.

A declaration for giving a false character of P., a clerk, alleged that the defendant fraudulently represented to the plaintiff that the reason why he had dismissed P. was the decrease in his business, and recommended the plaintiff to try P., and knowingly suppressed and concealed from the plaintiff the fact that P. had been dismissed from his employ on account of dishonesty. It appeared that P. had been guilty of dishonesty while in the defendant's employ, but that the defendant had not mentioned that fact to the plaintiff when he recommended him to try P. It also appeared, however, that P. had not been dismissed on account of his dishonesty, but really for the reason which the defendant had assigned to the plaintiff:—Held, that this evidence did not support the declaration, and the judge refused to allow an amendment by inserting an allegation that P., whilst in the defendant's employ, was guilty of dishonesty, instead of the allegation that "P. had been dismissed from the employment of the defendant on account of dishonesty," and that the amendment was properly refused, the matter in controversy between the parties being, not whether the defendant had fraudulently suppressed the fact that P. had been guilty of dishonesty, but whether he had given the true reason for having dismissed him. Wilkin v. Reed, 15 C. B. 192; 2 C. L. R. 796; 23 L. J., C. P. 193; 18 Jur. 1081; 2 W. R. 556.

In a foreclosure action a defence and counterclaim were put in claiming payment of what should be found due to the defendant on taking the accounts, but not expressly claiming to open the accounts or specifying improper charges. An application to amend at the hearing was refused. The court, however, permitted the parties to give evidence as to the accounts, on the ground that it might be the duty of the court under Ord. XXVIII. r. 1, to make all such amendments as should be necessary for determining the real question between the parties, and having heard the evidence without ordering amendment, the court treated the pleadings as amended, and decided on the evidence. Ward v. Sharp, 53 L. J., Ch. 313; 50 L. T. 557; 32 W. R. 584.

A plaintiff in his statement of claim asked for rescission of his contract to take shares in the defendant company on the ground of misrepresentations in the prospectus. A winding-up order was subsequently made. The plaintiff after this amended his statement of claim:—Held, that a shareholder may save his rights and claim relief on the grounds originally put forward before the commencement of the winding-up; that each allegation of fraud is like a separate count in an indictment; that an amendment introducing new matter failed; but that amendments which merely enlarged and made more precise the original allegations must stand. Cocksedge v. Metropolitan Coal Consumers Association, 64 L. T. 826; 39 W. R. 637. Affirmed 65 L. T. 432—C. A.

An allottee of shares brought an action for fraudulent misrepresentation against directors of his company, and by the indorsement on the writ he claimed indemnity and rescission of his contract to take shares. The company was ordered to be wound up. The plaintiff by his claim asked for indemnity, but not rescission. An application to determine whether the plaintiff was to be a contributory stood over pending this trial:—Held, that the plaintiff could not obtain rescission on the pleadings and leave to amend was refused. Cargill v. Bower, 47 L. J., Ch. 649; 10 Ch. D. 502; 38 L. T. 779; 26 W. R. 716.

In an action for an excessive distress not averring that the sum distrained for was not due, with a count for selling before the expiration of five days, the plaintiff at the trial applied to amend, by adding a count for distraining and selling goods to satisfy more rent than was due. The judge refused to allow the amendment, on the ground that it was not a matter in dispute at the commencement of the action:—Held, properly disallowed. Lucas v. Tarleton, 3 H. & N. 116; 27 L. J., Ex. 246.

Action changed to Information.]—An action may, by amendment of the writ and statement of claim, be turned into an information and action without prejudice to a pending motion in the action, the necessary sanction of the attorney-general being obtained. Caldwell v. Pagham Harbour Reclamation Co., 45 L. J., Ch. 796; 2 Ch. D. 221; 24 W. R. 690.

No Denial or General Traverse.]—The defendant delivered a defence containing only a general denial:—Held, that this amounted to an admission of the allegations in the statement of claim, but leave to amend was given. Green v. Sevin, 13 Ch. D. 589; 41 L. T. 724.

In an action for damages for an alleged infringement of copyright in a song, the defendant, by his defence, alleged that the song had not been registered at Stationers' Hall until the 9th of December, 1876, and added, "the defendant denies that the song has been duly registered. The time of the first publication thereof is not truly entered on the register":—Held, that under this pleading the defendant was only entitled to prove that the time of first publication had been untruly entered, and that he was not at liberty to prove that the name of the publisher had been untruly stated, and that leave to amend the statement of defence so as to raise the latter point ought not to be given, even though by the plaintiff's own evidence at the trial it for the first time appeared that the name of the publisher had been untruly entered in the register. Collette v. Goode, 47 L. J., Ch. 370; 7 Ch. D. 842; 38 L. T. 504. See also Crowe v. Barnicot, 46 L. J., Ch. 855; 6 Ch. D. 753; 37 L. T. 68; 25 W. R. 789.

The plaintiff claimed to be tenant in possession of a part of the foreshore of the sea at Margate, and he sought to restrain the defendant from removing shingle from the foreshore, and from placing bathing machines upon it. The defendant claimed by forty years' enjoyment an easement entitling him to do the acts complained of, and by his defence denied that the plaintiff was or ever had been in possession of the foreshore in question, "save subject to the rights of the defendant." At the trial Fry, J., refused the defendant leave to amend his defence by striking out the qualifying words, making the denial of the plaintiff's possession an absolute one, and claiming the ownership of the foreshore:—Held, that the defendant should have been allowed to amend. Laird v. Briggs, 19 Ch. D. 22; 45 L. T. 238—C. A. Reversing 50 L. J., Ch. 260; 29 W. R. 197.

An allegation in the statement of claim was not denied in the defence, though evidence was adduced contradicting it. On the defendant, at a late stage of the case, asking leave to amend:—Held, that on the balance of convenience, leave to amend must be refused. Lowther v. Heaver, 59 L. T. 631; 37 W. R. 55. Affirmed infra in C. A.

The plaintiff claimed, as assignee of four plots of land comprised in a building agreement, that the defendant might be ordered to execute to him separate leases of the plots. It was a necessary part of the plaintiff's case to shew that the houses on the plots of land had been roofed in at the time when he acquired the title, and the statement of claim contained an allegation that the plaintiff's predecessor in title had roofed in the houses by March, 1887. The defendant did not deny this or traverse the allegation by his defence, but alleged, as grounds for resisting the plaintiff's claim, that there had been breaches of the conditions in the building agreement under which the plaintiff's predecessor in title held with regard to building and payment of rent. At the trial of the action it came out in the evidence that small portions of the roofs of the four houses were not thoroughly completed. The defendant applied for liberty to amend, traversing the allegation in the statement of claim:—Held, that the defendant had not traversed the allegation that the roofs were completed, but had relied on other grounds for refusing to grant the leases, and that he must be taken to have decided not to rely on the roofs not being completed, and that it was too late for him at the trial to ask for leave to amend. Lowther v. Heaver, 58 L. J., Ch. 482; 41 Ch. D. 248; 60 L. T. 310; 37 W. R. 465—C. A.

Where a party who is entitled to a limited right exercises it in excess, so as to cause a nuisance or create a right of action entire in its nature (as where a window or a drain is enlarged or applied to other purposes than originally authorised), as the entire nuisance may be abated, an action for an obstruction of the original right of easement cannot be maintained, until its exercise has been reduced within its original limits; and if an action is brought for the obstruction, in which the right is declared upon according to its enlarged exercise, and the declaration is not supported by the proof, on a traverse of the right as laid, an amendment will not be allowed, as the effect would be to evade, and not to determine the question really in controversy between the parties. Cawkwell v. Russell, 26 L. J., Ex. 34.

Damages — Claim Increased.]—Where the damages were laid at 10*l*., though the sum sought to be recovered was 150*l*., and the jury returned a verdict for 150*l*., the court made a rule absolute for amending the declaration by increasing the damages. Tebbs v. Barron, 5 Scott (N.R.) 837; 4 Man. & G. 844; 12 L. J., C. P. 33.

To an action on a bill of exchange the defendant pleaded that he did not accept, and proved that the bill was accepted by his partner in the name of the firm, and included a private debt due from the partner, as well as a debt due from the firm. The defendant had given the partner no authority to accept in the name of the firm for his private debt. Quære, whether the plea was proved. In such a case the court amended the declaration by adding a count for the consideration, and directed a verdict to be entered for the sum really due from the firm upon terms. Eleston v. Deacon, L. R. 2 C. P. 20.

The claim in a declaration may be amended by increasing its amount under the Common Law Procedure Act, 1852, s. 222, by the judge at the trial of the action. Knowlman v. Bluett, 43 L. J., Ex. 29; L. R. 9 Ex. 1; 29 L. T. 462; 22 W. R. 77.

Effect of Delay.]—Amendment allowed after the time limited for bringing another action, there having been no unnecessary delay in his proceedings. Cross v. Kaye, 6 Term Rep. 543.

But the court will not permit any amendments to be made where the plaintiff has been guilty of delay in carrying on the suit. Ranking v. Marsh, 8 Term Rep. 30. S. P., Steel v. Sowerby, 6 Term Rep. 161.

And it was held an unreasonable delay where the action had been depending for four years. Goff v. Popplewell, 2 Term Rep. 707.

An application to the court to amend pleas does not fall within the rule respecting the setting aside proceedings for irregularity, with regard to the promptness of the application. Welsh or Welch v. Hall, 9 M. & W. 14; 1 D. (N.S.) 365; 11 L. J., Ex. 57.

The court refused to allow a replication to be amended after the lapse of a year after judgment pronounced on demurrer, the case having previously stood over that the parties might mutually agree to amend, and both having declined to do so. Hammond v. Colls, 3 C. B. 212.

The court will not give leave to a plaintiff to amend his bill if he has not taken any step in the prosecution of the suit for an undue length of time (in this case, two years after answers put in), and is not able to explain his delay. Altree v. Horden, 3 Jur. 816.

—— Matter struck out—Time for Appealing expired.]—In action under s. 32 of the Patents Acts of 1883 to restrain a patentee from issuing threats, the plaintiffs, in their statement of claim, alleged that the defendant's patent was invalid, and the court ordered this to be struck out. After the time for appealing had long expired, the plaintiffs applied to the judge to whom the action had been transferred for leave to amend by inserting the same allegation. The application was refused:—Held, by Cotton and Bowen, L.JJ., that liberty to amend ought to be given, but upon special terms, in order that the defendants might not suffer any loss by the plaintiffs not having taken the proper course of appealing in due time from the first order. Fry, L.J., dissented, and was of opinion that, though the amendment was in itself proper, it was not competent to the court to allow it, when doing so was inconsistent with and substantially reversed the first order of the court, which was not liable to be appealed from. Kurtz v. Spence, 36 Ch. D. 770; 58 L. T. 320; 36 W. R. 438—C. A.

—— Demurrable Petition—Evidence gone into.]—Where, after a petition to wind up a company had been opened, and the evidence gone into, counsel for the respondent raised the point that the petition was demurrable, the court gave leave to amend the petition on the ground that it is the duty of the respondent to be prompt with a demurrer, and that he should have insisted upon the court giving a decision upon the demurrer before the evidence was gone into. White Star Consolidated Gold Mining Co., In re, 48 L. T. 815.

Where former Order Neglected.]—Where a plaintiff had obtained an order for leave to amend his declaration on payment of costs, but had not made the amendment, the judge who tried the cause refused to allow the declaration to be amended at the trial. Geickie v. Monck, 1 Car. & K. 555.

Estoppel by Record.]—An action was brought against two defendants claiming damages for the wrongful removal of certain furniture and delivery of such of the furniture as had not been sold. The plaintiff had previously recovered judgment in another action against three other persons in respect of the same matters. At the trial, after the plaintiff's evidence and that of one defendant had been heard, the defendants asked leave to amend their defence by adding a plea of merger of the cause of action in the previous judgment. There was some evidence of acts by the defendants subsequently to the judgment which might give the plaintiffs a fresh cause of action:—Held, that the defence of the judgment in the previous action could not be raised unless pleaded, and that the amendment asked for should not be allowed, as it was not possible to put the plaintiffs in the same position as if the defendants had pleaded it at first. Edevain v. Cohen, 43 Ch. D. 187; 62 L. T. 17; 38 W. R. 177—C. A.

Bills of Sale Act.]—Where in an action on an agreement for sale reserving the vendor's lien a defence of the Bills of Sale Act is intended to be relied on, it should be pleaded; but leave to amend was given at the trial, so as to raise the question. Coburn v. Collins, 56 L. T. 431; 35 W. R 610.

Omission to Plead Statute of Limitations.]—In an action for goods bargained and sold, where the defendant pleaded a set-off, the particulars of which had not been delivered till after joinder of issue, the judge considered he had no power to allow the plaintiff at the trial to reply the statute of limitations to the plea of set-off. Brancker v. Crozier, 16 L. T. 391.

—— Statute of Frauds.]—In an action to have it declared that the defendant was the plaintiff's agent and trustee of a certain house, the defendant pleaded the 4th section of the statute of frauds. After the reply of the plaintiff's counsel, the defendant asked to amend his defence by pleading the 7th section, which had been mainly relied upon in argument:—Held, that leave to amend should be refused. James v. Smith, [1891] 1 Ch. 384; 63 L. T. 524; 39 W. R. 396. Affirmed, on other grounds, 65 L. T. 544—C. A.

Pleading restored after Amendment.]—A judge allowed a declaration, in an action on a mortgage deed, to be amended by inserting a claim of interest, and after an objection to the stamp on the deed, the plaintiff abandoned the claim of interest, and the judge gave leave to alter the record again, by striking out the part inserted to which the defendant objected. On a motion to restore the record to its condition as first amended, the court refused to interfere with the discretion of the judge. Morgan v. Pike, 14 C. B. 473; 2 C. L. R. 96; 23 L. J., C. P. 64; 2 W. R. 193.

Case adjourned after Amendment.]—Observation as to the danger of allowing a party to amend his case upon a reference back to chambers, after it has been brought before the court, and the exact point in which evidence is thought to be defective is known. Basham v. Smith, 22 Beav. 190.

Where a substantial point is taken at the bar upon the evidence, but is not sufficiently raised by the pleadings, the court may either give leave to amend or dismiss the bill without prejudice; but the practice of allowing a cause to stand over for amendment should be very sparingly resorted to, and only upon special grounds. Gossip v. Wright, 2 N. R. 152; 32 L. J., Ch. 648; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 592; 8 L. T. 627; 11 W. R. 602.

After Joinder of Issue.]—An action was brought by a municipal corporation to restrain the local board from interfering with water mains and pipes laid down by the corporation in the district of the local board. Issue was joined and admissions made to raise the point of law whether the corporation had any legal right to break up the streets vested in the local board, which was decided against the plaintiffs. The plaintiffs then moved to be allowed to amend their reply by pleading acquiescence and estoppel by conduct on the part of the defendants:—Held, that the court would allow the amendment, but only on the terms of the plaintiffs paying the costs which might turn out to have been thrown away by reason of the amendment, and of the costs of the motion being costs in the action, but to be the defendants' in any event. Preston Corporation v. Fullwood Local Board, 34 W. R. 200.

In an action for specific performance of an agreement to grant a lease and build a house, issue had been joined, the pleadings shewed no real dispute between the parties, and the action had been set down for trial. The plaintiff had taken possession under the agreement:—Held, that leave ought not to be given to the defendant to amend his counter-claim by adding thereto a claim for recovery of the land agreed to be let. Clark v. Wray, 55 L. J., Ch. 119 ; 31 Ch. D. 68 ; 53 L. T. 485 ; 34 W. R. 69.

Leave to amend pleadings ought to be granted even at the last moment, where it is necessary to enable the court to finally dispose of the questions between the parties, if the party making the application is acting bonâ fide, and his opponent can be fully indemnified against any injury occasioned to him ; but such leave is an indulgence, and ought only to be granted on terms. Tildesley v. Harper (10 Ch. D. 393) followed. Trufort, In re, Trafford v. Blanc, 53 L. T. 498 ; 34 W. R. 56.

In a suit to set aside a settlement on the ground of fraud and surprise on the plaintiff, evidence was filed in reply tending to shew that he, at the time of executing the settlement, was of infirm mind. Upon the hearing of a motion for leave to use this evidence (which had been objected to as not being properly evidence in reply), the plaintiff asked for leave to amend the bill, and go into fresh evidence. The cause was at issue before the 1st of November, 1875 ; and the hearing had been fixed, and only accidentally postponed. Leave was given to the plaintiff to amend the bill, and go into further evidence. Rwe v. Davies, 2 Ch. D. 729 ; 24 W. R. 606.

An application for liberty to file a supplemental answer, for the purpose of pleading the Statute of Limitations, made after the cause was at issue and witnesses were in the course of examination, refused, with costs. Percival v. Caney, 14 Jur. 473.

At Trial—Objection must be Raised.]—An objection to the form of action should be expressly taken at nisi prius, in order that the judge may make such amendment as may be necessary for the purpose of determining the real question in controversy. Marks v. Feldham, 10 B. & S. 371.

—— Time of Application.]—The proper time to apply for an amendment of pleadings is at the conclusion of the applicant's case ; but a judge, sitting without a jury, may in his discretion allow an amendment after he has begun delivering his decision. Rainy v. Bravo, L. R. 4 P. C. 287 ; 27 L. T. 249 ; 20 W. R. 873.

The plaintiff claimed specific performance of a contract for the purchase of a business by the defendant, or, in the alternative, damages. The statement of claim contained an allegation, which was denied by the defendant, that the plaintiff "is and always has been ready and willing to perform the contract so far as it is to be performed by him." The plaintiff, after action brought, sold the property, the subject-matter of the contract, but neither before nor at the hearing of the action did he ask to amend by striking out the claim for specific performance :—Held, that the action being for specific performance, and the plaintiff by his own act having made performance impossible, he was not ready and willing to perform the same at the time of the hearing of the action, and that as he had not applied to amend the claim at the proper time, namely, either before the hearing or before the case was opened at the hearing, leave to amend would not be granted. Hipgrave v. Case, 54 L. J., Ch. 399 ; 28 Ch. D. 356 ; 52 L. T. 242—C. A.

A plaintiff who has failed upon the main issue raised by his bill, and insisted upon by him at the hearing, will not be allowed after the hearing to amend his bill for the purpose of putting in issue, and obtaining collateral relief upon, a point disclosed by the defendant in his answer, but of which the plaintiff has hitherto neglected to avail himself by amendment. Knox v. Gye, 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1227 ; 9 L. T. 573 ; 12 W. R. 145. Affirmed, 10 Jur. (N.S.) 861 ; 11 L. T. 201 ; 12 W. R. 1125—L.JJ.

A plaintiff brought an action for injury to his land. The defendant pleaded a right of way under the Prescription Act, and at common law. At the trial, after the counsel for the defendant had summed up his evidence, the judge allowed an amendment by adding a plea of a limited right of way over the land at such times of the year when certain fields of the defendant were under cultivation. A verdict was entered for the plaintiff by consent on all the other issues, and the jury found the issue raised by the added plea for the defendant :—Held, that the amendment was properly allowed and that the added plea was valid. Jones v. Bulkeley, 24 L. T. 104.

After Verdict.]—Leave to amend after verdict by pleading a consideration for an agreement and alleging it as a substantive cause of action, refused. Noad v. Murrow, 40 L. T. 100.

The court allowed a defendant to amend a plea of not guilty by statute by inserting in the margin statutes necessary to justify the trespass complained of, after verdict for the defendant and a rule nisi to set it aside. Edwards v. Hodges, 15 C. B. 477 ; 3 C. L. R. 472 ; 24 L. J., M. C. 81 ; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 91 ; 3 W. R. 112.

Where a writ had been issued, and a declaration delivered, in which a blank was left for the christian name of the defendant, to which he pleaded, and afterwards gave a written consent, signed with his name in full, to an order for payment of the debt, on which judgment was signed ; the court, a year and a half after the judgment was signed, amended the declaration and judgment, by inserting the christian name of the defendant, in order to enable the plaintiff to proceed to outlawry. Wood v. Hume, 1 B. C. Rep. 189 ; 4 D. & L. 136 ; 15 L. J., Q. B. 319 ; 10 Jur. 1008.

In 1875 an injunction was granted restraining the defendants, the corporation of Birmingham, from polluting by sewage the river Tame ; but its operation was suspended for five years, so as to give the defendants time to carry out works for the prevention of the nuisance complained of. After the passing of the Public Health Act, 1875, a new local government district for Birmingham was created, upon whom devolved all the duties and liabilities of the old local authority. On a summons by the plaintiffs at the expiration of the five years, for leave to amend the information and bill by adding the new district as defendants : —Held, that no amendment in the pleadings could be made after final judgment, and that the new district could only be brought before the court by action. Att.-Gen. v. Birmingham Corporation, 15 Ch. D. 423; 43 L. T. 77; 29 W. R. 127.

Where an amendment of a statement of claim will raise a question not raised on the original pleadings, will involve an estate in further intricacies, and can be more conveniently raised in a separate and independent action, the court will refuse leave to amend. Blight, In re, Blight v. Hartnoll, 45 L. T. 531.

Where, after an order had been made in an action for the partition and sale of certain property, in which it was referred to as "firstly, &c., described in the said statement of claim," it was discovered that the property was there misdescribed, leave was given to amend the statement of claim, and the order was ordered to be postdated as of a day after the amendment had been made. Winkley v. Winkley, 44 L. T. 572; 29 W. R. 628.

Nature of proposed Amendment.]—The court will give leave to a plaintiff to amend his statement of claim after reply and joinder of issue under Ord. XXVII. r. 1, without requiring to be satisfied as to the materiality of the proposed amendment, the plaintiff paying the costs of the application. Chesterfield Co. v. Black, 25 W. R. 409.

The court will allow a party to amend his pleadings under Ord. XXVII. r. 1, without requiring an affidavit shewing the nature and necessity of the proposed amendments. Cargill v. Bower, 46 L. J., Ch. 175; 4 Ch. D. 78; 35 L. T. 621; 25 W. R. 221.

An affidavit in support of a special application for leave to amend an information and bill, the amendments of which had been approved by the attorney-general, was made by the solicitor alone, the plaintiff not joining: —Held, that the rule that the plaintiff must join in the case of a bill does not apply to an information and bill; and that the affidavit was sufficient. Att.-Gen. v. Castleford Local Board, 40 L. J., Ch. 636; L. R. 6 Ch. 853; 25 L. T. 371; 19 W. R. 1074.

In giving or refusing leave to amend a bill the court will not act upon the opinion of counsel, but will form its own judgment as to the materiality of the proposed amendment. Hemming v. Maddick, L. R. 9 Eq. 175.

Leave to amend a plea will not be granted unless the court is told precisely what the amendment is to be, and how the slip happened. Jackson v. Rowe, 4 Russ. 514; 9 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 32; 28 R. R. 168. S. P., Newman v. Wallis, 2 Bro. C. C. 147; Wood v. Strickland, 2 Ves. & B. 150.

Upon an application to file a supplemental answer, the defendant should state, on his notice of motion, the facts intended to be introduced therein. Smith v. Hartley, 5 Beav. 432.

A notice of motion for liberty to file a supplemental answer ought to specify the new facts to be introduced. Haslar v. Hollis, 2 Beav. 236; 3 Jur. 996.

Facts in Defence.]—It is not necessary to amend a bill for the purpose of introducing facts disclosed in the answer on which the plaintiff means to rely as parts of his cases, entitling him to the relief which he has prayed. Attwood v. ——, 1 Russ. 353.

Clerical Errors.] — Leave given to amend clerical errors in the christian names of the parties to a suit without reserving a copy of the bill so amended. Fish v. Rivers, 23 L. T. 486; 19 W. R. 93.

Death of Opposite Party.]—After the death of a defendant, and pending the appointment by the court of his representative, leave to amend the bill was refused. Joint Stock Discount Co. v. Brown, L. R. 8 Eq. 376; 20 L. T. 692.

Party in Contempt.]—A plaintiff in contempt is at liberty to proceed with the cause in the ordinary way. Therefore a special order for leave to amend was granted to a plaintiff in contempt as necessary for the next step. Chatterton v. Thomas, 36 L. J., Ch. 592.

Order — What Amendments allowed.] — An order to amend as plaintiffs may be advised does not authorise the names of co-plaintiffs to be struck out. Sloggett v. Colins, 13 Sim. 456; 7 Jur. 639.

An order, made at the hearing, that the cause should stand over, with leave to amend by adding proper parties and apt words to charge them, or shew that other parties are not necessary, or to file a supplemental bill, does not entitle the plaintiff to introduce, by amendment, any charge against the original defendants which is not necessary to explain the amendment. Gibson v. Ingo, 5 Hare, 156.

The plaintiff praying relief to which he is not entitled, viz., a sale under a trust, instead of a redemption or foreclosure as a mortgagee, cannot have the different relief under the general prayer; but the proper relief may be obtained by amendment, and for that purpose, another party being necessary, liberty was given to amend by adding parties, which includes the introduction in the statement of facts consequential upon that addition, and praying such relief as he may be advised. Palk v. Clinton, 12 Ves. 48; 8 R. R. 283.

Leave to amend by adding parties implies liberty to introduce as much new matter as is requisite to shew the interest of those parties. Hawkins v. Miles, 1 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 76.

Under a common order to amend, a plaintiff may introduce new plaintiffs on the record. Hitchens v. Congreve, 5 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 176.

A plaintiff who had obtained leave to amend his bill for the purpose of adding a new party, and availed himself of this permission to insert a fresh paragraph in the bill, constituting a new case against an original defendant; the court ordered the fresh paragraph to be expunged. Barlow v. M'Murray, 12 Jur. (N.S.) 519; 14 L. T. 511.

At the hearing of an injunction suit to restrain cutting seaweed on the sea-shore—the bill stating a title based on user and one established at law—the cause was directed to stand over, with liberty to amend by making the attorney-general a party. The bill was amended by making the attorney-general a party, but another amendment was also made, stating that the plaintiffs had established their right against the crown to wreck washed on the sea-shore under certain proceedings therein referred to. The court directed the latter averment to be struck out, as not warranted by the order. Calbeck v. M'Ginty, Ir. R. 6 Eq. 210. See ante, PARTIES, cols. 50 et seq.

Under an order to strike out the name of one defendant, and giving general liberty to amend, the plaintiff is not justified in striking out the name of another defendant. Wymer v. Dodds, 48 L. J., Ch. 568; 11 Ch. D. 436; 40 L. T. 420; 27 W. R. 675.

Plaintiff Amending Claim without Leave.]—When a plaintiff has amended his statement of claim after delivery of the defence, and no other pleading having been delivered, moves for judgment on the amended statement of claim, the defendant may either obtain leave to amend his defence, or put in a new defence, or he may proceed with his original defence, in which case the amendment in the amended statement of claim will be taken to be admitted, and the statement of defence will stand as an answer pro tanto. Boddy v. Wall, 47 L. J., Ch. 112; 7 Ch. D. 164; 26 W. R. 348.

When a plaintiff delivers an amended statement of claim, the defendant must either deliver a new defence or amend his original defence, and so on, toties quoties, until the pleadings are closed. Durling v. Lawrence, 46 L. J., Ch. 808. Disapproved of in preceding case.

—— Disallowance of.]—A plaintiff had amended his claim without leave before reply. The defendant contended that what had been done by the plaintiff amounted to a discontinuance of his original action and the commencement of a new one:—Held, that the proper course for the defendant to have adopted was to have moved, under Ord. XXVIII. r. 4, within eight days after the delivery of the amended pleading, for a disallowance of the amendment, or allowance thereof subject to terms as to costs or otherwise, provision for the costs of such amendments being made by r. 13 of the same order. Bourne v. Coulter, 53 L. J., Ch. 699; 50 L. T. 321.

Order—Form and Operation.]—It is contrary to the practice to insert in the judgment as drawn up any mention of the refusal of leave to amend. Laird v. Briggs, 16 Ch. D. 663; 44 L. T. 361—C. A.

An order for leave to amend operates from the time of service only, and therefore an intermediate step taken by the defendant after the orders made and before it is served, is regular. Price v. Webb, 2 Hare, 515; 13 L. J., Ch. 50.

Form of Amended Pleading.]—The requirements of Ord. XXVIII. r. 9, as to marking amended pleadings with the date of the amendment and of the order, do not under rule 10 apply to the copy of the amended document delivered to the opposite party. Hanmer v. Clifton, [1894] 1 Q. B. 238; 10 R. 55; 42 W. R. 287.

Where a plaintiff amends his bill, if he can interline the original ingrossment fair and legible, he may introduce, strike out or substitute upon the original record; but where the plaintiff cannot affect his amendment by interlineation, but is under the necessity of having a new ingrossment, such new ingrossment must contain the whole of the plaintiff's case, as he wishes to present it to the court; there can be but one entire record containing the whole case. M'Comb v. Armstrong, 2 Moll. 295.

Where more than two folios in one place are introduced by amendment into a bill, it must be reprinted. Stone v. Davies, 3 De G. M. & G. 240; 1 Eq. R. 190; 22 L. J., Ch. 672; 17 Jur. 585.

On what Terms Leave Granted.]—A bill as amended asked for an account on the footing of wilful default on instances which were disclosed by the answer, but which were not specifically alleged in the amended bill. The judge at the hearing allowed the bill to be amended, giving the defendant leave to answer further, and file fresh affidavits upon the question of default, the plaintiff not being allowed to bring further evidence, and on terms of the plaintiff's paying the costs of the day before amending. King v. Corke, 45 L. J., Ch. 190; 1 Ch. D. 57; 33 L. T. 375; 24 W. R. 23.

Discharging Order.]—A defendant added to the record by revivor cannot, after moving to dismiss for want of prosecution, move to discharge as irregular an order of course to amend, obtained before he was made a party to the suit. Kettlewell v. Barstow, 39 L. J., Ch. 846; L. R. 10 Eq. 210; 22 L. T. 541; 18 W. R. 885.

Where amendments are introduced into a bill irregularly, and the defendant does not come to the court to complain of the irregularity, but by his answer to the amended bill insists upon the objection, and reserves to himself the same benefit of it as if he had pleaded it in bar, the objection may be urged at the hearing, and will entitle the defendants to the costs. Milligan v. Mitchell, 1 Myl. & C. 433; 7 L. J., Ch. 37.

Amended Statement of Claim—Effect of.]—A defendant who has put in a defence to an original statement of claim, cannot, when the plaintiff afterwards delivers an amended statement of claim, which alleges no new matter against him, apply to strike out the amended statement of claim, on the ground that it discloses no reasonable cause of action. Jenkins v. Rees, 33 W. R. 929.

A defendant put in a defence, not demurring to any part of the statement of claim. The statement of claim was amended, not making a substantially new case. The defendant obtained leave to amend his defence, and put in a defence and demurrer to part of the statement of claim:—Held, that the rule of chancery practice, that a defendant cannot demur to what he has previously answered, is no longer in force; that leave to amend the defence authorised the putting in a demurrer to part of the statement of claim; and that the defendant's pleading was regular. Powell v. Jewesbury, 9 Ch. D. 34; 39 L. T. 213; 27 W. R. 142—C. A.

Where the original bill and the amended bill were substantially the same, as the plaintiff had admitted the sufficiency of the answers to the original bill, he was precluded from objecting to the sufficiency of the answers to the amended bill. Wich v. Parker, 22 Beav. 59; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 582; 4 W. R. 452.

The original and amended bills together constitute one record; and when the original bill was filed within the time allowed by the 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 100, as to prescription in tithe suits, but the amended bill was not within the time:—Held, that the whole suit was within the time. Thorpe v. Mattingley, 2 Y. & Coll. 421; 8 L. J., Ex. Eq. 9. But see Plowden v. Thorpe, West, 42; 7 Cl. & F. 137.

Although the amended bill is the pleading exclusively, and so far as regards the rights of the parties, the charges of the original bill, omitted in the amended bill, are as if they never existed; yet that does not extend to debar the court of the assistance to be derived from the matter expunged, in determining quo animo the suit was instituted. Fitzgerald v. O'Flaherty, 1 Moll. 347.

Where the bill has been amended, the court, with a view to the question of costs, may look at the frame of the bill as it stood before amendment. Parkhurst v. Lowten, 5 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 120.

Abandonment of Order.]—A plaintiff, after obtaining an order to amend his declaration, with leave to the defendant to plead de novo, may abandon that order, and proceed to trial without procuring it to be rescinded. Black v. Sangster, 1 C. M. & R. 521; 3 D. P. C. 206; 5 Tyr. 171; 4 L. J., Ex. 4.

A defendant obtained leave to amend a plea, and to add another, upon the terms of paying the costs of the amendment and of the application, but afterwards declined to avail himself of the rule. The court refused to make a rule ordering him to pay such costs. Field v. Sawyer, 6 C. B. 71.

If an order for leave to amend is abandoned after service, the opposite party has no right to costs incurred before the amendment, on the supposition that the order would be acted upon by the party obtaining it. Brown v. Millington, 22 L. J., Ex. 138; 17 Jur. 144.

Costs on.]—Where, from facts elicited in the examination of witnesses, and which had been in the exclusive cognisance of the defendants, it appeared that the true point at issue between the parties was not raised by the pleadings as they stood, the plaintiffs obtained leave to amend their statement of claim, but without adducing fresh evidence; the defendants being allowed both to amend their defence and to adduce fresh evidence. The plaintiffs having succeeded on the issue thus raised, and the court being of opinion that the defect in the original pleadings arose from the defendants' default in withholding information, the whole of the costs, including those caused by the amendment, were awarded to the plaintiffs. Nobel's Explosives Co. v. Jones, 49 L. J., Ch. 726; 42 L. T. 754; 28 W. R. 653.

An amendment to the pleadings made at the trial by the court mero motu in order to raise the real point at issue, is no ground for departing from the usual rule as to the costs of the action. Nottage v. Jackson, 11 Q. B. D. 627—C. A.

A defendant who has put in a joint defence will be allowed to put in a separate and amended defence, but will be ordered to pay the costs rendered necessary by not having put in such defence at an earlier period, subject, however, to such directions as the court may think fit to give where it sees that unnecessary or oppressive costs have been incurred by the plaintiff in opposing the application. Cargill v. Bower, 46 L. J., Ch. 175; 4 Ch. D. 78; 35 L. T. 621; 25 W. R. 221.

Where a plea to the bill is filed, and the plea is overruled, with liberty to amend, and the amended plea is put in and allowed, the defendant is not entitled to the costs of correcting his own mistake, but is entitled to the costs which he would have had if the plea, which was allowed, had been the plea which was first filed. Clayton v. Meadows, 2 Hare, 26.

A plaintiff declared for freight, omitting the words "money payable by the defendant to the plaintiff," in disregard of the form given by 15 & 16 Vict. c. 76, schedule (B). The defendant pleaded, and after verdict for the plaintiff the court refused to arrest the judgment for the omission of those words, holding the defect cured by pleading over. The plaintiff having signed judgment, the defendant brought error on that point. The plaintiff applied to a judge for leave to amend the declaration, so as to make it in accordance with the form in the schedule. The judge having referred the matter to the court:—Held, first, that the application to amend was rightly made, and not to the court of error. Wilkinson v. Sharland, 3 C. L. R. 619; 11 Ex. 33; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 405; 3 W. R. 418.

Held, secondly, that the court had power to make the amendment. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that the amendment ought to be allowed, on payment by the plaintiff of the costs of the motion in arrest of judgment, of the proceedings in error, of the summons at chambers and of the rule to amend. Ib.

—— Suing In formâ pauperis.]—A party suing in formâ pauperis is not allowed, as a matter of right, to amend without payment of costs. Fowler v. Bank of England, 6 Q. B. 878; 2 D. & L. 790; 14 L. J., Q. B. 178; 9 Jur. 107.

—— Vexatious Application.]—Where a defendant came to the court in a vexatious and expensive manner to apply for an amendment which might have been obtained at chambers, his rule was discharged with costs, unless he would consent to pay the costs of the amendment. Brunswick (Duke) v. Sloman, 5 C. B. 218.

—— Payment of, a Condition Precedent.]—If leave is given to amend proceedings in a cause, on payment of the costs, payment is a condition precedent. Levy v. Drew, 5 D. & L. 307; 2 B. C. Rep. 141; 12 Jur. 119.

—— Time Extended.]—A plaintiff, who desires an extension of time to amend his bill, but has omitted to get it, is liable to pay the costs of a motion to dismiss for want of prosecution, although the extension which he desires may be allowed him. London and Colonial Co. v. Elworthy, 18 W. R. 246.

Review by Court of Judge's Decision.]—The court will not review a judge's decision as to allowing or withholding an amendment; nor will the court grant a new trial, on the ground that the counsel's discretion, as to assenting to an amendment offered by the judge, is fettered by a strong expression of opinion on his part. Lucas v. Beale, 10 C. B. 739. S. P., Morgan v. Pike, 14 C. B. 473; 2 C. L. R. 696; 23 L. J., C. P. 64; 2 W. R. 193.

A plaintiff bought of the defendant the household furniture, fixtures, utensils in trade, &c., of a public-house, "as per inventory taken by W. W.," for 262*l.*, upon a representation by the defendant that the receipts of the house were 80*l.* per month, which representation turned out to be false. In an action for this misrepresentation, the declaration alleged the agreement to be for the purchase of the goodwill, furniture, fixtures, &c.:—Held, that the declaration substantially stated the true nature of the agreement, and that, at all events, the court would, if necessary, amend it. Cater v. Wood, 19 C. B. (N.S.) 286.

The court has power to amend the record where leave to move to enter a verdict is reserved, notwithstanding the judge at the trial expressly refuses to allow an amendment, or to reserve leave to amend. Ib.

Where an amendment is in the discretion of the judge at nisi prius, the court has no power to review his decision where he had refused to allow an amendment. Holden v. Ballantyne, 29 L. J., Q. B. 148; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 451; 2 L. T. 149; 8 W. R. 390.

Under s. 222 of the Common Law Procedure Act, 1852, if an amendment is improperly granted or refused by a judge at nisi prius, the court has no power to review his decision; but a substantive application may be made to the court for an amendment, by virtue of its general jurisdiction. Brennan v. Howard, 1 H. & N. 138; 25 L. J., Ex. 289; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 546; 4 W. R. 609.

Action on a contract to deliver at Cardiff a cargo in March. Breach, that the defendant would not accept or pay for the goods. Pleas, non assumpsit, and that the plaintiff was not ready or willing to deliver at Cardiff in March. At the trial it appeared that the defendant had by letter requested the plaintiff to postpone the shipment for the defendant's convenience; that the ship arrived in Cardiff on the evening of the 31st of March, and consequently, that the cargo was not ready for delivery until April. The judge, on the plaintiff's application, amended the declaration by making an averment that at the defendant's request the plaintiff delayed the shipment, and the defendant promised to accept a delivery of that shipment with reasonable speed, and exonerated the plaintiff from delivering in March. The defendant objected to the amendment, and requested a postponement of the trial, which the judge refused; thereupon the defendant refused to alter his pleas or appear further, and the jury, under the judge's direction, assessed the damages. On a motion for a new trial:—Held, that whether the discretion of a judge at nisi prius in making an amendment to raise the real point in controversy, and in imposing terms, be reviewable in law or not, it was in this case properly exercised; and that no injustice being suggested to have been sustained by the defendant in consequence of the refusal to postpone the trial, the discretion of the judge in that respect ought not to be reversed. Tennyson v. O'Brien, 5 El. & Bl. 497. S.P., Savage v. Canning, Ir. R. 1 C. L. 434; 16 W. R. 133.

Action on a cheque and on an account stated. Pleas, non fecit, and that the account was stated of the cheque only, and that it was given for money lost by gaming. At the trial, it appeared that the defendant entered a gaming-house, and there lost at billiards a sum of money for which he gave an I O U, and subsequently sent the plaintiff an unstamped cheque. The cheque was not received in evidence. The judge intimated generally that he would make what amendments were necessary; neither party asking for any amendment, the question was left to the jury whether the account was stated of money lost by gaming. The jury found for the defendant:—Held, that the court had without consent power to amend the plea, by making it apply to an account stated concerning the consideration of the cheque, so as to raise on the record the question really tried. Parsons v. Alexander, 5 El. & Bl. 263; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 660; 3 W. R. 510.

The judge at nisi prius having refused to allow a defendant to add a plea of fraud, the court refused to interfere. Speeding v. Young, 16 C. B. (N.S.) 824.

2. Compelling Amendment of, and Striking out Pleadings of Opposite Party.

a. Practice.

Under Judicature Acts.]—Charges and statements which would not have been improper under the former system, may nevertheless be struck out under the judicature acts. Watson v. Rodwell, 45 L. J., Ch. 744; 3 Ch. D. 380; 35 L. T. 86; 24 W. R. 1009.

Application, how made.]—Applications to strike out, under Ord. XXVII. r. 1, should be made by summons and not by motion. Marriott v. Marriott, 26 W. R. 416.

If made by motion, the costs given will not exceed those of a summons attended by counsel. Ib.

Upon motion by a defendant, the whole of a faulty reply was ordered to be struck out as embarrassing, although the notice of motion did not in terms ask to have the whole reply struck out, but only to have particular passages struck out, without specifying them otherwise than by reference to what was to be left in; and leave was given to the plaintiff to put in such other reply as he might be advised. Williamson v. L. & N. W. Ry., 48 L. J., Ch. 559; 12 Ch. D. 787; 27 W. R. 724.

—— When made.]—After joinder of issue, a motion to set aside a defence will not be entertained. Hackett v. Lalor, 12 L. R., Ir. 44.

Reference for scandal may be at any time, not so as to mere impertinence. Scandal includes impertinence, but a matter may be impertinent without being scandalous. Nothing scandalous that is strictly relevant to the merits. Fenhoulet v. Passavant, 2 Ves. 24.

After the pleadings are closed and the action set down for trial, it is too late for the defendant to move to strike out the statement of claim as being frivolous or vexatious. Cross v. Howe (Earl), 62 L. J., Ch. 342; 3 R. 218.

Where no defence has been filed, the court, though (semble) having jurisdiction, will not exercise the power under R. S. C. 1883, Ord. XXV. r. 4, of striking out a pleading in actions where difficult questions of law or fact are likely to arise. Att.-Gen. of the Duchy of Lancaster v. L. & N. W. Ry., infra.

—— Based on Pleadings alone.]—Applications under Ord. XXV. r. 4, must be tried upon the allegations contained in the pleadings, and evidence in support of the applicant's case is not admissible. Peru Republic v. Peruvian Guano Co., 56 L. J., Ch. 1081; 36 Ch. D. 489; 57 L. T. 337; 36 W. R. 217.

Such an application must be founded on the pleadings alone, and cannot be supplemented by extrinsic evidence—per A. L. Smith, L.J. Att.-Gen. of the Duchy of Lancaster v. L. & N. W. Ry., 62 L. J., Ch. 271; [1892] 3 Ch. 274; 2 R. 84; 67 L. T. 810—C. A.

—— "The Pleadings"—Particulars.]—Semble, the words, "the pleadings," in Ord. XXV. r. 4, include particulars. Davey v. Bentinck, 62

L. J., Q. B. 114; [1893] 1 Q. B. 185; 4 R. 144; 67 L. T. 742; 41 W. R. 181—C. A.

—— By whom made.]—A stranger to a cause cannot, as of course, except to and refer a pleading alleged to be scandalous and impertinent as between the parties, but he may be authorised so to do upon making a special application to the court. Williams v. Douglas, 5 Beav. 82; 6 Jur. 379.

Reference for scandal and impertinence on the joint petition of plaintiff, and of his solicitor, the pleading being scandalous as to the latter. Bishop v. Willis, 5 Beav. 83, n.

The plaintiff was ordered to pay some costs to the defendant, and, on the other hand, the defendant was ordered to pay other costs to the plaintiff. The plaintiff being in contempt for non-payment of costs, moved that the costs might be set off:—Held, that it was competent for the plaintiff, though in contempt, to refer for scandal and impertinence an affidavit filed on the part of the defendant in opposition to the motion. Cattell v. Simons, 5 Beav. 396.

If an affidavit is filed containing scandalous statements, the court can act in the matter, not only on the application of the aggrieved party, but also on the application of any party to the action, or without any application at all. Cracknell v. Janson, 39 L. T. 32.

—— Applicant having Pleaded improperly.]—One cannot say that any reply to a bad defence is itself bad; there cannot be a bad answer to a bad question. The defence here being bad, we cannot decide on the reply, it simply becomes immaterial. Clarke v. Bradlaugh, 50 L. J., Q. B. 342; 44 L. T. 667; 29 W. R. 516—C. A.

In pleading, whoever makes the first fault, from whichever side the demurrer comes, shall have judgment against him. Palmer v. Stone, 2 Wils. 96.

Plea, demurrer and replication thereto, and demurrer to the replication, the plea being bad, the plaintiff is entitled to judgment on the whole record, the first fault being in the plea. Lockwood v. Nash, 18 C. B. 536.

Alternative Order—Payment into Court.]—A judge ought not to make an order dismissing an action as frivolous and vexatious, with the alternative that the plaintiff may proceed on payment of a sum of money into court by way of security for the defendant's costs if the latter should get a verdict. Per Wills, J. Mittens v. Foreman, 58 L. J., Q. B. 40.

Matter of Discretion.]—Although the court of appeal will not readily interfere with the discretion of the court of first instance in a matter of procedure, it is its duty to exercise its own discretion as to whether a pleading is so framed as to embarrass the opposite party. In a case, therefore, where a statement of claim was in the opinion of the court of appeal calculated to embarrass the defendant by reason of its stating immaterial facts, and setting out at great length documents which could not be material except as evidence by way of admission, it was ordered to be struck out, though a motion for that purpose had been dismissed with costs by the court below. Davy v. Garrett, 47 L. J., Ch. 218; 7 Ch. D. 473; 38 L. T. 77; 26 W. R. 225—C. A.

When pleadings are such as should be struck out, they ought to be struck out by the judge, and not left to be dealt with as a question of costs; but when the judge has exercised his discretion on the subject, the court of appeal will not interfere, unless he has acted on a wrong principle. Watson v. Rodwell, 45 L. J., Ch. 744; 3 Ch. D. 380; 35 L. T. 86; 24 W. R. 1009—C. A.

The striking out of pleadings as embarrassing, under Ord. XXVII. r. 1, is a matter of discretion in the judge, and, as a general rule, no appeal from this order will be entertained. Golding v. Wharton Salt Works Co., 1 Q. B. D. 374; 34 L. T. 474; 24 W. R. 423—C. A.

b. On what Grounds.

For Prolixity.]—Although there is no rule of court specially giving power to the court to take pleadings off the file for prolixity, yet the court has an inherent power to do so, to prevent its records from being made the instruments of oppression. Hill v. Hart-Davis, 26 Ch. D. 470; 51 L. T. 279—C. A.

Prolixity in setting forth important documents is not impertinence. Low v. Williams, 2 Sim. & S. 574; 4 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 199.

Mere prolixity of expression does not constitute impertinence. Anon., 2 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 143.

Superfluous or prolix clauses or words in a sentence, are not to be deemed impertinent. Anon., 2 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 108.

A few unnecessary words in a bill do not render it impertinent. Del Ponte v. De Tastet, Turn. & R. 487; 2 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 35.

Prolixity in an answer is impertinence, but it is a question of degree. Therefore, in a bill for an account of money transactions between the plaintiff and the defendant, it having been required that the defendant should set forth in a schedule a variety of minute particulars concerning certain securities which were alleged to have been deposited with him:—Held, that it was not an act of impertinence to annex to the answer a schedule with columns. Gompertz v. Best, 1 Y. & Coll. 114; 4 L. J., Ex. Eq. 17.

An answer to a bill for an account, setting out particulars in detail, although in some sense to be called pertinent, yet, if manifestly not called for by the nature of the case, may be held impertinent, as being vexatious and oppressive. Norway v. Rowe, 1 Mer. 347; 12 R. R. 157.

When Irrelevant.]—The whole of a statement of claim, parts of which are unintelligible, other parts of which are irrelevant, and other parts of which contain offensive charges against the defendant, may be struck out. Cashin v. Cradock, 3 Ch. D. 376; 35 L. T. 452; 25 W. R. 4—C. A.

Exceptions for impertinence cannot be sustained unless it appears clearly that the statements excepted to cannot be material at the hearing of the cause. Richards v. Att.-Gen., 12 Cl. & F. 30. Affirming, 6 Beav. 444; 12 L. J., Ch. 393; 7 Jur. 362; 1 Ph. 383; 13 L. J., Ch. 38; 8 Jur. 230.

Though a plaintiff cannot compel a defendant to make a discovery of his returns for income tax, still a statement (as evidence of a misrepresentation of the value of his business) that he made such returns is not impertinent.

Mitchell v. Koecker, 12 Beav. 44 ; 18 L. J., Ch. 294.

Where, in a foreclosure suit, a defendant, for the alleged purpose of proving that the plaintiff was actuated by an angry feeling in filing his bill, introduced into his answer matter from a public document reflecting upon the character of the plaintiff, and to which document he asked permission to refer:—Held, that such matter was irrelevant to the question at issue, and must be expunged before the hearing. Edmunds v. Brougham (Lord), 12 Jur. (N.S.) 156 ; 13 L. T. 790.

Matter ought not, at the commencement of a suit, to be treated as impertinent, which may, at the hearing, be found relevant. Reeves v. Baker, 13 Beav. 436.

Where a bill alleged solvency, it was not irrelevant for the defendant to introduce a statement of fraudulent practices committed from time to time to conceal the fact of insolvency. Balguy v. Broadhurst, 20 L. J., Ch. 55.

Where the owners of land adjoining a public footpath brought an action against the local board to restrain the removal of posts erected by the plaintiffs to prevent vehicular traffic over the footpath, the court struck out as irrelevant allegations in the statement of claim that one of the members of the board, who was also an adjoining landowner, had taken an active part in the plaintiffs' negotiations with the board for the protection of the footpath, and had acted therein with a view to his own private interest, and that consequently the plaintiffs had not succeeded in inducing the board to take any steps for the protection of the footpath. Murray v. Epsom Local Board, 66 L. J., Ch. 107 ; [1897] 1 Ch. 35 ; 75 L. T. 579 ; 45 W. R. 185 ; 61 J. P. 71.

The judge may order the pleading to be reformed under 16 & 17 Vict. c. 80, s. 1, and if his order is not obeyed, the judge may himself expunge the offensive passage, for he is authorised "to strike out of the record any matter which he may deem irrelevant or unnecessary." Hamilton v. Anderson, 3 Macq. H. L. 363.

In a suit for specific performance of an agreement for a lease, the defendant may, by his answer, put in issue any fact tending to shew the insolvency of the plaintiff, however it may impeach the plaintiff's respectability ; but mere imputations on the moral character of the plaintiff are impertinent. Pearson v. Knapp, 1 Myl. & K. 312.

Statements in an answer are impertinent if they are neither called for by the bill, nor material to the defence with reference to the order or decree which may be made on the bill. Statements in an answer to a bill of revivor which merely show irregularity and misconduct in the former proceedings in the suit are impertinent. Wagstaff v. Bryan, 1 Russ. & M. 28 ; 8 L. J., Ch. (O.S.) 41.

What the plaintiff cannot reply to, and produce evidence to (from its not being relevant to the issue), is impertinent, and if it further attacks his character it is scandalous. Corbett v. Tottenham, 2 Moll. 319 ; 1 Ball & B. 59.

In an action by a stockholder in a railway company to restrain the company from subscribing out of their funds the sum of 1,000*l.* towards the Imperial Institute, on the ground that the proposed subscription was ultra vires and illegal, the company delivered a defence which contained paragraphs alleging a circular from the secretary of the Institute inviting railway companies to subscribe, and stating the amounts of the capital and average net annual income of the company, the objects of the Institute, an agreement with another railway company for through booking to the Institute, which it was said would lead to increased traffic over the defendants' line, and the practice of railway companies as to contributing to exhibitions, regattas, race meetings, and other objects calculated to encourage traffic over their lines. The plaintiff moved under Ord. XIX. r. 27, to strike out these paragraphs:—Held, that a reasonable latitude must be given to that rule, and parties must be allowed to plead reasons why a particular act said to be ultra vires was not ultra vires ; that it would be a wrong application of the rule to order such reasons to be struck out unless the matter sought to be struck out was utterly irrelevant ; and that it was not the meaning of the rule that any matter alleged in the defence as a reason should be struck out merely because it was a bad reason ; and that it could not be said that any part of the defence was so irrelevant that the rule ought to be applied. Tomkinson v. S. E. Ry., 57 L. T. 358.

A person who has himself introduced into his evidence matter not relevant to the real issues between himself and his opponent, cannot be heard to complain if his opponent, in answer to the matter so introduced, inserts in his affidavit passages which would otherwise be liable to be expunged for impertinence. Bruff v. Cobbold, Ayres, Ex parte, 26 L. T. 786 ; 20 W. R. 734.

When Embarrassing.]—A pleading raising by way of defence an issue which the defendant is not entitled to raise, is embarrassing, and can be struck out under Ord. XXVII. r. 1. Liardet v. Hammond Electric Light and Power Co., 31 W. R. 710—C. A. S. P., Heugh v. Chamberlain, 25 W. R. 742.

The power of the courts or judges to set aside pleadings as tending to embarrass, is limited to such as are at once embarrassing and irregular, informal or tricky, and contrary to the rules and practice of pleading, and does not extend to such as merely put the opposite party to difficult, expensive and needless proof. Welland Ry. v. Blake, 6 H. & N. 410 ; 30 L. J., Ex. 161 ; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 373 ; 3 L. T. 678 ; 9 W. R. 386. See Lamb v. Beaumont, 49 L. T. 772 ; Brooking v. Maudslay, 55 L. T. 343 ; 6 Asp. M. C. 13.

It was not a general rule of practice that where a plea traversed an allegation in the declaration, and the plaintiff demurred to the plea, he would be put to his election whether the demurrer should be set aside as frivolous, or the allegation struck out, though this would be done if the plaintiff's pleading appeared to be so framed as to entrap or unfairly perplex the defendant. So held before s. 52 of the Common Law Procedure Act, 1852. Tallis v. Tallis, 1 El. & Bl. 397, n. ; 21 L. J., Q. B. 269 ; 16 Jur. 744.

Pleadings will not necessarily be struck out as embarrassing because they are inconsistent. Morgan, In re, Owen v. Morgan, 56 L. J., Ch. 603 ; 35 Ch. D. 492 ; 56 L. T. 503 ; 35 W. R. 705—C. A.

In an action by the representatives of a wife against the executor of the husband in respect of sums of money and stock alleged to have been received by the husband as trustee for the separate use of the wife, the defence pleaded

(1) that the sums had not been received; (2) if received, not as trustee; (3) if received, repayment; (4) alternatively, free gift by the wife to the husband; (5) alternatively, accord and satisfaction; (6) alternatively, set-off; (7) the Statute of Limitations; (8) laches and delay. On a summons to have defences 3, 4, 5, and 6 struck out, it was held that the defence was embarrassing, and the defendant had leave to amend. Upon appeal, the court discharged the order, and directed the defendant either to amend or to give particulars within fourteen days after discovery of documents. Ib.

The plaintiff claimed that a partnership agreement might be set aside and cancelled on the ground of misrepresentation and fraud, and that a sum he had brought into the enterprise should be returned to him; or in the alternative that the partnership accounts might be taken, and the partnership dissolved. The defendant moved for an order compelling the plaintiff to amend his statement of claim by confining it to one of the two grounds of action in respect of which he sought relief:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to claim such alternative relief; and the motion was dismissed with costs. Bagot v. Easton, 47 L. J., Ch. 225; 7 Ch. D. 1; 37 L. T. 369; 26 W. R. 66—C. A.

The defendant in an action for libel, after admitting publication, pleaded that, except as afterwards admitted, the words used by him were fair comment on a matter of public interest, and, to the extent of the facts to be stated afterwards, were true in substance and in fact. He then proceeded to justify the various statements in the alleged libel, but admitted that he had used words of the plaintiff, being the words complained of, which were not wholly justified by the facts, and could not be considered in every respect fair comment, and he paid the sum of forty shillings into court, and said the same was sufficient to satisfy the plaintiff's claim:—Held, that, as the defendant had pleaded justification to the whole of the libel, and had paid money into court in respect of a portion, such a plea was both embarrassing and contrary to the provisions of Ord. XXII. r. 1, and ought to be struck out. Fleming v. Dollar, 58 L. J., Q. B. 548; 23 Q. B. D. 388; 61 L. T. 230; 37 W. R. 684.

The defendant in his defence to an action of slander denied having spoken the words alleged, and set out other words which he admitted having spoken, and which he alleged were true and were spoken on a privileged occasion:—Held, that this pleading was embarrassing, and ought to be struck out. Rassam v. Budge, 62 L. J., Q. B. 312; [1893] 1 Q. B. 571; 5 R. 336; 68 L. T. 717; 41 W. R. 377; 57 J. P. 361.

An allegation on the breach of a contract, that the defendant fraudulently omitted to deliver, true accounts, and delivered untrue accounts was ordered to be amended, as embarrassing, by omitting the word "fraudulently." Great Ship Co. v. Russell, 3 F. & F. 94.

To an action on a specialty, the defendant pleaded the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 3, to which the plaintiff replied that the defendant, before suit, made an acknowledgment that the debt remained unpaid and due to the plaintiff within the true intent and meaning of the statute, and that the action was brought within twenty years after such acknowledgment:—Held, that the replication was a pleading, so framed as to prejudice the fair trial of the cause, and ought to be amended by specifying the mode of acknowledgment relied on. Forsyth v. Bristowe, 8 Ex. 347; 22 L. J., Ex. 70; 17 Jur. 46.

A plea, to an action on a contract, that the plaintiff was suing on his own behalf, whereas he made the contract as agent for a company, will not be struck out as embarrassing. Golding v. Wharton Salt Works Co., 1 Q. B. D. 374; 34 L. T. 474; 24 W. R. 423—C. A.

A claim in which the vendor of goods and the indorsees of a bill, given by the purchaser to the vendor for the price, jointly sue the purchaser to recover the price and also upon the dishonoured bill, is embarrassing, and may therefore be struck out. Smith v. Richardson, 48 L. J., C. P. 140; 4 C. P. D. 112; 40 L. T. 256; 27 W. R. 230.

In an action to restrain the obstruction of an alleged private right of way, the plaintiff ought to shew in his statement of claim whether he claims the right by prescription or by grant. He ought also to allege with reasonable certainty the termini of the way and its course. If the plaintiff omits to do this, his statement of claim is embarrassing, and the court will order it to be amended. Harris v. Jenkins, 52 L. J., Ch. 437; 22 Ch. D. 481; 47 L. T. 570; 31 W. R. 137.

The statement of claim in an action for the recovery of land, after alleging facts which would shew a title in Frances Evelyn, contained a statement that "the said Frances Evelyn died intestate as to real estate, and leaving Sir Hugh Evelyn her heir at law," and then stated facts which shewed a title in the plaintiff to Sir Hugh Evelyn's estate:—Held, on a summons to strike out the paragraph above stated, that it was not embarrassing, and was a sufficient statement of the facts on which the plaintiff relied under Judicature Act, Ord. XIX. r. 4. Evelyn v. Evelyn, 42 L. T. 248; 28 W. R. 531.

In an action to enforce the compromise of a former action brought in assertion of rights of water, as to which disputes had arisen, the plaintiff will not be allowed, by setting out in his statement of claim the allegations as to his right and the corresponding liabilities of the defendant which were contained in his former statement of claim, to re-litigate the questions raised in the former action, and intended to have been finally disposed of by the compromise. Such allegations were accordingly ordered to be struck out under Ord. XIX. r. 27, as embarrassing and unnecessary, though a motion for that purpose had been refused by the court below. Knowles v. Roberts, 38 Ch. D. 263; 58 L. T. 259—C. A.

—— Statement of Title.] — See Philipps v. Philipps, and other cases, ante, col. 824.

—— Effect of Delay.] — By an agreement made in 1890, the plaintiff agreed to employ, and the defendant to work for and serve the plaintiff as tailor, hosier, or outfitter, and it was agreed "that the defendant should not for the space of three years act as tailor, hosier, or outfitter, or take service or act as agent in such business within a radius of twenty-five miles of the plaintiff's shop, under a penalty of 500*l.* as liquidated damages." On the 10th June, 1893, the defendant left the plaintiff's service, and committed a breach of the agreement. The plaintiff brought this action claiming an injunction and 500*l.* liquidated damages for breach of the agreement, and on motion obtained an interim injunction. The action was then set down for the point of law to be argued as to whether the defendant was not, on payment of 500*l.* absolved from any obligation under the agreement. The plaintiff now asked for an injunction, but withdrew the claim for damages:—Held, that the defendant ought, when the motion came on, to have called on the plaintiff to elect whether he asked for an injunction or liquidated damages, as he could not have both, and the pleadings were therefore embarrassing to the defendant:—Held, that the defendant having gone on, was too late in taking the point, and there must be an injunction for three years after the 10th July, 1893. Gent v. Harrison, 69 L. T. 307.

No Reasonable Cause of Action or Answer.]—Demurrers are in form abolished, but Ord. XXV. takes notice of three forms, in which the object of demurrers may be obtained; first, by raising on the pleadings a question of law, so that the parties may have it decided quickly; secondly, by raising the question on a pleading whether it discloses any reasonable cause of action or answer, in which case the court may order the pleading to be struck out, not necessarily disposing of the whole action; and, thirdly, in case an action or defence is shown by the pleadings to be frivolous or vexatious, then the court or a judge can dismiss the whole action, or order it to be stayed, or judgment to be entered accordingly as may be just—Per Selborne, L. C. Burstall v. Beyfus, 53 L. J., Ch. 565; 26 Ch. D. 35; 50 L. T. 542; 32 W. R. 418.

The court has an inherent jurisdiction not to allow an action to proceed which must fail. Chatterton v. Secretary of State for India, 64 L. J., Q. B. 676; [1895] 2 Q. B. 189; 14 R. 504; 72 L. T. 858; 59 J. P. 596—C. A.

Although proceedings under rr. 2 and 4 of Ord. XXV. take the place of demurrers in the sense that the court is enabled, when it sees no reasonable ground of action or defence, to put an end to the action or defence, the court is not bound to regard the case with the same strictness as under the old practice on demurrer, the court now having more regard to the reasonableness or unreasonableness of the claim or defence. Dadswell v. Jacobs, 56 L. J., Ch. 233; 34 Ch. D. 278; 55 L. T. 857; 35 W. R. 261—C. A.

A pleading will not be struck out under Ord. XXV. r. 4, on the ground that it discloses no reasonable cause of action, unless it is frivolous. Demurrers have not been abolished only in name, and the above rule is not to be construed so as to allow applications under it to take their place. Batthyany, In re, Batthyany v. Walford, 32 W. R. 379.

The power given by Ord. XXV. r. 4, of ordering any pleading "to be struck out on the ground that it discloses no reasonable cause of action," will be exercised where in the opinion of the court, there is no reasonable prospect that the case raised by the pleading will succeed at the hearing of the action; secus, where the pleading, though it might under the former practice have been open to demurrer, presents a substantial case. Peru Republic v. Peruvian Guano Co., 56 L. J., Ch. 1081; 36 Ch. D. 489; 57 L. T. 337; 36 W. R. 217.

The plaintiff was charged by the defendants under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 96, s. 4, with having published a libel knowing the same to be false. At the preliminary stage of the proceedings the charge under s. 4 was withdrawn, but the prosecution for the minor offence under s. 5 of the same act was continued, and the plaintiff was committed for trial under the 5th section. An indictment was preferred against the plaintiff under the 4th section, and the jury found that the plaintiff issued the libel believing it to be true. This verdict was held to be one of guilty under the 5th section, and, after respite of judgment and argument, the plaintiff was sentenced to two months' imprisonment without hard labour. The plaintiff brought his action for malicious prosecution under the 4th section of the above act, and set forth the above facts in his statement of claim, in which he alleged that the finding of the jury was an acquittal under the 4th section, under which he had been indicted. The defendants applied to have the statement of claim struck out as not disclosing any reasonable cause of action:—Held, that the statement of claim ought not to be struck out as disclosing no reasonable ground of action, and that where a statement of claim discloses some ground of action, the mere fact that the plaintiff is not likely to succeed on it at the trial is no ground for its being struck out. Boaler v. Holder, 54 L. T. 298.

A plaintiff set out certain building agreements in his statement of claim, and alleged that by reason of the defendant having wrongfully entered into possession of the plaintiff's land and building materials, he had been unable to carry out his agreements and had thereby suffered loss. The plaintiff claimed specific performance of the agreements and damages. A motion under Ord. XXV. r. 4, to strike out the statement of claim upon the ground that it disclosed no reasonable cause of action was dismissed. Boddington v. Rees, 52 L. T. 209.

Where a statement of claim alleges that A.—as trustee and guardian of B.—took possession of lands, this constitutes (at most) a constructive trust and not an express trust, and such possession having been taken in 1771, the statement of claim was on motion ordered to be struck out as disclosing no reasonable cause of action, and the action was dismissed as frivolous and vexatious, and leave to appeal was refused. Lord Cairns' definition of an express trust in Cunningham v. Foot (3 App. Cas. 984) applied. Bowen, L.J.'s dictum in Soar v. Ashwell ([1893] 2 Q. B. 390) followed; Life Association of Scotland v. Siddals (3 De G. F. & J. 58) explained. Price v. Phillips, 13 R. 191.

When a statement of claim contains two causes of action, one of which the defendant admits to be reasonable, it cannot be struck out under Ord. XXV. r. 4, Grosvenor v. White, 61 L. T. 663; 38 W. R. 201.

An affidavit in interlocutory proceedings is privileged, and therefore where a plaintiff alleged that the defendant had libelled him in such an affidavit, the statement of claim was struck out under Ord. XXV. r. 4. Gompas v. White, 54 J. P. 22.

An action was brought on an order made by justices under 16 & 17 Vict. c. 97, s. 96, directing the guardians of a union to pay certain costs for the maintenance of a lunatic pauper in an asylum. The guardians defended the action. An application was then made to have the defence struck out:—Held, that though the order itself could not be appealed against, yet where such order formed the subject-matter of an action, a defendant was entitled to plead to such action, and if such plea affords no answer to the statement of claim the proper mode of objection was by demurrer. Finch v. York Union, 35 L. T. 360.

—— Waiver of Objection.]—A defendant who has delivered a defence cannot, when the plaintiff afterwards delivers an amended statement of claim which alleges no new matter against him, apply to strike out the amended statement of claim on the ground that it discloses no reasonable cause of action. Jenkins v. Rees, 33 W. R. 929.

Abuse of Process—Delay.]—The court has, under its inherent jurisdiction, power to strike out any pleading, whether a statement of claim or a defence, which is an abuse of the process of the court. Remmington v. Scoles, 66 L. J., Ch. 526; [1897] 2 Ch. 1; 76 L. T. 667; 45 W. R. 580—C. A.

A defence contained no substantive allegations, but was confined to refusals to admit and denials of all the material allegations in the statement of claim, which allegations the defendant had substantially admitted in prior proceedings between the parties:—Held, that the defence was not a real defence, but was put in for the purpose of delay, and ought to be struck out. Ib.

Frivolous and Vexatious Actions.] — Ord. XXV. r. 4, enables the court to deal in an easy and summary manner with demurrable actions, and also affirms the inherent power of the court to protect itself from the abuse of its procedure by the bringing of frivolous and vexatious actions. Metropolitian Bank v. Pooley, 54 L. J., Q. B. 449; 10 App. Cas. 210; 53 L. T. 163; 33 W. R. 709; 49 J. P. 756—H. L. (E.)

The probate division has, apart from Ord. XXV. r. 4, an inherent jurisdiction, in common with other courts, to stay proceedings which are frivolous and vexatious, and an abuse of the process of the court. Willis v. Beauchamp (Earl), 55 L. J., P. 17; 11 P. D. 59; 54 L. T. 185; 34 W. R. 357—C. A.

The principles on which the court ought to act in staying proceedings as frivolous and vexatious discussed and explained. Kellaway v. Bury, 66 L. T. 599—C. A.

Any action may be stayed as being vexatious when it is clear that no relief can be obtained at the trial. Barrett v. Day, 59 L. J., Ch. 464; 43 Ch. D. 435; 62 L. T. 597; 38 W. R. 362.

No application ought to be made to set aside a pleading as frivolous, unless it is either manifestly so on the face of it, or is pleaded in direct opposition to some decided case. Papineau v. King, 10 M. & W. 216; 2 D. (N.S.) 226; 12 L. J., Ex. 32; 6 Jur. 539.

The exercise by a court of its inherent jurisdiction to dismiss an action as an abuse of its process is not justified merely by great improbability in the case made by the pleadings. But all the circumstances may be considered. Lawrance v. Norreys (Lord), 59 L. J., Ch. 681; 15 App. Cas. 210; 62 L. T. 706; 38 W. R. 753; 54 J. P. 708—H. L. (E.) See Hamilton v. Anderson, 6 W. R. 737—H. L.

Where, in a statement of claim, a charge of concealed fraud, within s. 26 of the Statute of Limitations (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27), was stated vaguely and generally, and previous litigation with reference to the same subject-matter led to the conclusion, which was confirmed by an affidavit filed on the plaintiff's behalf, that the allegations were an afterthought and wholly incapable of proof:—Held, that the action was properly dismissed as an abuse of the process of the court. Ib.

The plaintiff, by his statement of claim in an action for recovery of land brought in 1892, alleged that he was the heir-at-law of J., who died intestate in 1798, and that, on the death of J., his real estate was wrongfully taken possession of by the mother of G. C., in the name of G. C., as the heir-at-law—as the mother falsely alleged—of J.; that G. C. died an infant in 1805, whereupon G. C.'s mother continued to hold possession in the name of a supposititious child, R. C., on the false pretence that such child was a brother of G. C., and as such was heir-at-law of J.; that both R. C., and afterwards the defendant, who claimed as a volunteer under R. C., remained in possession knowing the above facts, and fraudulently concealed the same from the true heir of J.; that the plaintiff and his predecessors had been deprived of the estate by the said concealed fraud, which had not, and could not with reasonable diligence have been discovered until 1879; and that the plaintiff, at the time of such discovery, was an infant, and only attained, twenty-one in 1887. The defendant moved to have the action dismissed as frivolous or vexatious; and, in support of his application, adduced evidence to shew that the allegation that R. C. was a supposititious child had been publicly made in 1853:—Held, (a) that the allegations in the statement of claim as to the entry in 1798 on behalf of G. C. did not shew a case of concealed fraud within s. 26 of 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, but only a wrongful entry under a false claim as heir-at-law; (b) that the statute began to run as against the plaintiff and his predecessors in 1798, and that, as possession adverse to the plaintiff and his predecessors had been held ever since, the operation of the statute was not suspended by what was alleged to have been done in 1805; (c) that the plaintiff or his predecessors knew, or might with reasonable diligence have known, the alleged concealed fraud more than twelve years before action brought; and, accordingly, that the action should be dismissed as frivolous or vexatious. Lawrance v. Norreys (15 App. Cas. 210) followed; Trustees, Executors and Agency Co. v. Short (13 App. Cas. 793) distinguished. Willis v. Howe (Earl), 62 L. J., Ch. 690; [1893] 2 Ch. 545; 2 R. 427; 69 L. T. 358; 41 W. R. 433—C. A.

No action can be brought by a bankrupt for maliciously procuring his adjudication so long as the adjudication itself has not been set aside. Such an action may be dismissed as frivolous and vexatious on summons under Ord. XXV. r. 4. Metropolitan Bank v. Pooley, supra.

An action for malicious prosecution ought not to be stayed as frivolous and vexatious on the ground that the defendant is the trustee under the plaintiff's bankruptcy, and has prosecuted him by order of the court under s. 16 of the Debtors Act, 1869. Mittens v. Foreman, 58 L. J., Q. B. 40.

There is an inherent jurisdiction in the high court to strike out a defence which is frivolous and vexatious, and an abuse of the procedure. Reichel v. Magrath, 59 L. J., Q. B. 159; 14 App. Cas. 665; 54 J. P. 196—H. L. (E.)

and that an instrument of resignation which he had executed was void, and an injunction to restrain the bishops from instituting, and the patrons from presenting any other person to the benefice. The action was tried, and judgment was given against the appellant on the ground that the vicarage was void by reason of his resignation thereof with the consent of the bishop. Afterwards the respondent, having been duly appointed to the benefice as the appellant's successor, brought an action against the appellant, claiming a declaration that the respondent was vicar, and a perpetual injunction to restrain the appellant from depriving the respondent of the use and occupation of the house and lands. In his defence the appellant set up the same case as that on which he had been defeated in the action in which he was plaintiff:—Held, that there was an inherent jurisdiction in the court to strike out the defence as frivolous and vexatious, and an abuse of the procedure, and to enter judgment for the plaintiff with a declaration and injunction as claimed. Ib.

In an action brought by the plaintiff against the defendant for libel in respect of the publication of a pamphlet purporting to be the judgment delivered in court in a certain action between the parties, the jury found that the pamphlet was a fair, honest and accurate report of the judgment, and was published without malice, and judgment was accordingly entered for the defendant. The plaintiff afterwards commenced a second action for libel in respect of the same pamphlet, but relying upon defamatory passages in the pamphlet other than those relied upon in the first action. The different defamatory statements, however, relied upon in both actions were all spoken of the plaintiff in the same character:—Held that the subject-matter of the second action was res judicata, and that an order striking out the statement of claim and dismissing the action was rightly made:—Held, also (assuming the matter was not res judicata, the defamatory passages relied upon in the two actions not being the same), that the second action was an abuse of the process of the court and ought to be dismissed. Macdougall v. Knight, 59 L. J., Q. B. 517; 25 Q. B. D. 1; 63 L. T. 43; 38 W. R. 553; 54 J. P. 788—C. A.

Since the judicature acts, it is the practice in foreclosure actions to make a personal order for payment of the sum found due for principal and interest. A second action brought to recover arrears of interest on the mortgage while the foreclosure action is still pending will be stayed as vexatious. Poulett v. Hill, 62 L. J., Ch. 466; [1893] 1 Ch. 277; 2 R. 288; 68 L. T. 476; 41 W. R. 503—C. A.

A suit instituted by a plaintiff having only a nominal interest, on behalf of a body of shareholders, not for the benefit of himself, but for improper purposes, at the instigation of another person, who indemnifies the plaintiff against the costs of the suit, will be treated as an imposition on the court, and the bill will be ordered to be taken off the file. Robson v. Dodds, 38 L. J., Ch. 547; L. R. 8 Eq. 301; 20 L. T. 968; 17 W. R. 782.

A bill filed by a member of a building society on behalf of himself and the other members, against the directors of the society, to restrain certain proceedings alleged to be ultra vires, was ordered to be taken off the file upon evidence that the plaintiff was a person of small means, and had purchased one share in the society for the purpose of instituting the suit, and that the suit was really instituted by his solicitor, who was not a shareholder, for the purpose of annoying two of the directors. Ib.

A plaintiff having lost money by speculating in the shares of a company, purchased five shares, for the purpose of qualifying himself as a shareholder, and then filed a bill, on behalf of himself and the other shareholders, against the company and other persons, impeaching certain transactions between them on the ground of fraud. The bill also impeached certain preliminary proceedings which had been taken for the purpose of winding-up and re-constituting the company. After the bill was filed, the company was wound up and re-constituted. The defendants put in answers which were excepted to for insufficiency, and while the exceptions were pending, they moved to take the bill off the file, or to stay proceedings:—Held, first, that at that stage of the cause, the defendants not having sufficiently denied the charges of fraud, the mala fides of the plaintiff in filing the bill was no ground for taking the bill off the file. Seaton v. Grant, L. R. 2 Ch. 489; 16 L. T. 758; 15 W. R. 602.

Held, secondly, that the small interest of the plaintiff was no objection to the bill, as it was filed on behalf of himself and other shareholders. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that as the bill impeached the preliminary proceedings in the winding-up, the fact of the company having been wound up subsequently was no ground for staying the proceedings. Ib.

Where a statement of claim relies on a specified document as constituting the plaintiff's case, if the court refers to such document and sees that the claim is not maintainable, it may strike out the claim as frivolous or vexatious. Whitworth v. Darbishire, 5 R. 198; 68 L. T. 216; 41 W. R. 317.

Where some defendants deliver a defence traversing the allegations in the statement of claim, and other defendants, without delivering any defence, put in evidence in denial that is not distinct and conclusive, the court will not dismiss the action as frivolous and vexatious, or as an abuse of the process of the court. Fletcher v. Bethom, 3 R. 589; 68 L. T. 438; 41 W. R. 621.

Scandalous Matter—Relevancy.]—Scandalous matter, as allegations reflecting upon moral character and not relevant to the subject, to be expunged from the record, whether in a suit or bankruptcy, and without an application. Simpson, Ex parte, 15 Ves. 476; 10 R. R. 104.

Allegations, material to the issue, are not impertinent, and being relevant and pertinent, though they may be false, and of whatever nature, are not scandalous. Ib.

Matter in an answer relevant according to the case made by the bill, is not scandalous, whatever may be the nature of it. St. John (Lord) v. St. John (Lady), 11 Ves. 526.

Improper to charge in a bill that a woman had a criminal conversation with particular persons, as it would affect the character of strangers and fill it with private scandal. Clarke v. Periam, 2 Atk. 339; 9 Mod. 340.

If facts stated in answer are relevant and material, they cannot be treated as scandalous; and, if they constitute a fraud, the answer is not scandalous, only because it draws the legal conclusion which the premises furnish. Montriou v. Carvick, 6 Jur. 97.

A creditor filed a bill against the debtor's executor, stating first, that the defendant was a person of bad character, of drunken habits and violent behaviour, and then adducing instances in support of that statement, and praying that the assets might be administered under the direction of the court, and for an injunction and receiver:—Held, that the general statement and instances were relevant to the relief asked, and therefore were not scandalous. Everet v. Prythergch, 12 Sim. 365; 11 L. J., Ch. 54; 6 Jur. 3.

In a bill by the testator's son and heir-at-law, impeaching a will on the ground of undue influence exercised by a female defendant over the testator's mind, an allegation that she, at a time specified, was discovered to have engaged in a criminal connection with the testator, and that she openly cohabited with him as if she had been his wife, is not scandalous or impertinent. Anon., 1 Myl. & C. 78. S. C., sub nom. Evans v. Owen, 2 Myl. & K. 382; 5 L. J., Ch. 74.

Upon a cross-bill by a father and his daughters to be relieved from a mortgage which the mortgagee sought to foreclose, it is not irrelevant or scandalous to state that the money was lent to the father under professions of friendship, spontaneously, that the mortgagee might, in the position of creditor, continue his visits to the family, and maintain his influence and effect his object, that being the seduction of one of the daughters; and exceptions for scandal were overruled. W. v. B., 31 L. J., Ch. 755; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 1141; 10 W. R. 617. See Dickson v. Wilton, 11 W. R. 365.

In a suit for the winding-up of a partnership long ago terminated, the ground for relief being the possession of the assets by the defendant, and his unwillingness to account, the bill contained statements of fraudulent misrepresentations alleged to have been made by the defendant for the purpose of inducing the plaintiff to join the business. Such statements were ordered to be expunged as scandalous. Atwool v. Ferrier, 14 L. T. 728; 14 W. R. 1014.

In an action by a wife against her husband for a rectification of the marriage settlement, an allegation in the statement of claim that the plaintiff had refused to live with the defendant because of his having committed a criminal assault upon a young girl, was ordered to be struck out as being scandalous and irrelevant, and the costs of the application to strike out were ordered to be paid by the wife's next friend in the action. Coyle v. Cumming, 40 L. T. 455; 27 W. R. 529.

A statement of claim alleged in effect that the plaintiff being desirous of borrowing money, agreed with H. to borrow it from him on personal security only, and to insure his life in the defendants' office as collateral security for the loan, and to pay a premium on such insurance to the defendants; and that the plaintiff for the purpose of so borrowing, as the defendants knew, did so insure and pay a premium. That H. throughout was an agent of the defendants, and that the transaction was a contrivance of the defendants to obtain the premium. That neither H. nor the defendants ever lent or intended to lend any money to the plaintiff, and, further, that this was the usual course of conduct of the defendants:—Held, that the paragraphs stating that it was the usual course of conduct of the defendants, were scandalous and irrelevant, and should be struck out, as amounting at the most to mere evidence, which by Ord. XIX. r. 4, is not to be pleaded; and, further, that the matter therein contained was not even evidence, and that evidence could not be given upon a trial, in chief, of such conduct being the usual course of conduct of the defendants. Blake v. Albion Life Assurance Society, 45 L. J., C. P. 663; 35 L. T. 269; 24 W. R. 677. But see S. C., 48 L. J., C. P. 169; 4 C. P. D. 94; 40 L. T. 211; 27 W. R. 321; 14 Cox, C. C. 246.

A bill charged that a bill of exchange ought to be delivered up to be cancelled, on the ground of fraud, and that "A. B., one of the defendants, had knowledge that another of the defendants, C. D., had been mixed up with irregular transactions connected with bills of exchange":—Held, to be not scandalous, and that such defendant was bound to answer. Finney v. Godfrey, 21 L. T. 631.

A bill alleged that under a contract the plaintiff was entitled to shares in a company which had been placed under the control of the defendant, who was to dispose of them as he should from his experience in such matters think fit. It then alleged that the defendant was in fact in league with other persons, whom he called a syndicate, in order to deal with the shares and contrive operations on the stock exchange (popularly called rigging the market) for the purpose of bringing the shares up to a fictitious value in the market. The bill prayed a decree for specific performance of the contract, and that the defendant might be restrained by injunction until the plaintiff's claim should be satisfied, from parting with the shares in his possession:—Held, that the allegation of improperly dealing with the shares was scandalous matter, and not pertinent to the relief sought, and must be expunged from the bill. Rubery v. Grant, 42 L. J., Ch. 19; L. R. 13 Eq. 443; 26 L. T. 538.

Scandalous matter irrelevant to the real question at issue in a suit, but relevant to an irrelevant issue raised by a party to the suit, will not be expunged by the court at the instance of the person who raised the irrelevant issue. Bruff v. Cobbold, Ayres, Ex parte, 26 L. T. 786; 20 W. R. 734.

C. and C., who carried on an extensive and well-known business as auctioneers under the firm of Christie, Manson & Woods, filed a bill to restrain the issuing of the prospectus of a limited company, to be "formed for the purpose of acquiring and working the well-known and rapidly-increasing auction and general land, estate and house agency business of Messrs. Christie & Christie." The bill alleged that the business of the plaintiffs was the only well-known business of auctioneers connected with Christie, and that the description in the prospectus of the business therein mentioned was inapplicable to any business of the defendants the Christies, and was inserted to induce the public to believe that the business was that of the plaintiffs. The bill then alleged that C. J. Christie, one of the defendants, was adjudicated bankrupt in 1869 and paid no dividend, and had obtained his order of discharge in 1870; that in 1869 he was committed for trial at the Marylebone police court on a charge of fraud by means of false cheques; that a report in the "Times," which was set out in the bill, was a correct report of what took place at the committal; and that the money in respect of which the charge was made was subsequently paid by a relation, and the prosecution abandoned. The defendants, the Christies, excepted for scandal to the allegations as to the criminal proceedings in 1869:—Held, that the allegations were scandalous and must be expunged, for that the defendant having committed, in 1869, a fraud wholly unconnected with the subject-matter of this suit would have been irrelevant, and that à fortiori, an allegation that he had been committed for trial on a charge of having been guilty of such fraud, without any allegation that he had been guilty of it, was irrelevant. Christie v. Christie, 42 L. J., Ch. 544; L. R. 8 Ch. 499; 28 L. T. 607; 21 W. R. 493.

A wife, living apart from her husband, filed a bill against him in respect of property to her separate use, and interrogated him as to the truth of statements in her bill, of their marriage, separation and arrangements with regard to her separate property. The interrogatory concluded with the words "or how otherwise." In his answer the husband alleged his belief that his wife had been guilty of adultery. He also filed a bill against her, relating to her separate property, in which the same charges were repeated. The wife excepted for scandal to the allegations respecting her adultery:—Held, that these allegations were scandalous and must be expunged, as, whether true or not, they were irrelevant to the issues to be decided at the hearing of the causes. Pearse v. Pearse, 29 L. T. 453; 22 W. R. 69.

L. brought an action against B. claiming (1) to restrain him from continuing a connection between his premises and L.'s private drain; (2) to have a building which had been erected by B. pulled down as darkening L.'s ancient lights; (3) damages. B., by his defence, alleged that the drain in question did not belong to L.; that he (B.) had never connected his premises with any drain belonging to L. who, however, had constructed a new drain, for private purposes of his own, below and in connection with the existing main sewer; and he alleged that "the plaintiff's acts aforesaid were in various particulars unlawful, but the defendant is in no wise responsible for them":—Held, that the latter allegation was ambiguous, "scandalous, and embarrassing," and must be struck out. Lumb v. Beaumont, 49 L. T. 772.

In an action respecting a policy of marine insurance, the plaintiff, the underwriter, by his statement of claim alleged that the risk was of a special and dangerous character, as the defendants well knew; that they failed to communicate such fact to the plaintiff; that the ship was unseaworthy when she commenced her voyage; and that the defendants knew of but concealed the fact of her being unseaworthy. The defendants admitted that the ship was unseaworthy, but stated that the unseaworthiness was solely owing to her being overladen, and was not known to them. They wholly denied the allegations of concealment and non-communication of facts. The plaintiff in his reply joined issue generally, but stated that he did not proceed further in this action with the charges in the statement of claim as to concealment and non-communication by the defendants of material facts:—Held, that Ord. XIX. r. 27, applied; that the allegations in the statement of claim were clearly unnecessary, because the plaintiff subsequently stated that he did not intend to ask any relief grounded on concealment or non-communication, and that they were consequently scandalous and embarrassing, and must be struck out. Brooking v. Maudslay, 55 L. T. 343; 6 Asp. M. C. 13.

In bill for removal of trustee, it is not scandalous or impertinent to challenge every act of trustee as misconduct. Portsmouth v. Fellows. 5 Madd. 450; 21 R. R. 335.

Nor to impute to him any corrupt or improper motive in execution of trust. Ib.

Nor to allege that his conduct is the vindictive consequence of some act on the part of the cestui que trust, or of some change in his situation. Ib.

But it is impertinent, and may be scandalous, to state any circumstances as evidence of general malice or personal hostility. Ib.

To a bill filed to enforce an alleged title to real and personal property. the defendant, in his answer, said, "The plaintiff is desirous of annoying and harassing the defendant, to extort money from him." "The plaintiff is acting under the advice of ignorant but cunning persons, who are in expectation of extorting money from the defendant, in order to be relieved from being harassed by the vexatious and illegal conduct of the plaintiff." The plaintiff took exceptions to these passages for scandal, but the exceptions were overruled. Stanton v. Holmes, 20 L. J., Ch. 203; 15 Jur. 763.

Affidavits ordered to be taken off the file for containing scandalous and irrelevant matter. Goddard v. Parr, 24 L. J., Ch. 783; 3 W. R. 633. See also EVIDENCE.

An application was made that certain parts of a bill of costs delivered might be expunged for scandal and impertinency. It was contended, in opposition, that the jurisdiction of the court was confined to scandalous and impertinent matter in pleadings and affidavits, and that, therefore, the application could not be entertained:—Held, that every proceeding, of whatever nature, in the court of chancery, which was made the vehicle for the introduction of scandalous or irrelevant matter, could be amended or otherwise dealt with under the general jurisdiction of the court. Miller, In re, Love v. Hills, 54 L. J., Ch. 205; 51 L. T. 853; 33 W. R. 210.

Untruth of Averments.]—The court will not, upon an application to strike out a defence, go into the question whether the allegations in the defence are true or false, and so try the case before the time; but it will allow affidavit evidence to shew that the defence is an abuse of its process. Hildige v. O'Farrell (8 L. R., Ir. 158) distinguished. Remmington v. Scoles, 66 L. J., Ch. 526; [1897] 2 Ch. 1; 76 L. T. 667; 45 W. R. 580—C. A.

The court will not set aside a defence upon affidavits of its untruth. Hildige v. O'Farrell, 8 L. R., Ir. 158—C. A.

Where a plea is false and sham, and calculated to embarrass, the court will set it aside, upon an affidavit of its being a false and sham plea. Nutt v. Rush, 4 Ex. 490; 7 D. & L. 192; 19 L. J., Ex. 54.

If a plea is so pleaded that it is manifestly intended to embarrass the plaintiff, the court, on affidavit that the plea is false, will set it aside. Levy v. Railton, 14 Q. B. 418; 19 L. J., Q. B. 16; 14 Jur. 19.

Claim Seeking Relief not Asked by Writ.]—An action was commenced by the plaintiffs in 1884 against the defendants for alleged infringement of the plaintiffs' patent. The action was however, discontinued in consequence of the evidence adduced by the defendants on interlocutory proceedings, and the plaintiffs paid the costs. The plaintiffs, in May, 1888, commenced another action against the defendants for the same object; and by their writ they claimed an injunction, delivery up of the infringing instruments, and an account, or damages and costs. The statement of claim in the second action contained an allegation that since discontinuing the former action, the plaintiffs had discovered that the defendant's evidence which led to its discontinuance was false. The statement of claim then contained a claim (which did not appear in the writ) that the second action might be treated as supplemental to the previous action, and that the defendants might be ordered to repay the costs paid to them in the previous action, and to pay the costs, charges, and expenses of the plaintiffs of that action as between solicitor and client:—Held, that it was irregular to introduce into the statement of claim a different cause of action not mentioned in the writ; that the causes of action contained in the statement of claim were entirely separate and distinct; and that the two paragraphs above mentioned must be struck out, leaving the plaintiffs to bring a separate action. United Telephone Co. v. Tasker, 59 L. T. 852. S. P., Moore v. Alwill, 8 L. R., Ir. 245.

Change of Interest by Assignment.]—A trustee in bankruptcy commenced an action to obtain a declaration that a deed, which purported to be an absolute conveyance of real estate, by the bankrupt, was in fact a mortgage, and to redeem such mortgage; and subsequently sold and assigned his interest in the subject matter of the action to C., who claimed to carry on the action in the name of the original plaintiff:—Held, on the application of the defendant, that C. was bound to amend the title of the action so as to shew that he was the real plaintiff, and to introduce such averments in the statement of claim as would disclose his title. Seear v. Lawson, or Chatterton v. Lawson, 50 L. J., Ch. 139; 16 Ch. D. 121; 43 L. T. 716; 29 W. R. 109.

Affected Compliance with Order.] — In an action against a stockbroker by his late employer, to re-open accounts on the ground of fraud, the plaintiff, by his statement of claim, alleged that the accounts delivered were untrue and unfair, that brokerage and commission had been improperly charged, and that excessive and unfair profit had been made. The defendant thereupon took out a summons for further and better particulars as to these charges, or that in default, the paragraphs containing these charges be struck out. The plaintiff amended his statement of claim by stating that all the accounts rendered were untrue, that the defendant had the particulars of the profits made by him, that the improper and excessive charges appeared in the accounts, and that the defendant was well aware of them:—Held, that this was a mere affectation of compliance with the order, and that the paragraphs complained of must be struck out, four days' leave to amend being given. Harbord v. Monk, 38 L. T. 411.

When Unintelligible.]—Parts of a statement of claim that are unintelligible may be struck out. Cashin v. Cradock, 3 Ch. D. 376; 35 L. T. 452; 25 W. R. 4—C. A.

i. ADMISSIONS BY PLEADING.

1. Generally.

Extent of.]—An admission of a fact on record amounts merely to a waiver of requiring proof of that fact; but if the other party seeks to have any inference drawn by the jury from the fact so admitted, he must prove it like any other fact. Edmunds v. Groves, 2 M. & W. 642; 5 D. P. C. 775; M. & H. 211; 6 L. J., Ex. 203.

An admission by pleading is an admission for all purposes of the cause. Bingham v. Stanley, 2 Q. B. 117; 1 G. & D. 237; 10 L. J., Q. B. 319; 6 Jur. 389.

An admission on the face of one plea cannot be made use of to prove or disprove another plea. Stracey v. Blake, 1 M. & W. 168; 1 Tyr. & G. 528.

An averment in one count of a declaration, or in one distinct plea, cannot be insisted on as an admission of any fact in another count or plea. Harington v. Macmorris, 5 Taunt. 228; 1 Marsh. 33.

Where a declaration contains two inconsistent counts, and the defendant pays money into court upon the second count, which the plaintiff accepts, the defendant cannot read the second count, and the proceedings therein, to the jury as conclusive, or as any evidence to negative an allegation in the first count. Gould v. Oliver, 2 Scott (N.R.) 241; 2 Man. & G. 208.

By not traversing an averment of a total loss in a declaration on a policy of insurance of a ship, the defendant admits no more than that there is some partial loss. King v. Walker, 3 H. & C. 209; 33 L. J., Ex. 325; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 43; 13 W. R. 232—Ex. Ch.

In an action against two on joint promises, they pleaded severally. Both pleaded non assumpsit, and one infancy. The plaintiff, in answer to the latter plea, admitted on the record that he could not deny the infancy, and he entered a nolle prosequi as to the defendant pleading it, but went to trial against the other:—Held, that he could not recover against this last, his admission on the record being conclusive evidence that there was no joint promise. Boyle v. Webster, 17 Q. B. 950; 21 L. J., Q. B. 202; 16 Jur. 683.

To an action for money had and received, the defendant pleaded in abatement, that the promises in the declaration mentioned were made by him jointly with other persons, thirteen in number (naming them), who were still living within the jurisdiction. Replication, that the promises were not made by the defendant jointly with the other persons named in the plea. The particulars of demand stated that the action was brought to recover cash deposited with or received by the defendant as the plaintiff's banker. At the trial the plaintiff began, and called a witness, who proved that she had a banking account, on which a balance was due to her to the amount stated in the particulars, with a banking company, which had since become insolvent, and in which the persons mentioned in the plea, and others also, were shareholders. The witness was cross-examined as to the state of the banking accounts, and not as to the fact of the defendant being also a shareholder; but the plaintiff gave no affirmative evidence to prove that he was one:—Held, that the fact was sufficiently admitted by the pleadings and proceedings at the trial, to entitle the plaintiff to recover. Crellin v. Calvert, 14 M. & W. 11; 14 L. J., Ex. 375; 9 Jur. 810.

In another Action.]—An admission contained in a defence in one action cannot properly be treated as conclusive in other proceedings between the same parties but on a different issue. Walters, In re, Neison v. Walters, 61 L. T. 872.

The facts actually decided by an issue in any suit cannot be again litigated between the same parties, and are conclusive evidence between them; so are the material facts alleged by one party, which are directly admitted by the opposite party, or indirectly admitted by taking a traverse on some other facts, if the traverse is found against the party making it. But the statements of a party in a declaration or plea, though for the purposes of the cause he is bound by those that are material, ought not, it should seem, to be treated as confessions of the truth of the facts stated. Boileau v. Rutlin, 2 Ex. 665; 12 Jur. 899.

Estopped from giving Evidence.]—An action against a witness, for not attending a trial pursuant to a subpœna, alleged that the plaintiff had a good cause of action in that suit, and that the testimony of the defendant was material evidence for the plaintiff. Plea, that the plaintiff could have proceeded to trial without the testimony of the defendant. Evidence was tendered on the part of the defendant at the trial, for the purpose of shewing that the plaintiff had not a cause of action in the original suit:—Held, that, as the defendant had not traversed the allegations that the plaintiff had a good cause of action, and that the evidence was material, these allegations were admitted, and that he was consequently estopped from giving the evidence tendered. Needham v. Fraser, 3 D. & L. 190; 1 C. B. 815; 14 L. J., C. P. 256; 9 Jur. 734.

A material allegation in a pleading, which is not traversed, is so far admitted, that it is not competent to the other party to disprove it. Bonzi v. Stewart, 4 Man. & G. 295; 5 Scott, (N.R.) 1; 11 L. J., C. P. 228.

In an action for negligence, in not properly securing a cow of the defendant in a slaughter-house, the declaration stated, that by means thereof the cow ran at, butted at, gored, killed, and destroyed a cow of the plaintiff. Plea, a payment of 30*s.* into court; and that the plaintiff had sustained no greater damages. Replication, that the plaintiff had sustained greater damages:—Held, that the defendant could not go into evidence, to shew that his cow had not killed the plaintiff's cow, as the contrary was admitted by the plea. Lloyd v. Walkey, 9 Car. & P. 771.

In an action for a libel, which imputed that the plaintiff's house was opened as a gaming-house, under the leadership of a woman of notorious character, the defendant pleaded several pleas, but none of them at all referring to the plaintiff's wife:—Held, that the plaintiff could not go into evidence to shew that his wife was a respectable person, as on the pleading she must be taken to be so. Guy v. Gregory, 9 Car. & P. 584.

Where in an action on a charter-party, a plea took an issue on an immaterial part of a breach:—Held, that by so doing the defendant admitted the material part as stated in the declaration. Deffeil v. Brocklebank, 3 Bligh, 561.

On a declaration in the indebitatus form, the only plea being in confession and avoidance, and no one appearing to support it, the plaintiff must give evidence of the amount of his claim, as the sum laid in the declaration is not admitted. Hayward v. Radcliffe, 4 F. & F. 500.

Curing Defect.] — A defect in a particular pleading may be cured by an admission or a statement in the adversary's pleading, though the party calling it in aid may have demurred to such pleading. Hyde v. Watts, 1 D. & L. 479; 12 M. & W. 254; 13 L. J., Ex. 41.

2. Judgment on.

See Ord. XXXII. r. 6 (1883), Ord. XL. r. 11 (1875).

"Relief," what is.] — The term "relief" in Ord. XL. r. 11, is not limited to its old technical meaning of a plaintiff's remedy in a chancery suit, but means relief in its ordinary sense,—such, for instance, as the relief from liability incurred by being a defendant in an action. Pascoe v. Richards, 50 L. J., Ch. 337; 44 L. T. 87; 29 W. R. 330.

Indorsement on Writ — "Pleading." — The indorsement on a writ is not a "pleading" so as to entitle a plaintiff, without the consent of the defendant, to move thereon for an order on admissions in the pleadings under Rules of Court, 1875, Ord. XL. r. 11, in a case where the defendant, admitting the plaintiff's claim, has given notice that he does not require the delivery of a statement of claim. Wallis v. Jackson, 52 L. J., Ch. 384; 23 Ch. D. 204; 31 W. R. 519.

Who Entitled to Apply.] — A defendant delivered a defence which, if uncontradicted, was a good defence to the plaintiff's claim; and the plaintiff did not rely or obtain further time within the three weeks limited by Ord. XXIV. r. 1. The defendant then, before the expiration of the six weeks within which a plaintiff must give notice of trial, moved under Ord. XL. r. 11, that the action might be dismissed with costs, on the ground that, by not replying, the plaintiff had admitted the defence within that rule:—Held, that a defendant seeking to dismiss an action under such circumstances was not a party applying for relief within the meaning of the rule. Linton v. Linton, 46 L. J., Ch. 64; 3 Ch. D. 793; 24 W. R. 962. But see cases infra.

Order for Sale of Bonds.]—In a suit in which the bill was filed before the Judicature Acts came into operation, the plaintiff claimed a charge upon certain bonds of a foreign state which were deposited in the bank to the credit of the cause. The suit had not yet come to trial. The defendants in their answer had admitted the plaintiff's title. On an application for an order for the sale of the bonds, as perishable goods within the meaning of Ord. LII. r. 2; or upon admission of facts in the pleadings under Ord. XL. r. 11:—Held, that there must be a sale of the bonds on the ground that the defendants having by their answer admitted the plaintiff's title, Ord. XL. r. 11, applied, and there was no reason why the relief to which he was entitled should be delayed until the hearing. Coddington v. Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Ry., 39 L. T. 12—C. A.

In Partition Actions.]—In a partition action in which the defendants by their defence admitted the facts stated in the statement of claim shewing the title of the plaintiffs :—Held, that the plaintiffs were, under Ord. XL. r. 11, entitled to an order on motion directing the usual inquiries as to the persons interested in the property. Gilbert v. Smith, 45 L. J., Ch. 514 ; 2 Ch. D. 686 ; 35 L. T. 43 ; 24 W. R. 568—C. A.

An order for sale may be made in a partition action on a motion upon admissions in the pleadings under Rules of Court, 1875, Ord. XL. r. 11. In such an order the court will direct an account of rents and profits received by the plaintiff, where he has been in possession, and adjourn further consideration. Burnell v. Burnell, 48 L. J., Ch. 412 ; 11 Ch. D. 213 ; 27 W. R. 749.

Partnership Actions.] — In an action for dissolution of partnership, the plaintiffs by their statement of claim alleged that they and the defendant had agreed to take a lease of certain premises and to enter into partnership ; that draft articles of partnership were considered and approved by the plaintiffs and the defendant at an interview on a day named, subject to their being finally revised by the defendant's solicitor ; that the draft articles had not yet been revised, nor the articles executed ; that, although the draft articles were only settled subject to revision, the terms of the arrangement between the plaintiffs and defendant as therein provided were definitely agreed upon at the interview ; that the defendant had not intimated any objection to the terms of the articles ; that it was soon afterwards agreed that certain sums should be brought in by the plaintiffs and defendant ; that they had proceeded with the partnership undertaking, and the defendant had taken an active part in it, but that he had not contributed his share, and notice had been given him to withdraw from the undertaking. The defendant, in his defence, admitted that he had agreed to enter into partnership as alleged, and added, "The defendant denies that the terms of the arrangement between myself and the plaintiffs were definitely agreed upon as alleged" :—Held, upon motion for judgment on admissions of fact in the pleadings under Ord. XL. r. 11, that there should be a decree for dissolution, with an inquiry, if desired by the defendant, as to the terms of the arrangement for partnership. Thorp v. Holdsworth, 45 L. J., Ch. 406 ; 3 Ch. D. 637.

In a partnership action, where there was no default in pleading, a district registrar by consent made a decree for accounts and inquiries, appointed a receiver, and directed a sale of the partnership property :—Held, that all these proceedings were invalid, and the plaintiff must commence afresh as from before decree ; but, on motion under Ord. XL. r. 11, on admissions in the pleadings, an order was made directing accounts and inquiries to be taken and made in the district registry ; the same receiver was, by consent, re-appointed by name by the court. Brassington v. Cussons, 24 W. R. 880.

In a suit to take the accounts of a partnership the defendants by their answer, filed before the 1st of November, 1875, admitted the partnership, and that they had not accounted ; and alleged that the plaintiff had not accounted, and that moneys were due from him to them. The plaintiff joined issue and moved before the hearing, upon affidavit of service, that the accounts of the partnership dealings might be taken :—Held, that he was entitled to the order under Ord. XXXIII. or Ord. XL. r. 11, and order made accordingly. Turquand v. Wilson, 45 L. J., Ch. 104 ; 1 Ch. D. 85 ; 24 W. R. 56.

Order to Account and Hand over Securities.]—When a defendant, who was agent for trustees of a trust estate, admitted by his answer that he was liable to account, and that he had in his possession securities belonging to the trust estate, the court on motion by the trustees, notice of which was given to the defendant, made an order directing him to account and to hand over the securities. Rumsey v. Reade, 45 L. J., Ch. 489 ; 1 Ch. D. 643 ; 33 L. T. 803 ; 24 W. R. 245.

Against one of several Defendants.]—A defence was delivered in an action brought against a husband and wife upon a joint and several promissory note given by them, which, purporting to be the defence of both, raised no defence as regarded the husband :—Held, upon motion for judgment, that the plaintiffs were entitled under Ord. XL. r. 11, to final judgment against the husband without waiting for the determination of the case against the wife. Jenkins v. Davies, 1 Ch. D. 696 ; 24 W. R. 690.

When three defendants had made default in delivering a defence, and another defendant had, by his defence, practically admitted the correctness of the statement of claim, and it was important to have the action tried against all at the same time, an order was made to set down the action on motion for judgment against the defendants in default, with liberty to give notice of motion, under Ord. XL. r. 11, for the same time against the defendant who had pleaded. Smith, In re, Bridson v. Smith, 24 W. R. 392.

When one of several defendants served has not appeared, while the others have appeared and delivered defences, the plaintiff may move for judgment, as against the defendants who have delivered defences, under Ord. XL. r. 11, upon admissions, and as against the defaulting defendant under the combined effect of Ords. XIII. r. 9, and XXIX. r. 10 ; but as against the latter the action must be set down on motion for judgment, and in both cases two clear days' notice of motion must be given. Parsons v. Harris, 6 Ch. D. 694 ; 25 W. R. 410.

Upon motion for final judgment against one of several defendants upon admission of the plaintiff's claim by such defendant, it is not necessary to serve the other defendants with notice of the motion, the cause of action being severable. Macmillan v. Australasian Territories, 76 L. T. 182.

Demurrer not to be raised by Motion.]—A demurrer to a defence ought not to be raised by way of motion for judgment under Ord. XL. r. 11. Mellor v. Sidebottom, 46 L. J., Ch. 398 ; 5 Ch. D. 342 ; 37 L. T. 7 ; 25 W. R. 401—C. A. See now Rules of Supreme Court, 1883, Ord. XXV.

Clear Case must be made.]—A plaintiff moving for judgment under Ord. XL. r. 11, on admissions in the defendant's pleadings, must have a clear case, and the mere admission or non-denial by the defendant of a right asserted by the plaintiff, but which has in fact no existence in law, is not sufficient to entitle the plaintiff to a judgment establishing the right. Chilton v. London Corporation, 47 L. J., Ch. 433 ; 7 Ch. D. 735 ; 38 L. T. 498 ; 26 W. R. 474.

Allegations not specifically denied.]—Unless the allegations in a statement of claim are specifically denied, the plaintiff is entitled to move for judgment as upon an admission of fact in the pleadings. Rutter v. Tregent, 48 L. J., Ch. 791; 12 Ch. D. 758; 41 L. T. 16; 27 W. R. 902.

In an action for an account of rents and profits, the defendant delivered a defence and a counter-claim to set off money due to him from the plaintiff under an award. The plaintiff in his reply simply joined issue generally, and the defendant then, treating the counter-claim as admitted, moved under the Judicature Act, Ord. XXXIII. and Ord. XL. rr. 10 and 11, for an account of what was due to him under it, or in the alternative that the reply might be struck out or amended under Ord. XXVII. r. 1, as tending to embarrass, and as being a non-compliance with the Rules of Court within Ord. LIX.: —Held, that the case was not one for an account under Ord. XXXIII.; that no order could be made on the counter-claim before the principal claim of the plaintiff was dealt with; and the alternative order was refused on the ground that a defendant could not dictate to a plaintiff the nature of pleadings. Rolfe v. Maclaren, 3 Ch. D. 106; 24 W. R. 816.

Defence merely craving Leave to refer to Documents.]—The statement of claim in a foreclosure action set out the purport and effect of several mortgage deeds, and alleged that they were duly executed. The statement of defence craved leave to refer to the deeds, when produced, and save as by such deeds, when produced, should appear, did not admit that the same were of or to the purport or effect in the statement of claim mentioned. Upon motion for judgment on admissions in the pleadings, the deeds being produced in court:—Held, that there was a sufficient admission of the execution of the deeds, and as it appeared, on their being produced in court, that they were of the dates and made between the parties mentioned in the statement of claim, the plaintiffs were entitled to judgment. Barnard v. Wieland, 30 W. R. 947.

Claim, Admission of—Counter-claim.]—In an action for a liquidated demand, the defendants pleaded admitting the claim, but setting up a counter-claim for unliquidated damages to a greater amount. The court refused an application under Ord. XL. r. 11, for an order to sign judgment for the plaintiffs upon the claim, and for payment of the amount thereof by the defendants into court to abide the result of the action. Mersey Steamship Co. v. Shuttleworth, 52 L. J., Q. B. 522; 11 Q. B. D. 531; 48 L. T. 625; 32 W. R. 245—C. A. Affirming 5 Asp. M. C. 48.

By Ord. XL. r. 11, any party to an action may, at any stage thereof, apply to the court or a judge for such order as he may, upon any admissions in the pleadings, be entitled to, without waiting for the determination of any other questions between the parties. In an action for goods sold and delivered, the defendant admitted the plaintiffs' claim, and set-off and counter-claimed for damages suffered and expenses incurred in respect of other goods which he alleged the plaintiffs had agreed to supply of a certain quality for exportation, but which, on arrival abroad after payment of the purchase-money, were found to be not of the quality contracted for, and were rejected by the defendant:—Held, on motion for judgment on admissions in the pleadings under Ord. XL. r. 11, that judgment must be entered for the plaintiffs on their claim on the terms that execution should not issue till after the trial of the counter-claim, if the defendant paid the amount into court within fourteen days. Showell v. Bouron, 52 L. J., Q. B. 284; 48 L. T. 613; 31 W. R. 550.

Part of Demand Admitted.]—A statement of claim alleged that the plaintiff was owner in fee simple of premises which he had on the 26th September, 1859, leased to M. for thirty-one years from the then next 25th December, at a yearly rent of 105*l*., payable quarterly. The statement then set forth the covenants in the lease, to pay rent, repair, and the conditions for re-entry for breaches of the covenants; and alleged that in 1870 the defendant took possession of, and since had occupied the premises, and that, at some time subsequently to 1870 he had become assignee of the lease, and that he had from 1870 till March, 1874, paid to the plaintiff the rent in accordance with the terms of the lease. Then breaches by the defendant of the various covenants were alleged, and the plaintiff claimed—(1) possession of the premises; (2) 157*l*. 10*s*. for arrears of rent to the 29th September, 1875, or for use and occupation; (3) 600*l*. damages for breaches of covenant; (4) mesne profits from the 29th September, 1875, to date of recovery of possession. The defendant, in his defence, denied that he was assignee of the lease, or that he had been guilty of breaches of covenant, but admitted that the lease had been avoided, and that the plaintiff was entitled to possession; he also therein admitted that he was in possession up to the 20th September, 1875, but alleged that he then ceased to be in possession. He brought into court 25*l*. to answer claim:—The court held that, upon the pleadings, the plaintiff was entitled under Ord. XIV. r. 4, to sign judgment at once for 157*l*. 10*s*., the rent to the 29th September, 1875. Hanmer (Lord) v. Flight, 35 L. T. 127; 24 W. R. 346. Reversed on other grounds, 36 L. T. 279—C. A.

In an action upon a fire policy to recover 1,000*l*., the defendant company pleaded that the policy was subjected to a condition that if at the time of loss or damage by fire there was any other insurance effected by the insured, or any other person, covering the same property, the defendant company should not be liable to pay or contribute more than their ratable proportion of such loss; that at the time of the alleged damage by fire the premises were insured against fire by a sub-tenant of the plaintiff, upon which insurance a certain sum was paid to the sub-tenant, who by covenant with the plaintiff was bound to keep the premises in repair, and that the apportionment of the loss which the defendant company were bound to pay under the policy was 62*l*. This sum was not brought into court. The plaintiff having moved under Ord. XXXIX. r. 9, for judgment for this sum without prejudice to his right to proceed for the residue of the amount claimed:—Held, that the rule only applied to cases in which the plaintiff was willing to accept the admitted sum in satisfaction of his claim, and that the motion must, therefore, be refused. Andrews v. Patriotic Assurance Co., 18 L. R., Ir. 115.

Inquiry as to Damages—Infringement of Patent.]—Where in an action for the infringement of a patent the defendant admits the validity of the patent, and admits ten infringements and no more, the plaintiff moving for judgment on admissions under Ord. XXXII. r. 6, is entitled to an injunction and an inquiry as to damages from the admitted infringements, but not to a general inquiry as to damages. United Telephone Co. v. Donohue, 55 L. J., Ch. 480; 31 Ch. D. 399; 54 L. T. 34; 34 W. R. 326—C. A.

Infant Defendants.]—The court will not make an order for judgment on admissions contained in a statement of defence which has been filed by infant defendants. Semble, the court will not make an order for judgment for want of defence in the case of infant defendants making default in filing a statement of defence. Byrne v. Byrne, 5 L. R., Ir. 134.

Non-delivery of Pleading.] — The plaintiff having made default in delivery of reply to the defendant's defence and counter-claim:—The court ordered final judgment to be entered for the defendant in respect of both the claim and counter-claim under Ord. XL. r. 11. Lumsden v. Winter, 51 L. J., Q. B. 413; 8 Q. B. D. 650; 30 W. R. 751; 46 J. P. 487. See col. 868.

Ord. XVIII. r. 10 (Irish) only applies to cases where both parties have pleaded. Boak v. Moore, 7 L. R., Ir. 322—C. A.

The plaintiff delivered his reply after three weeks had elapsed from delivery of the statement of defence, and subsequently the defendant, treating the facts stated in the defence as admitted, under Ord. XXIX. r. 12, by reason of the plaintiff's failure to reply in time, gave notice of motion for judgment under Ord. XL. r. 11:—Held, that the reply having been actually delivered before the notice of motion was given, the defendant was not entitled to judgment. Graves v. Terry, 51 L. J., Q. B. 464; 9 Q. B. D. 170; 30 W. R. 748. See col. 869.

A defendant is entitled, under Ord. XXXIX. r. 9, to judgment on admissions of facts in the pleadings, by reason of the plaintiff not delivering a reply to the defendant's defence. Elliott v. Harris, 17 L. R., Ir. 351.

See also Rules of Supreme Court, 1883, Ord. XXVII.

Waiver of Right.]—The plaintiff does not waive his right to judgment on the admissions by not having moved for judgment under Ord. XL. r. 11. Tildesley v. Harper, 47 L. J., Ch. 263; 7 Ch. D. 403; 38 L. T. 60; 26 W. R. 263.

Application, when made—At any Stage.]—A plaintiff may move for judgment upon admissions in the pleadings at any stage in the action, and notwithstanding that he has joined issue on the defence and given notice of trial. Brown v. Pearson, 21 Ch. D. 716; 46 L. T. 411; 30 W. R. 436.

A defendant who has put in a rejoinder, but not counter-claimed, is entitled to move, under Ord. XL. r. 11, to have the action dismissed on the ground that on the admissions in the pleadings the plaintiff is not entitled to the relief claimed. Pascoe v. Richards, 50 L. J., Ch. 337; 44 L. T. 87; 29 W. R. 330.

Order is Discretionary—Appeal.]—An action having been commenced in November, 1876, to enforce an equitable mortgage with written memorandum dated in February, 1876, the defendant admitted the mortgage, but alleged, by way of defence, that it was part of the agreement that the plaintiff should not require a legal mortgage, nor any payment of principal or interest for a year from the time of the advance. The plaintiff moved for the ordinary foreclosure decree on the admissions in the pleadings; and the motion was refused by Hall, V.-C.:—Held, that the vice-chancellor had a discretion as to whether a case was a proper one for making an order on motion under Ord. XL. r. 11; and that the court of appeal ought not to interfere with the exercise of that discretion. Mellor v. Sidebottom, 46 L. J., Ch. 398; 5 Ch. D. 342; 37 L. T. 7; 25 W. R. 401—C. A.

Not entertained simultaneously with Motion to strike out Counter-claim.]—A motion to set aside a counter-claim and a motion for judgment upon admissions of fact in the defence cannot be entertained simultaneously. Church Temporalities Commissioners v. M'Ivor, 3 L. R., Ir. 433.

Motion, how made.]—Upon admissions in a defence in an administration action, and upon a notice of motion for "a decree or decretal order," an order can, under Rules of Court, 1875, Ord. XL. r. 11, be made upon an ordinary motion without setting down the motion. Barker's Estate, In re, Hetherington v. Longrigg, 48 L. J., Ch. 171; 10 Ch. D. 162; 27 W. R. 393.

—— Motion or Summons in Chambers.]—An action was brought to restrain the defendants from publishing or issuing a certain trade circular. By their defence they offered to submit to a perpetual injunction in the terms of an interlocutory injunction which had already been obtained against them, "to be obtained on summons issued for that purpose." The action was set down on motion for judgment, and the plaintiffs moved for judgment for a perpetual injunction as offered by the defendants:—Held, that there was jurisdiction to make the order in chambers, that the application should have been so made, and that the plaintiffs should only be allowed such costs as would have been incurred upon a summons in chambers. London Steam Dyeing Co. v. Digby, 57 L. J., Ch. 505; 58 L. T. 724; 36 W. R. 497.

In an action to restrain the defendant from building so as to obstruct plaintiff's ancient lights, and for damages, the defendant paid 275*l.* into court in satisfaction of the claim for damages, and by his defence offered to undertake not to carry his buildings higher than they were at the commencement of the action, to consent to an order embodying this undertaking, and for payment to the plaintiff of the 275*l.*, and to pay the plaintiff's costs. The plaintiff accepted these terms, and prepared minutes which he sent to the defendant's solicitors with a notice that he should set down the action on motion for judgment as a short cause. The defendant's solicitors wrote that the matter could be concluded at much less cost on a summons in chambers and the defendant wished that course adopted. The plaintiff, nevertheless, proceeded with his motion:—Held, that the letter of the defendant's solicitors made the submission in the pleadings equivalent to that in London Steam Dyeing Co. v. Digby (57 L. J., Ch. 505), where the offer of the defendants in the pleadings was expressly to submit to an order for an injunction to be obtained in chambers; and that the plaintiff was only entitled to such costs of his motion as would have been incurred on a summons in chambers. The plaintiff was allowed the costs of preparing minutes, and for the guidance of the taxing-master the judge intimated that he should have allowed counsel in chambers. Allen v. Oakey, 62 L. T. 724.

Applications for orders upon admissions on pleadings should be made by summons in chambers, to come on in court as adjourned summonses. Gough v. Heatley, 49 L. T. 772; 32 W. R. 385.

Form of Order.]—Form of order made on motion for judgment under the Judicature Act, Ord. XL. r. 11, when the further hearing of the action is adjourned. Bennett v. Moore, 1 Ch. D. 692.

j. AIDER BY VERDICT.

Defects and Omissions cured.] — After a verdict, the court will suppose everything to be right, unless the contrary appears on the record. Bull v. Steward, 1 Wils. 255.

Where there is any defect, imperfection or omission in any pleading, whether in substance or form, which would have been a fatal objection on demurrer, yet if the issue joined is such as necessarily required, on the trial, proof of the facts so defectively or imperfectly stated or omitted, and without which it is not to be presumed that either the judge would direct the jury to give or the jury would have given the verdict, such defect, imperfection or omission is cured by the verdict at common law. Delamere v. Reg., 36 L. J., Q. B. 313; L. R. 2 H. L. 419; 17 L. T. 1.

If a declaration contains allegations capable of being understood in two senses, and in one sense it will sustain the action, and in the other it will not, after verdict it must be construed in the sense which will sustain the action. Emmens v. Elderton, 4 H. L. Cas. 624; 13 C. B. 495; 18 Jur. 21.

Declaration against a sheriff for an escape. Pleas, not guilty, and that the judgment debtor was discharged from custody on the production of a certificate of the registration of a trust deed under the Bankruptcy Act, 1861. Demurrer to the second plea, joinder of issue, and replication that the plaintiff was not a creditor bound or intended to be bound by the deed. Demurrer to the replication and joinder of issue. Judgment on the demurrers that the second plea was bad, and the replication good. At the trial there was a verdict for the plaintiff on the plea of not guilty, and for the defendant on the other issues. The court having decided that on the whole record the defendant was entitled to judgment: —Held, on appeal, that the decision was right; per Kelly, C.B., Martin, B., and Brett, J., on the ground that the defect (if any) in the second plea was cured by the replication which tendered the true issue in the cause, and the defendant having succeeded in this issue was entitled to judgment; per Channell, B., Cleasby, B., Keating, J., and Montague Smith, J., that the second plea, though perhaps informal, was sufficient, and the replication to it also sufficient, but the defendant having succeeded on this replication was entitled to judgment. Dignam v. Baily, 10 B. & S. 891; 40 L. J., Q. B. 68; L. R. 6 Q. B. 47; 23 L. T. 706; 19 W. R. 325—Ex. Ch.

A plea in bar, justifying under a statute which affords a defence arising subsequently to the commencement of the action is good after verdict. Cobbett v. Grey, 4 Ex. 729; 19 L. J., Ex. 137.

A declaration stated that the defendant was indebted to the plaintiff in 800*l.* for work of the plaintiff, as an attorney for the defendant, and at his request, and for other work of the plaintiff, by him done for the defendant and at his request, and for moneys paid for the defendant ("at his request" omitted), and for moneys had and received for the use of the plaintiff, and for moneys found to be due from the defendant to the plaintiff on an account stated: —Held, on motion in arrest of judgment, that the declaration was sufficient after verdict, that it contained one count only, and that the jury was to be presumed to have given their verdict on that part of it which was sufficient. M'Gregor v. Graves, 3 Ex. 34; 18 L. J., Ex. 109.

An ambiguous expression in a declaration is cured by verdict, and must afterwards be taken to have been used in that sense which would sustain the verdict. Huntingtower (Lord) v. Gardiner, 2 D. & R. 450; 1 B. & C. 297; 1 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 120. S. P., Hobson v. Middleton, 9 D. & R. 249; 6 B. & C. 302.

A verdict will cure ambiguity, but it will not aid a case where the gist of the action is omitted. Avery v. Hoole, Cowp. 825; 2 Dougl. 683, n.

It will cure a defect in setting out a title, though it cannot cure a defective title. Roe d. Wrangham v. Hersey, 3 Wils. 274. S. P., Small d. Baker v. Cole, 2 Burr. 1159.

There is a distinction between a title defectively set forth and a defective title; to the former case the statutes of Jeofails extend, but to the latter, as the jury cannot examine into what was not set forth, they do not. English v. Burnell, 2 Wils. 258.

After a verdict, where the defendant's name is put in the count instead of the plaintiff's name, the court will reject the defendant's name as being surplusage. Richards v. Symonds, 3 Wils. 40.

The 32 Hen. 8, c. 30, providing that a discontinuance shall be cured by verdict, applies only to courts of record. Chitty v. Dendy, 4 N. & M. 842; 3 A. & E. 319; 1 H. & W. 169; 4 L. J., K. B. 195.

To a declaration on a bill of exchange for 65*l.* with the common counts, concluding to the plaintiff's damage of 200*l.*, the defendant pleaded as to 35*l.*, part of the bill, that it was an accommodation bill, as to 40*l.* parcel, &c., payment into court, and as to the residue, non assumpsit. The replication denied that the bill was an accommodation bill, and on the non assumpsit joined issue, but said nothing as to the payment into court:—Held, after verdict, that there was no discontinuance on the record, or that if there was, it was cured by verdict, or that a nolle prosequi might be entered as to the 40*l.* Fallows v. Bird, 2 C. M. & R. 457; 5 Tyr. 836; 4 D. P. C. 183; 1 Gale, 246; 4 L. J., Ex. 248.

If a local action is brought and tried in a wrong county, the defect is aided after verdict by 16 & 17 Car. 2, c. 8. London Corporation v. Cole, 7 Term Rep. 583.

None of the statutes of Jeofails will assist on a writ of error from an inferior court, where one of two counts in a declaration is not laid within the jurisdiction, and the damages are general. Trevor v. Wall, 1 Term Rep. 151.

But if it appears by the record that the plaint in an inferior court was laid before the cause of action stated in the declaration accrued, the objection is aided by verdict. Bishop v. Kaye, 3 B. & Ald. 605. And see Heather v. Bryan, 1 Wils. 180.

Where, in an action on a bond by an administrator, the declaration alleged that administration was granted by the Bishop of Lichfield and Coventry, and the venue in the margin was laid in London, but the bond was stated to be made at Derby, which is within the diocese:—Held, to be sufficient, and that the bad venue laid in the margin was cured by the statute of Jeofails. Mellor v. Barber, 3 Term Rep. 287.

After a defence made on a writ of inquiry, the defendant is not allowed to take advantage of a mistake in the declaration. Freeland v. Hunt, 2 Wils. 380.

A mere defect in pleading, though a ground of general demurrer, will not, after verdict, render a judgment null and void, where a good cause of action is stated in the count. Jack v. Tease, 12 Ir. Ch. R. 279.

I. AGENCY GENERALLY.

A. CREATION OF RELATIONSHIP.

1. PRIOR AGREEMENT.

Consensus of Parties.]—The relation of principal and agent requires the consensus of both parties. There must be an express or implied assent to, or a subsequent ratification of, that relation. Markwick v. Hardingham, 15 Ch. D. 349; 43 L. T. 647; 29 W. R. 361—C. A.

No one can become the agent of another except by the will of the principal, manifested in writing, or orally, or by his being placed in a situation in which, according to the ordinary usages of mankind, he would be understood to represent and act for the principal. Pole v. Leask, 33 L. J., Ch. 155; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 829; 8 L. T. 645—H. L.

Acceptance of Agency—Communication of to Principal.]—A contract made by an agent under a written and signed offer of agency, purporting to have been duly and effectually accepted by the agent, will not, if such acceptance has not, in fact, been communicated to the principal, be binding upon the principal by estoppel. Consort Deep Level Gold Mines, In re; Stark's and Elliston's Cases, 66 L. J., Ch. 297; [1897] 1 Ch. 575; 76 L. T. 300; 45 W. R. 420—C. A.

Whether Writing Necessary.]—An agency may be established by parol. James v. Smith, [1891] 1 Ch. 384; 63 L. T. 524; 39 W. R. 396. Affirmed, 65 L. T. 544—C. A.

Parol authority sufficient for a written agreement by an agent. Deverell v. Bolton (Lord), 18 Ves. 509.

Authority of agent may be by parol, though the agreement must be by writing. Mortlock v. Buller, 10 Ves. 311; 7 R. R. 417. And see Coles v. Trecothick, 9 Ves. 234; 1 Smith, 233; 7 R. R. 167.

The authority of an agent to contract for a lease of lands need not be in writing. Callaghan v. Pepper, 2 Ir. Eq. R. 399.

Agent to Sell.]—A. and B. advertised an estate for sale. The advertisement stated that "to treat and view the property applications are to be made to A. or B." Held, that this did not give A. authority to sell the estate, so as to bind B. without his concurrence. Godwin v. Brind, 17 W. R. 29.

Agent or Purchaser.]—When a person has goods consigned to him to sell, and he is bound, if he sells, to pay a fixed price to his employer at a fixed time after sale, but he may sell to his customers at any price and upon any credit he pleases, though he may be called an agent, yet the legal relation of principal and agent does not exist between him and his employer; on the contrary, the relation between him and his employer is that of purchaser and vendor, and a separate relation of vendor and purchaser exists between him and the persons to whom he sells, and the moneys which come to his hands by means of the sales which he effects are his own moneys, and are not impressed with any trust for his employer. White, Ex parte, Nevill, In re, 40 L. J., Bk. 73; L. R. 6 Ch. 397; 24 L. T. 45; 19 W. R. 488.

A purchaser alleged, by his answer to a suit for specific performance, that he acted as a puffer in bidding for one lot, and also as a puffer in bidding for another lot, which was knocked down to him, and that he therefore purchased the lot, and signed the agreement for the purchase, as the agent of the vendor; but the statement in his depositions of the circumstances attending the signature was somewhat different from that in his answer, and he had signed an order on his attorney for payment of the deposit money:—Held, that there was not sufficient evidence of agency, and the defendant was held to have purchased on his own account. The court cannot speculate on the damages which a jury might have given for the breach of an agreement, nor on the damage caused to property by failure of a sale: therefore the specific performance of an agreement for the sale of hereditaments, where the consideration money is 50*l.*, is not too small a matter for the jurisdiction of the court. The exercise of the jurisdiction is discretionary in the court; but the discretion is not arbitrary, but must be exercised according to the circumstances of the case. Bennett v. Smith, 16 Jur. 421.

A., a foreign merchant, employed B. to purchase goods on commission; the vendors (with the knowledge that the purchases were made on account of A.) made out the invoices to B., and took in payment his acceptances payable at six months:—Held, that there was no contract of sale as between A. and B. Seymour v. Pychlau, 1 B. & Ald. 14.

When Presumed—Solicitor.]—Held, that, in a sale under a decree, the solicitor of the plaintiffs, having the management of the sale, is to be considered, as between the vendors and the purchaser, to be the agent of all the parties to the suit. Dalby v. Pullen, 1 Russ. & M. 296; 8 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 74.

Where the mortgagor is himself a solicitor and prepares the mortgage-deed, the mortgagee employing no other solicitor, the mortgagor must be considered to be the agent or solicitor of the mortgagee in the transaction, although the mortgagor acting as such solicitor is not paid by the mortgagee, for the nature of the transaction is, that all expenses are borne by the mortgagor. Hewitt v. Loosemore, 9 Hare, 449; 21 L. J., Ch. 69; 15 Jur. 1097.

It does not necessarily follow in such a case, because the mortgagor is the solicitor of the mortgagee, that therefore the mortgagee has constructive notice of facts connected with the title which are known to the mortgagor. Ib.

A solicitor who pays off a mortgage debt due from his client must be taken to act as the agent of the client, and not on his own behalf; and if he receives the rent of the mortgaged property, the possession is that of the client; and the solicitor cannot be charged with wilful default, nor will the statute run against the client. Ward v. Carttar, L. R. 1 Eq. 29.

—— Agent of Tenant.]—A person appointed agent to pay the head-rent on the part of lessee for lives, with covenant for perpetual renewal, is the agent of the lessee, so that a demand and notice upon him will be binding upon the lessee, although he reside abroad, and be admittedly ignorant of the facts. Butler v. Portarlington (Earl), 1 Dr. & War. 20; 1 Con. & L. 1; 4 Ir. Eq. R. 1.

The presumption is, that the tenant is acquainted with the title under which he claims, and the circumstances connected with it; and this holds until the contrary is proved. Ib.

Payment by an under-tenant C. to A. the head landlord, with the assent of B. the intermediate landlord, of the head-rent reserved by the lease from A. to B., does not of itself make C. such an agent to B. as to induce the court to decree a reversionary lease of the premises obtained by C. from A. a trust for B. Maunsell v. O'Brien, 1 Jones, 176.

—— Co-Trustee.]—A. and B., trustees of a will under which the plaintiff was entitled to a share of residue, which she had assigned to C. and D., the trustees of her marriage settlement, paid it to C. alone, without the knowledge of D. They afterwards transferred a legacy of stock settled upon similar trusts to C. and D., by whom it was subsequently sold out, and the proceeds were received by C. alone. D. left to C. the general management of the trust estate, and the choice of investments. Both funds were partially misapplied and lost by C. The plaintiff sought to have both funds made good:—Held, that the bill was not multifarious, though it asked no relief against A. and B., with respect to the legacy fund. Margetts v. Perks, 12 W. R. 517.

Held, also, that the conduct of D. did not justify A. and B. in considering C. as his agent authorised to receive the money. Ib.

—— From Relationship.]—In an action by indorsee against indorser of bills of exchange, accepted for the accommodation of the drawer, proof by the drawer of his delivery of the bills in question to the father-in-law of the plaintiff to be cashed, who retained a portion of the amount far beyond the legal interest, does not affix usury on the plaintiff, there being no evidence to shew that the father-in-law was acting as the agent of the plaintiff in the transaction:—Held, also, that in such circumstances, notice to plaintiff to prove consideration given for the bills was not sufficient to impose such burden upon him. Basset v. Dodgin, 10 Bing. 40; 3 M. & Sc. 417; 2 L. J., C. P. 259.

—— Receiver whether Agent of Trustees for Debenture-holders.]—By a deed made between a limited company and trustees for debenture-holders, the property of the company was transferred to the trustees, upon trust, to permit the company to carry on the business until the happening of one or other of events specified. On the happening of such event the trustees were empowered to appoint a receiver; but it was an express condition of the exercise of that power that "any person so appointed shall be the agent of the company, who alone shall be liable for his acts and defaults." One of the events happened, and the trustees appointed a receiver, who took possession of the mortgaged premises and carried on the business of the company. An order was made for the winding-up of the company and a liquidator appointed, who permitted the receiver to carry on the business as before. The respondents sued the trustees for goods supplied to the receiver after the winding-up order:—Held, that the trustees were not principals of the receiver, and were therefore not liable for the price of the goods supplied. Gosling v. Gaskell, 66 L. J., Q. B. 848 ; [1897] A. C. 575 ; 77 L. T. 314—H. L. (E.)

Agent of which of Two Parties—Reward for Information—Police.]—On 29th May the defendant instructed his printers to print handbills offering a reward of 25*l.* to the person who should give information to P., a superintendent of police, leading to the conviction of the perpetrator of a certain crime. The plaintiff, a police officer, on the same morning before the instructions to print the handbills had been given by the defendant, had communicated the desired information to a fellow police officer named C. with instructions to forward it to P., and C. thereupon communicated the information, in accordance with the rules of the force, to his own immediate superior officer L., who sent it on the same evening to P., whom it reached in due course on the following morning, the 30th May, after the time when the said handbills had been delivered to and had been distributed by him to the neighbouring police-stations :—Held, that the plaintiff, the importance of whose information was admitted, was entitled to the reward, the messengers, C. and L., through whom such information was conveyed to P., being the plaintiff's agents to convey, and not P.'s agents to receive, the said message. Gibbons v. Proctor, 64 L. T. 595 ; 55 J. P. 616.

—— Insurance Premiums — Commission.]—The plaintiff mortgaged her life interest in a fund to the defendants, it being part of the agreement that a policy should be effected on her life, and the premiums be secured on the mortgaged property. In an action for redemption the chief clerk found that 173*l.* 19*s.* 1*d.*, "premiums paid on policies," was due from the plaintiff to the defendants. L., a solicitor and agent to all the parties, paid the premiums to the insurance offices, receiving from them 5 per cent. commission. On summons to vary the chief clerk's certificate by the amount of the commission, on the ground that the "premiums paid on policies" only amounted to 165*l.* 5*s.* :—Held, that after the premiums had been paid to the insurance offices, the mortgagor had no interest in them. The insurance offices received the premiums, and paid the commission out of them to their own agent. Leete v. Wallace, 58 L. T. 577.

Between Wrongdoers.]—There is no agency as between wrongdoers ; each of them is personally liable. Heugh v. Abergavenny (Earl), 23 W. R. 40.

2. RATIFICATION.

Equivalent to Previous Authority.]—The maxim of omnis ratihabitio retrotrahitur et mandato æquiparatur means, first, as applied to cases of contract, that if A., unauthorised by B., makes a contract on his behalf with C., which B. afterwards recognises and adopts, the contract is to be dealt with as having been originally made by his authority. Secondly, as applied to cases of tort, that where A., professing to act by the authority of B., does that which primâ facie amounts to a trespass, and B. afterwards assents to and adopts his act, A. is treated as having from the beginning acted by his authority, and B. becomes a trespasser unless he can justify the act. Bird v. Brown, 4 Ex. 786 ; 19 L. J., Ex. 154 ; 14 Jur. 132.

A subsequent ratification by a principal of a contract by an agent is equivalent to a previous authority. Maclean v. Dunn, 1 M. & P. 761 ; 4 Bing. 722 ; 6 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 184 ; 29 R. R. 714. S. P., Foster v. Bates, 12 M. & W. 226 ; 13 L. J., Ex. 88.

An act done by an agent of the government, though in excess of his authority, being ratified and adopted by the government, is equivalent to a previous authority. Secretary of State for India v. Kamachee Boye Sahaba, 7 Moore, Ind. App. 476 ; 13 Moore, P. C. 22.

Though subsequent ratification may supply the want of authority in an agent at the time of his acceptance of an offer, it must be shewn in such a case that there was a contract purporting to be made by and with the agent which, if the agent had authority, would be a valid binding contract. Athy Guardians v. Murphy, [1896] 1 Ir. R. 65.

Must be founded on Knowledge of the Facts.]—Acquiescence and ratification must be founded on a full knowledge of the facts, and further, it must be in relation to a transaction to which effect may be given thereby. Banque Jacques-Cartier v. Banque d'Epargne de Montreal, 57 L. J., P. C. 42 ; 13 App. Cas. 111—P. C.

Where the accounts of a bank in liquidation had been changed so as to represent the bank as a debtor in respect of a sum which had been borrowed by its manager for his own purposes : —Held, that the doctrine of acquiescence and ratification by the liquidating authorities would not avail to render the bank liable to pay a debt which it never owed. Ib.

To constitute a binding ratification by a person of an act done in his name without any previous authority, there must be full knowledge on his part of the facts, and unequivocal adoption after such knowledge, or the circumstances must be such as to warrant the clear inference that the supposed principal was adopting the acts of the supposed agent, whatever they were. Marsh v. Joseph, 66 L. J., Ch. 128 ; [1897] 1 Ch. 213 ; 75 L. T. 558 ; 45 W. R. 209—C. A.

Option of Purchase—Limit of Time.]—Acceptance by an agent acting without authority of an option of purchase, which has to be exercised within a limited time, is not made effective by the principal's ratification after the time limited has expired. Dibbins v. Dibbins, 65 L. J., Ch. 724 ; [1896] 2 Ch. 348 ; 75 L. T. 137 ; 44 W. R. 595.

Who may Ratify.]—A person may ratify an action brought in his name, but without his knowledge or authority, by another professing to act as his agent and on his behalf. Ancona v. Marks, 7 H. & N. 686 ; 31 L. J., Ex. 163 ; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 516 ; 5 L. T. 753 ; 10 W. R. 251.

Therefore, where a holder of a bill of exchange, without the knowledge or authority of the plaintiff, indorsed and delivered it to an attorney for the plaintiff, and in order that an action might be brought upon it in his name, and the plaintiff after action ratified the act :—Held, that the subsequent ratification was equivalent to a prior authority, and that the plaintiff had a valid title to sue on the bill. Ib.

To entitle a person to sue upon a contract, it must be shewn that he himself made it, or that it was made on his behalf by an agent authorised to act for him at the time, or whose act has been subsequently ratified and adopted by him ; and the person for whom the agent professes to act must be capable of being ascertained at the time. Watson v. Swann, 11 C. B. (N.S.) 756; 31 L. J., C. P. 210.

A party may ratify the acts of an agent whose name is unknown to him. Foster v. Bates, 1 D. & L. 400; 12 M. & W. 226; 13 L. J., Ex. 88; 7 Jur. 1093.

An act done for another, by a person not assuming to act for himself, but for such other person, though without any precedent authority whatever, becomes the act of the principal, if subsequently ratified by him; in such case, the principal is bound by the act, whether it is to his detriment or for his advantage, and whether it is founded on a tort or a contract, to the same extent and with all the consequences, which follow from the same act, if done by his previous authority; but it is otherwise where the party did not at the time assume to act as agent. Wilson v. Tumman, 6 Man. & G. 236; 6 Scott (N.R.) 894; 1 D. & L. 573; 12 L. J., C. P. 306.

Where A. does an act as agent for B., without any communication with C., C. cannot, by afterwards adopting that act, make A. his agent, and thereby incur any liability, or take any benefit, under the act of A. Ib.

In some cases, where an act, which if unauthorised would amount to a trespass, has been done in the name and on behalf of another, and without previous authority, a subsequent ratification may enable the party on whose behalf the act was done to take advantage of it, and treat it as having been done by his direction; but this doctrine must be taken with the qualification that the act of ratification must take place at a time and under circumstances when the ratifying party might have himself lawfully done the act which he ratifies. Bird v. Brown, supra.

H. was tenant to P. of lands under a lease which expired on the 29th September, 1880. P. brought ejectment to recover possession of the land, and for mesne profits, and after he was in a position to sign judgment, an agreement was entered into in the month of November, 1884, between H. and P., by which P. agreed to grant a lease to H. for thirty-one years from the 29th of September, 1884, H. paying 860*l.* on or before the 15th of December, as and for mesne profits up to that date and for costs, and that H. should be at liberty to sell subject to the landlord's approval. H. not having such sum of 860*l.*, judgment for possession was entered on the 16th December. After the entry of the judgment negotiations took place between P. and D., who had taken the land temporarily for grazing from H., for a lease of the said lands to D., and on the 2nd of January, 1885, D. paid P. 860*l.*, and the following day signed a proposal for a lease for thirty-five years from the 29th September, 1884, at a yearly rent of 200*l.* P. was only tenant for life of the lands, and could not take a fine, and there was no mention in the agreement with D. of the payment by him of 860*l.* On the 6th of January, 1885, the writ in the present action was issued by P. against H., claiming 1,000*l.* damages for mesne profits from the expiration of the lease on the 29th September, 1880, and in the alternative 1,000*l.* for use and occupation. H., by his defence, claimed the benefit of the payment by D. of the 860*l.*, and paid 6*d.* into court, on the count in trespass. At the trial P.'s agent deposed that he told D. that whoever gave him 860*l.* would get the land. D., who was examined for H., deposed that he knew 860*l.* was claimed from H., for arrears of rent and costs, and that he was willing to pay that sum on getting a good lease. The question left to the jury was "whether the 860*l.* was paid by D. and received by P. as for the rent of the farm due by H." They found that it was, and that the 6*d.* lodged in court was sufficient. Upon a motion by P. for a new trial:—Held, that there was evidence proper to be substituted to the jury that the 860*l.* was paid by D. and received by P., as and for the arrears of rent and costs, and that it was competent for H. to adopt and claim the benefit of the payment as a defence to the present action. Purcell v. Henderson, 16 L. R., Ir. 213. Affirmed, 16 L. R., Ir. 466—C. A.

Agreement with Company before Registration.]—When A. enters into a contract with B. before a company is in existence, that contract cannot be made binding on the company by mere ratification. Empress Engineering Co., In re, 16 Ch. D. 125; 43 L. T. 742; 29 W. R. 342—C. A.

By an agreement made before the registration of a company, it was agreed that B. should be secretary of the company for a term of five years at a specified salary, on condition that B. subscribed 2,000*l.* in respect of 200 fully paid-up shares of the company, which sum B. subscribed. At the first meeting of the directors a resolution was passed confirming the agreement between B. and the company. The company went into voluntary liquidation, subsequently continued under the supervision of the court. B. claimed for damages by reason of his engagement as secretary being terminated by the winding-up:—Held, that a company could not ratify or confirm anything that was done or any contract that was made before it came into existence; and, therefore, that the claim must be disallowed. Dale and Plant, In re, 61 L. T. 206; 1 Meg. 338. And see Cases sub tit. COMPANY.

After Repudiation of Contract—Effect of.]—The articles of association of a limited company provided that the directors should not be more than ten, nor less than three; and that the directors might determine the quorum necessary for the transaction of business. On the 22nd of October four persons were duly appointed directors. On the 24th of October S. applied for 100 shares. On the same day the first meeting of the directors was held; two only of the four directors were present. They resolved that two directors should form a quorum, and then made several allotments, including 100 to S. On the same evening S. received by post notice of the allotment to him; and on the next day he gave notice to the company that he withdrew his application. On the 26th of October the two directors who had been absent from the meeting of the 24th of October expressed in writing their approval of the resolution fixing two as a quorum. On the application by S. (under s. 35 of the Companies Act, 1862) to have his name removed from the register:—Held, that the allotment could not be ratified by what the other two directors did after S. had withdrawn his application. Portuguese Consolidated Copper Mines, In re, Steele's Case, 58 L. J., Ch. 491; 42 Ch. D. 160; 60 L. T. 857. See S. C., 58 L. J., Ch 813; 42 Ch. D. 160; 1 Meg. 246—C. A.

Where a contract has been entered into by one as agent, although without his principal's authority, the principal may ratify, and afterwards enforce, the contract, notwithstanding that the other party thereto has before the ratification repudiated it. Bolton v. Lambert, 58 L. J., Ch. 425 ; 41 Ch. D. 295 ; 60 L. T. 685 ; 37 W. R. 434—C. A.

Of Payments made by Strangers.]—See post, col. 1054.

Liability of Agent for Acts ratified by Principal.]—A., a naval commander, stationed on the coast of Africa, with instructions to suppress the slave trade, was requested by the governor of Sierra Leone to obtain the liberation of two British subjects, detained as slaves at the Gallinas by the son of the king of that country, and in effecting that object to use force, if necessary. He accordingly proceeded to the Gallinas with an armed force, and, having landed at Dombocorro, took military possession of a barracoon belonging to B., who was a Spaniard, carrying on the slave trade at the Gallinas. He then communicated with the king of the country, and the two British subjects having been released, A. concluded a treaty for the abolition of the slave trade in that country. In execution of this treaty he fired the barracoons of B., and carried away his slaves to Sierra Leone, where they were liberated. Some of B.'s goods used in the slave trade were claimed by the king as forfeited, and delivered up to him ; other goods were destroyed. These proceedings having been communicated to the lords of the admiralty, and the secretaries of state for the foreign and colonial departments, they respectively, by letter, adopted and ratified the act of A. :—Held, that the ratification of his act by the ministers of state was equivalent to a prior command, and rendered it an act of state, for which the crown was alone responsible. Buron v. Denman, 2 Ex. 167.

Liability of Principal for Wrongful Distress—Notice of Facts.]—A landlord authorised bailiffs to distrain for rent due to him from his tenant of a farm, directing them not to take anything except on the demised premises. The bailiffs distrained cattle of another person (supposing them to be the tenant's) beyond the boundary of the farm ; the cattle were sold, and the landlord received the proceeds :—Held, that the landlord was not liable for the value of the cattle, unless he ratified the act of the bailiffs with knowledge of the irregularity, or that he chose, without inquiry, to take the risk upon himself, and to adopt the whole of their acts. Lewis v. Read, 13 M. & W. 834 ; 14 L. J., Ex. 295.

A landlord is not liable for the tortious act of a broker in seizing what his warrant does not authorise him to seize, unless he ratifies the broker's act, with knowledge of what he has done, but he is responsible for any irregularity by the broker in dealing with the distress he was authorised to make, as for selling the goods without notice of the distress, and without appraisement. Haseler v. Lemoyne, 5 C. B. (N.S.) 530 ; 28 L. J., C. P. 103 ; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 1279 ; 7 W. R. 14.

Conversion.]—If a principal ratifies the purchase by his agent of a chattel which the vendor had no right to sell, he is guilty of a conversion, although at the time of the ratification he had no knowledge that the sale was unlawful. Hilbery v. Hatton, 2 H. & C. 822 ; 33 L. J., Ex. 190 ; 10 L. T. 39.

Evidence of.]—A., being the owner of a house, No. 17, employed B. to sell it. The plaintiff viewed No. 7 with a card obtained from B., and paid B. money, and received from him a receipt for it as and for a deposit on the purchase of No. 7, but, under a misapprehension, signed an agreement drawn up by B. for the purchase of No. 17 ; and then finding that under it he would acquire, not No. 7, but No. 17, applied to B. for repayment of his deposit, which A. authorised B. to make :—Held, that there was evidence of a ratification by A. of B.'s authority. Benham v. Batty, 12 L. T. 266 ; 13 W. R. 636.

An agent employed to buy goods, to be paid for at a future day, paid for them out of his own money, for the purpose of obtaining the discount allowed by the seller. The principal, with knowledge of these facts, directed the agent to clear the goods at the custom-house, which, in the ordinary course of business, would be done after payment of the price by the agent for his principal :—Held, a ratification or an adoption of the previous payment of the price, and that the agent might sue the principal for the price as money paid to his use at his request. Sentance v. Hawley, 13 C. B. (N.S.) 458 ; 7 L. T. 745 ; 11 W. R. 311.

The defendant employed R., as his agent, to agree with the plaintiff for the purchase of the plaintiff's interest in a leasehold house ; the plaintiff also held a stable under a demise distinct from that under which he held the house. The defendant did not authorise R. to purchase the stable, and R. represented to the defendant that he had purchased the lease of the house only ; but, in fact, R. had taken from the plaintiff an agreement in writing for the purchase of both. Afterwards, on the plaintiff stating to the defendant that such was the agreement, and requiring the defendant to take the stable, the defendant wrote and signed a letter to the plaintiff, stating that the defendant did not know what R. had agreed to, but must support him in all he had done for the defendant :—Held, that this was a ratification of R.'s agreement, whatever it might be, sufficient to constitute with it a signed memorandum, under s. 4 of the Statute of Frauds (29 Car. 2, c. 3), to charge the defendant with a contract to take the stable. Per Lord Campbell, C.J., Wightman and Erle, JJ., Crompton, J., not concurring. Fitzmaurice v. Bayley, 6 El. & Bl. 868 ; 26 L. J., Q. B. 114 ; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 264. Reversed on another ground in Ex. Ch., 8 El. & Bl. 664 ; 27 L. J., Q. B. 143 ; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 506 : the latter decision affirmed, 9 H. L. Cas. 78 ; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1215 ; 8 W. R. 750.

A., who received the rents, and generally managed the property of B., in B.'s name, but without authority from her, signed a warrant to distrain the goods of C., a tenant, for rent in arrear, and after the goods had been distrained, informed B. thereof, who thereupon said that she should leave the matter in his hands :—Held, sufficient evidence that the distress was authorised or ratified and adopted by B. Haseler v. Lemoyne, 5 C. B. (N.S.) 530 ; 28 L. J., C. P. 103 ; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 1279 ; 7 W. R. 14.

An agent to receive rents and manage property having, without actual authority, agreed that his employer should take the stock of an outgoing tenant, at a valuation, and the valuation including the eatage of the fields in which the employer's cattle were afterwards placed by his servants, with his knowledge :—Held, a ratification of the whole valuation. Rodwell v. Eden, 1 F. & F. 542.

The plaintiffs, through D. & Co., who were brokers, sold 682 bags of linseed, at a certain price per quarter, to H., and H. afterwards, through the same brokers, sold the linseed, at an increased price, to the defendant. The time for the defendant's payment of the purchase money was to arrive before the time fixed for H.'s payment. The defendant being in want of the linseed, to complete a contract he had made, sent one of his clerks to D. & Co., for the delivery order, with instructions to follow up the matter and get the order. The clerk was taken by D. & Co. to the plaintiffs, from whom he obtained the order only on his promising that the defendant would pay the plaintiffs for the seed, as the plaintiffs required to be paid before they parted with the order. On the following day the defendant sent a cheque to D. & Co. for 900*l.* on account of the linseed, which had not been measured at that time, so that the precise quantity of it was not then known. Upon its being measured, it was found that the plaintiffs were entitled, under their contract with H., to receive 971*l.* 15*s.* 6*d.* In an action by them against the defendant, to recover the difference between this amount and 900*l.*, the amount of the cheque:—Held, that there was no evidence to warrant a jury in finding a ratification by the defendant of the contract which the clerk had so made, it not being proved that the clerk had communicated to the defendant what had passed between him and the plaintiffs when he obtained the order. Fitzgerald v. Dressler, 7 C. B. (N.S.) 374; 29 L. J., C. P. 113; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 598.

By agreement made between J. S. and T. J. S. of the one part, and the plaintiff of the other part, J. S. and T. J. S. (father and son), as mortgagees with power of sale, agreed to sell to the plaintiff all their estate and interest in a piece of land adjoining other land of the plaintiff. This agreement was signed by the plaintiff, and by T. J. S. for himself and his father. The father and son, subsequently to the date of this agreement, sold the property to B., with notice of the agreement. Upon a bill filed by the plaintiff for specific performance:—Held (affirming 3 Sm. & G. 592; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 108; 6 W. R. 173), that, although the evidence was insufficient to show any antecedent authority in the son to bind the father, yet the latter had, by his subsequent conduct, ratified the contract. Bigg v. Strong, 4 Jur. (N.S.) 983; 6 W. R. 536.

A mortgagor, tenant for life, and a mortgagee having a charge on his interest, and also on the reversion, join in the appointment of receiver, who was to apply the rents partly in payment of other charges as well as those of the mortgagee, but chiefly in payment of the interest on his incumbrance; mortgagee dies, and then mortgagor:—Held, that receipt by executrix of the mortgagee of some payments from the receiver, after the death of the mortgagor, did not of itself constitute the receiver her agent, so as to make her responsible for his defaults, but that it was ground for inquiry, whether she had in fact adopted him as her agent. Jones v. Smith, 1 Hare, 43. Affirmed, 1 Ph. 245; 12 L. J., Ch. 381; 7 Jur. 431.

R. contracted with the assignees of Messrs. E. for the purchase of certain claims of the bankrupts against the estate of G. F. B. He represented that he acted on behalf of himself and M., who was clearly cognisant of the negotiations and contract. Several documents passed between the parties, and finally a draft of a deed was prepared, which recited that the contract was a joint purchase by R. and M. This was submitted to M., who approved of it; and at that time he was willing to adopt the contract, but subsequently, upon an alteration of circumstances, M. objected to the contract, and refused to join in the purchase:—Held, that there was no evidence that M. had entered into any agreement, or that R. acted as his agent; and that the recital of an agreement in a document intended to be executed, would not bind a party who had done nothing to recognise it, though at one time it was apparent that he was willing to execute it, and the bill was dismissed against M. with costs; but as R. admitted the plaintiff's case, a decree was made against him, without costs. Foligno v. Martin, 22 L. J., Ch. 502.

In an action to recover the difference in the market value of certain shares in a railway sold, but not delivered to the plaintiff by the defendant, the plaintiff alleged a readiness on his part to comply with the conditions of the contract, and a tender of the money to the brokers from whom he had made the purchase:—Held, that inasmuch as the defendant, in a letter to the plaintiff's attorneys, in answer to one from them informing him that a tender had been made by the plaintiff to the brokers, had not repudiated the brokers as his agents, or denied their authority to receive the money, but evinced a wish to come into certain terms, such conduct amounted to a recognition by him that the brokers were authorised, and the tender was good and valid, and consequently that a verdict found for the plaintiff should not be disturbed. Jackson v. Jacob, 3 Bing. (N.C.) 869; 5 Scott, 79; 6 L. J., C. P. 315.

A merchant, being abroad, empowers persons in this country to receive moneys, adjust claims, and do some other acts. Money being wanted by the firm here, of which he was a partner, these attorneys deposit the deeds with the Hope Insurance Co. to secure 12,000*l.*, and covenant that he shall execute the mortgage; this 12,000*l.* was also secured by the bonds of sureties in sums corresponding to the shares of the partners. The power of attorney was not a sufficient authority; but the merchant, on his return, having sent a letter to the company requesting the loan of 6,000*l.*, "to be secured on his Essex property, which you now hold, in addition to the 12,000*l.* already advanced," and professing his readiness to execute the mortgage deed:—Held, that this was a confirmation of the security. Munnings v. Bury, 1 Tam. 147.

Some of the parties having paid the amount of the sums secured by them:—Held, that they had a lien on the property. Ib.

One of these sureties being a partner, held, that the sum paid by him was subjected to the partnership accounts. Ib.

A benefit building society which had never been incorporated, and had no power to borrow money, was allowed by its bankers to make large overdrafts, and the directors of the society signed a memorandum giving the bankers a lien upon all the society's deeds, to secure all moneys which from time to time might be owing by the society to the bankers on the balance of the banking account. Annual balance sheets, showing the amounts due to the bankers, were sent to all the members of the society, and adopted at the annual meetings. The society was afterwards ordered to be wound up, and as the overdrafts were ultra vires, being a borrowing unauthorised by the rules, the official liquidator brought an action against the bankers to recover all moneys paid to them by the society :—Held, that there had been no ratification of the acts of the directors by all the members of the society, as such ratification could not be implied from merely seeing and not questioning the balance-sheet accounts which had been sent to them, and no ratification by the majority would bind the minority of the members. Blackburn District Benefit Building Society v. Brooks, 54 L. J., Ch. 1091 ; 29 Ch. D. 902 ; 53 L. T. 741—C. A.

As to ratification by company of acts of directors, see further, COMPANY.

B. AGENTS OF DIFFERENT KINDS.

General Agent — Authority of.] — When a general authority is given to an agent, this implies a right to do all subordinate acts incident to and necessary for the execution of that authority, and if notice is not given that the authority is specially limited, the principal is bound. Collen v. Gardner, 21 Beav. 540.

An agent employed generally to do an act is only authorised to do it in the usual way of business ; therefore, as stock is usually sold for money only, a principal is not bound by the acts of a broker employed by him, who sells it upon credit without a special authority, though acting bonâ fide and with a view to the benefit of the principal. Wiltshire v. Sims, 1 Camp. 258 ; 10 R. R. 673.

The appointment of a general agent for the sale of goods implies an authority to sell according to the ordinary course of trade. Howell, Ex parte, 12 L. T. 875.

A principal is bound by all the acts of his general agent ; but where he appoints an agent for a particular purpose, he is only bound to the extent of the authority given. East India Co. v. Hensley, 1 Esp. 112. And see Attwood v. Munnings, 7 B. & C. 278 ; 1 M. & Ry. 66 ; 6 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 9 ; 31 R. R. 194.

When a person permits another to act as his general agent, he is bound by a contract made by the agent, although the latter declares himself as acting by procuration, and has received special instructions, which he exceeds. Smith v. M'Guire, 3 H. & N. 554 ; 27 L. J., Ex. 465 ; 6 W. R. 726.

Distinction between a general and special agent as to their powers to bind the principal. Howard v. Braithwaite, 1 Ves. & B. 209.

A contract in writing was made by A. on behalf of B., for the sale of lands to C., and the payment of the purchase money was to be made at a future day. Before that day arrived, A., the solicitor and general agent of B., applied to C. for part of the purchase money, which application C. complied with. Afterwards C. entered into a sub-contract for sale of the purchased lands to W., and sought to have paid him by W. that part of the purchase money which he had already paid to B.'s agent and solicitor in the transaction :—Held, that the general agency of A. on behalf of B. did not justify the payment to him by C. of part of the purchase money agreed to be paid originally by C., and that C. had no claim against W., nor any lien on the lands sold, for the amount paid by him to the agent of B. on the original purchase. The distinction between a particular and general authority explained. Cotman v. Orton, 1 Cr. & P. 304 ; 10 L. J., Ch. 18.

Agents permitted under circumstances to sign petition, principals being in the country. Boldero, In re, 1 Rose, 231.

—— Evidence.] — If a merchant constitutes any one his general agent for buying and selling in the market, either through a particular broker or otherwise, then, until revoked, the agency will continue, and the principal will be bound by his acts ; and the fact that such general agency once existed would be admissible as primâ facie evidence of its continuance, and the burden would be thrown on the principal to show that it had been determined ; but unless the agency was a general continuing agency to endure until revoked, the fact that there had been a separate agency in any number of previous cases would afford no evidence of agency in any subsequent transaction, however closely it might resemble all which might have gone before. Pole v. Leask, 33 L. J., Ch. 155 ; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 829 ; 8 L. T. 645—H. L. (E.)

Where an agent in London, who had been employed by a country tradesman to purchase goods on credit, bought goods and had them directed as usual, but intercepted them and had them appropriated to his own use :—Held, that the tradesman was liable, inasmuch as the agent must be deemed his general agent. Gilman v. Robinson, 1 Car. & P. 642 ; 1 R. & M. 226 ; 28 R. R. 795. S. P., Todd v. Robinson, 1 R. & M. 217.

Special Agent — Authority of.] — A special agent, under a limited authority, cannot bind his principal by any act beyond the scope of such limited authority. Fenn v. Harrison, 3 Term Rep. 757 ; 4 Term Rep. 177.

Where the holder of a bill of exchange desired A. to get it discounted, but positively refused to indorse it, and A. delivered it to B. for the same purpose, informing him to whom it belonged ; and B., finding that he could not dispose of it without indorsing it, was prevailed upon to do so by A.'s telling him that he would indemnify him ; but the indorsee took it upon the credit of the names on the bill, without any knowledge of the real owner ; although such original owner afterwards promised to pay the bill, yet such promise cannot support an action against him by the indorsee, it being nudum pactum ; for, as A. was a special agent under a limited authority, he could not bind his principal by any act beyond the scope of such limited authority. Ib.

Where a party dealing with others through an agent intrusts the agent with a written consent on his part to do a particular act, and privately instructs him not to give the consent except upon certain conditions not specified in it, and the agent gives the consent unconditionally, the principal cannot subsequently undo the effect of the consent so given, on the ground that the agent exceeded his authority, and it is the same, if the principal signed the consent at the suggestion of his agent without examining its contents, and supposing that the conditions were virtually, if not actually, comprehended within it. Neeld v. Beaufort (Duke), 5 Jur. 1123. Affirmed, Beaufort (Duke) v. Neeld, 12 Cl. & F. 248 ; 9 Jur. 813—H. L. (E.)

Brokers.]—A person who, for brokerage and hire, negotiates and concludes bargains for stock, is a broker in point of law. Janssen v. Green, 4 Burr. 2103.

A person who hires or procures for another, persons to be employed by him in the laying out and surveying of a line of railway, is not a broker. Milford v. Hughes, 16 M. & W. 174; 16 L. J., Ex. 40; 14 Jur. 990.

Bill Brokers.]—A bill broker is not a person known to the law with certain duties, but his employment is one which depends entirely upon the course of dealing; his duties may vary in different parts of the country, and their extent is a question of fact to be determined by the usage and course of dealing in the particular place. Foster v. Pearson, 1 C. M. & R. 849; 5 Tyr. 255; 4 L. J., Ex. 120.

A bill broker, who receives a bill from a customer merely for the purpose of procuring it to be discounted, has no right to mix it with bills of other customers, and to pledge the whole mass as a security for an advance of money to himself; still less has he a right to deposit bills which are received merely for the purpose of discount as a security or part security for money previously due from him. Haynes v. Foster, 2 C. & M. 237; 4 Tyr. 65; 3 L. J., Ex. 153.

A bill broker who takes a forged bill to a money dealer to be discounted, although he does not indorse the bill, and is not cognisant of the forgery, is liable to repay the money received for the bill. Gurney v. Womersley, 4 El. & Bl. 133; 24 L. J., Q. B. 46; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 328. See also Bishop, Ex parte, Fox, In re, 50 L. J., Ch. 18; 15 Ch. D. 400; 43 L. T. 165; 29 W. R. 144—C. A.

London Brokers.]—A ship broker, or one who obtains on commission freight and passengers for vessels, is not a broker, within the statutes regulating the admission of brokers for the city of London. Gibbons v. Rule, 12 Moore, 539; 4 Bing. 301; 5 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 176; 29 R. R. 570.

But a stock broker is, and must be admitted by the lord mayor and aldermen. Clark v. Powell, 1 N. & M. 492; 4 B. & Ad. 846; 2 L. J., K. B. 145.

An auctioneer is not. Wilkes v. Ellis, 2 H. Bl. 555.

—— Need of Licence.] — By an agreement between A. and B., who was a London colonial broker, made in January, 1865, it was agreed (for certain considerations) that on 1st January, 1866, B. should take A. into partnership for fourteen years. This agreement B. refused to fulfil, upon the ground that A. had not become a colonial broker, and that by 6 Anne, c. 16, and 57 Geo. 3, c. 60, it would have been a breach of the law to have allowed A. to act as a broker, not being admitted and licensed. On demurrer to a plea setting up these facts in answer to a declaration for not taking A. into partnership:—Held, that the plea was an answer to the action. Hunter v. Wykes, 15 L. T. 210; 15 W. R. 125.

See also Cope v. Rowlands and Smith v. Lindo, post, col. 954, and cases cols. 1005, 1006.

—— Breach of Bond.]—It is not a breach of the bond to employ a person who is not a sworn broker. London Corporation v. Brandon, Holt, N. P. 438; 2 Stark. 14.

Nor if he mistakes the quantity of goods he had bought, where he derived no advantage from such misstatement, though it was the cause of considerable loss to his principal. Ib.

A broker is authorised, from a previous course of dealing between himself and his principal, on an approval of a purchase by the latter, to make out a contract note in his own name, without inserting that of his principal; and, under such circumstances, does not violate the bond and oath imposed upon him by the regulations of the city of London, provided he makes an entry in his book in the name of his principal. Kemble v. Atkins, 1 Moore, 6; 7 Taunt. 260; Holt, N. P. 427; 17 R. R. 658.

—— Liability to Discovery.]—A sworn broker of the city of London is in the nature of a public agent; and, therefore, in an action against him for negligence in making a contract, the court will compel him to produce his books for the purpose of enabling the plaintiff to inspect them and take a copy of the contract. Browning v. Aylwin, 9 D. & R. 801; 7 B. & C. 204.

In one case it was held that a London broker might refuse to allow his employer to inspect his contract book, and it is no breach of his bond, if he at the same time adds it shall be produced at the proper time, and does produce it afterwards before a court of aldermen. London Corporation v. Brandon, Holt, 438; 2 Stark. 14.

A person who holds himself out as a broker of the city of London, and is employed by a person who believes him to be such, cannot, when sued by his principal for an account of his transactions as such broker on the principal's behalf, protect himself from discovery, in a suit in equity, on the ground that it may render him liable to penalties for having acted as a broker without having been duly admitted as such, imposed by 57 Geo. 3, c. lx. Robinson v. Kitchin, 8 De G. M. & G. 88; 25 L. J., Ch. 441; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 294; 4 W. R. 344—L.JJ.

A broker in the city of London must answer a bill of discovery in aid of an action brought against him by his employer for misconduct, although the discovery will subject him to the penalty of a bond given by him to the corporation on his admission. Green v. Weaver, 1 Sim. 404; 6 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 1; 27 R. R. 214.

A stock broker is bound to produce his book, though it may criminate himself; because by 7 Geo. 2, c. 8, s. 9, every broker must keep a book and enter therein all purchases and sales made by him. Rawlings v. Hall, 1 Car. & P. 13.

—— Priority of Creditors.]—A stock and share broker of the city of London gave a bond to the corporation for due performance of his office. He appropriated to his own use large sums of money intrusted to him for investment. After his decease, upon a claim filed by a simple contract creditor:—Held, that the defrauded creditors had no priority by virtue of the bond, and that the amount due upon such bond was equitable assets for the benefit of all the creditors. Naish v. Bryant, 25 Beav. 533; 27 L. J., Ch. 748; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 550; 6 W. R. 573.

—— Evidence of Acting as.]—A witness stated that he took S. to an office in the city of London used by the defendant, and that upon that occasion four memoranda were made by the defendant, each of the sale by S. of 1,000*l.* stock to a person whose name did not transpire; that nothing was handed over at the time, and that he did not see any money pass:—Held, evidence of an acting by the defendant as a broker, within 6 Anne, c. 16 and 57 Geo. 3, c. lx. Scott v. North, L. R. 2 C. P. 270; 15 L. T. 508.

By 57 Geo. 3, c. lx. s. 2, it is provided, that anyone acting as a broker within the city of London without a licence shall be subject to a penalty of 100*l.* A. was an officer of a company formed for the purpose of carrying on the business of stock-broking, and in the course of business bought some stock for a customer, and signed the bought and sold notes, the principals not seeing one another, and no one else acting as broker in the transaction. A. had no licence to act as broker:—Held, that he was liable to the penalty. Scott v. Cousins, 38 L. J., C. P. 156; L. R. 4 C. P. 179; 20 L. T. 32; 17 W. R. 324.

The dealing in, or buying and selling for reward of, shares in English or foreign joint stock banks or companies, or the debts, stocks or securities of foreign governments, is an acting and assuming to act as broker, within 57 Geo. 3, c. lx. Scott v. Jackson, 19 C. B. (N.S.) 134.

Difference between Broker and Factor.]—The character of broker differs materially from that of factor; the former is not trusted with the possession of the goods, nor ought he to sell in his own name; but the latter, from its being usual for him to make advances upon the goods, has a special property in, as well as a general lien upon them; and may sell in his own name; and his principal will be bound by all the consequences of such sale, of which the right of setting off a debt due from the factor is one. Baring v. Corrie, 2 B. & Ald. 137; 20 R. R. 383.

Factor—Supercargo.]—If a supercargo is not to sell, nor receive a commission for the sale, he has not the proper distinguishing feature of a factor. Matchless, 1 Hag. 101.

Del credere Agents.]—A commission del credere is an absolute engagement to the principal from a broker, and makes him liable in the first instance, though the principal may resort to the person trusted as a collateral security. Grove v. Dubois, 1 Term Rep. 112; 16 R. R. 664, n. See Bize v. Dickason, 1 Term Rep. 285. See 4 R. R. 8.

An agreement by a factor to sell upon a del credere commission need not be in writing, not being a promise to answer for the debt, default, or miscarriage of another person, within the 4th section of the Statute of Frauds. Couturier v. Hastie, 8 Ex. 40; 22 L. J., Ex. 97. S. P., Wickham v. Wickham, 2 Kay & J. 478.

—— Evidence of.]—An agent who received annuities for his principal, sent him several accounts, in which he gave credit for instalments of annuities, but which he stated he had not yet received. He charged commission on them, as well as on the others which were received, and told his principal he might draw for the balance, which he did. In subsequent accounts no notice was taken of the instalments, which, in a previous account, were stated to be unpaid:—Held, sufficient evidence for a jury to infer a del credere commission, creating an agreement for the agent to be responsible to his principal for the annuities. Shaw v. Woodcock, 7 B. & C. 73; 9 D. & R. 889; 5 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 294; 31 R. R. 158.

C. DURATION OF AGENCY.

1. RETAINER FOR FIXED PERIOD.

No implied Condition that Business shall continue.]—When two parties mutually agree, for a fixed period, the one to employ the other as his sole agent in a certain business, at a certain place, the other that he will act in that business for no other principal at that place, there is no implied condition that the business itself shall continue to be carried on during the period named. Rhodes v. Forwood, 47 L. J., Ex. 396; 1 App. Cas. 256; 34 L. T. 890; 24 W. R. 1078.

A. and B. agreed "in consideration of the services and payments to be mutually rendered," that for seven years, or as long as A. should continue to carry on business at the town of Liverpool, A. should be the sole agent there for the sale of B.'s coals, and that B. would not employ any other agent there for that purpose. There were stipulations in the agreement that B. should have the entire control over the prices for which, and the credits at which, the coals were to be sold; and that if A. could not sell a certain amount per year, or B. could not supply a certain amount per year, either party might, on notice, put an end to the agreement. At the end of four years, B. sold the colliery itself. In an action by A. for damages for breach of the agreement thereby occasioned:—Held, that the action was not maintainable; for that the agreement did not bind the colliery owner to keep his colliery, or to do more than employ the agent in the sale of such coals as he sent to Liverpool. Ib.

A declaration stated that, by agreement in writing between B., since deceased, and the defendant, of the one part, and the plaintiff of the other part, B. and the defendant, who at the date of the agreement were carrying on business as stone merchants in co-partnership, appointed the plaintiff their sole London agent, for a period of four years and a half, and the plaintiff, in consideration of the premises, agreed to accept the appointment upon the terms that B. and the defendant should pay the plaintiff 2*l.* 10*s.* per cent. on all accounts received by them for stone sold by the plaintiff, or supplied by B. and the defendant to any person originally introduced to them by the plaintiff. Breach, that the defendant did not nor would employ the plaintiff as his sole agent for the whole period of four years and a half, and did not nor would execute certain orders for stone procured by the plaintiff in his capacity of agent:—Held, that the parties contracted with reference to the existing partnership business, and that the contract was to employ the plaintiff for a period of four years and a half, subject to the implied condition that all parties so long lived. Tasker v. Shepherd, 6 H. & N. 575; 30 L. J., Ex. 207; 4 L. T. 19; 9 W. R. 476.

Auctioneer's Authority.]—Where an auctioneer filled up a memorandum on behalf of the purchaser, not at the sale, but several days afterwards, it was held that his authority had ceased, and that there was no memorandum in writing sufficient to satisfy the statute of frauds. Bell v. Balls, 66 L. J., Ch. 397; [1897] 1 Ch. 663; 76 L. T. 254; 45 W. R. 378.

2. DEATH OR BANKRUPTCY.

Death of Principal.]—A retainer under a contract to endeavour to sell goods on behalf of the owner, on the terms of receiving a stipulated sum in the event of the sale, but nothing, in the case of failure, is revocable by the employer before sale, even after endeavours have been made, and is revoked in law by his death after such endeavours; so that even if his personal representative confirms the sale under such contract, he will not (unless he knows of, and confirms the terms of the contract) be liable to pay the stipulated sum. Campanari v. Woodburn, 15 C. B. 400; 3 C. L. R. 140; 24 L. J., C. P. 13; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 17; 3 W. R. 59.

Bankruptcy of Principal.]—In 1828 the plaintiff mortgaged freehold property to B., and in 1832, being about to reside abroad, he gave a full power of attorney to the defendant, who was a solicitor, to receive the rents and profits of all his property, and to apply them in payment of the incumbrances. In 1841 the plaintiff settled accounts with the defendant, showing a large balance due to the defendant, which the plaintiff agreed to secure by a mortgage of his real estates when required. In 1845 the plaintiff became bankrupt, but his assignee did not interfere with the mortgaged property, and the defendant continued to receive the rents and profits. In 1849 the defendant took a transfer himself of B.'s mortgage, to which the plaintiff was not a party. In 1865 the defendant wrote a letter to the plaintiff expressing his readiness to settle all accounts. In 1877 the plaintiff's bankruptcy was annulled, and the plaintiff brought an action against the defendant claiming to redeem the mortgage, and claiming an account against him as mortgagee in possession, and, by amendment, as agent and trustee for him. The defendant pleaded the statute of limitations:—Held, that on the plaintiff's bankruptcy the defendant ceased to be the agent and attorney of the plaintiff, and did not become the agent of the assignee. Markwick v. Hardingham, 15 Ch. D. 339; 43 L. T. 647; 29 W. R. 361—C. A.

Where authority had been given previous to an act of bankruptcy by the bankrupts to the defendant in the course of mutual dealings to receive the purchase money of their estate, and to place it to their account, and such authority had been acted upon before notice of an act of bankruptcy:—Held, that such authority was not revoked by the act of bankruptcy; that the payment thereof to the defendant was a rightful payment; that being so received it became a debt and an item in the account between him and the bankrupts before notice of any act of bankruptcy, and that the defendant was entitled to set off against it, in an action brought by the trustee in bankruptcy, the debt due from the bankrupts to him. Elliott v. Turquand, 51 L. J., P. C. 1; L. R. 7 App. Cas. 79; 45 L. T. 771; 30 W. R. 477.

Winding-up of Company—Proof in.]—An agent who has been engaged by a company for a fixed term, and who is to receive a commission on all orders obtained through him, as remuneration for his services, is entitled upon the determination of the agreement by the winding-up of the company, to claim compensation in respect of the commission which he might otherwise have earned during the unexpired portion of the term. Patent Floor Cloth Co., In re, Dean and Gilbert's Claim, 41 L. J., Ch. 476; 26 L. T. 467.

By articles of association of a company it was provided that, in case of the dismissal of the manager, he should be paid the full amount of money paid upon his shares. A resolution was passed to wind up the company, and he was appointed liquidator. He had paid 2,000*l.* on his shares, and received 400*l.* for remuneration as liquidator:—Held, that the winding-up was equivalent to his dismissal, and that he was entitled to prove in the winding-up for 2,000*l.*, subject to a set-off of the 400*l.* Imperial Wine Co., In re, Shirreff's Case, 42 L. J., Ch. 5; L. R. 14 Eq. 417; 20 W. R. 966.

A person entered into an agreement with an insurance company to act as their agent for five years, and to transact no business except for the company, in consideration of which he was to receive a fixed salary and also a commission of 10*l.* per cent. on all business transacted. Before the five years were expired, the company was wound up voluntarily:—Held, that the agent was not entitled to prove against the company for the loss of his commission during the remainder of the term of five years. English and Scottish Marine Insurance Co., In re, Maclure, Ex parte, 39 L. J., Ch. 685; L. R. 5 Ch. 737; 23 L. T. 685; 18 W. R. 1122.

By the articles of association of a company a manager was appointed; and it was provided that if he should at any time be deprived of or removed from his office for any other cause than gross misconduct the directors should pay to him a certain sum within one month from the time of his removal. The company was ordered to be wound up:—Held, that he was entitled to prove in the winding-up for the sum specified by the articles without any such deduction being made. London and Scottish Bank, In re, Logan, Ex parte, L. R. 9 Eq. 149; 21 L. T. 742; 18 W. R. 273.

3. Revocation.

When Possible.]—Mere advances made by a factor, whether at the time employed as such or subsequently, cannot have the effect of altering the revocable nature of an authority to sell, unless the advances are accompanied by an agreement that the authority shall not be revocable. De Comas v. Prost, 2 Moore, P. C. (N.S.) 158; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 417; 12 L. T. 682; 13 W. R. 595.

Whether such an agreement has been made or may be properly inferred, is a question upon the evidence for the jury. Ib.

A factor to whom goods have been consigned generally for sale, and who has subsequently made advances to his principal on the credit of the goods, has no right to sell them contrary to the orders of his principal, on the latter neglecting on request to repay the advances, inasmuch as his authority to sell does not become by reason of the unpaid advances irrevocable, as an authority coupled with an interest. Smart v. Sanders, 5 C. B. 895; 17 L. J., C. P. 258; 12 Jur. 751.

The mere fact of an agent being bound in honour to complete the contract which he is negotiating for his principal, where he, the agent, is under no legal liability if he refuses to complete, does not prevent the principal withdrawing his authority any time before the agreement is completed. The Vindobala, 58 L. J., P. 51; 14 P. D. 50; 60 L. T. 657; 37 W. R. 409; 6 Asp. M. C. 376—C. A.

A declaration stated that defendant was a commission agent, and that the bankrupts before their bankruptcy delivered to him certain goods, which were not to be sold at less than their invoice prices. That at the time of the bankruptcy a large quantity of these goods remained in defendant's hands unsold. That plaintiffs, being assignees of the bankrupts, directed the defendant not to sell at less than invoice prices until he had rendered an account to them of the goods, and plaintiffs had been enabled to judge, and had determined, and given defendant notice, whether they would redeem the goods without sale or not. Breach, that defendant, after the bankruptcy, and after he had rendered an account of the goods, sold them at less than the invoice prices, although defendant, after account rendered, and before sale, was required by plaintiffs and they gave him notice to send the goods to England, and that they would redeem them without sale. Defendant pleaded that after the bankrupts had caused the goods to be delivered to him, and before, and at, and after the bankruptcy, and whilst the goods remained unsold in his hands, the defendant, for advances made before the bankruptcy, had a lien upon the goods. That the bankrupts before the bankruptcy, and after delivery of the goods, in consideration of the advances by the defendant agreed with the defendant, that he should sell the goods at the best market prices, and realise thereon against his said advances. That the defendant, relying upon the authority to him to sell and realise against his said advances, permitted his advances to remain unpaid for a long time, to wit, until, and at, and after the bankruptcy. That after the bankruptcy, and after defendant had rendered an account of the goods, and whilst they were unsold, the plaintiffs did not offer to pay defendant his advances or lien, or to redeem the goods before defendant should part with them. That defendant, for the purpose of realising against his said advances, the goods being deteriorated and the market getting worse, after he was required to send the goods to London to be redeemed, sold them; and that after credit given for the price of the goods, the plaintiffs, as assignees, were indebted to defendant in a large sum for the advances made by him:—Held, first, that the breach which varied from the statement of the duty, by alleging that plaintiffs gave defendant notice to send the goods to England, did not render the count bad; secondly, that the plea was bad, as there was no consideration which precluded the bankrupts from countermanding their authority to the defendant to sell, and that the assignees had the same power. Raleigh v. Atkinson, 6 M. & W. 670; 9 L. J., Ex. 206.

Agreement to take Shares — Underwriting Contract—Authority to use Name.]—Where an agreement is entered into on a sufficient consideration whereby an authority is given which secures some benefit to the donee of the authority, such an authority being coupled with an interest, is irrevocable. Hannan's Empress Gold-mining and Development Co., In re, Carmichael, Ex parte, 65 L. J., Ch. 902; [1896] 2 Ch. 643; 75 L. T. 45—C. A.

In consideration of an agreed commission, the applicant entered into an underwriting contract to subscribe for a certain number of shares in a company, and agreed that the contract should be irrevocable, and by the same document authorised the person with whom he contracted to apply for shares in his name. The donee of the authority was a vendor of certain property to the company, and one of the objects of the contract was to provide funds for the purchase of the property. The applicant purported to revoke the authority previously to the allotment of shares:—Held, that the authority was irrevocable, and that the applicant was not entitled to have his name removed from the register of members of the company in respect of shares allotted to him in pursuance of an application made in his name by the donee of the authority. Ib.

Of Auctioneer's Authority.]—Quære, whether on a sale by auction under ordinary circumstances a person to whom a lot has been knocked down can revoke the authority conferred by him on the auctioneer to sign a memorandum on his behalf at the time. Bell v. Balls, 66 L. J., Ch. 397; [1897] 1 Ch. 663; 76 L. T. 254; 45 W. R. 378.

Auctioneers advanced a sum of money to S., who agreed to put a miscellaneous collection of property in their hands for sale, from the proceeds of which they were to retain the money advanced. A part only of the property was delivered and sold, but it realised less than the sum advanced; S. refused to part with the remainder of his collection:—Held, that the court would not compel the performance of the contract for an agency; that S., if he satisfied the claims of his agents, was at liberty to countermand the sale of his property, that the advance of the money to S. was not made on the security of the property mentioned in the contract, and that the claims of the agents must be determined in a court of law. Chinnock v. Sainsbury, 30 L. J., Ch. 409; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1318; 3 L. T. 258; 9 W. R. 7.

When restrained by Court.]—A grant was made by Y., bishop of Ely, in 1801, to P. for his life of the ancient office of receiver of the rents of the lands belonging to the see of Ely. For a long series of years the receiver for the time being had not only received the rents, but had prepared leases, surrenders and counterparts of leases, had registered leases and assignments of leases in a register kept by the bishop, and had made searches in the muniment room in the residence of the bishop whenever requested by persons requiring information contained in the register and records belonging to the bishop, for all which duties he received fees. In 1836, A., immediately after his appointment as bishop, sent a notice to P. not to prepare any more leases, surrenders, or counterparts of leases, and not to receive any more rents. P. filed a bill against A., praying that it might be declared that P. was entitled to exercise all the duties and receive the perquisites hitherto exercised and received by the receiver, and that the bishop might be restrained from interfering with such exercise and enjoyment:—Held, that whatever might be the legal right of P. to the office and to its alleged appurtenances, no relief could be given to him in equity, on the grounds of the hardship of forcing the services of a stranger in an office of trust upon the bishop and the want of mutuality; the nature of the duties and services asserted by the plaintiff being such as to preclude the possibility of a decree in this court against him compelling their specific performance. Pickering v. Ely (Bishop), 2 Y. & Coll. C. C. 249; 12 L. J., Ch. 271; 7 Jur. 479.

The duties of an agent of a limited company being in the nature of personal services, and, as such, incapable of being enforced in equity, the court refused to restrain the directors from acting upon or enforcing the resignation of A., whose management and agency were made a prominent condition in the prospectus on the formation of the company, and expressly provided for by the articles of association. Mair v. Himalaya Tea Co., L. R. 1 Eq. 411; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 1013; 14 W. R. 165.

In refusing to grant the injunction, the court put the directors upon an undertaking not to take advantage, in proceedings at law to recover the amount due on A.'s shares, of his resignation, which was alleged by him to have been wholly conditional on his being relieved from all liability in respect of shares. Ib.

Removal of Agent by Court.]—An agent imposed by will upon the devisee of an estate may be removed by this court if he conduct himself improperly. Lawless v. Shaw, Ll. & G. t. Sugd. 172.

Service of Crown.]—Semble, a contract of service with the crown for a fixed term of years is determinable at the pleasure of the crown. De Dohse v. Reg., 66 L. J., Q. B. 422, n.—H. L. (E.)

D. RIGHTS AND LIABILITIES OF PRINCIPAL AND AGENT.

1. Duty of Agent Generally.

Amongst the most important duties of an agent are those which require him to give to his principal the free and unbiassed use of his own discretion and judgment, to keep and render just and true accounts, and to keep the property of his principal unmixed with his own or the property of others. Clarke v. Tipping, 9 Beav. 384.

An agent cannot employ himself for a third person when he has agreed to give up the whole of his personal services to his principal. Thompson v. Havelock, 1 Camp. 527; 10 R. R. 744.

A traveller, about to set up in business on his own account, may solicit orders from his master's customers, provided the orders he takes at the time are for his master. Nichol v. Martyn, 2 Esp. 732; 5 R. R. 770.

Where an agent is authorised, from a previous course of dealing between himself and his principal, to do so, he may, on an approval of a purchase by the latter, make out a contract note in his own name, without inserting that of his principal, provided he makes an entry in his book in the name of his principal. Kemble v. Atkins, 1 Moore, 6; 7 Taunt. 260; Holt, N. P. 427; 17 R. R. 658.

The mere relation of principal and factor confers ordinarily an authority to sell at such times and at such prices as the factor may, in the exercise of his discretion, think best for his employer; but if he receives the goods subject to any special instructions, he is bound to obey them. Smart v. Sanders, 3 C. B. 380; 16 L. J., C. P. 39; 10 Jur. 841.

The court deals severely with any irregularities on the part of an agent, and requires him to act strictly in all matters relating to such agency, for the benefit of his principal. Gray v. Haig, 20 Beav. 219.

It is imperative upon an agent to preserve correct accounts of all his dealings and transactions; and the loss, and, still more, the destruction of such evidence by the agent, falls most heavily upon himself. Ib.

If an agent, by his own conduct, makes it impossible to ascertain the amount of profit realised, he will be disallowed the commission, which otherwise and according to the contract, he would be entitled to claim. Ib.

An agent is bound to act in the best manner he can for his principal, and in matters which are left to an agent's discretion he can only act for the benefit of his principal. Pariente v. Lubbock, 20 Beav. 588; 8 De G. M. & G. 5.

A foreign merchant directed his correspondent in England to treat any consignment as his son's (who was in England and superintended the sales and purchases), and to acknowledge him owner of the money, so that he might dispose thereof as if it was his own money. By the direction of the son, moneys in the hands of the correspondent, belonging to the father, were applied by him in paying a private debt of the son to the correspondent:—Held, that the transaction was valid. Ib.

Duty to Recognise Principal's Superior—Government Agent.] — An agent who had received his instructions from a local subordinate government is bound to recognise the authority of the supreme government, with respect to which his immediate principal is subordinate, in the subject-matter of the agency. Spain (Queen) v. Parr, 39 L. J., Ch. 73; 21 L. T. 555; 18 W. R. 110.

The London agent, who was also a member of a firm, who was commissioned to sell goods on behalf of the local government of a Spanish colony, was held to be justified in refusing to give them up to the Spanish consul-general in England till he had communicated, through his immediate principals, with the local government. Ib.

2. Delegation of Authority.

A broker cannot, without the assent of his principal, delegate his authority. Henderson v. Barnewell, 1 Y. & J. 387; 30 R. R. 799.

A., employed by the defendant to transport goods to a foreign market, delegated the entire employment to the plaintiff, who performed it without the privity of the defendant:—Held, that there was no privity between them, and therefore, that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover his charges, or those of his agents, from the defendant, although the latter had not paid the amount to A. Schmaling v. Tomlinson, 1 Marsh. 500; 6 Taunt. 147.

A factor has no right to send away goods to another person, when they have been consigned to him for sale at a particular place, though he is unable to sell them there. Catlin v. Bell, 4 Camp. 183.

A factor, who was a partner in a house abroad, to whom goods were consigned, made advances to the consignor, to be repaid out of the proceeds:—Held, that the consignees were not authorised to purchase bills for the account and risk of the consignor. Lucas v. Groning, 7 Taunt. 164; 2 Marsh. 460; 1 Stark. 391.

An agent employing a sub-agent, though with the knowledge of the principal, is nevertheless liable to the principal for moneys received by the sub-agent. Skinner v. Weguelin, 1 Cab. & E. 12.

By Statute—To Committee of Board.]—Where a board, constituted by act of parliament, are by it authorised to delegate any of their powers to a committee, the powers so conferred upon the committee must be exercised by them acting in concert, and it is not competent to the committee to apportion among themselves the duties so delegated to them; and one of them acting alone pursuant to such apportionment, cannot justify his acts under the statute. Cook v. Ward, 2 C. P. D. 255.

Implied Right of.]—When the power given by one party to another by an instrument in writing is of such a nature as to require its execution by a deputy, by the law in force in Lower Canada, the party originally authorised as the agent may appoint a deputy. Quebec and Richmond Ry. v. Quinn, 12 Moore, P. C. 232.

Employment of Clerk.]—An authority given to A. to draw bill in the name of B. may be exercised by the clerk of A. Sutton, Ex parte, 2 Cox, 84.

Vendor is bound by signature of agent's clerk thus: "Witness, E. P., for Mr. S., agent for the seller," upon evidence of assent; but clerks in general have no authority to bind the principal. Coles v. Trecothick, 9 Ves. 234; 1 Smith, 233; 7 R. R. 167.

A., tenant for life, with a power to lease by deed, duly executed under her hand and seal, reserving the best yearly rent. Plaintiff enters into possession, and expends money in building, under an agreement for a lease evidenced only by the memorandum in writing entered in the book of A.'s authorised agent, signed not by the agent himself, but by his clerk, although in evidence to have been approved by him, and according to the usual course of business. A. dies, and on a bill for specific performance against the remainderman:—Held, first, no sufficient agreement in writing: second, the plaintiff not entitled to compensation from A.'s representatives for money laid out by him on the faith of the alleged agreement. Blore v. Sutton, 3 Mer. 237; 17 R. R. 74.

Though an agent cannot delegate his authority, yet there are many acts which he must necessarily do through the agency of other persons, and which are valid when so done. Rossiter v. Trafalgar Life Assurance Association, 27 Beav. 377.

Memorandum Filled in by Auctioneer's Clerk.]—On a sale by auction the auctioneer's clerk cannot in the absence of special authority from the purchaser fill up a memorandum on behalf of the purchaser so as to bind him, and the exigencies of the case do not require that the auctioneer should be held entitled to delegate to his clerk the authority which he himself has to bind the purchaser by writing down his name on a copy of the particulars and conditions of sale. Bell v. Balls, 66 L. J., Ch. 397; [1897] 1 Ch. 663; 76 L. T. 254; 45 W. R. 378.

3. Right of Agent to Commission and Remuneration.

a. Generally.

Conclusion of Bargain.]—In general, where a binding bargain has been procured by a commission agent and accepted by the party employing him to procure orders, the agent is entitled to his commission. Lockwood v. Levick, 8 C. B. (N.S.) 603; 29 L. J., C. P. 340; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 102; 2 L. T. 357; 8 W. R. 583.

Where such agent bargains with his employer to receive a commission "on all goods bought" by persons, orders from whom are obtained by him, and an order so obtained is accepted by the employer, who, however, is not able to execute the order, and derives no benefit from it, he is, nevertheless, liable for the commission. Ib.

Appointment as Sole Agent—Principal cannot effect Sales in Agent's District.]—The plaintiff was appointed sole agent for the defendants in a certain district at a fixed scale of commission and subject to certain restrictions as to discount, &c., to be offered by him, but was unable to transact any business owing to the defendants interfering in his district, behind his back, and underselling him. In an action to recover commission on all sales effected by the defendants in the plaintiff's district since his appointment:—Held, that the defendants were not entitled to appoint any other agent in the district, nor were they entitled to effect any sales in the district, except through the plaintiff's agency. Snelgrove v. Ellringham Colliery Co., 45 J. P. 408.

Orders sent after Termination of Service.]—On a contract to pay a traveller commission without any express terms, there is no obligation to pay it on orders from customers originally obtained by the agent, but sent after he has ceased to be so. Nayler v. Yearsley, 2 F. & F. 41.

A contract of agency provided that the agent was to be paid a commission for work done or supplied in Ireland from the date of the contract at 6¼ per cent. on amount of orders; that the contract should be terminable on notice—neither party to be entitled to compensation, but the agent to receive (on the termination of the contract) such commission as should have been earned, and should be or become payable:—Held, that, on the terms of the agency contract, the plaintiff (the agent) was not entitled to be paid commission in respect of work, the order for which was obtained by his negotiation, but which was not done until after the agency had been determined. Hilton v. Helliwell, [1894] 2 Ir. R. 94.

Fulfilment of Contract.]—A. entered into a contract with B. to proceed to the coast of Africa, and there procure and ship, for B. in England, palm oil and other produce; A. to receive as a remuneration for his services a commission of 6*l.* per cent. on the net proceeds of the dry merchantable palm oil received by B.; the agreement further provided that A. should not be entitled to any commission on "any wet, dirty or unmerchantable palm oil" that might be received:—Held, that A. was entitled to no commission in respect of palm oil which was, in the understanding of the trade, "wet" oil, though such wetness did not render the oil unmerchantable, but was compensated for by an allowance to the purchasers of from 1½ to 2 per cent. on the price. Warde v. Stuart, 1 C. B. (N.S.) 88; 5 W. R. 6.

By an agreement between A. and B. it was stipulated that A. should for a term receive half the profits arising from the sales of an article called Russian black, manufactured by him from the produce of certain quarries of B.:—Held, that A. was not entitled to claim anything in respect of Russian black not sold as such, but used by B., in the proportion of about one-third, mixed with cement manufactured and sold by him. Fullwood v. Akerman, 11 C. B. (N.S.) 737.

Revocation.]—The defendant employed the plaintiff to negotiate a loan on some of the defendant's property, the plaintiff to be paid commission if he procured the loan, but none if he did not. Before the plaintiff had done anything in the matter, the defendant wrote to him, varying the terms on which he would accept the loan. The plaintiff endeavoured to obtain it on the latter terms, but, failing to do so, obtained an offer for a loan on the terms of the first authority, which the defendant refused to accept:—Held, that, as the first authority had been revoked, the plaintiff was not entitled to a commission for what he had done, neither was he entitled to claim for his services in endeavouring to procure the loan under the substituted terms, inasmuch as he did not obtain it under those terms. Toppin v. Healey, 11 W. R. 466.

Held, also, that the plaintiff might have treated the revocation of the first terms of his employment as a breach of contract, and have had an action thereon against the defendant. Ib.

Fraudulent Agreement for.]—The European society, through their paid and confidential agent, C., negotiated with the Etna company, through their paid and confidential agent, O., a transfer by the latter of a branch of their business to the former for 15,000*l.*; C. claimed from the Etna company, as a commission or a bonus for his services in the transaction, 2,000*l.*, which the latter having refused, he contrived that the purchase money to be paid by his employers should be increased to 17,000*l.*, out of which the Etna company secretly agreed to pay him the 2,000*l.* On the winding up of the affairs of the Etna company, O.—alleging that there was an agreement between C. and him that he should get half the commission or bonus—made a claim of 1,000*l.* against the latter company:—Held, that such a claim could not be allowed. Etna Insurance Co., In re, Owens, In re, Ir. R. 7 Eq. 235. Affirmed, Ir. R. 7 Eq. 424.

Proof of Terms.]—The fact that a party has agreed to sell goods on commission may be proved by oral evidence, though the terms as to its payment have been reduced into writing. Whitfield v. Brand, 16 M. & W. 282; 16 L. J., Ex. 103.

Right of Agent to Deduct from Moneys in his hands.]—A. employs B., as his factor, to sell; B. sells on credit, and, before the money is paid, dies indebted by specialty more than his assets will pay. This money shall be paid to A., and not to the administrator of B., as part of his assets, but thereout must be deducted what was due to B. for commission. A factor is in nature of a trustee only for his principal. Burdett v. Willett, 2 Vern. 638.

Administrator of a clothier brings an action against the factor for cloths sent by the clothier to the factor; the factor cannot in equity deduct, out of the value of the cloth, the money owing to him from the clothier. Chapman v. Derby, 2 Vern. 117.

b. Who may Recover.

Broker—Necessity for Licence.]—A broker cannot maintain an action for work and labour, and commission for buying and selling stock unless duly licensed by the mayor and aldermen of the city of London. Cope v. Rowlands, 2 M. & W. 149; 2 Gale, 231; 6 L. J., Ex. 63.

A dealer in London in shares in a public company (whether British or foreign) is a broker within 6 Anne, c. 16, and incapable of suing for his commissions unless duly licensed. Smith v. Lindo, 4 C. B. (N.S.) 395. Affirmed on appeal, 5 C. B. (N.S.) 587; 27 L. J., C. P. 335; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 974; 6 W. R. 748—Ex. Ch.

—— Where also Mortgagee.]—Where brokers are directed by the order of the court to take possession, for the purpose of selling property:—Held, that they were entitled to the ordinary remuneration, notwithstanding they happen to be mortgagees. Arnold v. Garner, 2 Ph. 231; 16 L. J., Ch. 329; 11 Jur. 339.

Managing Owner of Ship.]—The procuring of charters and freights is one of the ordinary duties incidental to the position of a managing owner of a ship; and in the absence of a special contract he is not entitled to retain, as against the ship, commissions on the charters or freights procured, whether he is acting as shipbroker himself or employing other brokers. Williamson v. Hine, 60 L. J., Ch. 123; [1891] 1 Ch. 390; 63 L. T. 682; 39 W. R. 239; 6 Asp. M. C. 559.

Executor.]—Agents, being also appointed executors of the principals, are not entitled to commission upon remittances from India by the testator, not received till after his death. Hovey v. Blakeman, 4 Ves. 596.

Co-Partners.]—In taking the accounts between three partnerships, the first of A. & B., the second of A. B. & C., the third of B. & C., the partnership of B. & C. cannot charge commission for collecting the debts of the other two partnerships. Whittle v. M'Farlane, 1 Knapp, 311.

Sub-Agent.]—If A. employs B. to procure him a loan on the usual terms, and B. employs C., who obtains it on other and different terms, A. will not be liable to C. either for commission or for remuneration, unless he ratifies these terms and recognises his employment. Mason v. Clifton, 3 F. & F. 899.

c. Who Liable for.

Debts contracted in Jamaica made payable in London. The expense of commission to agent remitting the money falls on debtor. Cash v. Kennion, 11 Ves. 314.

d. Business effected through Agent's Instrumentality.

When Agent entitled to.]—The defendants agreed with the plaintiff to remunerate him "in the event of their taking into partnership" one M., introduced by the plaintiff. The defendants afterwards entered into a written agreement with M., by which it was agreed that they should enter into partnership as and from a specified future day, when a formal deed of partnership should be executed, carrying out the terms of the agreement. This agreement recognised and adopted the agreement between the plaintiff and defendants. No partnership deed was ever executed, nor did M. ever in fact act as a partner of the defendants:—Held, that there was evidence of a "taking into partnership" within the meaning of the agreement between the plaintiff and defendants, so as to entitle the plaintiff to his commission. Harris v. Petherick, 39 L. T. 543.

K. promised R. 2½ per cent. commission if he would find a purchaser of his land at 3,000*l*. R. introduced to K. a person who took a lease for 1,000 years at 150*l*. a year, with the option of purchasing for 3,000*l*. within twenty years:—Held, that K. had practically found a purchaser, and was entitled to his commission. Rimmer v. Knowles, 30 L. T. 496; 22 W. R. 574.

An auctioneer and estate agent was employed to sell an estate, under an agreement by which he was to receive a commission of 2½ per cent. if the estate should be sold; and in case the estate should not be sold, he was to be paid 25*l*. as a compensation for his trouble and expense. Having put up the estate to auction, and failed to sell it, the agent, being asked by a person who had attended the sale who was the owner of the property, referred him to his principal; and ultimately that person without any further intervention of the agent, became the purchaser:—Held, that the sale having been effected through the means of the agent, he was entitled to the stipulated commission. Green v. Bartlett, 14 C. B. (N.S.) 681; 32 L. J., C. P. 261; 8 L. T. 503; 11 W. R. 834.

A. having a ship to sell told W. that if he was the means of introducing a purchaser, a commission on the purchase money would be paid to him. W. having an offer through B., A. agreed that, if successful, W. and B. should share the commission. That offer fell through, also a second offer from C. to B. After some interval C. wrote direct to A. introducing another person, who eventually bought the ship. The jury found that W. was authorised to find a purchaser, and that the purchaser was found through B.:—Held, that C., as agent of the purchaser, having acted on information received from B., W. was entitled to his commission, the chain of connection being sufficiently made out. Wilkinson v. Alston, 48 L. J., Q. B. 733; 41 L. T. 394; 44 J. P. 35—C. A.

B. was an auctioneer. C. put a ship into his hands for sale, and it was agreed that if it was not sold by auction, but if a subsequent sale were effected to any person, led to make an offer "in consequence of B.'s mention or publication for auction purposes," he was to be entitled to a commission. The ship was not sold by auction, but afterwards P., having been present at a conversation which led him to believe that S. would purchase the ship, wrote to B., "noting that he had the ship in his hands," to inquire the price, &c. P. then communicated with S., who ultimately became the purchaser, but not through the agency of P.:—Held, that there was evidence to go to the jury that the sale was effected in consequence of B.'s mention or publication, within the meaning of the agreement, and that B. was entitled to his commission. Bailey v. Chadwick, 39 L. T. 429—H. L.

The plaintiffs, house agents, were instructed by the defendant to offer a leasehold house for sale, for which they were to receive a commission of 2½ per cent. on the amount of premium if they found a purchaser, but one guinea only for their trouble if the premises were sold "without their intervention." The particulars were entered on the plaintiffs' books, and they gave a few cards to view. U., who had observed on passing that the house was to be disposed of, but who had not then seen over it, called at the plaintiffs' office and obtained a card to view the premises, the terms being written by the plaintiffs' clerk on the back of the card. U. went to the house a few days afterwards, but thought the price (2,200*l*.) too high, and he went away. U. had no further communication with the plaintiffs; but he subsequently renewed his negotiation with a friend of the defendant's, and ultimately became the purchaser of the lease for 1,700*l*.:—Held, that there was evidence for a jury that U. had become the purchaser of the premises "through the plaintiffs' intervention," and consequently that they were entitled to the stipulated commission. Mansell v. Clements, L. R. 9 C. P. 139.

At the trial the judge put the following question to U.:—"Would you, if you had not gone to the plaintiffs' office and got the card, have purchased the house?" and, overruling an objection by the defendant's counsel, received his answer, which was, "I should think not":—Semble, that the answer was properly received. Ib.

A. was appointed agent of B. at a salary of 200*l*. per annum, and he was in addition to receive a commission of 5 per cent. upon the first year's rent for every house which he should let on B.'s estate. In an action by A. for commission for letting houses for B., the evidence was that the agreement for the letting was entered into with another agent, K., but that the tenants were introduced to K. by A.:—Held, that, under the terms of the agreement, A. was entitled to the commission. Bray v. Chandler, 18 C. B. 718.

On January 7th, 1887, an estate agent, in whose hands the debtor had placed certain property for sale, introduced to such debtor a person with a view to purchase, but no agreement could then be come to as to terms, and the debtor a few days afterwards presented his own petition in bankruptcy. On January 17th, 1887, further negotiations took place between the person so introduced and the trustee in the bankruptcy in respect of the property, and on January 24th, 1887, the purchase was completed, but a proof subsequently tendered by the estate agent for his commission was rejected by such trustee:—Held, that the sale was brought about in consequence of the introduction, and was traceable thereto. Durrant, Ex parte, Beale, In re, 5 Morrell, 37.

The plaintiffs were employed by the defendant to sell an estate for him upon the terms that they should be paid a commission on the amount of such sale. The estate was divided into lots, some of which were purchased by one A., and upon the completion of that purchase the plaintiffs received their commission. The defendant withdrew his authority to sell from the plaintiffs, and A. subsequently purchased the remainder from the defendant by private contract:—Held, that the jury were entitled to find that the ultimate sale was not due to any introduction of the plaintiffs, so that they could not recover their commission. Lumley v. Nicholson, 34 W. R. 716.

Plaintiff, a shipbroker, introduced one of the defendants to another broker, B. B. was also a merchant and shipowner, and through B. defendants were introduced to a third shipbroker, C., and through C. defendants' ship was chartered by S. The plaintiff sued defendants for commission in respect of that charter; the jury found for plaintiff:—Held, that it was a question upon the evidence for the jury to decide, and the judge at the trial not having been dissatisfied with the verdict, the court refused to set it aside. Kynaston v. Nicholson, 8 L. T. 671.

—— Where two Agents Employed.]—A. and B., land agents, were severally employed to sell an estate for C. D. called on A. to inquire after another estate, and was told by A. that it was not in the market, but that C.'s estate was to be sold. D. took from A. a particular of the estate, and afterwards meeting B., the other agent, negotiated with him the terms of the purchase, which was afterwards completed. A. brought an action against C. for commission on the sale, which was proved to be according to the usage 2*l.* per cent., and payable to the agent who found the purchaser:—Held, first, that the question for the jury was, whether they thought that, in fact, A. had purchased; and, secondly, that if they thought he had, and gave their verdict for him, they were not bound to give him the full amount of the commission, though the fact of that commission being usually paid was some evidence to guide them in their decision. Murray v. Currie, 7 Car. & P. 584.

Business Proximate Result of Agency.]—In an action to recover for commission for the procuring of a loan it is not enough to prove that the loan has indirectly, as a remote and casual consequence, resulted from the intervention of the party who sues; but it must be proved that the loan was obtained by means of his agency, or by means of some sub-agent of his, from the parties to whom he applied; and if all that appears is that the party to whom he introduced the subject, declining the proposal, mentioned it to a third party, who, not at his suggestion, but of his own mere motion, knowing nothing of the plaintiff, negotiated the loan on his own account with the party sued, the commission is not due. Antrobus v. Wickens, 4 F. & F. 291.

A house agent can claim commission only on rent obtained as a proximate consequence of his act; this is to be generally ascertained from the agreement which he has himself prepared; an option to take on a house is not exercised if the tenancy is continued upon an agreement for a different rent obtained through the intervention of another house agent; and a trade custom to pay commission under such circumstances is irrational and bad. Curtis v. Nixon, 24 L. T. 706.

A shipbroker, introducing a seller and buyer of vessels, is only entitled to commission on the business resulting proximately from the introduction. White v. Baxter, 1 Cab. & E. 199. Reversed in C. A.

A shipbroker is only entitled to commission upon a charter-party where he has substantially procured the charter; and he cannot recover commission as upon a quantum meruit for his endeavours to procure the charter. Cousens v. Mitcheson, 1 N. R. 240.

—— Contractual Relation between Introduction and Business.]—In order to found a legal claim for commission on a sale, there must not only be a casual, but also a contractual relation between the introduction of a purchaser and the ultimate transaction of sale. Toulmin v. Millar, 58 L. T. 96—H. L. (E.)

e. Business Interrupted or Prevented by Principal.

Principal ceasing to carry on Business.]—The defendant, a shirt manufacturer, entered into an agreement in writing with the plaintiff whereby the defendant agreed to employ the plaintiff as agent for five years, and the plaintiff agreed to do his utmost to obtain orders for the various goods manufactured or sold by the defendant which might be submitted to him, the plaintiff to be paid by a commission. After two years the defendant's business premises were destroyed by fire, and he thereupon ceased to carry on business and discharged the plaintiff. In an action for wrongful dismissal:—Held, that there was an implied agreement to supply the plaintiff with goods to a reasonable extent, and that the performance of the agreement had not become impossible, and that the plaintiff was entitled to damages. Turner v. Goldsmith, 60 L. J., Q. B. 247; [1891] 1 Q. B. 544; 64 L. T. 301; 39 W. R. 547—C. A.

Company wound up.]—A company employed a broker to dispose of their shares, on the terms that he should be paid 100*l.* down, and 400*l.* in addition, upon the allotment of the whole of the shares of the company. The broker disposed of a considerable number of shares when the company was wound up:—Held, that the broker was prevented earning the 400*l.* by the act of the company, and was therefore entitled to recover a portion of 400*l.* Inchbald v. Western Neilgherry Coffee, Tea and Cinchona Co., 17 C. B. (N.S.) 733; 34 L. J., C. P. 15; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 1128; 11 L. T. 345; 13 W. R. 95.

A company engaged a person to act as their agent for five years at a fixed salary, and also for a commission of 10 per cent. on the net profits in each year. The company was wound up before the termination of the five years:—Held, that he was not entitled to any compensation by way of damages for loss of commission during the unexpired part of the five years. English and Scottish Marine Insurance Co., In re, Maclure's Claim, 39 L. J., Ch. 685; L. R. 5 Ch. 737; 23 L. T. 685; 18 W. R. 1122. See further Cases ante, col. 948.

"Subject to Approval of Solicitor."]—The plaintiff's claim was for commission on the sale of a piece of land by A. to the defendant, one term of the plaintiff's contract being that A.'s title should be approved by the defendant's solicitor. The defendant broke off the sale of his own accord, so that A.'s title was never submitted to the defendant's solicitor:—Held, that the plaintiff could not succeed without proving that the defendant's solicitor had approved A.'s title, or else that such a title was submitted to him, as it was unreasonable for him to disapprove. Clack v. Wood, 9 Q. B. D. 276; 47 L. T. 144; 30 W. R. 931—C. A.

Refusal of Terms.]—The defendant employed the plaintiff to find a purchaser for some land, at a commission of 1*l.* 10*s.* per cent. on the purchase money if a sale was effected. The plaintiff found a purchaser, but the defendant refused to complete the sale:—Held, that he could sue on a quantum meruit for the work and labour done, as he had performed his part of the contract, and the defendant prevented its completion. Prickett

v. Badger, 1 C. B. (N.S.) 96; 26 L. J., C. P. 33; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 66; 5 W. R. 117.

The defendant agreed with the plaintiff in the following terms: "In the event of your procuring the 2,000*l.*, or such other as I shall accept, I agree to pay you a commission of 2½ per cent. on any money received." The plaintiff introduced the defendant to a building society who offered to advance him 1,620*l.* on certain terms. This offer the defendant accepted, but as he declined to accede to certain requirements of the society the arrangement fell through and no money was advanced:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to his commission on the sum which the society had agreed to advance. Fisher v. Drewitt, 48 L. J., Ex. 32; 39 L. T. 253; 27 W. R. 12—C. A.

Failure to Execute Order.]—Plaintiff, a commission agent, proposed to do business with defendant, a manufacturer, on terms expressed in a letter, the material part of which was as follows: "We expect to receive our commission on all goods bought by houses whose accounts are opened through us." The plaintiff introduced a customer to the defendant, who gave him an order for goods which he accepted but did not execute. The plaintiff then sued him for commission on the goods so ordered. The judge at the trial ruled that the words, "goods bought," applied to all goods ordered by customers introduced by the plaintiff, whether the order was executed by defendant or not:—Held, that this ruling was right, and the plaintiff entitled to recover. Lockwood v. Levick, 2 L. T. 357; 8 W. R. 583.

Revocation of Authority.]—Where the authority of an agent employed to sell on commission is revoked by the principal before a sale has been effected, the right of the agent to remuneration for what he has done in endeavouring to effect a sale depends on the terms on which he was employed. Simpson v. Lamb, 17 C. B. 603; 25 L. J., C. P. 113; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 91; 4 W. R. 328.

The plaintiffs, who were clerical agents, were employed by the defendant to sell an advowson, upon the terms that they should be paid a commission at the rate of 5*l.* per cent. upon the purchase money when the contract was completed. As the purchase money was likely to be large, the plaintiffs agreed to forego a claim of three guineas which they ordinarily made for entering such property on their books, and for the trouble of answering inquiries respecting it. The defendant having afterwards sold the advowson himself, and revoked the plaintiffs' authority to sell:—Held, that the plaintiffs were not entitled to recover anything, as they had not effected the sale, and there was no evidence of their having done more than was ordinarily covered by the charge of three guineas, which they had agreed to forego. Ib.

Agent not informed of unusual Terms.]—Where an agent employed to borrow money upon leasehold security finds a person able and willing to lend, but the negotiations go off by reason of such person discovering unusual covenants which the agent was not informed of, the agent is entitled to the whole of the agreed commission for procuring the loan. Green v. Lucas, 33 L. T. 584—C. A.

L. agreed to pay G. a commission of 2 per cent. "for procuring him on loan 20,000*l.* upon the security of certain leasehold property at Southwark," having three days before such agreement furnished G. with two valuations of the property, each of them stating the lease to be for a term of ninety-nine years, and settling the value at about 37,000*l.*, and one of them assuming that the lease "contained no arbitrary or restrictive clauses, but only the usual covenants." Upon the strength of these valuations, G. applied for a loan to a provident institution, the directors of which agreed to advance it, "subject to the title and all other questions proving to be satisfactory." Upon examination of the lease on behalf of the institution, it was discovered that the lease, instead of being a lease for ninety-nine years absolutely, contained a proviso for re-entry under certain conditions, which constituted a substantial deterioration of its value, whereupon the directors refused to make the advance:—Held, that G. was entitled to the whole of the agreed commission. Ib.

Half Commission—Business taken from Agent before Completion.]—An agent who has the business taken out of his hands before completion is by the custom of merchants entitled to half the commission which he would have earned by completing it. Spain (Queen) v. Parr, 39 L. J., Ch. 73; 21 L. T. 555; 18 W. R. 110.

Merchants at Manilla received instructions from the government there to undertake the transport and shipment of a quantity of tobacco to merchants in London, to effect the insurance, and to pay all the necessary charges and expenses in relation thereto. The merchants at Manilla were to be entitled to charge 2½ per cent. on the amount, valued at about 47,000*l.* The supreme government of Spain thinking the officer at Manilla had acted incautiously in this respect, refused to allow the amount of the ordinary commission in the account, having directed the tobacco to be sold by their own agents here:—Held, that the consignees were entitled to a moiety of the amount of the ordinary commission, being 1¼ per cent. instead of 2½ per cent. Ib.

Where nothing remained to be done by Agent—Measure of Damages.]—In an action for damages by a commission agent for wrongfully preventing him from earning his commission, the damages recoverable where nothing remained to be done by the commission agent to entitle him to his commission if the transaction had gone through, are the full amount of the commission which he would have earned. Roberts v. Barnard, 1 Cab. & E. 336.

Business Ineffectual or Useless.]—A shipbroker employed to sell a ship, which, when put up for sale, was bought in, is not entitled to a commission on the sale. Mestaer v. Atkins, 1 Marsh. 76; 5 Taunt. 381.

A shipbroker who has procured a bargain for the hire of a vessel, is by the usage in the city of London, entitled to receive from the owner a certain commission on the amount of freight, if the contract is perfected, but not otherwise:—Held, that when a broker had negotiated the hire of a vessel, and a memorandum for a charter was signed by the parties, but the bargain afterwards went off, and the ship was not employed, the broker could not maintain an action against the shipowner to recover the commission, or a compensation for his work and labour. Read v. Rann, 10 B. & C. 438; 8 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 144.

Even where the contract is not completed by the act of the owner. Broad v. Thomas, 7 Bing. 99; 4 M. & P. 732; 4 Car. & P. 338; 9 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 32.

f. Amount Payable.

On Bad Debts.]—By agreement an agent was to have a commission on sales effected, or orders executed, by him; the principal to be responsible for bad debts, and the agent to draw his commission monthly. By the custom of the trade, commission was not allowed on sales which produced bad debts:—Held, notwithstanding, that, under the terms of this agreement, he was entitled to commission on bad debts. Bower v. Jones, 8 Bing. 65; 1 M. & Scott, 140; 1 L. J., C. P. 31.

Construction of Contract.] — The following letter was addressed to an African captain and supercargo by his employers: "Your commissions are 6*l.* per cent. on the net proceeds of your homeward cargo, after deducting the usual charges as arranged by the African Association, viz., 4*l.* per ton from the gross sales of the oil when taken from the quay, and 4*l.* 15*s.*, when warehoused":—Held that the commission was payable only on the sums actually realised, after deducting bad debts as well as other charges. Caine v. Horsfall, 1 Ex. 519; 17 L. J., Ex. 25.

A., being possessed of a leasehold house and of building land held on lease, the former of which was subject to an annual rent of 75 guineas, and the latter to a rent of 50*l.*, and also to a covenant to lay out a certain sum in building, employed B., an estate agent, to dispose of the whole for him upon the terms of commission mentioned in a printed paper as follows:—"For the sale of property by private contract. On the first 100*l.*, 5*l.* per centum (and in no case less than 5*l.*); from 100*l.* to 5,000*l.*, two and-a-half per centum; from 5,000*l.* to 10,000*l.*, one-and-a-half per centum; on the sum exceeding 10,000*l.*, one per centum. For letting or disposal of the leases of estates or houses. Unfurnished, 5*l.* per centum on one year's rent, and 5*l.* per centum on the premium or sum obtained for fixtures, furniture, &c. on lease; 5*l.* per centum on the first year's rent, and two-and-a-half per centum on the second year's rent, and 5*l.* per centum on premium or sum obtained for fixtures, &c. On letting building land, one year's standing ground-rent. For large estates one-half year's ground-rent." B. having disposed of the premises to M. for 1,300*l.*, the two leases were assigned to M., subject to the covenants for payment of the rents:—Held, by Erle, C.J., Williams, J., and Willes, J., that B. was only entitled to a commission on the 1,300*l.*, under the first branch of the printed scale, namely, five per centum on the first 100*l.*, and two-and-a-half per centum on the remainder. Biggs v. Gordon, 8 C. B. (N.S.) 638.

Held, by Byles, J., that he was also entitled to a commission on the amount of the yearly rent under the second branch of the scale. Ib.

The defendant, being in want of additional capital in his business, on the 10th of June, 1873, wrote to the plaintiffs (accountants in London with whom he had been in correspondence on the subject) as follows:—"The premises of the B. works in this town are my property solely, but the business of it is carried on by myself and my partner. In case of your introducing a purchaser of all the premises, or part of them, of whom I shall approve, or in case of your introducing capital which I should accept, I could pay you a commission of 5 per cent. on the amount in either case, provided no one else is entitled to a commission in respect of the same introduction." The plaintiffs succeeded in introducing W. to the defendant, who advanced him by way of loan 10,000*l.*, upon which they received the agreed commission. Some few months afterwards the defendant and W. entered into an agreement for a partnership, on which occasion W. made a further advance of 4,000*l.* by way of capital to the concern. The plaintiffs claimed commission upon this further advance; and, in an action brought to enforce their claim, they admitted that the advance of 4,000*l.* was not contemplated at the time of the advance of the 10,000*l.*, but that the 4,000*l.* was advanced solely in consequence of the negotiation for the partnership between the defendant and W.:—Held, that they were not entitled to commission on this second advance. Tribe v. Taylor, 1 C. P. D. 505.

By an agreement with the plaintiffs, the defendant was to receive a commission on the company's charge for messages sent by the defendant along their line:—Held, that, under this agreement, the defendant was not at liberty to pack several messages into one, charging for them separately, and yet, as between himself and the company, only treating it as a single message. International Telegraph Co. v. Reuter, 4 W. R. 510.

Percentage on Invoice Price — Proof of at Trial.] — Defendant, a merchant beyond seas, appointed plaintiffs his agents here. By agreement, defendant was not to consign any raisins for which plaintiffs might obtain orders to any one but plaintiffs, who were to receive as commission a percentage on the amount of the invoice price of the cargoes sent in pursuance of such orders. Defendant having, in breach of the agreement, consigned to another person:—Held, that it was not a condition precedent to plaintiffs recovering their commission that they should produce the invoices at the trial, but that they might show otherwise what the value was according to what the invoice price would be. Plank v. Gavila, 3 C. B. (N.S.) 807; 6 W. R. 210.

Agent refusing Principal's Offer — Services afterwards Performed.]—A., a supercargo, sailed to Calabar in charge of a ship called "The Magistrate," his commission being 5*l.* per cent. Some time after his departure, the principals dispatched another ship, "The Windermere," to Calabar, with instructions to A. to find a cargo for her, and to consider her "in one turn" with "The Magistrate," and offering him, in respect of this second ship, a commission of 2½ per cent. A. wrote to his principals rejecting the 2½ per cent. commission; but, notwithstanding this, he proceeded to load "The Windermere," that course being in his view the best for his principals:—Held, that, as he had acted on the instructions of his principals in loading "The Windermere," he was bound by their offer as to commission, and could not recover more than 2½ per cent. in respect of the cargo of that ship. Moore v. Maxwell, 2 Car. & K. 554.

Custom.]—See Murray v. Currie, supra, col. 957.

No Contract or Custom Proved.]—Where a custom-house agent entered into a custom-house bond with respect to goods consigned to him by the plaintiff, and claimed a percentage on the sum mentioned in the bond, and no contract or usage for the payment of such was proved:—Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to any such percentage; and that, therefore, no question as to the reasonableness of the amount claimed could be put to a witness. Hall v. Gurney, 2 Car. & K. 644.

Discount allowed by Insurance Companies—To whom belonging.]—The 10 per cent. discount usually allowed by insurance companies on punctual payment of the premium belongs, in the absence of agreement to the contrary, not to the insurance agent, but to his principal. Spain (Queen) v. Parr, 39 L. J., Ch. 73; 21 L. T. 555; 18 W. R. 110.

When no Provision made.]—An auctioneer took an absolute assignment of chattels, &c., under a bill of sale by way of mortgage, and afterwards conducted the sale of them by auction under an agreement with another incumbrancer:—Held, that he was entitled to charge the usual commission on such sale, although no provision for a commission had been made either in the bill of sale or in the agreement. Miller v. Beale, 27 W. R. 403.

On Discounts.]—Reasonable commission, 2*s.* 6*d.* per cent., allowed to a country agent on discounts, though for a person resident in London, and paid through a banker there, if not colourable. Jones, Ex parte, 17 Ves. 332; 1 Rose, 29.

Expense of putting up to Sale.]—In an action by a spirit broker, it was held that he was entitled to half-a-crown per puncheon, for the expense of putting up to sale, though the property was bought in. Stewart v. Kahle, 3 Stark. 161.

To Executor for Collecting Debts.]—An executor in India is entitled to a commission of 5*l.* per cent. on all assets of a testator collected by him there, including the assets which he retains in respect of a legacy to himself, not given to him in the character of executor, and including moneys belonging to the testator, which were in the hands of a commercial house in which the executor was, and the testator had been, a partner. Cockerell v. Barber, 2 Russ. 585; 1 Sim. 23; 5 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 77; 28 R. R. 181.

Charge for Extras.]—A. acted under a written agreement as the commission agent of B., in the sale of goods, and was paid a commission. B. was a contractor with the admiralty for the supply of a variety of articles, on the sale of which A. was paid his commission, and A. attended on a number of occasions at Somerset House, where the patterns of these articles were inspected by the government officers. A. sought to charge B. for these attendances in addition to his commission:—Held, that in giving these attendances A. was only acting in the discharge of his business as an agent, he was not entitled to charge for the attendances; but that, if these attendances were matter beyond his duty as an agent, he was entitled to be paid for them separately. Marshall v. Parsons, 9 Car. & P. 656.

g. When Payable.

Upon what Event.]—A., a clerical agent, was employed to sell an advowson for B., upon the terms contained in a circular, in which it was stipulated that the commission should become payable upon the adjustment of terms between the contracting parties in every instance in which any information had been derived at, or any particulars had been given by, or any communication whatsoever had been made from, A.'s office, however and whomsoever the negotiation might have been conducted and notwithstanding the business might have been subsequently taken off the books, or the negotiation might have been concluded in consequence of communications previously made from other agencies, or on information otherwise derived, or the principals might have made themselves liable to pay commission to other agents; and that no accommodation that might be afforded as to time of payment or advance should retard the payment of commission. A contract of sale having been arranged through A.'s agency, and duly executed, and a deposit paid on the 14th of October, 1862, the residue of the purchase-money being payable on the 31st of December:—Held, that A. was entitled to his commission at all events on the 31st of December, although the full purchase-money had not, for some unexplained reason, then been paid. Lara v. Hill, 15 C. B. (N.S.) 45.

A. negotiated for the exchange of certain advowsons between B. and C., and B. contracted to pay A. 100*l.* for commission, "one-third down and the remaining two-thirds when the abstract of conveyance is drawn out." B.'s abstract of title was delivered to C., but nothing further was done in the matter, in consequence of C. declining to proceed with the exchange. In an action for the recovery of the balance of the commission:—Held, that A. could not recover, as the event had not happened for which the commission was to be paid. Alder v. Boyle, 4 C. B. 635; 16 L. J., C. P. 232; 11 Jur. 591.

A surveyor was retained by the defendant to negotiate with the commissioners of woods and forests for the sale to them of certain premises of the defendant, for which he was to receive a commission of 2*l.* per cent. "on the sum which might be obtained, either by private treaty, arbitration, or trial by jury." Private treaty proving unavailing, a jury was empannelled, by whom the value of the property was assessed at 4,000*l.*; but, in consequence of a defect in the defendant's title, arising out of an annuity charged upon part of the premises, which the commissioners required the defendant to buy off, the money was not paid to him, but was placed in the hands of the accountant-general, to await the adjustment of the difference. The surveyor was not previously aware of the existence of this charge:—Held, that he was, nevertheless, not entitled to his commission until the money awarded was actually received by the defendant. Bull v. Price, 5 M. & P. 2; 7 Bing. 237; 9 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 78.

In the Case of Del credere Commissions.]—An action lies to recover del credere commissions for guaranteeing sums insured upon policies; such commissions being due upon entering into the contract of guarantee. Caruthers v. Graham, 14 East, 578.

A plaintiff declared that the defendant was indebted to him for commission due for his having guaranteed the payment of goods sold by him, as the factor of the defendant, to third persons, and at his request:—Held, good after verdict. Solly v. Weiss, 2 Moore, 420; 8 Taunt. 371.

h. Effect of Misconduct.

Loss of Commission.]—An agent cannot recover commission, or even a compensation for his trouble, if he executes his duties in such a manner that no benefit results therefrom. Hamond v. Holiday, 1 Car. & P. 384.

Nor is he entitled to commission where he has been guilty of gross misconduct in selling goods. White v. Chapman, 1 Stark. 113.

A broker purchased goods on commission at a month's credit, and paid duties on them, and sent them to the place of the purchaser's abode, consigned to his own order; the seller, being fearful of the purchaser's credit, procured the broker to delay the arrival of the goods till the month's credit expired, and to tender them to the buyer on payment of the price, whereupon they were refused:—Held, that the broker could neither recover the price, duties, nor commission. Hurst v. Holding, 3 Taunt. 32; 12 R. R. 587.

Where a broker is employed by a shipowner to procure a charterparty, if the negotiation goes off on account of any fault in the broker, he is not entitled to recover anything in the shape of remuneration; nor is he, in such case, entitled to recover for any expenses which he may have been put to, unless such expenses are unusual, and have been incurred in consequence of the shipowner's having urged him to extraordinary expedition in the matter. Dalton v. Irwin, 4 Car. & P. 289.

If an agent deal with the goods of his principal as his own, making a profit out of them not accounted for to the principal, and if the agent by his own conduct has made it impossible to ascertain what the amount of profit is which he realised, he shall not be allowed the commission which otherwise, and according to the contract he would be entitled to claim. Gray v. Haig, 20 Beav. 219.

A land agent misconducting himself in the management of property, although receiving and accounting for the rents, may be disallowed his fees on the sum received by him. Palmer v. Goodwin, 13 Ir. Ch. R. 171.

A confidential agent is in that character bound to keep regular accounts; having neglected to do so, and to preserve vouchers against himself, though he had preserved those in his own favour, on the ground of gross neglect of duty, was not allowed a charge in respect of bills of costs for business done as a solicitor. White v. Lincoln (Lady) 8 Ves. 363; 7 R. R. 71.

Set-off in Action.]—H. shipped rice consigned to B. abroad, for sale on commission by B. for the benefit of H. B., according to agreement, made advances to H. upon the rice, and incurred expenses in connection therewith, and sold it, and claimed to have earned commission. The proceeds realised by the sale, however, were insufficient to reimburse B. the amounts so advanced and alleged to have been earned. To an action by B. to recover the balance, after crediting H. with the amount realised by the sale, of the amount of such advances and expenses, and for the commission so alleged by B. to have been earned, H. pleaded that B., by neglecting to take proper care of the rice, and by mismanaging the sale, had caused the proceeds to be insufficient to meet the amount due to B.:—Held, that it did not afford an answer, as it amounted to an attempt to set off a claim for unliquidated damages against a legal debt of a definite and an ascertained amount, and that such a plea could not be construed as a plea of never indebted, inasmuch as the general issue in this shape must deny the existence of a debt which the plea expressly admitted. Best v. Hill, 42 L. J., C. P. 10; L. R. 8 C. P. 10; 27 L. T. 490; 21 W. R. 147.

Semble, where an agent brings an action for his commission, &c., and has by collusion received more than he is entitled to, a court of law will in some cases allow a set-off by treating him as having received so much money for the use of his employers; but it must be a clear case. Norris v. Day, 10 L. J., Ex. Eq. 43; 4 Y. & C. 475.

Bribery of Agent—Liability to Refund.]—The defendants contracted to pay the plaintiff a commission for superintending repairs to be executed by them on certain ships belonging to the Great Eastern Railway Company. The plaintiff at the time of such contract being made was in a position of trust in relation to the railway company, having been employed by them as an engineer to advise them as to the repairs, and the contract between the defendants and plaintiff was made in part in consideration of a promise that the plaintiff would use his influence with the railway company to induce them to accept the defendants' tender for the repair of the ships. The jury found that the contract, though calculated to bias the mind of the plaintiff, had not, in fact, done so, and that he had not in consequence thereof given less beneficial advice to the company as to the defendants' tender than he would otherwise have done:—Held, that the plaintiff could not maintain an action for commission under the contract, on the ground that, even although the plaintiff had not been induced to act corruptly, the consideration for the contract was corrupt. Harrington v. Victoria Graving Dock Co., 47 L. J., Q. B. 594; 3 Q. B. D. 549; 39 L. T. 120; 26 W. R. 740.

—— Recovery by Principal.]—Commission received by an agent or a trustee of a purchaser from a vendor without the knowledge of his principal is a bribe; it is a profit which the principal has a right to extract from the agent whenever it comes to his knowledge. Phosphate Sewage Co. v. Hartmont, 5 Ch. D. 394, 457.

—— Right of Principal to follow Money.]—The defendant was employed by the plaintiffs as their foreman, and was intrusted by them with the purchase of materials used in their business. From one of the firms from which he had purchased, he had received commissions upon the amounts of the orders he had placed with them. In an action to recover the money so received, the plaintiffs moved, before the trial, for an injunction restraining the defendant from dealing with certain real estate bought with such money, and an order directing him to pay into court the residue of the money:—Held, that a debt was due from the defendant to the plaintiffs, but the money he had received was not the money of the plaintiffs in his hands as trustee for them, and the order asked for could not be made. Lister v. Stubbs, 59 L. J., Ch. 570 ; 45 Ch. D. 1 ; 63 L. T. 75 ; 38 W. R. 548—C. A.

Semble (per Cotton, L.J.) that the plaintiffs would have a right to set aside the contract with the firm supplying the goods, and to sue such firm for the purchase-money paid to them. Ib.

—— Usual Allowance — Knowledge of Principal.]—A., a contractor for works on a railway, employed B., as his agent, to get a sub-contractor to do a portion of the works. B., as agent, accordingly entered into a contract with C. An allowance of 5*l.* per cent. was made by C. to B. After the work had been finished, A. filed a bill against B. and C. to recover back the commission : —Held, that the bill could not be sustained as against C., and it was also dismissed against B., without costs on the ground that such an allowance was usual, and that the plaintiff was proved to have acted on it, and must have known what had occurred. Holden v. Webber, 29 Beav. 117.

i. Action for.

Right of Principal to particulars of Moneys received by Agent.]—In an action by an agent against his principal for services, the latter cannot insist upon particulars giving credit for moneys received for him ; he is only entitled to ask for what balance the action is brought. Penerase or Penprase v. Crease, 1 M. & W. 36 ; 1 T. & G. 468 ; 4 D. P. C. 711 ; 5 L. J., Ex. 105.

Business not effected by Agent — Right to recover on Quantum meruit for work done.]—A defendant employed the plaintiffs to find a purchaser or mortgagee of an estate. Thereupon they went down to the estate, valued it, put it in their books, advertised it in their circulars and in newspapers, and took some journeys, and had communications about it, and ultimately, while negotiating with one N. upon the matter, the plaintiffs and the defendant agreed that a letter should be written by the plaintiffs to N., and that if such letter induced N. to become purchaser or mortgagee the plaintiffs should be paid 100*l.* N. ultimately became mortgagee, but denied that he was influenced in any way by the letter :—Held, that the plaintiffs could not recover on a quantum meruit for work and labour, with particulars claiming commission as agreed. Green v. Mules, 30 L. J., C. P. 343.

4. Liability of Agent for Negligence.

Voluntary Agents.]—A person is liable for negligence in procuring a policy of insurance, though he did it gratuitously. Wilkinson v. Coverdale, 1 Esp. 75.

If A., a general merchant, undertakes voluntarily, without reward, to enter a parcel of goods to B., together with a parcel of his own of the same sort, at the custom-house, for exportation, but makes the entry under a wrong denomination, whereby both parcels were seized ; and A., having taken the same care of the goods of B. as of his own, not having received any reward, and not being of a profession or an employment which necessarily implied skill in what he had undertaken, is not liable to an action for the loss occasioned to B. Shiells v. Blackburne, 1 H. Bl. 158 ; 2 R. R. 750.

Acting on best Advice.]—An agent who acts upon the best advice he is able to get in the affairs of his principal, is not liable to damages arising from that act. Miles v. Bernard, Peake, Ad. C. 61. And see Reece v. Rigby, 4 B. & Ald. 202 ; 23 R. R. 251.

Law Agent.]—Where a law agent employed to prepare a bond departed from the form in which such bonds were usually drawn, and neglected a certain formality essential to its validity, in consequence of which the bond was invalid :—Held, that he was bound to make good the loss. Stevenson v. Rowand, 2 Dow & Cl., A. C. 104.

Secus, if he had made a mistake in a nice and difficult point of law. Ib.

When Action lies.]—A broker was employed by his principal to sell, and as selling broker he sold for him "to arrive" goods on the terms that they were "fair average quality in opinion of selling broker." The buyers having on arrival of such goods refused to take them, the broker went and inspected them and gave his opinion that they were not of fair average quality, according to the contract :—Held, that he was not liable to an action at the suit of his principals for not using due skill in order to form a correct opinion of the quality of the goods, as there was no contract by him, express or implied, to exercise any skill whatever in forming such opinion. Pappa v. Rose, 41 L. J., C. P. 11 ; L. R. 7 C. P. 32 ; 25 L. T. 468 ; 20 W. R. 62. Affirmed, 41 L. J., C. P. 187 ; L. R. 7 C. P. 525 ; 27 L. T. 348 ; 20 W. R. 784—Ex. Ch.

A house agent who charges commission to a landlord for letting his house is bound to use due and reasonable care in ascertaining the solvency of the tenant. Hayes v. Tindall, 1 B. & S. 296 ; 2 F. & F. 444 ; 30 L. J., Q. B. 362 ; 4 L. T. 403 ; 9 W. R. 664.

An agent for the purchase of a public-house is liable in damages to his employer for negligently conducting the purchase, although he advises his employer to go and examine the business for himself, and the employer does so. Smith v. Barton, 15 L. T. 294.

Brokers employed to sell goods are bound to do so in the usual way, and if it is usual to send the seller an estimate of value, in order that he may be enabled to fix a reserved price, they ought to do so. And whether it is so or not, they are bound, by their own guidance, to make a careful estimate of the value ; and if they sell, by public auction, at a price much below the fair value, not having made such an estimate, it will be evidence of negligence, and of a loss caused thereby, for which they will be liable. Solomon v. Barker, 2 F. & F. 726 ; 11 W. R. 375.

The defendants, merchants at B., who had acted there as brokers for the plaintiffs, who were merchants at L., wrote to the plaintiffs, proposing to them to purchase a quantity of scrap-iron of a specified quality. The plaintiffs desired to have an offer of cost of freight to Rotterdam. The defendants stated the price, but their inability to make an offer as to freight, as they had then no ship available. Before the plaintiffs had closed with the offer, the defendants proposed a ship for the conveyance of the iron. The plaintiffs accepted the purchase, but objected to the ship as too small to take the whole cargo, desiring the defendants to look out for another. Thereupon the defendants, as agents for both parties, entered into and accepted the contract of sale, and transmitted the same to the plaintiffs. They afterwards engaged a vessel to convey the iron, receiving the same, and caused it to be shipped, assuring the plaintiffs that the cargo was considered a first-rate description of scrap-iron. The profit of the defendants was derived from commission from the seller and from the shipowner. In an action against them for not using proper and reasonable care, skill, and diligence in accepting and shipping the iron :—Held, that their employment as brokers and shipping agents did not raise a duty to examine the iron for the plaintiffs, there being no evidence of usage or contract that they should do so. Zwilchenbart v. Alexander, 1 B. & S. 234 ; 30 L. J., Q. B. 254 ; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1157 ; 4 L. T. 412 ; 9 W. R. 670—Ex. Ch.

The plaintiff and his two partners employed the defendants as accountants for hire, to make out the accounts of the firm, and of the separate balance of each partner. The defendants made out the plaintiff's separate balance so erroneously and negligently, that, relying on their statement, he was a considerable loser thereby :—Held, that the plaintiff might sue alone for this misfeasance, and that it was no variance to allege that he had employed the defendants. Storey v. Richardson, 6 Bing. (N.C.) 123 ; 8 Scott, 291 ; 9 L. J., C. P. 43 ; 4 Jur. 26.

An action for breach of duty, but not trover, lies against a broker who is authorised to sell goods for a certain price, but sells them at an inferior price. Dufresne v. Hutchinson, 3 Taunt. 117.

Trover does not lie against a person who takes out goods to India for the vendor under an agreement to sell them for what he could get, and retain what he could get above a certain price, but who left them to a third person to be disposed of, on quitting India. Bromley v. Coxwell, 2 Bos. & P. 438 ; 5 R. R. 648.

No action is maintainable. Ib.

The object of the transmission of a bill of exchange from principal to agent being to obtain acceptance and payment of the bill, or, if not accepted, to guard the rights of the principal against the drawer, the duty of the agent must be measured by these considerations, and the agent ought not to press unduly for acceptance, provided he obtains acceptance or refusal within the time which will preserve the rights of the principal against the drawer. Bank of Van Diemen's Land v. Bank of Victoria, 40 L. J., P. C. 28 ; L. R. 3 P. C. 526 ; 19 W. R. 857.

—— Employment of Agent to bet on Account of Principal.]—The plaintiff having employed the defendant to bet on commission, and the defendant having failed to make certain bets pursuant to the plaintiff's instructions, the plaintiff sued the defendant for breach of contract as his agent, claiming as damages the excess of gains over losses which should have been received by the defendant, had the bets in question been made, after deducting the amount of his commission :—Held, that as by statute 8 & 9 Vict. c. 109, s. 18, the bets would not have been recoverable at law, the plaintiff could not maintain the action. Cohen v. Kittell, 58 L. J., Q. B. 241 ; 22 Q. B. D. 680 ; 60 L. T. 932 ; 37 W. R. 400 ; 53 J. P. 469.

A lease contained a proviso that the tenant should not assign it without the landlord's licence. The landlord instructed the defendant to prepare the licence, but not to hand it to the tenant until the latter paid certain arrears of rent. The defendant, however, parted with the licence to the tenant on receiving a cheque for the arrears. On the cheque being dishonoured :—Held, that the landlord was entitled to recover from the defendant the damage he had sustained by the defendant's negligence—i.e. the amount of rent in arrear. Bridges v. Garrett (L. R. 5 C. P. 451) distinguished. Ib.

—— Measure of Damages.]—The plaintiff, a merchant in London, gave orders to the defendants, commission agents in Hong Kong, to purchase for him a quantity of a certain kind of opium. The defendants upon such orders purchased and shipped to the plaintiff opium which they erroneously supposed to be of the description ordered, but which was really of an inferior description. The plaintiff sought to recover as damages in an action against the defendants the difference between the value of the opium ordered and that of the opium actually shipped by the defendants, on the ground that the relation between the defendants as commission agents and himself was that of vendor and vendee of the opium :—Held, that the true measure of damages was not the difference between the value of the goods ordered and that of those shipped, but the loss actually sustained by the plaintiff in consequence of the opium not being of the description ordered. Cassaboglou v. Gibbs, 51 L. J., Q. B. 593 ; 9 Q. B. D. 220 ; 47 L. T. 98 ; 46 J. P. 568. Affirmed, 52 L. J., Q. B. 538 ; 11 Q. B. D. 797 ; 48 L. T. 850 ; 32 W. R. 138—C. A.

A., in Holland, commissioned B. in London to purchase and ship tobacco of the best quality. B. employed C. as his broker for that purpose, who accordingly made a purchase from D. On the arrival of the tobacco in Holland, it turned out to be of very bad quality, when A. brought an action and recovered against B. :—Held, that B. was entitled to recover from C. the whole of the damages he had sustained in the action brought against him by A., although he had received a bought-note from C. in which the tobacco was not described as of the best quality. Mainwaring v. Brandon, 2 Moore, 125 ; 19 R. R. 497.

A party employing another to present a bill for acceptance is entitled to recover nominal damages against such agent if he fails to present it ; although no real damage whatever is occasioned by the neglect, the bill and costs having been paid by other persons liable on it. Van Wart v. Wooley, M. & M. 520.

Merchants in London received from a mere stranger abroad a bill of lading in a letter, requesting them to effect an insurance ; they declined doing so, but bonâ fide indorsed the bill of lading to a friend of his, who failed :—Held, that the merchants were liable to the consignor for the amount. Corlett v. Gordon, 3 Camp. 472 ; 14 R. R. 813.

An agent who applies money remitted to him to his own use is liable for interest, but not if he suffers it to lie dead in his hands. Rogers v. Boehm, 2 Esp. 704.

The London agent of the plaintiff, a Parsee merchant at Bombay, having a claim against him, partly for a debt, not disputed, and partly for a liquidated demand on a guarantee, which was disputed, wrongfully transferred to himself certain shares of the plaintiff's, under a power of attorney, in satisfaction of his supposed claim. The plaintiff sued him for the improper transfer:—Held, that he was entitled to recover the full value of the shares. Dantra v. Stiebel, 3 F. & F. 951.

A., a merchant at Seville, wrote to B., his agent at Liverpool, desiring him to insure a cargo of fruit to that place. B., acting bonâ fide, instructed C., a person who had occasionally acted as A.'s agent in London, to get a policy effected there. C. for that purpose employed D., an insurance broker, who effected the insurance in his own name, and afterwards received the amount of a loss from the underwriters, but retained it, claiming a lien for a debt due to him from C., in respect of premiums and commission in former transactions. In an action by A. against B. for negligently omitting to effect a good and available insurance upon the cargo, and neglecting to take steps to get the money, and for money had and received, the judge, treating it as immaterial whether the letter of instructions from B. or C. had been shewn to D. or not, ruled that B. had violated his duty as agent by employing another agent in London, instead of effecting the policy himself, and that he was responsible for the whole amount received from the underwriters by D.:—Held, that this was not the true measure of damages; for that, if B.'s letter of instructions had been shewn to D. at the time he was employed to effect the policy, he could acquire no lien upon the proceeds for the debt due to him from C., and his unlawful detention of the money could not give A. a right of action against B. for the whole amount so received by D., though B. might be liable for some nominal damages in respect of the breach of his duty as agent; and therefore that fact ought to have been ascertained. Cahill v. Dawson, 3 C. B. (N.S.) 106; 26 L. J., C. P. 253; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1128.

5. Duties arising from Fiduciary Relationship.

Agent a Trustee—Defence of Statute of Limitations.]—An agent who is empowered to retain in his own hands his principal's money, for the purpose of investment, is a trustee for his principal. Burdick v. Garrick, 39 L. J., Ch. 369; L. R. 5 Ch. 233; 18 W. R. 387.

A gentleman resident in America by power of attorney authorised two people in England, one of whom was a solicitor, to get in and sell his property here and reinvest the proceeds, and generally deal with it for his benefit; he died intestate in 1859, whereupon the agents paid the moneys which they had then received under the power, and which had not been reinvested, into a bank to the account of the firm of which the solicitor was a member; in 1867 letters of administration were taken out to the intestate by his widow, who filed a bill against the agents for an account:—Held, that the agents were trustees for their principal, and could not set up the Statute of Limitations against his personal representative. Ib.

Where two agents conspired to defraud their principal, the estates of both the agents will be liable in equity to the estate of the principal, in respect of the fraud so committed. Walsham v. Stainton, 12 W. R. 63.

In such a case an agent is considered as a trustee for his principal, and lapse of time is no bar. Ib.

Deception.]—Factor or correspondent pretending to insure as directed, charged as if he had insured. But such equity does not extend to an agent employed by him (ignorant of such deception). Tickel v. Short, 2 Ves. 239.

Agent to let Land or House.]—An agent to let lands is bound to let them to the best advantage; but upon the mere ground of undervalue, a bonâ fide letting, which would be binding on the principal himself, will be equally binding on him when he acts through an agent, if the agent has acted fairly and honestly. Dyas v. Cruise, 2 Jo. & Lat. 460; 8 Ir. Eq. R. 407.

Where a house-agent is employed to let a house, and charges 5 per cent. commission on letting it, it is a question for the jury whether he undertakes to use reasonable care to ascertain that the person to whom he lets it is in solvent circumstances. Keys v. Tindall, 1 B. & S. 296; 30 L. J., Q. B. 362; 4 L. T. 403; 9 W. R. 664. S. C., at Nisi Prius, 2 F. & F. 444.

Possession of Agent—Acquisition of Title to Real Estate by.]—The possession of an agent is the possession of the principal; and the principal may acquire a possessory title to real estate by receiving the rents for twenty years through an agent, although that agent is the person really entitled to the estate. Williams v. Pott, 40 L. J., Ch. 775; L. R. 12 Eq. 149.

A person claiming, without any real title, to be entitled to land is a person wrongfully claiming within the meaning of 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 9; and that section applies, although the claim may be put forward under a mistake, and without any improper intention to deprive others of their property. Ib.

An agent or a servant who is allowed to occupy premises belonging to his principal for the convenient performance of his duties, acquires no estate therein, although he is also allowed to use the premises for carrying on therein an independent business of his own. White v. Bayley, 10 C. B. (N.S.) 227; 30 L. J., C. P. 253; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 948.

Receipt of Rent by Agents barring Statute of Limitations.]—So long as an agent is in receipt of the rent of land, the Statute of Limitations (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27), s. 3, will not run against his employer; and if a person commences to receive rents as the agent for another, and afterwards continues to receive such rents, without paying them over, he must be presumed to receive as agent till the contrary is shewn. Smith v. Bennett, 30 L. T. 100.

Disclosure of Interest by Agent.]—An agent for sale who takes an interest in a purchase negotiated by himself is bound to disclose to his principal the exact nature of his interest; and it is not enough merely to disclose that he has an interest, or to make statements such as would put the principal on inquiry. Dunne v. English, L. R. 18 Eq. 524; 31 L. T. 75.

In such a case the burden of proving that a full disclosure was made lies on the agent, and is not discharged merely by the agent swearing that he did so, if his evidence is contradicted by the principal and not corroborated. Ib.

A director of a company as the company's agent purchased for the company a property in which, before he became director, he had acquired an interest. The company had gone into liquidation, and a shareholder, whose shares were fully paid up, took out a summons under s. 165 of the Companies Act, 1862, and sought to make the director liable for misfeasance or breach of trust on the ground that the director had allowed the company to make the purchase without disclosing his own interest, and at a price far exceeding the value:—Held, that the application must be dismissed, the evidence adduced by the applicant failing to shew either that the director had not disclosed his interest or that the purchase-price was above the value. Cavendish-Bentinck v. Fenn, 57 L. J., Ch. 552; 12 App. Cas. 652; 57 L. T. 773; 36 W. R. 641; —H. L. (E.)

Right of Agent to Receive Benefit where Principal suffers no Loss.]—A., an agent, held funds belonging to B., his principal, but had accepted bills drawn by B. to the full amount of them. B. paid away the bills to his creditors, who, to relieve A. from liability, and without the knowledge of B., accepted from A. a composition of 10*s.* in the pound, and gave him up the bills, A. then holding funds belonging to B. to the full amount of the bills. B. afterwards became bankrupt, and his assignees brought an action against A. for the difference between the amount of the bills and the composition:—Held, that as B. had been benefited to the full amount of the bills, the payment of the composition was, as between him and A., a full payment of the bills, and therefore that the action was not maintainable. Stonehouse v. Read, 5 D. & R. 603; 3 B. & C. 669.

Agent dealing with Principal.]—An agent cannot turn himself into a principal and deal with his real employers or principals on that footing without full and fair disclosure. Williamson v. Barbour, 50 L. J., Ch. 147; 9 Ch. D. 529; 37 L. T. 698.

An agent, employed to sell land, sold it to a company in which he was interested as a shareholder and a director:—Held, that he was entitled to no commission from his employer in respect of the sale. Salomons v. Pender, 3 H. & C. 639; 34 L. J., Ex. 95; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 432; 12 L. T. 267; 13 W. R. 637.

An agent employed to purchase cannot buy his own goods for his principal, neither can an agent, employed to sell, purchase for himself his principal's goods. Principals may either repudiate such transactions altogether, or adopt and take the benefit of them. Bentley v. Craven, 18 Beav. 75.

Although a confidential relation subsists between the beneficial owner and an agent employed by the trustee for the management of the trust property, yet there is no actual incapacity in the agent to purchase from the beneficial owner, even though the latter has not had the advantage of independent professional advice; in such a case, however, it is not sufficient for the agent to shew that he gave the full value; he must go further, and shew that he dealt with the beneficial owner at arm's length, and after a full disclosure of all that he knew with respect to the property. King v. Anderson, Ir. R. 8 Eq. 147. Reversed, Ir. R. 8 Eq. 625—Ch. Ap.

Although a person who as principal employs a broker to transact business for him in a particular market, is bound by the usage of that market, though unknown to him, provided the usage is one that merely regulates the mode of performing the contract, and does not change the intrinsic character of the contract, yet where the usage is one which gives the broker an interest at variance with his duty, as by converting him into a principal instead of a mere agent to establish privity of contract between two principals, such a usage is not binding on a principal who, being ignorant of the usage, employs a broker to whom the usage is known to perform the ordinary and accustomed duties belonging to the office or employment of a broker. The principal is not bound to inquire what the usage may be, or whether there is any particular usage affecting the market in which he proposes to deal. Robinson v. Mollett, 44 L. J., C. P. 362; L. R. 7 H. L. 802; 33 L. T. 544. Reversing 20 W. R. 544—Ex. Ch.

A Liverpool merchant employed brokers of London to buy tallow for him in the London tallow market. They having other orders, bought in their own name a quantity sufficient to cover all their orders, and by letter they informed the merchant that they had bought on his account so many tons; but they did not mention the name of the seller. A few days after they sent him notice that they were ready to deliver to him so many casks of tallow in fulfilment or part fulfilment of his order, but they did not allude to any third party as the seller. He acknowledged the receipt of these notices without observation. There is a custom on the London tallow market for brokers when they receive orders to contract in their own names, and if their principals refuse to accept or deliver, to buy or sell against them, and charge them with the loss. The merchant was ignorant of this custom. On becoming aware of it, and of the mode in which his order had been executed, tallow having in the meantime fallen, he refused to take the tallow:—Held, that as the brokers were employed to act as brokers only, the custom which converted them into principals was inconsistent with the employment, and as the merchant was ignorant of it when he gave his orders, he was not bound by the custom. Ib.

Held, also, as the first notice sent by the brokers was that they had bought on his account, he was not thereby put on inquiry as to the custom or as to the name of the seller, and he was not bound to accept when it turned out that his own brokers might in fact be the vendors, or to pay them the difference between the price at which they bought and that at which they sold in consequence of his having refused the contract. Ib.

The bankrupt was employed as broker by petitioner, and sold goods for him nominally to A., as appeared by sold-note, but really to A. and himself on a joint account, as appeared by bought-note, and became bankrupt:—Held, a fraud, and sale void, and so much of the goods as then remained in his hands were ordered to be specifically delivered up to petitioner. Huth, Ex parte, Pemberton, In re, Mont. & C. 667; 4 Deac. 294.

Manager obtaining Accommodation from Bank —Duty to Disclose.]—C. was appointed manager of a bank in London, with permission to carry on his separate trade as a merchant. In that character he dealt with the bank of which he was manager on the terms usual between banker and customer. Upon one transaction in his separate trading, being possessed of certain bills for his own benefit, drawn and accepted by two firms reputed to be in good credit, he deposited them with the bank (not indorsing them), and obtained an advance upon them. The transaction was therefore not a discount but a loan. The drawers and acceptors of the bills subsequently became bankrupt :—Held, that C. was liable to make good the loss. Gwatkin v. Campbell, 1 Jur. (N.S.) 131.

A manager of a bank is not entitled to grant himself the same accommodation in respect of his separate trade which he might obtain from an independent banker; and it would be necessary for him, in order to sustain any such transaction, to shew that he had brought the whole circumstances most fully and fairly before the directors. It is not enough to shew merely that he had not concealed anything. If he could shew that he had so brought the circumstances to their knowledge, or that the directors had sanctioned the proceeding subsequently, such a proceeding might, however, be permitted to stand. Ib.

Agent purchasing Property intended to be purchased by Principal.]—A., who was in treaty for the purchase of a house, consulted B., a surveyor, as to the expense of certain alterations; A. not having paid his deposit by a certain time the treaty went off :—Held, that there was no such fiduciary relation between A. and B. as to prevent B. from purchasing the house, although he made the bargain on the very day that A.'s treaty was put an end to. Shaw v. Davis, 3 L. T. 135.

But in a suit to set aside the purchase, B. had to bear his own costs. Ib.

If an agent employed to purchase an estate becomes the purchaser for himself, he is to be considered as a trustee for his principal. Lees v. Nuttall, 2 Myl. & K. 819. Affirming 1 Russ. & M. 53; Taml. 282.

Using Materials gained in course of Employment.]—Agents are not entitled to use the materials gained or collected by them in the course of their employment to the detriment of their principal. Reuter's Telegram Co. v. Byron, (43 L. J., Ch. 661) doubted. Lamb v. Evans, 62 L. J., Ch. 404; [1893] 1 Ch. 218; 2 R. 189; 68 L. T. 131; 41 W. R. 405—C. A.

Action by Agent for Goods Sold.]—In the absence of evidence of custom otherwise, a broker may not treat himself as principal, and sue his employer as for goods bargained and sold. White v. Benekendorff, 29 L. T. 475.

The plaintiffs, as brokers, bought for the defendant upon the 6th January five tons of india-rubber at 2*s.* 11½*d.* per pound, and sent him a bought-note in which the india-rubber was set out as deliverable "during the month of January." A corresponding sold-note was sent to the sellers, at whose instance the plaintiffs struck out "during the month of January," and wrote "forthwith," but did not communicate the alteration to the defendant. On the 7th January, the defendant decided to throw up the contract, and sent an order to the plaintiffs to sell at 3*s.* The plaintiffs could only sell at 2*s.* 10*d.*, and having paid the sellers at the rate of 2*s.* 11½*d.* sued the defendant for the difference :—Held, that the alteration was material—that the plaintiffs could not treat themselves as principals and recover for goods bargained and sold; and that the alteration being material the plaintiffs had paid to the sellers what the defendant was not bound to pay, and consequently could not recover for money paid to the defendant's use. Ib.

A prior contract (at the same price) having been made by the plaintiffs, with other sellers, and cancelled at the instance of such sellers :—Held, per Brett, J., that in making such prior contract, the plaintiffs had exhausted their authority, and had no power to make another. Ib.

S. employed T. & Co., who were cotton brokers in London, to buy 500 bales of cotton for him, telling them to buy gradually at 8¼*d.*, if they could not do better. Cotton could not then have been bought at 8¼*d.* They shortly afterwards passed to S. a bought-note, "Bought on your account 500 bales, &c., at 8¼*d.*" This was signed by T. & Co., as brokers, and at the bottom of the note, a charge of ½ per cent. was made for brokerage. Before delivery of the cotton, S. became aware that they had not, at the time of their passing this bought-note, made any contract for him for the purchase of cotton, but that they had subsequently bought the 500 bales, in their own name, to enable them to make delivery to him, partly at 8$\frac{1}{16}$d. and partly at 7$\frac{15}{16}$d. per pound. S. would not have accepted the bought-note from them if he had known that they were thus acting as principals in the transaction. On becoming aware of the state of circumstances, S. refused to accept the cotton, and an action was brought to recover damages for such non-acceptance. It was proved that there was a custom in the London cotton market that, if a broker bought for his employer of an undisclosed principal, he was liable himself upon the contract :—Held, that the action was not maintainable, as no contract of sale had been made between T. & Co. and S. Tetley v. Shand, 25 L. T. 658; 20 W. R. 206.

T. & Co., before the expiration of the time for the delivery of the cotton, tendered marks of cotton not in accordance with the terms of the contract, but on S. rejecting the same, they, before the expiration of the time fixed for delivery, tendered marks of cotton in accordance with the contract :—Held, that they had not, by the first delivery, broken the contract, so as to justify S. in refusing to accept the cotton subsequently tendered. Ib.

Moneys held in a Fiduciary Character—Advances for Particular Purpose misappropriated by Agent.]—The defendants were brewers, and employed F. as their "malting agent." The regular course of business between the defendants and F. was as follows: F. occupied the malting premises, and took out the necessary licences. It was his duty to buy barley in his own name as principal for cash, to send in to the defendants certain periodical accounts of the barley so bought from time to time and the prices of the same, to submit samples to the defendants, and if the barley was approved of by them to malt it and deliver the malt to the defendants, receiving a commission upon the quantity of barley steeped. The quantity of malt required by large brewers being very great, the brewer, and not the malting agent, provides the capital for the purchase of the barley. In the present case the defendants kept accounts at certain provincial banks, upon which F. was empowered to draw, and from time to time the defendants paid in lump sums to the credit of those accounts, in accordance with current requirements, as shewn by the accounts sent in by F. of barley purchased, but these sums were not intended to, nor did they, represent any payments for any specific barley. F.'s business was to act as malting agent for the defendants exclusively. The defendants paid the duty as the same became payable upon the malt in F.'s premises. F. had fraudulently departed from the regular course of business. Instead of buying barley for cash and applying the balances at the provincial banks in payment for the same, he had been in the habit of sending in to the defendants fictitious accounts of barley purchased, misapplying the sums paid in for his own purposes, and providing the malt needed for the defendants' purposes by purchasing barley or ready-made malt on credit. He likewise from time to time sold barley which had been brought on to the maltings to raise money for his own purposes. The defendants believed, in consequence of the fictitious accounts and other false representations of F., that barley was from time to time purchased for cash, in accordance with the regular course of business, and on the faith thereof continued to pay sums of money into the banks for the purpose of paying for such barley, which they believed were so applied. F. subsequently absconded, leaving upon his premises barley to the value of about 22,000*l.*, and malt to the value of about 35,000*l.*, upon part of which duty had been paid by the defendants. The value of such malt and barley was less than the amount drawn from the banks and misappropriated by F. The defendants seized the barley and malt so left on F.'s premises, and F. having been adjudicated bankrupt, the trustee in bankruptcy sued the defendants for the value of the same:—Held, that the moneys advanced by the defendants to provide for the purchase of the barley, were impressed with a trust; that even if the barley and malt left on the premises of F. were not bought in accordance with the authority given to him, and the legal property in the same was not vested in the defendants, but in F., nevertheless F. was a trustee for the defendants, to the extent of the sums advanced by them, of such barley and malt, the same being either the product of trust moneys, or in substitution for the barley, in payment for which F. ought to have applied such trust moneys; that F. could not have set up his own breach of trust or have been heard to allege that the barley and malt was bought otherwise than according to the authority given to him; that the trustee in bankruptcy could not in this respect stand in a better position than F.; that the barley and malt were not in the order and disposition of F. as reputed owner thereof, it being notorious that "malting agents" are not usually the owners of the barley and malt on their maltings; and that consequently the plaintiff could not recover. Harris v. Truman, 51 L. J., Q. B. 338; 9 Q. B. D. 264; 46 L. T. 844; 30 W.R. 533—C. A.

Letters addressed to Agent at Principal's Office—Rights as to, after Dismissal.]—B. was employed to manage one of L.'s branch offices for the sale of machines, and resided on the premises. He was dismissed by L., and on leaving gave the postmaster directions to forward to his private residence all letters addressed to him at L.'s branch office. He admitted that among the letters so forwarded to him were two which related to L.'s business, and that he did not hand them to L., but returned them to the senders. After this dismissal, he went about among the customers, making oral statements, reflecting on the solvency of L., and advised some of them not to pay L. for machines which had been supplied through himself. L. brought an action to restrain B. from giving notice to the post-office, to forward to B.'s residence letters addressed to him at L.'s office, and also asking that he might be ordered to withdraw the notice already given to the post-office:—Held, that the defendant had no right to give a notice to the post-office, the effect of which would be to hand over to him letters, of which it was probable that the greater part related to L.'s business, and a mandatory injunction was granted to compel the defendant to withdraw his notice, the plaintiff undertaking to open the letters at stated times, with liberty for the defendant to be present at the opening. Herman Loog v. Bean, 53 L. J., Ch. 1128; 26 Ch. D. 306; 51 L. T. 442; 32 W. R. 994; 48 J. P. 708—C. A.

Production of Documents by Agent to Persons appointed by Principal.]—A firm of merchants residing abroad brought an action against their agent in this country claiming production of the documents relating to their business to a person appointed by them for that purpose. The defendant put in a defence stating that the person appointed by the plaintiffs was a clerk in a rival and unfriendly house of business, for which reason he objected to produce the documents to him, but that he was willing to produce them to any proper person. The plaintiffs moved, under Ord. XXV. r. 4, to strike out the defence:—Held, that although a principal had a general right to the production of documents in the hands of his agent to any person appointed by him, he cannot insist on their being produced to an improper person; and therefore the defence disclosed a reasonable answer to the claim. Whether an action for the sole purpose of enforcing the production of documents to a particular person will lie, quære. Dadswell v. Jacobs, 56 L. J., Ch. 233; 34 Ch. D. 278; 55 L. T. 857; 35 W. R. 261—C. A.

6. Liability to Account.

a. Of Agent.

i. Persons Liable.

Land Agent.]—A landowner may maintain a suit in equity against the agent and manager of his estates, if the object of such suit is either to obtain an account (and in that case allegations of fraud or special circumstances are unnecessary), or to obtain the delivery up by the agent of documents in his hands belonging to the landowner. Makepeace v. Rogers, 4 De G. J. & S. 649; 34 L. J., Ch. 396; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 314; 12 L. T. 221; 13 W. R. 566.

Upon a bill filed against the executors of a land steward and paid agent, it was held, that his estate was liable to make good such sums as, but for his wilful neglect and default, he might have received. Salisbury v. Morrice, 11 L. J. Ch. 114.

Co-Factor.]—A surviving factor must account both for himself and his co-factor, though admitted that the executrix of the deceased factor was compellable, and that among merchants the jus accrescendi has no place. Holtscomb v. Rivers, 1 Ch. Ca. 127.

Infant.]—Infant cannot be made to account as factor. Smally v. Smally, 1 Eq. Abr. 6.

Administrator of Apprentice.]—If a merchant employs his apprentice as a factor beyond sea, and he dies, his administrator shall account. Lee v. Bowler, Rep. t. Finch, 125.

Agent also Solicitor.]—It is no objection to a claim or bill filed for an account against a confidential agent that he has been also employed as a solicitor in respect of the same matter. Oddy v. Secker, 2 Sm. & G. 193.

Agent Incapable.]—The nature of the employment of a confidential steward or agent imposes upon him the duty of keeping and rendering proper accounts of all his dealings and transactions with his employer; and where no regular settlement of accounts has taken place between the employer and such steward or agent, there is a right to have the accounts taken under a decree of the court; but a bill by an administrator for such an account was dismissed, with costs, it appearing that the defendant had not undertaken the duty of keeping accounts, and that his education and capacity, as well as the course of dealing between him and his employer, were inconsistent with the notice of his keeping regular accounts. Tindall v. Powell, 4 Jur. (N.S.) 944; 6 W. R. 850.

Agent who has already Accounted.] — A receiver to the guardian of an infant, who has his account allowed him by the guardian, shall not be obliged to account over again to the infant when he comes of age. Clavering's Case, Pre. Ch. 535.

A trustee empowered S. to manage a trust estate. S. accounted to him. The trustee died, yet S. was decreed to account again to cestui que trust. Pollard v. Downes, 2 Ch. Ca. 121.

On suspicious circumstances in the answer a general account was decreed against a steward, notwithstanding a receipt in full, which was allowed only as proof of the particular payment, not of a general release or discharge upon an account stated; though under circumstances it might have that effect, as upon proof that the principal never would give any vouchers, and an account kept by the steward. Middleditch v. Sharland, 5 Ves. 87.

A man swears he received money as a menial servant, and paid it over to his master. He shall not account for it again. Anon., 1 Vern. 136. S. P., Potts v. Potts, Id. 207. But see Id. 95.

Agreement between Agent and Third Party—Gross Sum in Lieu of all Claims.]—A. had long employed B. as his steward, professional adviser, and general confidential agent; disputes having arisen between them, an agreement was entered into between B., and a clergyman acting on behalf of A., by which a gross sum was to be paid to B., in lieu of all his claims; but no accounts or vouchers were rendered or produced by A., nor any bill of costs delivered; that agreement will not protect B. from rendering an account to his principal. Jenkins v. Gould, 3 Russ. 385.

Disputes existing between A. and his solicitor, receiver and confidential agent, B., which involved long and intricate matters of account, an authority was given by A. to a third person, to settle any account in which he, A., had an interest, and to compromise any claims which he might have; such an authority will not empower that third person to make an agreement without the production or examination of any account, that a gross sum should be paid to B. in lieu of all his demands on A. Ib.

Banker.]—A bill for account will lie against a banker by his customers. Bowles v. Orr, 1 Y. & Coll. 464.

Person in Unauthorised Occupation of Premises.]—A. had a title to some houses which, on going abroad, he committed to the care of his brother, who afterwards becoming a prisoner, defendant entered and enjoyed several years:—Decreed, he should account to A. Lister v. Lister, Ca. t. Finch, 285.

Sub-Agent.]—Bill for an account by a principal against his agent and a person employed by the latter as his sub-agent dismissed as against both, notwithstanding the sub-agent had had the entire management of the principal's affairs, and had communicated with him directly on the subject of them. Lockwood v. Abdy, 14 Sim. 437; 9 Jur. 267.

ii. Property Originally Intrusted.

Goods Sold.]—If goods are consigned to a factor for sale on commission, the law will raise a contract to account for such as are sold, to pay over the proceeds, and to deliver the residue unsold on demand; but an action does not lie against him for not accounting till after a demand made for an account. Topham v. Braddick, 1 Taunt. 572; 10 R. R. 610.

If a declaration in an action to recover the price of goods sent for sale on commission alleges that the defendant sold but did not account to the plaintiff, he must prove that a sale actually took place: and it will not be presumed, even at a distance of twelve months after the delivery of the goods. Elbourn v. Upjohn, 1 Car. & P. 572.

Stock Sold to meet Bill of Principal.]—Defendant had stock in the East India funds, in trust for plaintiff, and a bond in his own name from the company, but in trust for plaintiff. Plaintiff being abroad drew a bill on defendant, and promised to send him effects to pay it; defendant accepted the bill; but before it was due, plaintiff failed. Defendant thereupon sold the stock and bond to pay the bill, at a great discount, though at the current price. Two years afterwards the stock and bond having risen in value, plaintiff went to defendant, and desired him to sell and reimburse himself. On a bill by plaintiff for an account:—Held, that the want of effects was sufficient to justify defendant in the sale without orders, for as much as would pay the bill; but it appearing that the produce of the stock alone was sufficient to answer the bill, defendant was decreed to account for the bond according to the value at the time plaintiff gave directions for the sale. Henriques v. Franchise, Pre. Ch. 205.

Freight Forfeited by Nonpayment of Custom Duty.]—If a factor evades the custom of goods due to a foreign prince, and thereby incurs the punishment of a felon, and the forfeiture of the whole freight, he shall have the benefit, for he ran the risk. Smith v. Oxenden, 1 Ch. Ca. 25. S. P., Knipe v. Jesson, 1 Ch. Ca. 76.

Semble, if the factor evades the custom due to the King of England, for that is a fraud. Borr or Borre v. Vandall or Vande, 1 Ch. Ca. 30; Nel. 87.

Injunction Restraining Transfer of Stock bought by Agent.]—Injunction until answer, restraining a transfer of stock standing in the name of a steward, on strong evidence, by affidavit, that it was the produce of his master's property, viz., rents, &c., received for many years without account; refused, as to money at his banker's in his name. Chedworth (Lord) v. Edwards, 8 Ves. 46; 6 R. R. 212.

iii. For Profits.

In what Cases.]—It is an inflexible rule of a court of equity that no agent can be allowed, in the matter of his agency, to make any profit for himself without the knowledge and consent of his principal, and the fact that the principal did not suffer any injury by reason of the dealing of the agent, cannot be taken into consideration in the application of the rule. Parker v. McKenna, 44 L. J., Ch. 425; L. R. 10 Ch. 96; 31 L. T. 738; 23 W. R. 271.

An agent who was to have an emolument beyond his salary, decreed to account for profit made by a clandestine sale to his principal, on his own account, of timber purchased for a colliery: before it was applied to the use of the colliery, some of the owners retired, and it was paid for by those only who remained; the former owners are not necessary parties to a suit by those who remained, against the vendor on account of that sale. Massey v. Davies, 2 Ves. J. 317; 2 R. R. 218.

A person employed, on behalf of himself and co-partners, in negotiating the term of a lease, is not entitled to stipulate clandestinely with the lessors for any private advantage to himself. Where, therefore, a sum of 12,000*l.* was paid in pursuance of such a stipulation, the party receiving it was declared to hold it in trust for the partnership. Before the transaction was discovered, one of the partners withdrew; and subsequently, another partner assigned a share in the stock, and in his proportion of the claim, to persons then admitted into the concern:—Held, that the retired, the continuing, and the new partners were properly joined as co-plaintiffs in a suit to have the trust declared. Fawcett v. Whitehouse, 1 Russ. & M. 132; 4 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 64; 8 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 50.

The plaintiff, in 1868, consigned a ship to G. & Co., in China, for sale, fixing a minimum price of 90,000 dols., and requiring cash payment. G. & Co. employed the defendant in Japan to sell the ship, with the same instructions. This was done with the knowledge and consent of the plaintiff. The defendant, having vainly attempted to sell the ship on the terms mentioned, took her himself for 90,000 dols., and about the same time resold her to a Japanese prince for 160,000 dols., payable as to 75,000 dols. in cash, and the rest on credit. The plaintiff was not informed that the defendant had purchased the vessel himself, or that he had resold it, till June, 1869, after the transaction was completed. The defendant paid 90,000 dols. to G. & Co., who remitted it to the plaintiff, and eventually obtained the whole amount of 160,000 dols. from the Japanese prince. In 1873 the plaintiff filed a bill in chancery to compel the defendant to account for the profit made by him in the resale of ship:—Held, first, that the relation of agent and principal was established between the defendant and the plaintiff, and existed at the time of the purchase and resale of the ship by the defendant, and that he was therefore liable to account to the plaintiff for the profit made by him in the transaction. De Bussche v. Alt, 47 L. J., Ch. 381; 8 Ch. D. 286; 38 L. T. 370—C. A.

A covenanted servant of the East India Company, being a senior merchant, and acting as agent of the company (as resident or chief at one of their factories), is incapable of forming any contract whatsoever, in which the company is interested; so as to derive profit to himself, or any otherwise however than for the profit and advantage of the company. And if any such contract be actually made between him as a merchant dealing for himself, and the company board of trade in India, in which contract undue advantage is taken by him, by means of his knowledge and influence as resident at the factory, he cannot demur generally on ground of want of equity, to bill for discovery and relief by company. Henchman v. East India Co., 8 Bro. P. C. 85; 1 Ves. J. 289.

Servant taking by collusion more than belongs to his office must account; so must a stranger upon a bargain with a servant, which is a fraud on the master. Ib.

The captain of a ship dies leaving money on board, the mate becomes captain, and improves the money, he shall on allowance made him for his care in the management of the money, account for the profits and not the interest only. Brown v. Litton, 1 P. Wms. 140.

Differences.]—B. having bought shares in a company at 2*l.* per share, and knowing that K. was desirous to buy such shares, represented that he knew of some shares which were to be had for 3*l.* or less, and requested K. to give him authority to buy at that price. K. gave him authority, but told B. to do his best for him and to get them for less if possible. B. transferred his shares to K. at 3*l.* per share, pretending that another person was the vendor:—Held, that B. must account to K. for the difference between the price at which he bought and the price at which he sold the shares to K. Kimber v. Barber, L. R. 8 Ch. 56; 27 L. T. 526; 21 W. R. 65.

Fees.]—A. appoints B. his deputy in the execution of an office, and by articles it is agreed, that B. shall account with A. for all fees, &c., according to the table of fees belonging to the office, and pay him three-fourth parts thereof, and retain the other fourth part for his trouble. Certain fees are received by B., which he insists upon being solely entitled to, because not contained in the table:—Held, that B. should account with A. for all fees ascertained by the table, according to the table, and for all fees not mentioned therein according to his receipts, and pay over three-fourths of the whole to A. Machen v. Stanyon, 1 Bro. P. C. 133.

Discounts.]—In the absence of a special agreement an agent is entitled to no more than his commission, and is bound to account to his principal for all profits made and all discounts or other abatements received. If the agent does not so account the principal may dismiss him summarily. Bulfield v. Fournier, 15 R. 176. Affirmed in C. A.

The defendant, being an accoutrement maker, East India and general agent, was instructed to provide a cavalry outfit for the plaintiff's son. The defendant obtained very large discounts from the tradesmen supplying the goods, but charged in his accounts with the plaintiff the full prices as if actually paid by him:—Held, that, although the defendant did not charge any general commission as agent, the amount of the trade discounts must be disallowed. Turnbull v. Garden, 20 L. T. 218.

Bonuses.]—The managing director was before the formation of the plaintiff company a shareholder in two other companies, and in consequence of employing them to supply ice to the plaintiff company's ships, and to take away the fish from them, he received from those companies certain bonuses paid out of surplus profits after payment of dividends at a fixed rate. Under an agreement with the company he was allowed to engage in any other business or venture not prejudicial to the interests of the company, and the articles provided that the directors might enter into contracts, and do business with the company:—Held, that he must account to the plaintiff company for the bonuses, though the plaintiff company could not have obtained them from the other companies. Boston Deep Sea Fishing Co. v. Ansell, 39 Ch. D. 339; 59 L. T. 345—C. A.

Acquiescence or Laches, Effect of.]—Held, secondly, that there had been no such acquiescence or laches on the part of the plaintiff as to disentitle him to relief. De Bussche v. Alt, supra.

Where Rule does not Apply.]—The rule that an agent must account to his principal for any secret profit made in the course of his agency does not apply where the principal is aware that the agent is remunerated by some allowance from the other parties, but is under a misapprehension (but not misinformed) as to its actual extent. Great Western Insurance Co. of New York v. Cunliffe, 43 L. J., Ch. 741; L. R. 9 Ch. 525; 30 L. T. 661.

A marine insurance company in New York employed merchants in this country as their agents to settle claims and grant insurances, and also to effect reinsurances. A percentage was paid by the company on the first two classes of business, but the agents were remunerated as to the reinsurances by the brokerage allowed to them by the underwriters. They charged the company the full amount of the premiums, but were allowed by the underwriters, first, 5 per cent. on the premiums; and, secondly, 12 per cent. on the balance (if any) payable by them to the underwriters on the account for the year, crediting the underwriters with the premiums (less the 5 per cent.), and debiting losses. This was according to the usual custom on the credit system as between brokers and underwriters, but the 12 per cent. allowance was for some time unknown to the company:—Held, that the agents were entitled to both the percentages. Ib.

—— Consignment of Goods for Sale on Commission.]—The plaintiff, a merchant at Manchester, from time to time consigned, for shipment and sale abroad, goods to the defendants, a firm of traders at Manchester, who, with another person, were merchants in India. The defendants shipped their own and the plaintiff's goods to India, where they were sold by the member of the firm there, who purchased with the proceeds of sale other goods, which he remitted to the defendants at Manchester. He also sent to the defendants at Manchester an account, in which the plaintiff's goods sold in India were placed to his credit, and certain bills of exchange for the amount of proceeds of sale, less commission, were debited. These bills, in fact, never existed, but the defendants, in their statements of account with the plaintiff, placed the amount of the imaginary bills to his credit, debiting him with the cash advances made to him on the goods, and paying him the balance:—Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to an account of the profits on the goods purchased in India with the proceeds of the plaintiff's goods, the defendants being commission agents only. Kirkham v. Peel, 44 L. T. 195—C. A. Affirming 28 W. R. 941.

Claim for Damages against Agent, not included.]—A claim against an agent in the nature of damages for neglect of duty cannot be passed as an item in taking an account between principal and agent, but must be enforced in an action at law. Great Western Insurance Co. of New York v. Cunliffe, supra.

Sale on Del credere Commission—Concealment of Buyer's Name.]—In 1879, the plaintiffs, timber merchants, purchased through the defendants, timber brokers, timber to the value of about 70,000*l.*, and placed it in the hands of the defendants for sale on a del credere commission, and received 2,000*l.* as the net profit on the whole transaction. The defendants had sold the timber to M., who was their debtor for large sums, and the plaintiffs alleged that M. was insolvent and that the sale was made under an arrangement that he should become the purchaser of the timber, but that the defendants should again sell the timber, as for M., and receive all the proceeds thereof, and that out of the profits to be realised by the transaction they should repay themselves the debt due to them from M., and that the defendants thereby recouped themselves to the amount of about 15,000*l.* That sum the plaintiffs claimed as profit due to them under the agency contract existing between them and the defendants. M.'s name, as the purchaser of the timber, was not disclosed by the defendants. The defendants alleged that they had acted in the ordinary way of business; that the plaintiffs and M. both happened to be customers of theirs; that the comparatively large profit made on behalf of M. was due to accidental causes; that the 15,000*l.* was, in the ordinary course of business, placed to the credit account of M., and subsequently, at his request, placed against his debit account; that they had never concealed M.'s name from the plaintiffs, but (as they proved) that it was not according to the usual course of business to state the buyer's name in the sold note supplied to the purchaser. The plaintiffs contended that the circumstance of M.'s indebtedness was calculated to bias the defendant's judgment in fixing the price at which M. should buy; that the question in all such cases was whether the agent had a personal interest in the purchase being carried out, in which case the agent was bound, in discharge of his duty, to disclose such personal interest to his principal:—Held, that the defendants had acted honestly throughout these transactions, and in good faith, and had given the plaintiffs the best advice in their power; that a mere expectation on the part of the defendants that the timber would be dealt with according to the course of business with M. in former transactions, was not such dealing on the part of the defendants as the court considered unfair to the plaintiffs. Guy v. Churchill, 62 L. T. 132—C. A.

Duty to Pay over Profits.]—Besides the duty, enforceable in equity, on the part of an agent to account to his principal or employer for all profits made by him in the course of his employment or service, there is also a legal duty incumbent upon him whenever any profits so made have reached his hands, and there is no account in regard to them remaining to be taken and adjusted between him and his employer, to pay over the money as money absolutely belonging to his employer. Morrison v. Thompson, 43 L. J., Q. B. 215; L. R. 9 Q. B. 480; 30 L. T. 869; 22 W. R. 859.

Money so received by an agent and not handed over to his principal may be recovered by the latter as money had and received to his use. Ib.

The defendant having been authorised by the plaintiff to purchase on his behalf a particular ship as cheaply as she could be got, made an arrangement, without the plaintiff's knowledge, with the vendors' broker, who had a right to retain the excess of the purchase-money over 8,500*l.*, by which the defendant purchased the ship for 9,250*l.*, and retained for his own use 225*l.*, part of the excess:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to the amount so retained by the defendant, inasmuch as it was a profit acquired by an agent in connection with his agency, without the sanction of his principal, and that it could be recovered as for money had and received. Ib.

iv. Interest.

Agent not Ready with Accounts.]—The first duty of an agent on receipt of money for his principal is to be constantly ready with his accounts, and neglect in this is a ground for charging him with interest. Pearse v. Green, 1 Jac. & W. 135; 20 R. R. 258.

Agent keeping Money in his hands.]—Agent by the desire of his principal keeping large sums in his hands, for which he was to be responsible from time to time, and duly accounting, not liable to interest even supposing he employed it. Chedworth (Lord) v. Edwards, 8 Ves. 48; 6 R. R. 212.

An agent had the entire management of the affairs of his principal for several years, during which he was never called upon to account; errors were then discovered in some accounts furnished by him, and he paid a small sum admitted to be due, alleging that this was a final settlement, and that only a small sum, if anything more, was due. On a bill being filed, and the accounts being taken, a large sum was found due from him:—Held, that, under the circumstances, fraud not being proved, he was not chargeable with interest on the balances in his hands until the date of the certificate. Turner v. Burkinshaw, L. R. 2 Ch. 488; 15 W. R. 753.

To a bill against an agent for an account and payment of balance due, the defendant answered, that he had paid over more than he had received, and he claimed a balance due to him. It being proved that the balance was against him:—Held, that the defendant was chargeable with interest at 5*l.* per cent. from the filing of the bill. Fry v. Fry, 10 Jur. (N.S.) 983.

Promise to put Money out at Interest.]—Scrivener, &c., receiving money, and giving a note to place it out at interest, is bound to do so, and is not discharged from paying interest for it, unless his employer accepts the security and interest; balance of an account stated by such scrivener, &c., will carry interest. Barwell v. Parker, 2 Ves. 364.

Agent of an administrator keeping money of the intestate's in his hands, which he had proposed to his principal to lay out in the funds, ordered to pay interest with annual rests. Brown v. Southhouse, 3 Bro. C. C. 107.

Interest earned by Agent.]—Public accountants must account for interest made by them on any considerable balances in their hands of money, being the proceeds of public property sold by them pursuant to appointment, although they have necessary payments to make in course of their duty, if their instructions direct payment of proceeds into bank, and point out course of supplying themselves for such necessary payments. Craufurd v. Att.-Gen., 7 Price, 2.

Where not charged on previous Balances.]—An agent had for several years stated accounts with his principals, in which he was not charged with interest on the balances in his hands, but in the last account, settled previous to his discharge, was debited with interest on several half-yearly balances; on his discharge he furnished an account not charging himself with interest; but on a bill filed to enforce payment of the balance then due, interest was given on it. Batemans v. M'Elligott, 7 Ir. Eq. R. 471.

Receiver of a public trust, having a salary, making interest of balances in his hands, is accountable to the trustees for interest made ultra, notwithstanding prior accounts settled without demanding it. Lonsdale (Earl) v. Church, 3 Bro. C. C. 4. See 7 Price, 45.

v. Sufficiency of Accounts.

Account between principal and agent settled from loose papers, the agent having kept no regular books; after his death, liberty was given to surcharge and falsify upon allegation of errors since discovered. Hardwicke (Lord) v. Vernon, 4 Ves. 411; 4 R. R. 244.

Agent or bailiff, confounding his principal's property with his own, charged with the whole, except what he can prove to be his own; and in this instance, the case of a breach of the terms upon which the court dissolved an injunction, the inquiry was directed with costs. The court refused in such a case a prospective direction to admit books, not legal evidence, though usual in a fair case, as where from want of notice of an adverse claim a strict account cannot be given; merely giving liberty to apply upon any question of evidence. Lupton v. White, 15 Ves. 432; 10 R. R. 94.

Agent acting gratuitously charged with loss arising from failure of his bankers, having paid in the moneys to his own account. Agent depositing money with a banker to his own account cannot relieve himself from liability, by informing his principal of the payment, without a correct specification of the particulars. Massey v. Banner, 1 Jac. & Walk. 241 ; 21 R. R. 150. Affirming 4 Madd. 413 ; 20 R. R. 317.

The plaintiff was the commercial agent of the East India Company at Amboyna. It was his duty to send his account to Jones, the company's agent at Banda, to examine and transmit to the governor of Madras. On the plaintiff's accounts there appeared a balance of 1,325 dollars against him ; but on reference to the accounts kept by Jones of the same transactions, instead of a deficiency, 4,771 dollars appeared due to the plaintiff. The company then allowed the 1,325 only :—Held, that this was not a sufficient admission and recognition of the correctness of Jones's accounts as to entitle the plaintiff, without further evidence, to the 4,771 dollars. Farquhar v. East India Co., 8 Beav. 260.

The defendant, in a suit instituted against him as agent for an account, moved that certain accounts alleged in the bill to contain false entries might be produced, on an affidavit that the vouchers were lost, and that he could not otherwise put in a sufficient answer :—The motion was refused with costs. Turner v. Burkinshaw, 4 Giff. 399 ; 2 N. R. 414 ; 8 L. T. 569 ; 11 W. R. 851.

If a decree in any original suit merely directs a common account against an agent, a decree charging him with what he might without wilful default have received cannot be made in a supplemental suit. Connor v. Reeves, 16 Ir. Ch. R. 398.

An agent employed by a testator to collect rents, and continued in that employment by his trustees after his death, furnished accounts showing only the sums received and the names of the tenants who paid them :—Held, that the trustees were entitled to require such an account as would identify the particular properties from which the rents arose. Finch v. Burden, 12 L. T. 302.

vi. Proceedings.

In Equity.]—Bill for account will lie by principal against agent. Mackenzie v. Johnston, 4 Madd. 373. See S. P., Id. 417.

Where the relation between a principal and an agent partakes of a fiduciary character, the court has jurisdiction, and will direct an account, though the receipts and payments are all on one side. Hemmings v. Pugh, 4 Giff. 456 ; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1124 ; 9 L. T. 283 ; 12 W. R. 44.

Demurrer to a bill alleging that the defendant had received sums of money as agent for the plaintiff, the particulars and amount of which were unknown to the plaintiff, and praying for an account and full discovery of every sum of money received by the defendant for the plaintiff, allowed. Ib.

When a bill against an agent for an account alleges certain specific questions that have arisen as the ground for taking the account, and these questions are decided against the plaintiff, the bill will be dismissed. Great Western Insurance Co. of New York v. Cunliffe, 43 L. J., Ch. 741 ; L. R. 9 Ch. 525 ; 31 L. T. 661.

To sustain bill for account there must be mutual demands. The case of dower stands on its own specialities ; so the case of a steward, &c. Dinwiddie v. Bailey, 6 Ves. 141.

—— Where Legal Remedy.]—The bare relation of principal and agent does not entitle the principal to come into equity for an account, if the matter can be fairly tried at law. Barry v. Stevens, 31 Beav. 258 ; 31 L. J., Ch. 785 ; 6 L. T. 568 ; 10 W. R. 822.

The bare relation of principal and agent is not sufficient to entitle the former to relief in equity if the account can be fairly tried at law. King v. Rossett, 2 Y. & J. 33. And see 1 G. & J. 574.

A servant and agent had been in the habit of rendering accounts from time to time of his receipts and expenses, which were duly entered in the books of his principals. Having left their service, he brought an action against them for salary. They thereupon filed a bill for an account, claiming also damages, and denying that the salary was due :—Held, that the accounts could not be opened, that the question of damages and salary was a legal question, and that the bill could not be maintained. Hunter v. Belcher, 2 De G. J. & S. 194 ; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 663 ; 12 W. R. 782.

A principal is not estopped from obtaining relief in equity against his agent, on the ground that he has remedy at law. Williams v. Trye, 23 L. J., Ch. 860 ; 18 Jur. 442 ; 2 W. R. 314.

The illegality of a transaction between principal and agent is not necessarily a bar to a suit in equity seeking for an account of such transactions. Ib.

And see Navulshaw v. Brownrigg, infra.

Intricacy of Accounts.]—A mere general charge that accounts are intricate, and cannot be taken without the assistance of a court of equity, is not sufficient to sustain a bill for an account, unless the bill states circumstances from which it may fairly be presumed that the charge is true. Bowles v. Orr, 1 Y. & Coll. 464.

An account between a banker and his customer consisting of three items only, and interest :—Held, not to be a proper subject for a bill in equity. Foley v. Hill, 1 Ph. 399 ; 13 L. J., Ch. 182 ; 8 Jur. 347.

A bill for an account, by a principal against his agent, is not sustainable where the transaction to which it relates is a single transaction not tainted with fraud, and the plaintiff has a remedy at law. Navulshaw v. Brownrigg, 1 Sim. (N.S.) 573 ; 21 L. J., Ch. 57 ; 15 Jur. 985. Affirmed, 2 De G. M. & G. 241 ; 21 L. J., Ch. 908 ; 16 Jur. 979.

The plaintiff, a merchant in India, consigned goods to A., of Liverpool, to sell on his account, and drew bills against the goods, which A. accepted. A. then placed the goods in the hands of B., his correspondent in London, with instructions to sell them or cause them to be sold, and drew a bill upon B. for 1,680*l.*, which B. accepted on the security of the goods, but with notice that the plaintiff had consigned the goods to A. for sale on his account. A. became insolvent, leaving the bills drawn by the plaintiff unpaid. B. paid the bill for 1,680*l.*, and then sold the goods for 1,300*l.* A bill filed by the plaintiff against A. and B. for an account and payment, by B., of the proceeds of the goods, was dismissed with costs. Ib.

The plaintiff, a solicitor, employed the defendant for some years as an occasional clerk and to collect rents, without having fixed the terms of his remuneration ; and it appeared that there were mutual receipts and payments of money. Upon motion for injunction to restrain the defendant's action at law :—Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to an injunction. The mere fact of mutual receipts and payments cannot be said to give the right to an account in equity. The account must be not merely from the number of items, but from its own nature, so complicated that it could not be taken in a court of law. Fluker v. Taylor, 3 Drew. 183.

By Party jointly interested with Principal.]—A. having admitted B. to an interest in an adventure, B. makes remittances to the agent of the concern in London, which he directs to be carried to the account of A., and he also remits money to A., for A. to remit to the agent on his account; the agent kept the account with A. only :—Held, that B. could not sustain a bill for an account against the agent. Maxwell v. Greg, 6 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 128.

Where notice is given by a party to his agent in a particular adventure, that another person is jointly interested with him in the adventure, this primâ facie imposes upon the agent the necessity of accounting with such other person for his share of the adventure; but this obligation ceases to exist if the transaction shows that it was the intention of such other person, and of the party originally interested in the adventure, that the agents should account solely with the latter. Killock v. Greg, 4 Russ. 285; 28 R. R. 92.

Inclusion of Solicitor's Bills.]—In a suit by a principal against his steward and agent, the decree, in conformity to the prayer of the bill, directed an account to be taken of rents, profits, and timber money received by the defendant on the plaintiff's account; and also directed the master, in taking the accounts, to make the parties all just allowances. The defendant was a solicitor, and had acted as such for the plaintiff, during his stewardship, and bills of course were due to him from plaintiff. The master, at the plaintiff's request, taxed the bills, and in taking the accounts under the decree, included the reduced amounts of them amongst the just allowances to which defendant was entitled. The plaintiff excepted to the report on that account and the court allowed the exceptions. Jolliffe v. Hector, 12 Sim. 398.

Evidence of Overcharge.]—It is the duty of a sworn broker of the city of London to charge his principal only the cost price of articles purchased for him, in addition to his commission, and the principal having averred in an action that the broker had charged him a greater price than the cost price which the plaintiff had paid :—Held, that it was sufficient proof of such averment to produce a running unsettled account between the parties, by which it appeared that the principal had paid more than the amount of the overcharges, although on the whole account, and when the balance, at a subsequent period, was struck, the principal was indebted to the broker in a sum far exceeding such overcharges. Procter v. Brain, 2 M. & P. 284; 3 Car. & P. 536; 7 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 66.

Liability to Discovery—London Brokers.]—See ante, col. 942.

Suit for Account or Action for Negligence.]—A. placed moneys in the hands of her solicitor, who acted also for her as a money scrivener, undertaking to find securities for her. He placed the moneys out on insufficient securities, misrepresenting to her their character :—Held, that as against him, if living, it would have been, and as against his estate after his death, it was not a matter for an action for negligence, but a matter of account between principal and agent, and the client had a right to reject the charges for disbursements on the insufficient securities. Smith v. Pococke, 2 Drew. 197; 23 L. J., Ch. 545; 18 Jur. 478; 2 Eq. R. 308; 2 W. R. 285.

Costs.]—If an agent does not render his accounts within a reasonable time, he must bear the costs of a suit instituted to have the accounts taken, and it will not be any excuse for him that he offered to pay on account a gross sum, which it turns out would have covered all that was due from him. Collyer v. Dudley, Turn. & R. 421; 2 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 15.

An account was directed against the collector, not disturbing accounts settled with the predecessors, with liberty to surcharge, and the defendant, who resisted the account, was ordered to pay the costs to the hearing. Ib.

To a bill against an agent for an account and payment of balance due the defendant answered, that he had paid over more than he had received, and claimed a balance due to him. It being proved that the balance was against him :—Held, that he must pay, in addition to the balance due from him, the costs of suit. Fry v. Fry, 10 Jur. (N.S.) 983.

Agent a Trustee.]—An agent who is empowered to retain in his own hands his principal's money, for the purpose of investment, is a trustee for his principal, and cannot set up the Statute of Limitations as a bar to a suit for an account. Burdick v. Garrick, 39 L. J., Ch. 369; L. R. 5 Ch. 233; 18 W. R. 387.

Where Fraud.]—Interest and costs decreed against a steward upon fraud, wilful concealment, &c., and in such cases generally there is no limitation of time. Hardwicke (Earl) v. Vernon, 14 Ves. 504; 9 R. R. 329.

Incorrect Entries.]—If a company does not discover, and has not the means of discovering, the correctness of entries in a succession of accounts rendered by their agent, they are not, after the decease of the agent, precluded by lapse of time, or by certain shareholders omitting, against opposition, to press for explanations previously asked, from showing that such entries are not only erroneous but fraudulent. Stainton v. Carron Co., 24 Beav. 346; 27 L. J., Ch. 89; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1235.

Where the accounts of an agent acting for a company have been improperly kept, or mystified, and not duly rendered and explained when asked for, the court will direct them to be taken through a period of twenty-five years, though accounts sent in had been acted on, and though shareholders who asked for further information and explanation on such accounts did not persevere to obtain them. Ib.

A large shareholder was the manager of the affairs of a company. He rendered accounts regularly from 1826 to his death in 1851. These accounts were not challenged in his life, but after his death items exceeding 2,000*l.* a year were questioned by the company, for which no vouchers could be produced and no satisfactory explanation given. The account was opened for the whole period of twenty-five years, and it was directed to be taken with special directions. Ib.

Distinction between the cases where the business of a company is conducted by a mere agent and where it is managed by a shareholder who is a quasi co-partner. Ib.

A decree was made in a suit for taking and adjusting a complicated series of accounts. The decree was limited to 1825, under the impression that all previous accounts were correct. Upon discovery that errors existed in the earlier accounts, another suit was instituted, and after proceedings had been taken a compromise was made, under which a sum of 220,000*l.* was paid by the plaintiffs. On motion for an injunction to restrain proceedings in Scotland, a question was made, whether the order for compromise precluded the taking of accounts prior to 1825, or whether that order included all the accounts between the parties. Romilly, M.R., decided that the earlier accounts must be taken, and for that purpose he set aside the compromise. On appeal:—Held, that the compromise was binding from 1825, and the defendants electing to so consider it, the court varied the order of Romilly, M.R., by directing the accounts prior to 1825 only to be taken. Stainton v. Carron Co., 30 L. J., Ch. 713; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 645; 4 L. T. 659—L.JJ.

Request for Special Account.]—A. filed a bill against B., who had been his commercial traveller, charging misconduct and asking for an account during the term of service and payment by way of damages, and stating that in 1861 he had written to B., directing him to send him a special account. B., who denied the misconduct, stated that he had always given A. a general account:—Held, that A. was only entitled to an account since the date of the letter requiring B. to keep an account prospectively. Hunter v. Belcher, 10 Jur. (N.S.) 663; 9 L. T. 501; 12 W. R. 121.

Held, also, that even if any particular damage or misconduct had been proved, the court had no jurisdiction over such a matter. Ib.

Other Cases.]—An account decreed against a land agent for twenty-seven years previous to the filing of the bill under the circumstances, but refused as to certain gratuities received from tenants by the agent with the knowledge of his principal, which were charged to be extortionate, but by the exorbitance of which the principal was not proved to have been a loser, except so far as they were taken as fines. Palmer v. Browne, Beat. 540.

Account against a confidential agent in possession of estates since 1780, without giving any account to his principal, residing in Ireland, and an inquiry into the circumstances of a lease granted under his direction, and in which he took an interest. Ormond (Lady) v. Hutchinson, 13 Ves. 47. Affirmed, 16 Ves. 94.

See Hunter v. Belcher, col. 988.

Fraud of Agent.]—A firm of merchants, formerly carrying on business at Calcutta, sued a firm at Manchester, who had acted as their agents on commission for the purchase and shipping to India of Manchester goods, to have the settled accounts between the parties, extending back for a period of nearly twenty years, opened; and to obtain repayment of certain alleged overcharges made by the defendants in their accounts with the plaintiffs. The defendants were charged with having bought goods at one price and invoiced them to the plaintiffs at an increased price; that having been instructed to buy white goods, they purchased grey goods and got them bleached, charging the plaintiffs more than the price of the grey goods plus the cost of bleaching; that they had not credited the plaintiffs with the discounts allowed to themselves; that they had charged for insurances that they had never effected; that they had sold their own goods to the plaintiffs at a profit; and that they had overcharged the plaintiffs in other ways. The main defences raised were, that the plaintiffs knew of the charges, and that they were in accordance with the custom of the Manchester trade, and that as regarded the insurances which had been charged for but not effected, the defendants had themselves insured:—Held, that the plaintiffs did not know of the overcharges, and that there was no custom of the Manchester trade to make such overcharges. Williamson v. Barbour, 50 L. J., Ch. 147; 9 Ch. D. 529; 37 L. T. 698.

Held, also, that in a case between principals and agents, one case of proved fraudulent overcharge is sufficient to open the accounts between the parties, and that in the present case far more than enough had been proved to induce the court to open the accounts, and that the usual decree for that purpose must be made. Ib.

Account opened, and general account decreed against an agent who was also tenant to his principal, in respect of fraud; and laches in landlord under the circumstances, not an objection. Beaumont v. Boultbee, 7 Ves. 599; 5 Ves. 485.

Fraudulent accounts between a principal and factor opened from the beginning, the court holding that the relief ought not, under such circumstances, to be limited to a right to surcharge and falsify. Clarke v. Tipping, 9 Beav. 282.

A broker or agent being employed by a customer to sell foreign stock, on a day specified by him in a letter of instructions, purchased the stock in the name of his partners, a firm in Paris, at the market price of the day. Being also employed to purchase foreign stock and bonds for his customer, according to his, the agent's, recommendation, he transmitted accounts of the transactions to his employer, with broker's notes, &c., as if he had purchased the stock of third persons. In fact, no stock or bonds were purchased, no transfers were made, no broker's notes passed; but the sales were nominal of stock and bonds remaining in the hands of the agent and his partners, and not set apart to nor appropriated to the customer. In order to effect these purchases, loans of money were made by the agent to the customer, upon agreement that the stock and bonds should remain as a deposit in the hands of the agent, to secure the repayment of money advanced. The stock and bonds were afterwards sold at a loss under the advice of the agent. In 1819 an account of these transactions was rendered, and settled between the customer and the agent; and great loss having been incurred upon the transactions, a large balance was paid by the customer to the agent. Upon bill filed in 1824 all the transactions were set aside, and an account decreed against the agent. Rothschild v. Brookman, 5 Bli. (N.S.) 165; 2 Dow & Cl. 188. Affirming 3 Sim. 153; 7 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 163; 30 R. R. 147.

In Favour of Agent.]—An agent's account in which he charges himself with sums received, is not conclusive against him, as to the fact of those receipts. The account may be opened to let in the fact of the sums not having been received in either of the following cases: If the account on the face of it discloses that the money has not been actually received; if the principal shows by his conduct that he knows the money has not been actually received; or if the principal does not express his dissent to a subsequent correction of the account by the agent, in which correction he relieves himself from the sum with which he had previously charged himself. Shaw v. Dartnall, 6 B. & C. 56; 9 D. & R. 55; 5 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 35; 30 R. R. 246.

A. sends B. as a factor abroad, and commissions him to draw on a foreign merchant, which he does, and so states in the account furnished. A. gives credit for the bills drawn as cash; but the bills are not accepted, by the contrivance of A. B. shall not be concluded by that account, but be paid. Ward v. Praed, Colles's P. C. 57.

b. Of Principal.

Proceedings in Equity.]—It does not follow that, because a principal is entitled to have an account taken in equity as against his agent, the agent has a similar right against his principal, for the right of the principal rests on the trust and confidence reposed in the agent, but the agent reposes no such trust or confidence in the principal. Padwick v. Stanley, 9 Hare, 627; 16 Jur. 586.

—— Where Account Necessary to Determine Remuneration of Agent.]—Where a salary is payable to a servant in proportion to the profits of his employers, the question whether the servant has a right to come into equity for an account and payment, in lieu of suing at law, depends upon whether the accounts are of a too complicated nature to be gone into by a jury. Harrington v. Churchward, 29 L. J., Ch. 521; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 576; 8 W. R. 302.

An agent entitled to receive a commission on business done for his principal cannot, on those grounds alone, maintain a bill for an account against the principal. Smith v. Leveaux, 2 De G. J. & S. 1; 3 N. R. 18; 33 L. J., Ch. 167; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1140; 9 L. T. 313; 12 W. R. 31.

A trading firm agreed to give to an agent a commission on orders obtained by himself, and a commission at a different rate on orders not obtained by him, but given by persons first introduced by him:—Held, that the fact that the agent must in general be ignorant of the latter class of orders did not entitle him to file a bill against his principals for an account of what was due to him for commission, but that his remedy was at law. Ib.

A., by his bill, alleged that he was employed by the defendants to obtain orders for goods on commission; that orders had been given to the defendants in consequence of his introduction, the commission on which they refused to pay; and he prayed for discovery and an account:—A demurrer, on the ground that an account might be taken at law, and that the court had no jurisdiction, was overruled with costs. Shepard v. Brown, 9 Jur. (N.S.) 195; 7 L. T. 499; 11 W. R. 162.

—— Separate Contract with Agent.]—If A. is employed by B. as his agent at a fixed salary, A. may nevertheless enter into a contract, apart from his ordinary duties, to perform works for B., and may come to the court for an account of moneys received by B., to which he considers himself entitled under the contracts. Waters v. Shaftesbury (Earl), 12 Jur. (N.S.) 311; 14 L. T. 184; 14 W. R. 572.

Two deeds were executed between a company, a landowner, and the agent or steward of the latter, the effect of which would have been to constitute the agent contractor for the execution of improvements upon the land, which were about to be effected, for a certain sum of money, to be advanced by the company to the landowner for the purpose. The works having been completed under the agent's superintendence for a less sum, the agent filed a bill against the landowner, claiming as contractor's profit the difference between the actual cost and the sum actually advanced to the landowner by the company:—Held, on appeal, that it was competent to the defendant to show that the intention of the parties, when the deeds were executed, was that the plaintiff should be only nominally the contractor, and the evidence establishing this, that he was not entitled to the profit he claimed. S. C., 15 L. T. 489; 15 W. R. 289.

—— Mutual Dealings.]—An action at law being brought to recover the produce of some foreign specie remitted by a merchant abroad to an agent in London, the agent filed his bill, alleging generally that there were mutual dealings and transactions between the parties, and praying that an account might be taken of them, and for an injunction:—A demurrer was allowed. Frietas v. Dos Santos, 1 Y. & J. 574. See also 2 Y. & J. 33.

For Cost Price of Goods.]—Plaintiff, a factor abroad, having exceeded the price limited for the purchase of hemp, the defendant, who objected to the contract, but afterwards re-shipped and disposed of some of it on a risk, was ordered to account for the cost price. Cornwall v. Wilson, 1 Ves. 509.

Factor exceeds orders on one part, saves on another, the principal to take the whole. Ib.

For Interest.]—The defendant wrote to his receiver and professional agent as follows:—"If you will remit the 400*l.*, I can give you a note for it when you come to London." The money was advanced, but no note signed:—Held, that a special contract must be inferred, and that interest was payable by the defendant. Rhoades v. Selsey (Lord), 2 Beav. 359.

An agent, who managed the money matters and investments of his principal, rendered accounts charging interest on the mortgages as received, and representing that there were no arrears. He also paid over the balances appearing due on such accounts:—Held, that the agent could not, on the death of the principal, charge his estate with the interest, on the plea that it had not been actually received from the mortgagors, but had been advanced by the agent to the principal for his accommodation. He was, however, allowed to use the name of the representatives of the principal to recover what might be due from the mortgagors on giving an indemnity. Owens v. Kirby, 30 Beav. 31.

Agent Establishing Title to Estate—Liability of Principal for Mesne Profits—Estoppel.]—Where an agent had permitted his principal to expend money on an estate, which the agent afterwards claimed as his own, and to which his real representative established a legal title by ejectment, the court granted an injunction to restrain an action brought by the agent's representative for some profits. Cawdor (Lord) v. Lewis, 1 Y. & Coll. 427.

7. INABILITY OF AGENT TO DISPUTE PRINCIPAL'S TITLE.

General Rule.]—An agent cannot dispute the title of his principal; and, therefore, where a ship originally belonging to one of two part owners, had been conveyed to B. for securing a debt, and B. became the sole registered owner of the ship, and afterwards, as agent for both partners, insured the ship and freight, and charged them with the premiums, and, on a loss happening, received the money from the underwriters:—Held, that he was accountable to the assignees of the surviving partner for the surplus, after payment of his own debt, and not to the executors of the deceased partner to whom the ship originally belonged. Dixon v. Hammond, 2 B. & Ald. 310.

Where a merchant in Newcastle, who was in the habit of consigning goods to his agents in London, for sale, and of drawing upon them to certain amounts, had overdrawn his account and advised his agents that he would ship them twenty tons of alkali to cover his draft, and did accordingly ship the alkali on board a ship of the defendants, who were wharfingers between Newcastle and London, and received from the defendants' servant (the captain of the ship) a boat receipt, to the effect, that the goods were to be delivered to the plaintiffs:—Held, that the defendants were estopped from denying the plaintiffs' title to the goods upon their arrival in London. Evans v. Nichol, 4 Scott (N.R.) 43; 3 Man. & G. 614; 11 L. J., C. P. 6; 5 Jur. 1110.

An agent cannot get an adverse title, unless he can distinctly show that the acts on which he relies are in respect of title, and not in respect of agency. Att.-Gen. v. London Corporation, 2 Macn. & G. 247; 2 Hall & Tw. 1; 19 L. J., Ch. 314; 14 Jur. 205.

In a case where A. had agreed to remit certain consignments to B., and B. had agreed to account with A. for the proceeds of such consignments:—Held, that it was not competent at any time afterwards for B. to assert a paramount title to the proceeds of such consignments. Zulueta v. Vinent, 1 De G. M. & G. 315.

A mining company in Cuba had for some time been accustomed to consign its ore to Z., in London, who furnished the money for the necessary supplies. A considerable debt having thus become due from the company to Z., the ore was suddenly consigned to Z. in the name of V., who brought an action against Z. for the proceeds. Z. thereupon filed his bill against the company and V., alleging that the last consignments were the property of the company, and though made in the name of V., were made by the company, and on their account, and for their benefit, and placed to their account; and seeking to restrain the action and have the account taken:—The court held, that the bill stated a sufficient equity, and overruled a demurrer of V. to the bill. S. C., 13 Beav. 215.

M., the manager of E.'s business, was allowed by him to send out bills to the customers in his (M.'s) own name alone. M. afterwards locked E. out of the business premises, and E. several times had to break the lock to get in. M. made an assignment of the premises and stock in trade to P., and P. advertised them for sale. E. filed a bill against M. and P. to restrain the exclusion and the sale. The defendants demurred for want of equity, and the demurrer was overruled with costs. Euchus v. Moss, 14 W. R. 327.

And see ESTOPPEL.

Defence of Jus tertii.]—A contract establishing between the contracting parties the relation of principal and agent, is made absolute in law by the latter acting under it; and an insurance broker cannot, as an agent, dispute the claim of his only known principal, on the ground that other persons were interested in the subject-matter of the insurance; their claims would be a question between the assured and the persons so claiming to be interested. Roberts v. Ogilby, 9 Price, 269; 23 R. R. 671.

The plaintiff, the elder brother and creditor of an intestate, being in possession of the goods of the intestate, under a bill of sale, said that he should not insist on his bill of sale, but that he should divide the goods with the other creditors, and he employed the defendant as auctioneer to sell the goods. After the sale by the defendant, the widow of the deceased gave the defendant notice, through her attorney, not to pay the plaintiff, but to retain the money until all the creditors came in, that it might be divided rateably amongst them. No letters of administration were taken out:—Held, that the defendant was primâ facie bound to account to the plaintiff, from whom he had received the goods; and even if he would have been at liberty to set up the jus tertii, and show as a defence against the plaintiff, that he was bound to account to a third person, still that he was liable, no title being shown by him in any third person. Crosskey v. Mills, 1 C. M. & R. 298; 3 L. J., Ex. 297. See Dickenson v. Naul, 4 B. & Ad. 638; 1 N. & M. 721.

A wharfinger had malt deposited with him, on account of B., and B., as a security for money advanced by the plaintiff, made a sale of the goods to him, with a condition annexed for repurchase by B., at such an advanced price as to make the transaction usurious. The wharfinger, on notice of the sale, transferred the malt in his books from B. to the plaintiff, and held it at the disposal of the plaintiff. B. afterwards became bankrupt; his assignees claimed the malt on the ground that the transaction with the plaintiff was usurious, and that the property had never passed; but they eventually compromised with the plaintiff:—Held, afterwards, in an action against the wharfinger for the proceeds of the malt, as money had and received to the use of the plaintiff, that he could not set up the jus tertii in the assignees, which they themselves had abandoned. Betteley v. Reed, 3 G. & D. 561; 4 Q. B. 511; 12 L. J., Q. B. 172; 7 Jur. 507.

The plaintiff seized goods belonging to R. under a distress for rent of a house alleged to have been demised by him to R., and having seized them he delivered them to the defendant, an auctioneer, for the purpose of selling them. When the sale was about to begin, R. gave notice to the defendant that he must not sell the goods, or if he did sell them, that he must retain the proceeds for him, R., as the distress was void, and as the relation of landlord and tenant did not exist between himself and the plaintiff. This was true, and the distress was void altogether,

The defendant did sell the goods, but kept the proceeds for R. :—Held, that he was entitled to set up the jus tertii, and had a good defence to an action by the plaintiff. Biddle v. Bond, 6 B. & S. 225; 34 L. J., Q. B. 137; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 425; 12 L. T. 178; 13 W. R. 561.

A wharfinger received notice that goods deposited at his wharf were marked with a fraudulent imitation of a trade mark, and that the owner of the trade mark was about to apply to the court of chancery for an injunction to prevent the sale of the goods; after the injunction had been granted, but before the wharfinger had notice that it had been granted, he refused to deliver the goods to the owner:—Held, that he was justified in equity in such refusal, and that the owner of the goods would be restrained from suing him at law, for a wrongful conversion of the goods. Hunt v. Maniere, 5 N. R. 181; 33 Beav. 157; 34 L. J., Ch. 142; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 28, 73; 11 L. T. 723; 13 W. R. 363.

And see BAILMENT.

Delivery to Third Person.]—Where a consignor had purchased goods on account of and at the risk of his correspondent, and delivered them to the carrier:—Held, that he could not afterwards, on any disagreement, depart from his duty, and deliver them to another person; and the latter taking the goods with knowledge of the circumstances would do so subject to the rights of the correspondent. Green v. Maitland, 4 Beav. 524.

An agent in this country for a foreign principal having in his possession goods which by the act of the principal have been so appropriated as to be in equity the property of a third person in this country, and having notice of the rights of the third person, cannot resist the demand of that third person for the goods on the ground that they are held by the agent in his capacity of agent, or impose on the third person, the rightful owner, unreasonable conditions as the price of their delivery to him, because the foreign principal has directed him so to do. Application of this principle in the case of disputed rights as to cargoes of timber and the bills of lading representing them. Dresser v. Hoare, 26 L. J., Ch. 51; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1151—L.JJ.

8. ON SALE OR PURCHASE OF GOODS.

Liability for Price—In what Cases.]—An agent who sells goods on credit is not liable to his principal until he is paid by the vendee, unless the delay in payment was occasioned by his own neglect. Varden v. Parker, 2 Esp. 710.

If an agent discloses the name of the vendee, he is not liable for the price to his principal, unless he acts under a del credere commission. Alsop v. Sylvester, 1 Car. & P. 107.

Goods were consigned to two for sale by commission; upon a dissolution of partnership, the commission to sell was assumed by one:—Held, that, having sold, he was rightly sued for money had and received, which action could not have been maintained against both, although an action for not accounting would have laid against him. Wells v. Ross, 7 Taunt. 403.

Where booksellers undertook to manage the sale of a library, to prepare and be at the expense of printing catalogues and advertising the sales, and settling with the auctioneers, for a commission of 12½ per cent., to include every expense except king's duty and the removal of the books from the country; and also engaged "to be responsible, together with the auctioneers, for the proceeds of the sales":—Held, first, that the employment of certain auctioneers to sell some of the books at the particular desire of the owner of the library, did not release the booksellers from their responsibility, in conjunction with those auctioneers. Cholmondeley v. Payne, 8 Car. & P. 482.

Held, secondly, that the booksellers were not released from such responsibility by the circumstance of the attorney of the owner of the library taking the promissory notes of those auctioneers, instead of requiring certain bills of the purchasers, which they ought to have given, unless he tied up his hands from proceeding against the auctioneers until those bills become due, without first obtaining the consent of the booksellers who were to be responsible together with them. Ib.

The plaintiff employed the defendant, who was a corn factor, to sell a cargo of corn, which he accordingly sold to C. on the 15th May. Information was afterwards received that before this sale the corn had already been sold, on the 24th April, by the captain of the vessel chartered by the plaintiff. This was not known at the time to either of the parties. C. subsequently gave notice to the defendant that he repudiated the contract, on the ground that the cargo did not exist at the time of the sale to him. The plaintiff sought to recover the price of the cargo from the defendant, who was a factor, on a del credere commission:—Held, that the defendant was not liable for the amount, as it was the sale of a cargo which did not exist at the time. Couturier v. Hastie, 5 H. L. Cas. 673; 25 L. J., Ex. 253; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1241.

A commission to sell and transfer stock "when the funds should be at 85 per cent., or above that price," is a particular commission under which an agent is bound to sell when the funds reach 85, and he has not a general authority to act for his employer, so that he may defer selling till the funds should reach a higher price than 85. Bertram v. Godfray, 1 Knapp, P. C. 381.

A mercantile house that had accepted such a commission and had not sold when the funds reached 85:—Held, therefore, in equity to have made the stock their own from that time, and ordered to account to their employer for the price of it, with interest; he in return accounting to them for the dividends he had subsequently received in ignorance of the fact of the funds having reached that price. Ib.

If a broker, being employed to sell goods, sells them for a bill at a given date, and draws on the buyer for the amount, he is answerable on the bill to his principal. Le Fevvre v. Lloyd, 1 Marsh. 318; 5 Taunt. 749; 15 R. R. 644.

Guarantee against Loss.]—A broker, when he bought goods for his principal, agreed for half per cent. to indemnify him from any loss on the resale:—Held, that this undertaking was discharged when the principal had a fair opportunity of selling to advantage, and neglected it, though he was afterwards obliged to sell at a loss. Curry v. Edensor, 3 Term Rep. 524.

Indorsing Bills.]—An agent purchasing foreign bills for his principal, and indorsing them to him without qualification, is liable to the principal on his indorsement, however small the commission which he gets upon the purchase. Goupy v.

Harden, 2 Marsh. 454; 7 Taunt. 159; Holt, N. P. 342; 17 R. R. 478.

Neglect of Instructions—Power to repudiate Acts.]—The plaintiff instructed the defendants, cotton brokers, to purchase for him fifty bales of cotton. The defendants, being also employed by other principals, made a contract in their own names for the purchase of 500 bales, and having informed the plaintiff that they had purchased fifty for him, he paid them part of the purchase-money:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover back the money, as upon a failure of consideration, since the defendants had never made the contract which he had authorised them to make. Bostock v. Jardine, 3 H. & C. 700; 34 L. J., Ex. 142; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 586; 11 L. T. 577; 13 W. R. 970.

—— Delay in signifying Dissent.]—A. consigned and shipped goods to India for sale, and in his letter of instructions to his agent B., directed him to invest the proceeds in specified articles of merchandise or in bills at the exchange of the day, and remit them to England. B., instead of complying with this order, invested the proceeds in a commodity not specified in his letter of instructions, and informed A. of the purchase by letter, and transmitted a bill of lading for the goods, which reached A. on the 29th May, who notified to an agent of B., on the 7th August, his dissent from what had been done, the goods having in the meantime been lost at sea:—Held, that the laches of A., in delaying his notice of dissent so long, discharged B.'s liability; and that the jury was warranted in finding that A. had assented to the purchase made by B. Prince v. Clark, 2 D. & R. 266; 1 B. & C. 186; 1 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 69; 25 R. R. 352.

Sale without Assent of Principal—Misrepresentation—Liability for Charges.]—The plaintiffs, who were cotton spinners, employed a commission agent to sell their goods, and the course of business was for the agent to obtain the assent of the plaintiffs to each sale. The agent transmitted to the plaintiffs the particulars of certain sales, which he represented as having been made to specified purchasers, and afterwards rendered accounts, debiting himself with the purchase moneys, but not paying the balance. He afterwards executed an assignment for the benefit of his creditors, when it appeared that his representations as to his disposal of the goods were untrue, and that he had in fact consigned the goods for sale as and with goods of his own to factors in India, and that the accounts had been settled between him and the factors on the footing of debiting each cargo only with the advances and charges made in respect of that cargo, but that on the whole account there was a balance coming from the factors:—Held, first, that the plaintiffs were entitled to have the proceeds marshalled, and the advances and charges thrown entirely on the agent's own goods. Broadbent v. Barlow, 3 De G. F. & J. 570; 30 L. J., Ch. 569; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 479; 4 L. T. 193.

Held, secondly, that this right was not excluded by the settlement of accounts between the plaintiffs and the agent, or by the former having had upon the agent's books the means of discovering the fraud before a meeting took place of his creditors, at which the plaintiffs attended, and at which the deeds of assignment were agreed to, but at which neither the fraud, nor the claim founded on it, was brought forward; the principle being, that means of knowledge to affect a person with constructive notice must be such as a prudent man might be expected to avail himself of. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that the right was not excluded by the mode in which the factors had rendered their accounts to the agent, nor by their not having themselves set up any claim to marshal the proceeds of the consignment. Ib.

Held, fourthly, that the enforcement of this right did not preclude the plaintiffs from proving under the deed of assignment for the deficiency. Ib.

Power of Agent to compel Principal to Refund.]—If a factor takes a security, payable to himself, from a purchaser of goods, and gives his own security to his principal, without giving the name of the purchaser, the factor cannot compel his principal to refund the money paid him, on failure of the purchaser. Simpson v. Swan, 3 Camp. 291; 13 R. R. 805.

If an agent, in anticipation of the receipt of the amount of sales for his principal, remit such amount, and the purchasers fail to pay, it is not the loss of the agent, but of the principal; contra, if the agent sells on a del credere commission. McLarty v. Middleton, 6 W. R. 379, 853.

Selling for Credit instead of Ready Money.]—A declaration stated that the defendant was retained by the plaintiffs as their broker, to sell goods, and deliver the same, according to the terms of the contract, to such person as should become the purchaser. It then alleged that he sold the goods to P., and P. purchased at certain times of delivery, the amount to be paid on delivery:—Held, that this amounted to an express contract by the defendant with the plaintiffs to deliver what he sold for ready money only. Boorman v. Brown, 2 G. & D. 793; 3 Q. B. 511; 11 L. J., Ex. 437; 11 Cl. & F. 1.

Held, also, that an action of tort was maintainable against the defendant for delivering without the price being paid. Ib.

If consignees abroad, on a del credere commission, specially indorse bills to one of their partners in London for the proceeds of goods, they having advanced money on the goods to the consignor, the consignees must bear the loss on the bills being dishonoured while in the partner's hands. Lucas v. Groning, 1 Stark. 391; 2 Marsh. 460; 7 Taunt. 164.

A declaration stated that, in consideration that the plaintiff would employ the defendant as a coal factor to sell coals on account of the plaintiff, the defendant promised the plaintiff that he would not sell the coals otherwise than for ready money, and alleged for breach that the defendant sold the coals otherwise than for ready money, to wit, at two months' credit:—Held, that the action was not sustained by the production of the following letter of instructions given by the plaintiff to the defendant, and by proof of a sale of the coals at 15*s.* 6*d.* per ton, at a credit of two months: "Please sell for me 250 tons of anthracite coal at such a price as will realise me not less than 15*s.* per ton, net cash, less your commission for such sale." Boden v. French, 10 C. B. 886.

A., a merchant at Liverpool, circulated catalogues of certain goods to be sold by auction, subject to the following condition: "Payment to be made on the delivery of bills of parcels, by good bills on London, to the satisfaction of the sellers, not exceeding three months' date, to be made equal to cash in four months." B., a broker at Liverpool, sent a catalogue to C., a merchant in London, who in return gave him directions to buy certain lots, which B. bought accordingly. Before the sale began the auctioneer stated that payment by known buyers was to be on the usual credit, two and two months; B., as a known buyer, received the goods without giving bills, and forwarded them to C. in London, with an invoice, stating that payment was to be equal to cash at four months; and a few days afterwards B. drew on C. for the amount, at four months from the day of sale, which bill C. accepted, and paid at maturity. Within two months from the sale B. failed, never having given bills to A. for the price of the goods; and A., finding that C. was B.'s principal, sued him for the value:—Held, that he could not recover, as C. would naturally be induced by A.'s catalogue to suppose that B. had given bills for the goods at the time of the delivery, and therefore accepted B.'s draft under a mistake occasioned by A.; and, per Parke, J., the broker B. had not any authority from C. to make a contract for goods to be paid at two and two months, and consequently C. was not bound by it. Horsfall v. Fauntleroy, 10 B. & C. 755; 8 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 259.

Directory or Discretionary Instructions.]—The plaintiffs, who were London merchants, sent to the defendants, who were commission agents in China, goods, to be sold by the latter, on the terms contained in the following letter: "If tea is not obtainable at our limits you may invest one-half of the whole proceeds in silk, at prices not exceeding, &c. If silk is obtainable much below these prices you may substitute it in part for tea, even if the latter is to be had within our limits, at your discretion":—Held, that, on looking at the whole of the letter, the words, "you may invest," were to be construed as directory, and not as giving the defendants a discretionary power. Entwistle v. Dent, 1 Ex. 812; 18 L. J., Ex. 138.

Selling Goods bought for Principal.]—In an action against an agent by his employer for selling goods bought by his principal, a custom allowed as a defence that, in case of default by the principal, the agent might (being personally liable on the purchase) sell on his own account. Lienard v. Dresslar, 3 F. & F. 212.

9. On Receipt of Money.

Duty to Account—Interest from Date of Refusal.]—The first duty of an agent is to be constantly ready with his accounts, and neglect in this is a ground for charging him with interest. Pearse v. Green, 1 Jac. & W. 135; 20 R. R. 258.

A person who has received money as agent is bound not only to account for the same, but also to pay it over to the principal when requested so to do; and, in an action for money had and received, is chargeable with interest on the amount so received from the date of the refusal to pay it over. Pearse v. Green (supra) followed. Harsant v. Blaine, 56 L. J., Q. B. 511—C. A.

Agent giving Security—Whether Discharged.]—A. having directed his agent B. to invest for him 1,850*l.* at 5 per cent., so that he might call in 1,100*l.* of it ready at any time, and B. having, after A.'s death, brought forward a mortgage security to himself for 2,500*l.*, and a deed poll executed by himself, declaring 1,850*l.* of it to be the money of A.:—Held, not to discharge him, and that he must pay the money into court. Every v. Mould, 1 L. J., Ch. 23.

Upon Defeasible Contract.]—Money received by an agent under a defeasible contract ceases to be received to the use of the principal when the contract is defeated; and the agent may show this as a defence against the principal, though the fraud was entirely his, and the principal was innocent of it. Murray v. Mann, 2 Ex. 538; 17 L. J., Ex. 256; 12 Jur. 634.

Through Fraud of Principal.]—Money had and received by an agent, in pursuance of a contract founded on false statements made by his principal, is money had and received to the use of the persons paying the same and not to the use of the principal: and the agent may shew this as a defence against the principal, the fraud being his, and the agent being innocent of it. Stevens v. Legh or Lee, 2 C. L. R. 251; 2 W. R. 16.

Agent Betting for Principal—Wagering.]—The plaintiff employed the defendant for a commission to make bets for him on horses. The defendant accordingly made such bets, and he received the winnings from the person with whom he had so betted. In an action by the plaintiff for the amount which the defendant had so received:—Held, that 8 & 9 Vict. c. 109, s. 18, which makes null and void all contracts by way of wagering, did not apply to the contract between the plaintiff and defendant, and that, therefore, notwithstanding that statute, the plaintiff was entitled to recover in respect of the bets which had been so paid to the defendant. Beyer v. Adams (26 L. J., Ch. 841) overruled. Bridger v. Savage, 54 L. J., Q. B. 464; 15 Q. B. D. 363; 53 L. T. 129; 33 W. R. 891; 49 J. P. 725—C. A.

Illegal Disbursements.]—Money deposited with an agent, and expended by him in illegal disbursements, cannot be recovered from him by the principal, if the principal was at the time aware of the illegal disbursements, or if he subsequently assented to them. Bayntun v. Cattle, 1 M. & Rob. 265.

Paid under False Pretences.]—There is a remedy in equity as well as at law, by a principal against his broker or agent, to recover a sum of money paid to the broker on his untrue representation that he had entered into a contract for his principal, which alleged contract had in fact no existence. Wilson v. Short, 6 Hare, 366; 17 L. J., Ch. 289; 12 Jur. 301.

Wrongful Sale or Pledge of Goods.]—When a factor has raised money by a wrongful pledge of the goods of his principal, it is competent to the latter, in taking the account between himself and the factor, to abandon the goods and treat the money raised thereon as money had and received to his own use. Bonzi v. Stewart, 4 Man. & G. 295; 5 Scott (N.R.) 1; 11 L. J., C. P. 228.

—— Where Agent has Appropriated Sums as Payment.]—A factor in London purchased from time to time silk for R., and paid for the same. Remittances were made by R. generally, and not on account of any particular purchase. A general account current was kept by the factor, and then rendered to and checked by R., and the next account began with the balance of the preceding one. After the purchase of a certain lot of silk by the factor (which R. sold shortly afterwards to the plaintiff), two such accounts were delivered and balances struck in favour of R., showing that the factor had, subsequently to the purchase of this silk, received remittances from R. amply sufficient to cover both its price, and also the preceding items of the account against him. Subsequently, the balance being much against R., the factor sold this lot of silk to recoup himself:—Held, that the accounts showed an election by the factor to appropriate the remittances about the time of the purchase of this lot of silk in payment of the advance on account thereof, and that he was therefore not entitled to sell it, as against the plaintiff, to recoup himself. Siebel v. Springfield, 9 L. T. 324; 12 W. R. 73.

Form of Receipt.] — A., being a stranger, deposited for a particular purpose in the hands of B., a country banker at J., 800*l.* in local bank notes, 635*l.* of which had been issued by C. at D.; B. transmitted the whole of the notes immediately to C., and was credited with the amount in account by the latter, who reissued the notes and stopped payment:—Held, that A. was entitled to recover the whole amount of the notes from B. as cash received by the latter to his use. Gillard v. Wise, 7 D. & R. 523; 5 B. & C. 134; 4 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 88; 29 R. R. 190. And see Price v. Holbeck, 2 Doug. 654.

The plaintiff, a merchant in London, consigned cottons to the defendant and his partners, commission agents at Bombay, with directions to sell the same, and remit the proceeds to the plaintiff in good bills on London. The goods were accordingly sold by the defendant and his partners in Bombay, and produced eight rupees and upwards per piece, but no remittance either in money or bills having been made to the plaintiff, an action was commenced against the defendant, who had come over to England:—Held, that the plaintiff was not prevented from recovering in an action for money had and received by reason of the proceeds having been received, not in English, but in foreign money. Ehrensperger v. Anderson, 3 Ex. 148; 18 L. J., Ex. 132.

When an agent who receives money for a party pays it to another agent of that party, he is bound to pay it in cash, and not merely settle it in an account between that agent and himself, unless he can show an authority from his principal, and that there was an account between the principal and that agent, with a balance in favour of the agent. Hanley v. Cassan, 11 Jur. 1088.

When a person is employed to receive money for another, and he employs a third person to receive it for him, an action for money had and received will not lie against the first without evidence that the money came to the hands of such third person. Matthews v. Haydon, 2 Esp. 509.

Remitting Money received to Principal.] — A defendant being employed to procure payment of a bill, and to remit the produce direct to the plaintiff, remitted it to a third person, whereby it got into the hands of the plaintiff's creditors:—Held, that the defendant was not liable for money had and received. Duncan v. Skipwith, 2 Camp. 68.

A defendant is not liable for a loss where he had collected some debts for the plaintiff, and sent them by the post, according to his direction. Warwicke v. Noakes, 1 Peake, 98; 3 R. R. 653.

Agent employed to Collect Bill—Payment subject to Condition—Cancellation without Authority.] — Where an agent is employed by the holder of a bill to receive payment of it from the acceptor, and receives payment from him clogged with a condition without assent to which the holder is not entitled to retain the money paid, the agent is not entitled to treat such conditional payment as if it were an absolute payment, and to cancel the bill as paid before he has received the assent to the condition. Bank of Scotland v. Dominion Bank, [1891] A. C. 592—H. L. (Sc.)

Loss caused by Sub-agents.]—M. employed R. & Co., bankers in Edinburgh, to obtain for him payment of a bill drawn on a person resident at Calcutta. R. & Co. accepted the employment, and wrote promising to credit him with the money when received. R. & Co. transmitted the bill in the usual course of business to C. & Co., of London, and by them it was forwarded to India, where it was duly paid. R. & Co. wrote to M. announcing the fact of its payment, but never actually credited him in their books with the amount. The house in India failed:—Held, that R. & Co. were the agents of M. to obtain payment of the bill; that, payment having been actually made, they became ipso facto liable to him for the amount received; and that he could not be called on to suffer any loss occasioned by the conduct of their sub-agents, between whom and himself no privity existed. Mackersy v. Ramsays, 9 Cl. & F. 818.

Loss caused by Principal.] — The defendant, the salaried manager of a bank, was appointed treasurer without salary to guardians of the poor under the Poor Law Consolidated Order. A treasurer's account between him and the guardians was duly kept according to the Poor Law Orders; moneys were from time to time paid into the bank of which he was manager to the account of the guardians, and orders signed by the guardians in conformity with the orders were cashed like cheques payable to order. A person in the service of the clerk to the guardians, who was employed to fill up the orders for signature by them, drew a number of orders in such a way that the amounts for which they were drawn could be increased by the insertion of words and figures in the blank spaces; and after signature of the orders, he increased the amounts accordingly. He also forged indorsements to orders so increased in amount, and to others not so increased, and obtained payment of them at the bank. In an action by the guardians against the defendant it was found as a fact that the payment by the treasurer's clerks of the excess was due solely to want of proper caution on the part of the guardians and their clerk in signing the orders fraudulently prepared for their signature:—Held, first, that the negligent drawing of the orders disentitled the guardians to complain of the payment of the excess. Halifax Union v. Wheelwright, 44 L. J., Ex. 121; L. R. 10 Ex. 183; 32 L. T. 802; 23 W. R. 704.

Held, secondly, that, as to the payment on forged indorsements, the account at the bank was in effect the account of the guardians; that the bank was protected by 16 & 17 Vict. c. 59, s. 19; and that as by the act and direction of the guardians the only receipt of moneys on their behalf was a receipt by the bank, the defendant was not chargeable in any other way than as the bank was chargeable; and also that if the account at the bank was regarded as the defendant's account, still, being so kept by the order of the guardians, they could not make any claim against him which he could not enforce against the bank. Ib.

10. AGENTS MAKING PAYMENTS FOR PRINCIPAL.

Direction to Pay—Whether Irrevocable.]—A direction to an agent to pay over the proceeds of a sale is not revocable, if founded upon a valuable consideration. Metcalfe v. Clough, 2 M. & Ry. 178; 6 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 281.

Where a customer directed his bankers to hold a certain sum of money from his private account at the disposal of S., and the bankers accepted the order, but the customer countermanded it before any actual appropriation or payment made:—Held, that such order was revocable, and the bankers, having paid the money to S., after such countermand, were liable to the customer. Gibson v. Minet, 9 Moore, 31; 2 Bing. 7; 1 Car. & P. 247; R. & M. 68; 2 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 99.

Although where an agent has money in his hands belonging to his principal, who orders him to pay it over to a third person, but before payment the principal countermands such order, and the agent afterwards pays it over, he does so in his own wrong, yet, where advances were made under an agreement amounting to the appropriation of the proceeds of a specified cargo by a particular ship, which the agent remitted accordingly:—Held, that he was not responsible for such payment, although his principal had countermanded the order subsequently to the agreement under which the advances were made. Fisher v. Miller, 7 Moore, 527; 1 Bing. 150.

Deductions.]—A. consigned goods to B., with directions to pay over the net proceeds to C. B. employed D. to dispose of them. In an action by C. to recover the proceeds from D., D. is entitled to make the same deductions for freight, &c., as B., who was the owner of the ship in which the goods were brought, might have made. Blackburn v. Kymer, 1 Marsh. 223; 5 Taunt. 584.

In general an agent is not warranted in paying a debt due from his principal without a previous authority, or a subsequent assent. But where a person fills the character of agent to two parties and receives from one a sum on account of the other, which sum he carries to the account, semble, that he may make any deductions afterwards from that sum which the person who paid it would have had a right to make in the form of set-off. Wemys v. Greenwood, 5 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 257.

Recovery of Money paid—Broker acting Without Licence.]—To a declaration for money paid and on accounts stated, a plea that the causes of action accrued to the plaintiff, as a broker in the city of London, about the purchasing and selling for the defendant, in the city of London, of shares, and that he was not duly licensed, is a bad plea, inasmuch as the 6 Anne, c. 16, does not prevent an unlicensed broker from recovering money paid at the request of his employer, or for money due on accounts stated with his employer. Jessopp v. Lutwyche, 10 Ex. 614; 3 C. L. R. 359; 24 L. J., Ex. 65. S. P., Smith v. Lindo, 4 C. B. (N.S.) 395; 27 L. J., C. P. 196. Affirmed on appeal 5 C. B. (N.S.) 587; 27 L. J., C. P. 335; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 974; 6 W. R. 748.

To a declaration on two bills by drawer against acceptor, a plea that he retained the plaintiff to act as his broker in the city of London, and to enter into contracts in the city of London for the defendant in the purchase of stock and shares, and to pay, in and about completing such contracts and purchases, moneys, and that, in pursuance of such retainer, the plaintiff entered into contracts for the purchase of shares; and as incidental thereto paid for the defendant, in and about completing such contracts and purchases, moneys; that the plaintiff was not, at the time of the retainer and employment, and making such contracts and purchasing such shares, or paying such moneys, a broker duly licensed within the city of London; and that the bills were accepted by the defendant and received by the plaintiff on account of money due from the defendant to the plaintiff for his having entered into the contracts, and paid such moneys, is bad on general demurrer, on the ground that, as the words incidental thereto were ambiguous, it did not appear by the plea that the payment of the moneys was a necessary part of the plaintiff's duty as broker, and forasmuch as the contract in such case was not void; and although the plaintiff could not recover any recompense for his services, yet he was entitled to recover the money he had paid at the defendant's request. Pidgeon v. Burslem, 3 Ex. 465; 18 L. J., Ex. 193.

—— In Effecting Illegal Contract.]—If an agent effect an illegal contract, he cannot recover from his principal the sum he has paid in effecting it, though he proves an express promise by the principal to pay him. Bailey v. Rawlins, 7 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 208.

—— Agents opening Joint Account—Cheques Signed by One only—Joint Action.]—Two of the electors of a borough went to a banker there, and said they wished to draw cheques upon the bank. The banker promised to honour any cheques they might draw. The cheques drawn were signed by one only, but the account in the banker's books was opened in the joint names:—Held, that they might maintain a joint action against the candidate, in whose interest they were, if he adopted the payments made. Brembridge v. Roberts, 5 Car. & P. 186.

11. RIGHT OF AGENT TO INDEMNITY AGAINST LOSS.

Loss due to Agent's Negligence—Damages.]—Commission agents were authorised by principals to sell on their account certain oats; the agents sold the same with a warranty, but without disclosing the names of their principals; the oats not answering the warranty, the agents were compelled to make a reduction in the price:—Held, that they could not recover the damage they thus sustained from their principals, as they had chosen to sell in their own names, and as there was no privity of contract between them and their principals which would create a guarantee that the oats were of a specific quality. Johnson v. Osborne, 3 P. & D. 236; 11 A. & E. 549; 1 Jur. 943.

Expenses incurred by Agent.]—An agent employed to buy goods to be paid for at a future day paid for them out of his own money, for the purpose of obtaining the discount allowed by the seller. The principal, with knowledge of these facts, directed the agent to clear the goods at the custom-house, which, in the ordinary course of business, would be done after payment of the price by the agent for his principal:—Held, an adoption of the previous payment of the price, and that the agent might sue the principal for the price as money paid to his use at his request. Sentance v. Hawley, 13 C. B. (N.S.) 458; 7 L. T. 745; 11 W. R. 311.

A charge made by an agent for the sale of goods against his principal, for an allowance in respect of warehousemen's salaries, disallowed, no such claim having been made in the accounts for fourteen years. Gray v. Haig, 20 Beav. 219.

Claim by the agent for expenses on account of the principal which, from the conduct of the agent undertaking the business without authority or agreement, could not be ascertained, disallowed. Beaumont v. Boultbee, 11 Ves. 358.

A foreign agent upon whom the entire management of a ship devolves, under circumstances of great distress, and who acts bonâ fide, is entitled to be equitably supported. The Tartar, 1 Hag. Adm. 1.

In conducting Litigation.]—Where an agent has a general authority to receive and sell goods, and out of the proceeds to repay himself his advances, charges, and commission, the costs of an action, with a reference thereof, against a wrong-doer, who withholds the possession of the goods, bonâ fide incurred for the recovery of the goods, are legal charges upon the goods, and may be set off by the agent in an action brought against him by his principal for the balance of the proceeds of the goods. Curtis v. Barclay, 7 D. & R. 539; 5 B. & C. 141; 4 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 82.

A principal is liable to reimburse his agent for the amount of damages incurred by him in defending an action on behalf of his principal, if the agent can show that the loss arose from the fact of his agency, that he was acting within the scope of his authority, that if he exceeded his instructions in the contract he entered into, such excess has been waived and the contract ratified by the principal, and that the loss was not attributable to any fault or laches on his own part. Frixione v. Tagliaferro, 4 W. R. 373—P. C.

The indemnity due from a principal to his agent covers solicitor and client's costs incurred by the agent, and it makes no difference whether the contract of indemnity is expressed or implied. Wells and Croft, In re, Official Receiver, Ex parte, 15 R. 169; 72 L. T. 359; 2 Manson, 41.

A., a broker, contracted with B. for the purchase (on behalf of C.) of certain goods. C. refusing to accept the goods, B. sued A. for breach of the contract. C. had notice of the proceedings, but repudiated his liability, and A. defended the action unsuccessfully. In an action by A. against C. for the damages and costs paid and incurred by him in the first action, C. paid into court enough to cover the damages only, and it was left to the jury to say whether A., in defending the former action, had pursued the course which a prudent and reasonable man would have done in his own case. The jury having found for the plaintiff:—Held, that A. was entitled to recover the costs. Broom v. Hall, 7 C. B. (N.S.) 503.

Agent to buy Shares—Recovery of Difference paid.]—If a party authorises a broker to buy shares for him in a particular market, where the usage is that, when a purchaser does not pay for his shares within a given time, the vendor, giving the purchaser notice, may resell, and charge him with the difference, and the broker, acting under the authority, buys at such market in his own name, such broker, if compelled to pay a difference on the shares through neglect of his principal to supply funds, may sue the principal for money paid to his use. Pollock v. Stables, 12 Q. B. 765; 5 Railw. Cas. 352; 17 L. J., Q. B. 352. S. P., Bayliffe v. Butterworth, 1 Ex. 425; Bayley v. Williams, 7 C. B. 886; 18 L. J., C. P. 273.

Stockbrokers and members of the London Stock Exchange, on the 28th of August, 1856, at the request of A., bought for him twenty shares in a bank, to be paid for on the settlement day, which was on the 15th of September, and duly forwarded to him the usual brokers' contract note. The bank stopped payment on the 3rd of September, and ultimately became bankrupt on the 11th. A. repudiated the transaction, and gave the brokers notice not to pay the price on his account. They having been compelled according to the rules of the Stock Exchange to pay for the shares on the settlement day, sent A. the certificates and transfers, and upon his declining to accept them, sued him for money paid:—Held, that they were entitled to recover, notwithstanding the stoppage of the bank, and the refusal of the directors to consent to a transfer of the shares. Taylor v. Stray, 2 C. B. (N.S.) 175; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 540. Affirmed 2 C. B. (N.S.) 197; 26 L. J., C. P. 287; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 964; 5 W. R. 761—Ex. Ch.

In equity the liability of a principal to indemnify his agent is not confined to actual losses, but extends to all the liabilities of the agent incurred on behalf of the principal. Lacey v. Hill, Crowley's Claim, 43 L. J., Ch. 551; L. R. 18 Eq. 182; 30 L. T. 484; 22 W. R. 586.

C., broker for H., entered into contracts for purchase of stock for the next settling day (15th of July, 1870). The contracts were in the usual form, subject to the rules and usages of the Stock Exchange, and the broker's notes from time to time sent to H. also had these words. When that day arrived C., by request of H., and relying on a promise of H. to settle on that day the amount then due to C. for brokerage and losses, continued the contracts till next settling day. H. did not settle his account on the 15th. On the 16th the Norwich Bank, in which he was partner, stopped payment, and H. became in fact insolvent. C. was thereupon declared a defaulter on the Exchange. According to the rules, all his transactions were immediately closed. No loss accrued to the principal by the closing of the transactions before the next settling day. Subsequently C. was readmitted to the Stock Exchange, on payment of a composition, but not the full amount of his debts. After such readmission, members of the Stock Exchange were in effect forbidden by the rules of the Exchange to sue him for the balance of previous losses without the leave of the committee, which was rarely, if ever, granted, but no legal release was given to him. In a creditors' suit instituted for administering the estate of H., C. claimed for the whole amount shown to be due to him for brokerage and losses, by an account made up on the footing of all transactions being closed on the day of the insolvency of H., the amount of claim being calculated on the full amount of the liabilities of C. in respect of the contracts for stocks, and not the amount that he had actually paid on those contracts:—Held, first, that on the insolvency of H. the transactions might be closed according to the rules of the Stock Exchange, without affecting the right of C. to an indemnity from H. Ib.

Held, secondly, that C. not having had a legal release from claims under the contracts, but being still liable in law for the full amount, was entitled to claim against the estate of H. for the full amount of losses on the contract, including not only what he had actually paid, but also the amount for which he was legally liable. Ib.

The defendant employed the plaintiff, a broker on the Stock Exchange, to purchase shares, which he accordingly did. Before the settling-day the plaintiff became a defaulter on the Stock Exchange through inability to meet his engagements, and, in accordance with the rules of the Stock Exchange, the accounts which he had opened were closed as between himself and the jobbers at the then current prices as fixed by the official assignee of the Stock Exchange. The account in respect of the shares bought for the defendant when closed, as above-mentioned, showed a balance in favour of the jobbers against the plaintiff. According to the practice of the Stock Exchange such closing of the account does not affect the client if he, nevertheless, desires to have the contract completed, and is not in default to the defaulting broker; and the jobber in that case is bound to complete on the settling-day. The plaintiff, on the same day when he was declared a defaulter and his accounts closed, subsequently informed the defendant that he could either have the contract completed as above-mentioned, or he might accept the official prices. The defendant said he would do the latter:—Held, that the defendant having ratified the closing of the account before the settling-day, was liable to indemnify the plaintiff against the amount for which the plaintiff was liable to the jobbers on such closing. Duncan v. Hill (L. R. 8 Ex. 242) distinguished. Hartas v. Ribbons, 58 L. J., Q. B. 187; 22 Q. B. D. 254; 37 W. R. 278—C. A.

—— Continuing Contract.]—A broker is not entitled to recover from his principal differences on stock which he purports to carry over on his behalf when there is no existing contract between such broker and any third party available for the principal at the time when such differences arise. Skelton v. Wood, 15 R. 130; 71 L. T. 616.

—— Agent omitting to do something made necessary by Statute.]—The defendant employed the plaintiffs, who were stockbrokers on the Corn Exchange, to buy shares in a joint stock banking company. He had on many previous occasions employed the plaintiffs to buy similar shares, and on none of those occasions did the contract or advice note forwarded to him specify the distinguishing numbers of the shares purchased. The plaintiffs purchased the shares from a jobber on the Stock Exchange in the usual way, and forwarded to the defendant a contract note in the usual form, stating that the contract was made subject to the rules and regulations of the Stock Exchange. The contract was not made with reference to any distinguishing numbers of the shares, nor did the contract note specify any numbers. It is not the practice on the Stock Exchange to specify the numbers of the shares in dealing in bank shares. The defendant before the settling-day wrote to the plaintiffs repudiating the contract, on the ground that the numbers of the shares were not specified pursuant to 30 & 31 Vict. c. 29. s. 1. Notwithstanding such repudiation, the plaintiffs completed the contract and paid for the shares. By the rules of the Stock Exchange the committee only recognise the members of the Stock Exchange as the parties to contracts, and if a member does not carry out a contract he may be declared a defaulter and expelled from the Stock Exchange, and "no application, which has for its object to annul any bargain on the Stock Exchange, shall be entertained by the committee unless upon an allegation of fraud or wilful misrepresentation." The plaintiffs sued the defendant to recover the price of the shares paid by them:—Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to recover. Seymour v. Bridge, 54 L. J., Q. B. 347; 14 Q. B. D. 460.

The defendant instructed the plaintiffs, stockbrokers of Bristol, to purchase for him shares in a joint stock banking company on the London Stock Exchange. The plaintiffs gave directions accordingly to their London agents, brokers on the London Stock Exchange, who purchased the shares from jobbers on the Stock Exchange in the usual way, without having in the contract distinguishing numbers of the shares, it not being the practice on the London Stock Exchange to specify the numbers or otherwise comply with 30 & 31 Vict. c. 29 (Leeman's Act), s. 1. By the rules of such Stock Exchange it is provided that the Stock Exchange shall not recognise in its dealings any other persons than its own members, such members, if they do not carry out contracts, being liable to be expelled from the Stock Exchange, and that no application to annul a contract shall be entertained by the committee of the Stock Exchange unless upon a specific allegation of fraud, or wilful misrepresentation. Before the settling day the defendant repudiated the contract, but the committee of the Stock Exchange refused to annul the contract, and therefore the plaintiffs completed it, and paid the price of the shares. The defendant was ignorant of the usage of the London Stock Exchange with regard to dealings in shares of banking companies, and did not know that the purchasing broker was by such usage bound to perform a contract for the purchase of banking shares, though void at law under Leeman's Act:—Held, that the plaintiffs were not entitled to recover from the defendant the money paid by them as the price of the shares, since the usage of the Stock Exchange to disregard Leeman's Act, and to recognise as valid a contract which was made contrary to that act, was unreasonable as against strangers who did not know it, and therefore was not binding on the defendant. Perry v. Barnett, 54 L. J., Q. B. 466; 15 Q. B. D. 388; 53 L. T. 585—C. A.

A. having instructed his brokers, B. & Co., to purchase shares in the O. Bank, received from them a bought-note stating the purchase of shares from C. (a jobber), but according to the usual practice on the Stock Exchange, not specifying the registered numbers of the purchased shares.

Between the date of purchase and the settling day the bank stopped payment, and proceedings were taken to wind it up. A.'s solicitors thereupon wrote B. & Co. repudiating the contract for purchase contained in the bought-note, on the ground that the contract was illegal and void, being in contravention of 30 Vict. c. 29, and giving notice that if they completed it, it would be at their own risk. On the same day A. wrote a private letter to B. calling attention to the formal letter, "and I wish you clearly to understand that whatever position you may have to assume with regard to them (the shares), I consider myself fully bound to support you." The name of A., as the purchaser of the shares, was returned to C. by B. & Co., and on receiving a transfer and the share certificates, the money was paid by them to the transferor's brokers. A. refused to execute the transfer, and returned it to B. & Co., in whose possession it remained, without, for some time, any intimation to the vendor that A. repudiated the transaction :—Held, that as the liability of C. (the jobber) in respect of the shares had ceased on the acceptance of the transfer by B. & Co., it followed that A., though he had not executed the transfer, had in the circumstances, and not by definitely repudiating the authority given to B. & Co. as his agents, become equitable owner of the shares, and bound to indemnify the vendor against all loss and liability in respect of them. Loring v. Davis, 55 L. J., Ch. 725; 32 Ch. D. 625; 54 L. T. 899; 34 W. R. 701.

Authority to Sell Shares on Stock Exchange.]—A person who employs a broker to sell shares on the Stock Exchange authorises such broker to make a contract of sale in accordance with the rules and regulations there in force, and undertakes to indemnify the broker against any liability incurred by him under those rules, unless the rules relied on by the broker are either illegal or unreasonable and not known by the principal. Harker v. Edwards, 57 L. J., Q. B. 147—C. A.

Turf Agent—Repudiation of Bet before Payment.]—The plaintiff, a turf commission agent, was employed by the defendant to make bets for him in the plaintiff's name. After the plaintiff had so made some debts, but before he had paid those which were lost, the defendant repudiated the bets. On the settling day, the plaintiff, who was a member of Tattersall's, paid the bets, as, if he had been a defaulter, he would have been subject to certain disqualifications in connection with racing matters, and he then sued the defendant for the amount so paid :—Held (Brett, M.R., dissenting), that he was entitled to recover the amount. Read v. Anderson, 53 L. J., Q. B. 532; 13 Q. B. D. 779; 51 L. T. 55; 32 W. R. 950; 49 J. P. 4—C. A.

Acceptance of Bill by Agent.]—Quære, whether a commission agent is entitled to be indemnified out of the proceeds of his principal's goods sold by him against all liabilities incurred by him on account of his principal, including the amount of an accommodation bill drawn by the principal and accepted by such agent. Hood v. Stallybrass, 3 App. Cas. 880; 38 L. T. 826; 27 W. R. 1—P. C.

If a broker advances money, and gives his acceptances on the credit of goods lodged in his hands, the owner cannot demand them without a full indemnity; and giving his counter-acceptances, or those of any other person, to the amount of those given by the trader, and becoming payable at the same time, is not a sufficient indemnity. Pulteney v. Keymer, 3 Esp. 182.

12. Agent's Lien.

For General Balance.]—A factor has a lien on his principal's goods for the general balance due to him. Godin v. London Assurance Co., 1 W. Bl. 104.

If A. deposits goods with B. for sale, and B. promises to pay the proceeds to A. when sold, B. has no lien on them (if not sold) for the balance of his general account arising upon other articles. Walker v. Birch, 6 Term Rep. 258.

On Bills.]—Bills remitted to a factor or a banker, while unpaid, are in the nature of goods unsold, and, on failure of the factor, must be returned to the principal, subject to such lien as the factor may have thereon. Zinck v. Walker, 2 W. Bl. 1154.

Goods must be in Possession.]—A factor has no lien on goods for a general balance, unless they come into his actual possession. Kinloch v. Craig, 3 Term Rep. 119, 783; 4 Bro. P. C. 47; 1 R. R. 664.

A factor can only claim a lien for his general balance upon goods which come to his hands as factor. Dixon v. Stansfield, 10 C. B. 399.

Factor gains a lien on goods consigned to him from his correspondent for the balance of his account, as well as for the duties, &c., and may retain for such balance; but if he parts with the possession of the goods to the owner, he loses the lien for the balance of accounts. Kruger v. Wilcox, Ambl. 252; Dick. 269; 1 Ken. 32.

Where the defendants, as brokers, contracted for a quantity of stones, to remain on the premises of the vendor, rent free, for one month, and after that at a certain rent, to be paid by their principal, who subsequently gave orders for the removal of part, and directed that the residue should not be removed until further orders from him :—Held, that, never having in fact been in the possession or control of the brokers, they had no lien upon the goods for their general balance. Taylor v. Robinson, 8 Taunt. 648; 2 Moore, 730.

On Policy of Insurance.]—A. & Co., who carried on business at Hull as merchants, factors, ship and insurance brokers and general agents, had had various dealings as factors with B. & Co., of London. Whilst these dealings were going on between them, B. & Co. wrote to A. & Co. requesting them to get a policy of insurance effected for them on a ship, for a voyage from the Downs to South America, and thence to the West Indies. A. & Co. procured the insurance to be effected. B. & Co. remitted them the premiums, the policy remaining in the hands of A. & Co. :—Held, that A. & Co. were not entitled to hold the policy as a lien for the general balance due to them as factors from B. & Co. Dixon v. Stansfield, 10 C. B. 399.

As a Surety.]—A factor who becomes surety for his principal, has a lien on the goods sold by him for his principal, to the amount of the sum for which he has so become surety. Drinkwater v. Goodwin, Cowp. 251.

If a broker advances money, and gives his acceptances on the credit of goods lodged in his hands, he has a lien on them, and may retain them until the owner gives him a full indemnity. Pulteney v. Keymer, 3 Esp. 182.

For Sums due in futuro.]—A principal gave notice to his factor of an intended consignment of a ship to him for the purpose of sale, and in consequence drew bills on him, which the factor accepted: and then the principal died, and his executors directed the captain of the ship to follow his former orders; who, thereupon, delivered the ship into the possession of the factor, who sold the same:—Held, that the factor had a lien upon the proceeds, as well for the amount of money disbursed by him for the necessary use of the ship on its arrival, and for the acceptances by him actually paid, as for the amount of his outstanding acceptances not then due. Hammonds v. Barclay, 2 East, 227.

Not Transferable.]—The right of lien being personal cannot be transferred by any tortious act of the broker. M'Combie v. Davies, 7 East, 5; 3 Smith, 3; 8 R. R. 534.

Effect of Special Agreement.]—An agreement by a broker that he will sell goods for his principal, and pay over the whole proceeds without setting off a debt then due to him from his principal, is not binding upon the broker so as to deprive him of his legal right of lien. M'Gillivray v. Simpson, 9 D. & R. 35; 2 Car. & P. 320; 5 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 53.

Factor's lien both for his expenditure on the goods in his possession, and his general balance, lost by a special contract for a particular mode of payment. So in various trades. Cowell v. Simpson, 16 Ves. 280; 10 R. R. 181.

A. agreed to sell goods to B. to be accounted for in part of a debt to B.; C., with notice, agreeing to sell the goods as factor, not allowed to retain for a debt to him from A. Weymouth v. Boyer, 1 Ves. J. 416.

Special Instructions.] — An agent who is entrusted with the possession of goods for the purpose of sale does not lose his character of factor, or the right of lien attached to it, by reason of his acting under special instructions from his principal to sell the goods at a particular price, and to sell in the principal's name. Stevens v. Biller, 53 L. J., Ch. 249; 25 Ch. D. 31; 50 L. T. 36; 32 W. R. 419—C. A.

Right of Crown conflicting.]—Goods in the hands of a factor, on which he had a lien for advances, were seized by the crown under an extent:—Held, that the lien of the crown overrode that of the factor. Att.-Gen. v. Trueman, 11 M. & W. 694: 13 L. J., Ex. 70. See Att.-Gen. v. Walmsley, 12 M. & W. 179; 13 L. J., Ex. 66.

Of Wharfinger.]—Goods consigned to a factor for sale, and by him deposited in the warehouse of a wharfinger, cannot be held by the latter to answer his general demand against the factor. Mellish v. Cattley, 5 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 74.

Personal Remedy as well as Lien—In What Cases.]—Where a factor makes advances he has a personal remedy against the principal as well as a lien on the fund; and this is the same whether the factor has or has not a del credere commission, except that when the factor having a del credere commission has sold the goods, he cannot sue the principal for advances which are covered by the price of the goods, that price being warranted to the principal by the guarantee arising out of the commission. Graham v. Ackroyd, 10 Hare, 192; 22 L. J., Ch. 1046; 17 Jur. 657; 1 W. R. 197.

Where the owner of goods was indebted to a factor in a sum exceeding their value, and consigned them to him for sale; and the factor, being indebted to S. in more than their worth, sold them to him, and afterwards became bankrupt; and on a settlement of accounts between S. and the assignees of the factor, the former allowed credit to them for the price of the goods, and then proved the residue of his claim against the estate:—Held, that, as the factor had a lien on the whole price of the goods, such settlement of accounts between the vendee and the assignees was a good answer to an action against the vendee for the price of the goods, brought either by, or on the account of, the original owner. Hudson v. Granger, 5 B. & Ald. 27; 24 R. R. 268.

In Case of Bankruptcy.]—W. was appointed agent of a company for the sale of goods manufactured by them. Part of the arrangement was that the company should draw on W. against the goods assigned to him as agent. W. accepted a bill for 200*l.* at four months' date; before the bill arrived at maturity the company was ordered to be wound up, and the goods then in possession of W. were taken by the liquidators and sold by them. W. honoured the bill when it arrived at maturity:—Held, that W. had a lien on the goods to the extent of the payment by him in respect of the bill, and that he was entitled to be repaid the amount paid by him, out of the proceeds of the sale of the goods. Pavy's Patent Felted Fabric Co., In re, 45 L. J., Ch. 318; 1 Ch. D. 631; 24 W. R. 507.

S., who had for many years traded as a timber merchant in his own name, entered into an agreement with F. & Co., who were also timber merchants, to carry on his business henceforth as their agent at a remuneration by way of a share of profits. The business was henceforth carried on under this agreement, but in the name of S. as before. S. dealt with the timber in his possession as if he were the absolute owner of it (except as between himself and F. & Co.), and there was nothing done to inform the outside world of the change which had taken place. In the course of the business F. & Co. drew bills on S., which he accepted in his own name to be protected by F. & Co. Both F. & Co., and afterwards S. filed liquidation petitions. Before S.'s liquidation F. & Co.'s trustee demanded the timber in his hands, which was refused:—Held, that to the extent of the current bills S.'s estate had a lien on the timber. Fawcus, In re, Buck, Ex parte, 3 Ch. D. 795; 34 L. T. 807.

A business, the property of A., was carried on with his capital and for his profit by B., his agent, in the name of the latter, at a fixed salary. A. having become bankrupt, B. filed his bill, stating that by reason of the use of his name he had become liable to a heavy amount for the concern, which was insolvent, notwithstanding the bankruptcy of A., and praying for an injunction to restrain the assignees from in any way intermeddling with the concern:—Held, that B. had a lien on the business, to the extent of his liabilities, and an injunction was granted. Foxcraft v. Wood, 4 Russ. 487; 28 R. R. 161.

Where agents abroad are in disburse for their principal, and upon being doubtful of his circumstances, make bills of lading to their own order indorsed in blank, notwithstanding these bills of lading come to the principal's hands; yet, if the agents' partner in London writes them word that their principal is become bankrupt and desires them to send the bills of lading, and an order to the captain to deliver the goods to him, he may retain them for himself and company against the assignees under the commission till paid and reimbursed so much as the partnership is in advance. Snee v. Prescot, 1 Atk. 245.

13. Bankruptcy of Agent.

Rights of Principal—To Goods.]—If a factor becomes bankrupt and the merchant's goods are not mixed with his, the assignees shall not have them. Paul v. Birch, 2 Atk. 621.

Merchant's goods in hand of factor are not liable to debts of a superior nature; otherwise of money. Whitecomb v. Jacob, 1 Salk. 160.

Where goods consigned to a factor continue in specie, and are found in his hands at the time of the bankruptcy, the principal is entitled to them and not the creditors at large. Dumas, Ex parte, 1 Atk. 234; 2 Ves. 582. Godfrey v. Furzo, 3 P. Wms. 186. Mace v. Cadell, Cowp. 233.

—— To Bills and Notes.]—Also, if notes and not money be taken for the goods, they shall belong to the principal. Ib.

Bill sent by a correspondent to a merchant to be applied to a particular use; if merchant becomes bankrupt before the money is received, the correspondent has a special lien and shall be preferred to the general creditors; aliter, where bills are sent on a general account. Oursell, Ex parte, Ambl. 297.

A custom of exchanging acceptances existed between the bankrupt and the other houses through the agency of B., notes were sent by the petitioner to B., but never exchanged as bankruptcy intervened and they were stolen from B., and never formed any item in any settlement of accounts between B. and the assignees:—Held, the petitioner could not recover the value of the notes from the assignees. Watson, Ex parte, Maberly, In re, 1 Mont. & Ayr. 685.

E. Rights and Liabilities of Principals and Third Parties.

1. Rights of Principal Against Third Party.

a. Action on Contract of Agent.

When Principals Undisclosed.]—When a contract is entered into by an agent in his own name, the principal may sue upon it, even though it is in part to be performed by the agent personally. Phelps v. Prothero, 16 C. B. 370; 3 C. L. R. 906; 24 L. J., C. P. 225; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1170.

Although an agent enters into an agreement for the purchase of an estate in his own name, and appears to act on his own account, yet, on the vendor's default in completing the purchase, the principal may maintain an action for the deposit in his own name. Norfolk (Duke) v. Worthy, 1 Camp. 337; 10 R. R. 749.

The rule that an undisclosed principal may sue and be sued upon mercantile contracts made by an agent in his own name, subject to any defences or equities which without notice may exist against the agent, is applicable to policies of marine insurance under the Canadian as well as under the English law. Browning v. Provincial Insurance Co. of Canada, L. R. 5 P. C. 263; 28 L. T. 853; 21 W. R. 587.

But in assumpsit on a charterparty executed not by the plaintiff but by a third person who in the contract described himself as "owner of the ship":—Held, that evidence was not admissible to show that such person contracted merely as the plaintiff's agent. Humble v. Hunter, 12 Q. B. 310; 17 L. J., Q. B. 350.

If a broker enters into a contract for an undisclosed principal, the latter may sue on such contract in his own name; and a rule of the exchange, on which the contract was made, which declares that a contract made by a broker for an undisclosed principal shall be regarded as the contract of the broker only, does not control this right, even although the principal was cognisant of such rule. Humphrey v. Lucas, 2 Car. & K. 152. S. P., Langton v. Waite, 37 L. J., Ch. 345; L. R. 6 Eq. 165; 18 L. T. 80; 16 W. R. 508.

There is in general sufficient privity of contract to maintain an action, if the party actually making the contract with the defendant was acting for the plaintiff, and intended at the time to make the contract for him, though the defendant was not aware that the contract was made for the plaintiff. Cooke v. Seeley, 2 Ex. 746; 17 L. J., Ex. 286.

The name in which a contract is made is primâ facie evidence of the party for whom the contract was made; but it is not conclusive, except by the custom of trade in the case of bills of exchange. Ib.

Brokers very often transfer stock without the principal being so much as mentioned, and yet he may maintain an action against the person to whom the stock was transferred. Lissett v. Reave, 2 Atk. 394.

Contract, whether with Principal or Agent.]—In an action for the price of goods sold, the fact that the party who took the order from the defendant called himself a "commission agent," and exhibited plaintiff's prospectus (there being no evidence that plaintiff sent an invoice to defendant or that defendant sent any order to plaintiff), will not be any evidence of a liability to the plaintiff. And if the party who took the order agreed that he would allow the defendant a certain discount off the prices specified, this will tend to show that the contract was with him as principal. Burton v. Furniss, 27 L. J., Ex. 139.

Where an agent treated with defendant as principal, but, on the delivery of the goods, the ticket was made out in the principal's name, it was held in an action for the price by the principal, that the defendant was bound to inquire into the nature of the agent's situation, and should not continue to treat him as principal. Pratt v. Willey, 2 Car. & P. 350.

Principal must accept Burdens of Contract.]—Where a contract has been entered into by one man as agent for another, the person on whose behalf it has been made cannot take the benefit of it without bearing its burthens. Bristowe v. Whitmore, 4 L. T. 622.

Prior Contract by Agent—Delivery.]—If an owner of goods places his goods for sale in the hands of an agent, and that agent, for the purpose of implementing a prior open contract made by him, delivers those goods to the person who has made that contract with him, in such a way that upon delivery the sale becomes complete, and the obligation to pay the price arises, that is just as much a sale of his principal's goods to that person, and just as much makes the purchaser liable to his principal, as if there had been no contract before the goods were delivered. North-Western Bank v. Poynter, 64 L. J., P. C. 27; [1895] A. C. 56; 11 R. 125; 72 L. T. 93—H. L. (Sc.)

Repudiation by Third Party — Subsequent Ratification by Principal.]—Where a contract has been entered into by one as agent, although without his principal's authority, the principal may ratify and enforce the contract, notwithstanding that the other party thereto has in the meantime repudiated it. Bolton v. Lambert, 58 L. J., Ch. 425; 41 Ch. D. 295; 60 L. T. 687; 37 W. R. 434—C. A.

Subsequently to some negotiations between A., a director of the company, and L., an offer by letter was made by L. to the company to take from it a lease of its property. On the 9th December, 1886, A. wrote to L. saying that his offer should be laid before the directors, and on the 13th December, 1886, A. again wrote to L. to inform him that the directors accepted his offer, and that the company's solicitors had been instructed to prepare the necessary documents. On the 13th January, 1887, L. wrote to the company alleging that he had discovered that he had been misled as to certain facts, and stating that he therefore withdrew all offers made to the company. An action was thereupon brought by the company against L. claiming specific performance of the contract, and damages. It appeared that at the time when A. wrote accepting L.'s offer he, although acting perfectly bonâ fide, had not in fact obtained the formal authority of the company to enter into the contract, and that the contract was not ratified by the company until after L.'s repudiation thereof: — Held (applying the maxim, Omnis ratihabitio retrotrahitur et mandato priori æquiparatur), that the ratification by the company related back to the date of the contract; and that therefore the repudiation by L. was of no avail, notwithstanding that the company itself was not bound by the contract until the ratification thereof took place. Ib.

Ignorance of Principal—Whether Knowledge of Agent is Knowledge of Principal.]—The plaintiffs, a firm of underwriters, instructed Glasgow brokers to effect a reinsurance on an overdue ship. The Glasgow brokers thereupon telegraphed to their London agents to insure at the rate named by the plaintiffs. The London agents replied stating the market rate. Meantime the Glasgow firm received information of the loss of the vessel, and, without communicating this to the plaintiffs or to the London agents, telegraphed to the London agents in the plaintiff's name to insure at the market rate. Subsequent negotiations were carried on directly between the plaintiffs and the London firm, who effected a reinsurance at a higher rate than that originally named by the plaintiffs. Upon an action being brought against underwriters of this policy, the jury found that the Glasgow firm were employed to effect the insurance, and that it was effected through their agency:—Held, upon this finding, that, there having been concealment of material facts by the Glasgow firm, the plaintiffs could not recover upon the policy. Blackburn v. Haslam, 57 L. A policy of marine insurance effected through a broker is not rendered void by the non-disclosure of a material fact which was unknown to the assured and to the broker, though it had come to the knowledge of a different broker while previously employed by the assured to effect another policy in respect of the same risk. Privity of Contract—Foreign Principals.]—When a foreign correspondent instructs his English agents to order goods for him in this country, the person contracting with the agent to supply such goods is not, although he knew for whom the goods were intended, liable to an action for breach of his contract at the suit of the principal. Elbinger Actien-Gesellschaft v. Claye, 42 L. J., Q. B. 151; L. R. 8 Q. B. 313; 28 L. T. 405.

A foreign company entered into negotiations through S. & Co., London commission merchants, for the supply, by C., of certain railway wheels and axles; and he, in consequence, had an interview on the 29th of January at S. & Co.'s office with S., one of the partners, and H., the managing director of the foreign company; and C. signed in a diary of S. the following entry: "Mr. C. offers to supply 150 sets of wheels and axles (describing them) at 31*l.* per set, to be delivered free on board at Hull during February and March. This offer to remain open until the 3rd of February." On the 3rd of February S. & Co. telegraphed and wrote, "We confirm the order for 150 sets of wheels and axles," repeating the terms of the offer. Some of the sets were delivered by C., the invoices being made out to S. & Co., and they paid for them; but the delivery of most of the sets was after March, and the company sued for a breach of the contract. At the trial it was objected that the contract was with S. & Co., and not with the company. The judge left it to the jury to say whether the contract was with S. & Co., or with the company. The jury found for C.:—Held, that the direction and verdict were right. Ib.

When a foreign principal orders goods of a broker here, who buys them in his own name, though the vendor knows he is acting as agent, and the broker pays the vendor the purchase-money, which he afterwards receives from his principal, and it turns out that the goods were not in existence at the time of the contract, the principal cannot recover back the money paid from his agent, the broker, but must proceed against the vendor for it. Risbourg v. Bruckner, 3 C. A firm of London stockbrokers received from C., a country stockbroker, a power of attorney executed by the plaintiff, who resided abroad, authorising them to sell certain stock for the plaintiff. They effected the sale, but credited C. with it in his account with them. C. subsequently became bankrupt :—Held, that the defendants were liable to refund the moneys to the plaintiff, as the credit to C. was not a payment to the plaintiff; and that, though the power of attorney to sell came to them through C., the defendants were not entitled to treat the plaintiff as a foreign principal, and so to act as if C. only were their principal. Bridges v. Garrett (L. R. 5 C. P. 451) distinguished. Crossley v. Magniac, [1893] 1 Ch. 594; 3 R. 202; 67 L. T. 798; 41 W. R. 598.

The plaintiffs, who were landowners in New Zealand, were in the habit of shipping wheat from New Zealand to England for sale on the London market, taking bills of lading which made the wheat deliverable to themselves in London, and indorsing these bills to M. and T., merchants and factors at Glasgow, with instructions to sell the wheat in London. M. and T. having no house or agency in London, were themselves in the habit of indorsing these bills of lading to the defendants, who were corn-factors and brokers in London, for the purpose of their selling there the wheat. When any sales were effected, M. and T. delivered account sales to the plaintiffs in the usual form, deducting a del credere commission of 3*l.* per cent., whilst the terms upon which the defendants were employed by M. and T. were different, being a factorage of 2*l.* per cent., and not a del credere commission. The indorsement of the bills of lading by the plaintiffs to M. and T. and by M. and T. to the defendants was in each case only for the purpose of selling the wheat and without the intention of passing any property in it. The plaintiffs knew that the sales effected for them by M. and T. in London were made by brokers employed by M. and T., but the plaintiffs were in no way parties to the particular contracts of sale, nor were their names disclosed upon them. The defendants effected sales of certain cargoes of wheat which had been so consigned for sale by the plaintiffs in the above mode, and paid the proceeds into their own account with their bankers, and from time to time made remittances to M. and T. on account of them; but upon reference to the defendants' books of account the proceeds of the particular cargoes could be separated and identified. M. and T. carried on a business at Leith as well as at Glasgow, and they employed the defendants in respect of both, and when they stopped payment, which they did, they were indebted to the defendants upon the Leith account, but not on the Glasgow account. The plaintiffs having brought an action against the defendants for the net balance of the proceeds of the said cargoes of wheat after deducting the remittances made to M. and T. in respect thereof, but without giving credit due to them from M. and T. on other transactions, the jury found at the trial, first, that the plaintiffs did not, through their agents, employ the defendants to sell and account for the proceeds of the wheat; secondly, that the defendants knew, or had reason to believe, that M. and T. were acting in the sales as agents for a third person :—Held, that the plaintiffs were not entitled to recover, as there was no privity of contract between them and the defendants, and the defendants did not stand in any fiduciary character towards the plaintiffs so as to entitle the latter to follow the proceeds of their property in the defendants' hands, and as, whatever right the plaintiffs might have had as owners to claim the wheat before it had been sold, they had no right, after such sale, to the proceeds without giving credit for the sum due to the defendants from M. and T. on their general account. New Zealand and Australian Land Co. v. Watson, 50 L. —— Right of Third Party to Sue.]—A. and B. agreed with C., on behalf of a company intended to be formed, that A. and B. should sell and the company buy a certain business, and it was a term of the agreement that sixty guineas should be paid to J. and P., solicitors, for their expenses and charges in registering the company. The memorandum of association adopted this agreement, and the directors subsequently ratified it. An order having been made for winding up the company, J. and P. claimed to prove for the sixty guineas :—Held, that a contract between A. and B. and the company, to which J. and P. were in no way parties, that the company should pay money to J. and P., would not entitle J. and P. to proceed against the company. Gregory v. Williams (3 Mer. 582; 17 R. The mere fact that a company has received and adopted the benefit of services performed by a solicitor employed by the promoter in transactions preliminary to the formation of the company, even where the company has agreed with the promoter to pay such preliminary expenses, will not give the solicitor any right to sue the company except through the promoter. There is a distinction where a statutory obligation to pay is specially imposed upon the company. Rotherham Alum and Chemical Co., In re, Peace, Ex parte, 53 L. J., Ch. 290; 25 Ch. D. 103; 32 W. In May, 1863, a father, on the occasion of the admission of his son as an underwriting member of Lloyd's, addressed to the managing committee of that body a letter, by which he held himself responsible for all his son's engagements in that capacity. Lloyd's was then a voluntary association, governed by certain bye-laws, under which a person once admitted a member could not be excluded from membership except in the event of his bankruptcy or insolvency. In 1871 the society was incorporated by act of parliament, all the rights of the committee on behalf of the members being vested by the act in the corporation. In 1876 the father died, and notice of his death was shortly afterwards given to Lloyd's. In 1878 the son became bankrupt and thereupon ceased to be a member of Lloyd's :—Held, that the committee of Lloyd's, and the corporation of Lloyd's as their successors, were trustees of the benefit of the guarantee for all the persons, whether members or outsiders, with whom the son had contracted engagements as an underwriting member, and that the corporation could maintain an action to enforce the guarantee against the father's estate for the benefit of all those persons, on the ground, as to the outsiders, that the brokers, through whom the son's engagements with them were contracted, were trustees for their principals of the right which they themselves had to call on their own agents, Lloyd's, to enforce the guarantee for their benefit. Lloyd's v. Harper, 50 L. J., Ch. 140; 16 Ch. D. 290; 43 L. T. 481; 29 W. R. 452—C. A.

b. Fraud of Agent.

Payment of Money.]—Where an agent has made an agreement with a contractor which amounts to a fraud on his principal, the principal may rescind the contract with the contractor and receive back money paid under it. Panama and South Pacific Telegraph Co. v. India-rubber, Gutta-percha, and Telegraph Works Co., 45 L. Where a draft for money was intrusted to a broker to buy exchequer bills for his principal, and the broker received the money and misapplied it by purchasing American stock and bullion, and afterwards absconded, but was taken before he quitted England, and thereupon surrendered to the principal the securities for the American stock and the bullion, who sold the whole and received the proceeds:—Held, that the principal was entitled to withhold the proceeds from the assignees of the broker, who became bankrupt on the day on which he so received and misapplied the money. Taylor v. Plumer, 3 M. & S. 562; 2 Rose, 415; 16 R. R. 361.

When a broker or other agent intrusted with the possession and apparent ownership of money pays it away in the ordinary course of his business for onerous consideration, then the transaction, if fraudulent as between the agent and his employer, will bind the latter unless he can show that the recipient of the money did not act in good faith with his (the employer's) agent. Money misapplied by a stockbroker in payment to his bankers of a debt due to them can be recovered from the bankers by the principal to whom the money belonged only where it can be shown directly or by inference that the banker or his representative knew that the money was being misapplied. Thomson v. Clydesdale Bank, 62 L. A manager of a bank obtained the signature of A. to a cheque, purporting to be drawn upon the bank by A., under the pretence that it was a receipt (A. being unable to read it), and then paid him a private debt of his own with the bank's money. The transaction was entered in the books of the bank as a loan from the bank to A., upon his cheque:—Held, that the banker was not entitled to maintain an action against A. to recover back the money, the cheque having been obtained by the fraud of his agent. Foster v. Green, 7 H. & N. 881; 31 L. Agent's Debt to Bank charged on Principal's Account.]—An agent, but without the knowledge or authority of his principal, and the general manager of a bank without the knowledge or authority of the bank directors, concerted for their own purposes the following scheme, which the court held to be entirely void for fraud, and not binding on the principal. Two accounts were opened with the bank in the respective names of the agent and of the principal. The agent, on behalf of his principal, requested the bank to honour the agent's cheques and guaranteed repayment, all moneys standing to the credit of the principal to be charged with such repayment. The agent paid to his principal's account 1,500*l.*, belonging to the principal, and drew on his own account for a like sum, which he spent in promoting the scheme. He drew other cheques on his own account, and paid the proceeds to his principal's account as moneys belonging to the principal. Thus in the bank books the agent's account stood with a large debit, and the principal's account stood with an equal credit charged with the guarantee. The principal having brought an action against the bank to recover the whole amount standing to his credit:—Held, that he could recover 1,500*l.*, his own money, but not the residue, which never had been his money. British and American Telegraph Co. v. Albion Bank, 41 L. J., Ex. 67; L. R. 7 Ex. 119; 26 L. T. 257; 20 W. R. 413.

Pledge of Securities.]—Dividend warrants on which the bankrupts in their character of stockbrokers were intrusted to receive the dividends, and which they had pledged for their own debt, were ordered to be delivered up to trustees, who had employed the bankrupts as their brokers. Gregory, Ex parte, Wakefield, In re, 2 Mont. D. & D. 613.

Assignment of Goods.]—Bill for the delivery up of specific chattels deposited by the plaintiff with A., his agent, which A. fraudulently contracted to assign to B., and B. advertised to be sold; and for an injunction to restrain the sale by B., and to restrain A. and B. from parting with the goods, the goods being still in the possession of A., the agent. Demurrer by B. overruled. Wood v. Rowcliffe, 3 Hare, 304; 13 L. J., Ch. 293; 8 Jur. 771.

H., a commission agent, being employed by B. to effect sales of goods at B.'s risk, had goods consigned to him by B., to be forwarded to W. H. fraudulently sent these goods to R. on his own account, and afterwards assigned his property to trustees for the benefit of his creditors. A balance was due from R. to H.:—Held, that B. was entitled to the balance due from R., in part discharge of the amount due to him (B.) from H., and to prove under the assignment for the balance. Broadbent v. Barlow, 3 De G. F. & J. 570; 30 L. J., Ch. 569; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 479; 4 L. T. 193.

Gratuity given to Agent.]—When a secret gratuity is given to an agent with the intention of influencing his mind in favour of the giver of the gratuity, and the agent, on subsequently entering into a contract with such giver on the behalf of the principal, is actually influenced by the gratuity in assenting to stipulations prejudicial to the interests of his principal, although the gratuity was not given directly with relation to such principal contract, the transaction is fraudulent as against the principal, and the contract is voidable at his option. Smith v. Sorby, 3 Q. B. D. 552, n.

Secret Commission paid to Agent by Contractor—Liability of Contractor.]—The defendant, a coal merchant, obtained contracts through the intervention of H., the plaintiffs' gas manager, for the delivery to the plaintiffs of coal at a price in excess of the current market price. The excess, it was agreed between the defendant and H., was to be paid to the latter, and it was in part paid as a bribe. The plaintiffs, on discovering the fraud, brought an action against H. in the chancery division to recover the amount of the bribes that he had received, but afterwards entered into an agreement with him that on his depositing in a bank securities for 10,000*l.*—an amount taken to be equivalent to the sums received by H. from the defendant and other contractors as bribes—the plaintiffs would bring such actions against former contractors, at the expense of H., as he might direct. It was further agreed that when the amounts recovered in such actions amounted to 10,000*l.*, and on receipt by the plaintiffs of that sum, together with all costs, they would give H. a full discharge, and that in the meantime the chancery action should be stayed. If by a specified date the plaintiffs had not succeeded in recovering the sum of 10,000*l.*, the securities deposited were to be realised, and that sum, or any balance remaining due, was to be paid over to the plaintiffs. After the securities had been deposited in pursuance of the agreement, and after a sum of 4,000*l.* had been recovered by the plaintiffs from other contractors in respect of contracts obtained through the intervention of H., the plaintiffs brought an action against the defendant for damages, or, in the alternative, for money had and received. The judge at the trial held that the agreement could not be set up either as a defence to the action, or in reduction of damages, and directed a verdict for the plaintiffs for the full amount paid by them to the defendant in excess of the current market price of the coal:—Held, that the fraud committed by H. in accepting the bribe was separate and distinct from the fraud in respect of which the action was brought against the defendant, and that the latter was not relieved from liability by reason of the previous action brought by the plaintiffs against H. for the recovery of the amount of the bribes paid to him; that the agreement between the plaintiffs and H., not being under seal, was not binding upon them; but that even if it were to be treated as binding, it did not amount to a release of H., but only to a suspension of the plaintiffs' right of action against him, and that it could not therefore affect the liability of the defendant. Salford Corporation v. Lever, 60 L. J., Q. B. 39; [1891] 1 Q. B. 168; 63 L. T. 658; 39 W. R. 85; 55 J. P. 244—C. A.

c. Payment to Agent when a Discharge.

i. To Agents Generally.

An agent authorised to sell goods has, in the absence of advice to the contrary, an implied authority to receive the proceeds of such sale. Capel v. Thornton, 2 Car. & P. 352.

The plaintiff placed goods in the warehouse of E. & Co., at Huddersfield, for sale, and while they were there he sold two parcels to the defendant, who resided in London. After the defendant had paid the plaintiff for one parcel, he received a letter from T., clerk to E. & Co., inclosing invoice of the other parcel, requesting payment, and stating that E. & Co. were authorised to receive the money for the plaintiff. The letter purported to be signed by E. & Co., per procuration of the plaintiff. The defendant remitted the amount as requested; but T. intercepted the letter at the office of E. & Co., and appropriated the money. T. only had authority from the plaintiff to receive payments over the counter for the goods deposited:—Held, that the receipt by T. was no payment to the plaintiff. Kaye v. Brett, 5 Ex. 269; 19 L. J., Ex. 346.

M., the plaintiffs' traveller, having received an order from the defendant, a customer, the plaintiffs wrote to M. expressing their unwillingness to execute the order until a former account was settled, adding, "We should like to draw upon him for the former," mentioning the amount. M. showed this letter to the defendant, and obtained from him an acceptance at three months' date payable to "my order," with a blank for a drawer's name. The bill was paid at maturity, but not to the plaintiffs, M. having filled up the blank with his own name, and fraudulently negotiated the bill. In an action to recover the value of the goods for which the bill had been given, it was proved that on one occasion at least the defendant had accepted a bill drawn by him in blank, which had been received by the plaintiffs as payment; but there was no evidence to show the form of that bill:—Held, that neither the letter nor the former dealing was any evidence of authority in M. to draw the bill in question, so as to sustain a plea of payment. Hogarth v. Wherley, 44 L. J., C. P. 330; L. R. 10 C. P. 630; 32 L. T. 800.

The defendant purchased copyhold land in a manor, and was admitted by C., who had been appointed by the steward of the manor as his deputy to admit the defendant. C. also acted as the defendant's attorney in completing the purchase. Nine days afterwards, the defendant gave C. a cheque for 87*l.* 10*s.* 8*d.*, viz. 78*l.* 15*s.* for the lord's fine, 4*l.* 11*s.* 8*d.* steward's fees, and 4*l.* 4*s.*, C.'s own charges as the defendant's solicitor. This cheque was crossed by the defendant, at the request of C., to C.'s bankers, and they retained the money in discharge of a debt due to them by C., who had overdrawn his account. In an action by the lord against the defendant to obtain payment of the fine due:—Held, that there was evidence that the payment of the fine to C. was a valid payment to the lord. Bridges v. Garrett, 39 L. J., C. P. 251; L. R. 5 C. P. 451; 22 L. T. 448; 18 W. R. 815—Ex. Ch.

A company was the holder of a bill of exchange drawn by the defendant on D. The bill was drawn by him as surety for D. in respect of a debt due by D. to the company, and was to be met by the proceeds of claims of D. on S., which would accrue due before the maturity of the bill. The company took the bill with notice of these facts to C., their managing director. Subsequently, but before the maturity of the bill, C. obtained an order from D. upon S. for the amount of the above claims and received the money from S. This money he applied towards payment of his own demand upon D., instead of towards the company's bill:—Held, that the receipt by C. of this money and his application of it to his own purposes did not afford any defence to the action, inasmuch as C. could not be said to have been acting within his authority as managing director when he so received and applied the money. McGowan v. Dyer, L. R. 8 Q. B. 141; 21 W. R. 560.

A creditor in the country directed his debtor to pay money into a London banking-house for his account, but had no account with the house but through a country banker:—Held, that such direction to make the payment was complied with by a payment to the credit of his account with the country banker. Breed v. Green, Holt, 204.

Four-fifths of a rate were assessed upon the owners, and one-fifth upon the occupiers. For four years the occupiers, on payment of their rent, were allowed by the owner's agents (who were ignorant of an agreement between them) to deduct from the amount of rent the four-fifths of the rate, and a receipt was given for the balance:—Held, in an action to recover the sums so allowed, as arrears of rent, that the facts supported a plea of payment. Waller v. Andrews, 3 M. & W. 312; 1 H. & H. 87; 7 L. J., Ex. 67.

Sum secured by Deed or Bond.]—An annuity deed contained a stipulation that it might be redeemed on payment of a certain sum, and all arrears, on giving six months' notice to the grantee in writing:—Held, that an agent of the grantee, having a general authority to receive and invest money for the grantee, had authority to waive the stipulation and accept the redemption money (the deed being delivered up to him), though without the knowledge of the grantee. Webber v. Granville, 30 L. J., C. P. 92; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 420.

An agent having been employed to transact loans of money, and having lent money and taken a bond from the borrower, which he delivered to his principal, and having afterwards been repaid the money and misapplied it, but continuing to make good the interest, the obligor was held liable, although more than twenty years had elapsed without payment of interest by him, to pay the bond. If the agent had been permitted to hold the instrument, quære. Curtis v. Drought, 1 Moll. 487.

It is the rule of the court, that if the scrivener have the custody of the security, payment of the interest is good; if he delivers it up, being a bond, payment of the principal is good: but on payment of the principal, in case of a mortgage deed, the giving up the deed is not sufficient to restore the estate; there must be a reconveyance. So payment of interest good, if mortgagee consents, or after his death his executor, either expressly or by implication, as if he accept the money afterwards of the scrivener, though the scrivener have not possession either of deed or bond. Whitlock v. Waltham, 1 Salk. 157; 1 Vern. 150.

Scrivener puts out money on bond, and receives the interest from time to time, and then receives part of the principal, the bond remains in the obligee's custody. No good payment. Roberts v. Matthews, 1 Vern. 150. See 1 Salk. 157.

S. having borrowed 100*l.* of A. on a bond, B., the scrivener, when the bond was sealed, delivered it to A. S. paid many years' interest, and 50*l.* of the principal to B., which he paid over to A.; but the remaining 50*l.* which S. paid to B. was not paid over to A. when B. failed. Per curiam, though B. received the interest so long, and 50*l.* of the principal, it did not imply he had any authority from A.; and as S. could not prove he had any such authority, he shall pay the last 50*l.* again. Wolstenholm v. Davies, 2 Freem. 289.

If one trusts his scrivener (who puts out money for him) with the custody of his bonds, and the scrivener receives the money and delivers up the bond, the obligee is barred as against the obligor for ever. Secus, in case of a mortgage, because a legal estate is vested which cannot be devested without assignment. Martyn v. Kingsly, Pre. Ch. 209.

Revocation of Authority—When Possible.]—A creditor may insist upon payment being made either to himself or to his agent; but having once authorised payment to his agent, he cannot revoke that authority if the debtor has given such a pledge to pay pursuant to the authority as would bind him in a court of law. Hodgson v. Anderson, 5 D. & R. 735; 3 B. & C. 842. See Pooley v. Godwin, 4 A. & E. 94; 5 N. & M. 466.

A landlord demised premises to a tenant for a term, reserving rent payable quarterly. The lease contained a covenant to pay rent, and the following clause: "The landlord agrees and orders that Kittow or his appointed agent is to receive all rents from the tenant at all times when it becomes due, during the term granted, and his receipt to be a full and sufficient discharge from all liabilities thereof":—Held, that the clause amounted to a bare authority to Kittow to receive the rent, and was revocable at the landlord's pleasure. Venning v. Bray, 2 B. & S. 502; 31 L. J., Q. B. 181; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 1039; 6 L. T. 327; 10 W. R. 561.

—— Notice of.]—The plaintiff having sent horses to a licensed horse dealer for sale in the horse dealer's own name, the dealer sold the horses in his own name to the defendant. The plaintiff, unknown to the defendant, revoked the dealer's authority to sell or receive the price, and the defendant afterwards paid the dealer:—Held, that unless he had received notice of the revocation of authority (which he denied), the payment was good as against the plaintiff, he having allowed the dealer to appear as the owner. Curlewis v. Birkbeck, 3 F. & F. 894.

When a creditor addresses a written request to assignees, in general terms, to pay "the dividends made on the bankrupt's estate" to A. B., the assignees are justified in paying subsequent dividends to A. B., until they have notice from the creditor that he has revoked A. B.'s authority. Bright, Ex parte, 2 Deac. & C. 8.

ii. To Brokers.

If the owner of goods allows the broker, through whom he sells, to sell them as a principal, the purchaser will be discharged by payment to the broker in any way which would have been sufficient had he been the real owner. Coates v. Lewes, 1 Camp. 444.

When a principal has allowed his broker to take payment for goods sold, by drawing bills upon the purchaser in his own name, without mention of the principal, the latter is bound by such mode of payment, on the insolvency of the agent after a particular payment made. Townsend v. Inglis, Holt, 278.

A payment to the broker is good, where the name of the principal is not disclosed, although the purchaser knows that the broker sold for some unknown principal; and a del credere commission makes no difference. But a payment so made would not be good if it varied from the terms of the original contract; and evidence of a custom to that effect is not admissible. Campbell v. Hassell, 1 Stark. 233. And see Thornton v. Meux, M. & M. 43.

Declaration for goods sold; a plea that the plaintiff sold the goods by his agent, and that the defendant purchased them of D., not as the agent of the plaintiff, but as himself being the vendor on his own account, and the defendant had no notice or knowledge that D. was an agent until after he had paid for the goods, and the defendant paid for them bonâ fide, believing that D. was the vendor of the goods on his own account, and entitled to receive payment, is no answer. Drakeford v. Piercy, 7 B. & S. 515; 14 L. T. 403.

A., having purchased goods of B., through a broker, paid for them to the broker partly by an advance on his general account with the broker before the delivery of the goods, and partly by cash on a settlement of accounts after the delivery. The broker did not pay over the money to B., and became bankrupt. In an action by B. to recover from A. the price of the goods, except so much as had been paid in cash:—Held, that it was a question of fact for the jury, whether payment to a broker in advance was a good payment as against the principal, depending on the custom of the trade; and that question not having been left to the jury, the court granted a new trial. Catterall v. Hindle, L. R. 2 C. P. 368—Ex. Ch. Reversing 1 H. & R. 267; 35 L. J., C. P. 161; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 488; 14 L. T. 102; 14 W. R. 371.

If goods are sold by a broker without disclosing his principal, the purchaser is justified in paying him in a different manner from that stipulated for by the terms of the contract. Aliter, where the principal is disclosed at the time of sale. Blackburn v. Scholes, 2 Camp. 343.

Goods sold by a broker for a principal not named, upon the terms as specified in the usual bought and sold notes (delivered over to the respective parties by the broker), of "payment in one month, money," may be paid for by the buyer to the broker within the month, and that by a bill of exchange accepted by the buyer, and discounted by the broker within the month, though having to run a longer time before it was due. But, where the buyer was also indebted to the same broker for another parcel of goods, the property of a different person, and he made a payment to the broker, generally, which was larger than the amount of either demand, but less than the two together, and afterwards the broker stopped payment, such payment ought to be equitably apportioned as between the several owners of the goods sold, who are only respectively entitled to recover the difference from the buyer. Favenc v. Bennett, 11 East, 36.

iii. To Attorneys.

Payment of a debt to the attorney of a plaintiff amounts to payment to the plaintiff himself, and the latter is bound by the receipt of his attorney. Yates v. Freckleton, 2 Dougl. 623.

Payment to a plaintiff's attorney's clerk, unauthorised to receive, is no waiver of the plaintiff's right. Perry v. Turner, 1 D. P. C. 300; 2 C. & J. 89; 2 Tyr. 128; 1 L. J., Ex. 13.

But a payment to the plaintiff's late attorney, changed without leave of the court, will be good. Powell v. Little, 1 W. Bl. 8.

iv. To Bailiffs.

A bailiff, acting under a warrant of distress for arrears of rent, has an implied authority to receive the amount of the rent and costs if tendered by the tenant, and such authority cannot be limited by a previous express instruction given on behalf of the landlord to the bailiff not to receive the rent, but to refer the tenant to the landlord's attorney. Hatch v. Hale, 15 Q. B. 10; 19 L. J., Q. B. 289; 14 Jur. 459.

A debtor against whose goods a fi. fa. issued, paid the amount for which execution issued, at the office of the bailiff, who held the warrant from the sheriff to execute the writ, in the absence of the bailiff, to an assistant of the sheriff, authorised by the bailiff to receive the money. The assistant did not pay it over to the bailiff, and the sheriff never in fact received the money:—Held, a good payment as against the sheriff, and satisfied the writ. Gregory v. Cotterell, 5 El. & Bl. 571; 25 L. J., Q. B. 33; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 16; 4 W. R. 48—Ex. Ch.

v. To Other Persons.

In what Cases Valid.]—Payment to a person found in a merchant's counting-house, ostensibly interested with the conduct of the business there, is good payment to the merchant, though it turns out that the person was never employed by the merchant. Barrett v. Deere, M. & M. 200.

If one allows another to trade in his own name, and as carrying on the business for himself, a payment to such person is a good bar to an action by the person so allowing him to trade; and for goods sold in the trade, the person so carrying it on may recover, unless the person for whom it is carried on asserts his or her own right to the sum due. Gardiner v. Davis, 2 Car. & P. 49.

Payment by a client to one of two partners, after the partnership has been dissolved, is a good payment, if the debtor permits one of such partners to receive moneys, in the confidence that those moneys will be a satisfaction of the partnership debt. Pritchard v. Draper, 1 Tam. 332.

The retainer of those moneys is equivalent to an actual payment. Ib.

One of the assignees having the sole charge of paying the dividends pays the dividend of a creditor to a person who is not duly authorised to receive it. The two other assignees are equally responsible to the creditor for the amount of the dividend. Winnall, Ex parte, 3 Deac. & C. 22.

vi. Payment, how to be Made.

In Cash.]—A debtor who pays the amount of his debt to the agent of his creditor must pay it in cash unless he can shew that the agent had authority to receive payment in any other way. Barker v. Greenwood, 2 Y. & C. 414; 1 Jur. 541.

By Bill.]—An agent who is authorised to receive payments on behalf of his principal must receive cash or a cheque drawn upon a banker and immediately paid, which will then be counted for cash. Payment by a bill of exchange, drawn by the agent and accepted by the debtor of the principal payable at three months' date, is outside the agent's authority, and is not a payment to the principal, even though the bill is immediately discounted and is honoured at maturity. Hine v. Steamship Insurance Syndicate; The Nether Holme, 11 R. 777; 72 L. T. 79; 7 Asp. M. C. 558—C. A.

An auctioneer, who is authorised to sell goods on the condition that purchasers shall pay a deposit at once, and the remainder of the purchase money to the auctioneer on or before delivery of the goods, has no authority to receive payment by a bill of exchange; and such payment will not discharge the purchaser. Williams v. Evans, 35 L. J., Q. B. 111; L. R. 1 Q. B. 352; 13 L. T. 753; 14 W. R. 330.

In Goods.]—A traveller who receives orders for goods from his employer's customer in the country, is authorised to receive payment for them in money, but not in other goods. Howard v. Chapman, 4 Car. & P. 508.

In Ordinary Course of Business.]—Where an agent has authority unrevoked to receive payment, the ordinary rule of law, in the absence of any evidence of a special authority, is that the authority is to receive payment in the ordinary course of business; and payment to the agent in any other way before the time when due, will not, if there is a revocation before that time, be a good payment as against the principal. Breming v. Mackie, 3 F. & F. 197.

Agent Writing off Debt.]—If a creditor employs an agent to receive money of a debtor, and the agent instead of receiving money writes off a debt due from himself to the debtor, the latter is not thereby discharged. Underwood v. Nicholls, 17 C. B. 239; 25 L. J., C. P. 79; 4 W. R. 153.

The plaintiff employed a solicitor to sell securities; the solicitor employed the defendant, a stock broker, in the sale. The defendant had notice that the solicitor was only an agent to sell and receive the price. The defendant paid the purchase money to the solicitor partly by cheque and partly by carrying the balance to his credit:—Held, that the defendant was liable to the plaintiff for that balance. Pierson v. Scott, 47 L. J., Ch. 705; 9 Ch. D. 198; 38 L. T. 747; 26 W. R. 796.

If a man authorises his agent to receive money, intending that the agent should thereout pay himself his own debt, he thereby gives the agent authority to receive payment to the extent of his own debt, in any manner he may think fit; consequently, the amount of the agent's own debt may be written off in account between him and the debtor. Barker v. Greenwood, 2 Y. & C. 414; 1 Jur. 541.

To Brokers.]—See cases supra, cols. 1026, 1027.

2. LIABILITY OF PRINCIPAL TO THIRD PARTY.

a. On Contracts.

i. In what Cases.

General Principle.]—The principal in a business who holds out an agent to the world as ostensible principal, and carries on the business under the management of and in the name of such agent, is bound by all such acts and contracts of the agent as are incidental to the ordinary conduct of the business, and such liability as to the rest of the world cannot be restricted by any private arrangement between them. Edmunds v. Bushell, 35 L. J., Q. B. 20; L. R. 1 Q. B. 97; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 332.

When one has so acted as from his conduct to lead another to believe that he has appointed some one to act as his agent, and knows that that other person is about to act on that behalf, then, unless he interposes, he would, in general, be estopped from disputing the agency, though in fact no agency existed. Pole v. Leask, 33 L. J., Ch. 155; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 829; 8 L. T. 645—H. L.

Where a trader allows his agent to hold himself out as being the real owner of the concern, carrying on the business on his own account, and the agent accordingly deals with a creditor of his own, on the terms that the goods supplied by him to such creditor shall be taken in satisfaction of the debt, at the prices invoiced to him, there is, in fact, no sale of the goods, and the trader cannot recover from him the price in an action ex contractu. Ramozotti v. Bowring, 7 C. B. (N.S.) 851; 29 L. J., C. P. 30; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 172; 8 W. R. 114.

Where the owner of goods has invested an agent with authority to sell the goods, and has delivered to him the indicia of title, a purchaser who deals in good faith with such agent, and pays the purchase money before the authority is revoked, acquires a good title to the goods; and it makes no difference whether any property therein passed to the agent, or whether, as between him and his principal, his authority was obtained by fraud. Kingsford v. Merry (1 H. & N. 503) observed upon. Henderson v. Williams, 64 L. J., Q. B. 308; [1895] 1 Q. B. 521; 14 R. 375; 72 L. T. 98; 43 W. R. 274—C. A.

Authority of Agent.]—The defendant owned a jeweller's shop at Lewes, living himself at London, and visiting the shop monthly. The shop was managed by a shopman, from whom the plaintiff had for some years received orders at Lewes, in the defendant's name, for goods, which were sent to the shop, and afterwards paid for by the defendant. The shopman absconded and came to London, and ordered jewellery there of the plaintiff in the defendant's name, which he carried away with him:—Held, that the previous course of dealing justified the plaintiff in assuming that the shopman had general authority to order goods for the shop on the defendant's credit, and that the defendant was therefore liable for the goods obtained by the shopman in London. Summers v. Solomon, 7 El. & Bl. 879; 26 L. J., Q. B. 301; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 962; 5 W. R. 660.

A., in London, authorised B., a broker in Liverpool, to buy goods for him on certain terms. B. bought the goods on terms which so far differed from the authority, as to omit a stipulation which was contained in the authority, and to express one which was not therein mentioned; but both these were stipulations which would have been by custom annexed to the contract, unless expressly excluded:—Held, that, as the effect was the same as if the contract had been made in the very words of the authority, it was within the scope of the broker's authority to make such a contract; and that it was binding on the principal. Heyworth v. Knight, 17 C. B. (N.S.) 298; 33 L. J., C. P. 298; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 866.

Written communications passed between two brokers, in which the terms of a sale of goods were proposed and assented to. The letter of the buying broker finally accepting the offer, concluded with these words: "contract, we presume, in due course." The contract was sent, and was accepted by the buying broker, but was repudiated by his principal, as not within the scope of the broker's authority:—Held, that the contract contained in the previous written communications, which was within the scope of the broker's authority, was not the less binding on the principal, by reason of the subsequent sending of the unauthorised contract. Ib.

Where at a meeting held at B., resolutions were passed for the purpose of continuing the publication of a certain newspaper, some of which were that J. be appointed editor, and that we find a person to undertake the printing and publishing, and that "the B. committee, or some members thereof, and the members of some other committee, shall give a guarantee to the publisher against loss to the extent of 300*l.*":—Held, that no guarantee being given, the persons present at such meeting gave J. the authority to employ a printer and publisher, and that they were liable for the work done by him until such guarantee were given. Waterlow v. Cotton, 2 W. R. 562.

A sale of engravings by a cashier in the employment of a picture engraver is not a sale within the ostensible authority of the cashier. Graves v. Masters, 1 Cab. & E. 73.

See the case of the liability of the great Duke of Marlborough to the contract for building Blenheim House, from the circumstance of a person giving directions to workmen as his agent. Marlborough (Duke) v. Strong, 1 Bro. P. C. 175.

A steward has a general authority to contract with tenants, &c. This will not bind the lord without his consent, nor unless part of the bargain is executed. Anon., 5 Vin. Abr. 522, pl. 35.

An objection to title on purchase having been waived, an offer of compensation made by a clerk of the vendor's solicitor, without express authority, is of no effect. Burnell v. Brown, 1 Jac. & Walk. 168; 21 R. R. 136.

—— Private Contract instead of Auction.]—Baron and feme, having joint power to sell an estate of the wife's, give authority to an agent to sell by auction. He sells by private contract for more than the price they required. The buyer shall not compel specific performance. Husband delivering his wife's compliments in a letter to the agent is no proof of her joining in giving authority to agent. Daniel v. Adams, Ambl. 495.

Where an agent of an English firm instructed to buy goods at a foreign auction within a limited price, bought the goods by private contract before the auction at less than the limited price; it was found by the jury that this was within the scope of his authority. Stein v. Cope, 1 Cab. & E. 63.

—— Agreement for Lease.]—Specific performance of an agreement to lease refused, when the alleged contract was founded upon expressions in a letter written by the defendant's agent to the intended lessee, to the effect that instructions had been given for the preparation of the lease in conformity with terms arranged; no agreement having been actually signed. Ridgway v. Wharton, 3 De G. M. & G. 677. Affirmed, 6 H. L. Cas. 238; 27 L. J., Ch. 46; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 173; 5 W. R. 840.

The owner of an estate, in answer to an inquiry from an intending lessee, said, "A. B. manages all my affairs, and you are to treat with him." This does not imply that A. B. had authority to enter into a binding agreement. Semble. Ib.

Agent, authorised to make agreements for leases for lives or years, makes an agreement in which the term of the proposed lease is not mentioned. This is an agreement not pursuant to his authority, and not binding on his principal. Clinan v. Cooke, 1 Sch. & Lef. 32; 9 R. R. 3.

—— Agent to find a Purchaser.]—An estate or house agent, to whom instructions are given to procure a purchaser for property, has not, though the price is named in the instructions, authority to enter into a binding contract with a purchaser to sell such property. Hamer v. Sharp, 44 L. J., Ch. 53; L. R. 19 Eq. 108; 31 L. T. 643; 23 W. R. 158.

When an owner of property employs an estate agent to procure a purchaser or tenant at a specified price, the agent has no implied authority to conclude a contract for sale; his duty is simply to find a purchaser or tenant, and to communicate his offer to the owner. Wilde v. Watson, 1 L. R., Ir. 402.

The defendant employed house and estate agents, with instructions to find a purchaser for leasehold property. The plaintiff made an offer in writing to the agents, which was submitted by the agents to the defendant, who then further instructed them to withdraw part of the property, and named the lowest price he was prepared to take for the remainder. Acting under this authority, the agents purported to enter into an open contract for sale of the remainder of the property to the plaintiff at the price named by the defendant. In an action for specific performance:—Held, that the agents had no authority to enter into a contract for sale on behalf of the defendant, and that the action must be dismissed. Chadburn v. Moore, 61 L. J., Ch. 674; 67 L. T. 257; 41 W. R. 39.

Instructions to a house and estate agent to procure a purchaser and to negotiate a sale do not amount to authority to the agent to bind his principal by a contract for sale of real or leasehold property. Hamer v. Sharp (L. R. 19 Eq. 108) followed. Ib.

—— Manager of Public-house.]—The licensed owner of a public-house is not liable for spirits supplied to the person whom he has left in possession of the premises as manager of the business, although the invoices are made out in his name, if he has only authorised such manager to deal with particular persons, and the spirits were not supplied by one of them. In such a case there is no evidence of liability on the part of the owner to be left to the jury. Daun v. Simmins, 41 L. T. 783; 28 W. R. 129; 44 J. P. 264—C. A.

A manager put in to manage a beerhouse has authority from the owner to order cigars for sale in such beerhouse, and can therefore bind the owner by his contract. Watteau v. Fenwick, 56 J. P. 839.

—— Manager of Property—Power to Sell.]—A., on behalf of himself and certain other persons resident in Scotland, his constituents, by deed engaged B. and C. to act as agents and managers in New South Wales, empowering them to purchase sheep, cattle, and land on behalf of A. and his constituents, for which purpose certain sums were remitted to the colony to be invested for them and placed to their individual interest, and the proceeds of the stock, &c., were to be remitted to their respective credits. B. and C. were to receive for their trouble and expense one-third of the proceeds of the stock. With the money remitted, B. and C. bought stock and lands, and conducted the establishment in the colony in their own names. B. and C. afterwards became embarrassed, and contracted liabilities in the management of the property, and drew bills on A. on account of the establishment, which bills were endorsed by D. and other parties in the colony; these bills being dishonoured, and B. and C. being pressed by the indorsees, they executed a deed of assignment, and conveyed the whole of the trust property, and some property of their own, to D. for himself and other indorsees. D. had notice of the deed appointing B. and C. agents and managers, and that there was no authority on the part of B. and C. to draw bills on behalf of their constituents which could personally bind them. Upon a bill filed by A. and his constituents against B., C. and D., to set aside the deed of assignment as fraudulent and void, and for an account, the supreme court at Sydney held that the plaintiffs were not entitled in equity to relief, and that their remedy was to sue D. at law:—Held, by the judicial committee of privy council, reversing such decree, first, that the decree was erroneous in declaring that the relief sought by the bill was not of a proper equitable character; and secondly, that, under the circumstances, B. and C. had, as such agents and managers, authority to dispose of the property entrusted to them, in discharge of the debts incurred by them on behalf of A. and his constituents, in the management of such property; and that the deed of assignment was valid as against A. and his constituents to the extent of subjecting such joint property to the payment of the debts and liabilities contracted, but null and void as to the residue; and an account directed to be taken in the court below of such debts and liabilities. Bute (Marchioness) v. Mason, Heard, Ex parte, 7 Moore, P. C. 1.

—— Manager of Company—Signing Firm.]—The manager of a company is not entitled, as such, to sign the firm or name of the partnership. Beveridge v. Beveridge, L. R. 2 H. L. (Sc.) 183.

The authority of trustees representing three-fourths of the property of a company is insufficient to empower a manager, as such, to sign the company's firm, especially when the proceeding is opposed by the representative of the remaining fourth. Ib.

—— To Borrow.]—A person allowing a voluntary bond to remain in the hands of his agent, for the purpose of raising money on it, is bound by his agent's acts, though he never receives any of the money raised; but the assignee of it can only hold it as security for the amount actually advanced on it to the agent. Tottenham v. Green, 1 N. R. 466; 32 L. J., Ch. 201.

—— To Barter.]—A factor having an authority to sell for money is not entitled to barter. Guerreiro v. Peile, 3 B. & Ald. 616; 22 R. R. 500.

—— Whether Conditional.]—B., wanting to raise money, authorised R. by power of attorney to borrow it and grant a mortgage. R. employed, with leave, a sub-agent, who got the money from D. on producing the power of attorney and a declaration signed by B. The power to mortgage was invalid, and R. failed to account to B.:—Held, that B. was estopped from setting this up as against D., and was bound by the acts of R., for the borrowing was not upon condition of the mortgage being valid. Denyssen v. Botha, 2 L. T. 126; 8 W. R. 710.

—— In case of Bills, Notes and Cheques.]—The defendant, a partner in a firm of C. Brothers, agreed with her co-partner that the partnership should be dissolved, that the affairs of the firm should be liquidated by an agent, who should realise the assets and pay the creditors, and that the business should thereafter be carried on by the defendant. The defendant and the agent opened a joint banking account, and requested the bank to honour drafts signed by either of them. Cheques were drawn on the joint account, signed by the agent in the names of the defendant and himself, and bills were drawn on C. Brothers, and accepted by the agent in the names of the defendant and himself, and honoured. The defendant knew nothing of these cheques and bills. The plaintiff sued as indorsee for value of a bill of exchange, drawn on C. Brothers, accepted by the agent in the names of himself and the defendant, and made payable at the bank where the joint account was opened:—Held, that the agent had no authority to accept the bill in the defendant's name, so as to bind her, and that, not being a partner in the firm of C. Brothers, he had no authority to accept bills drawn on the firm, and the defendant was not liable. Kirk v. Blurton (9 M. & W. 284) commented on and distinguished. Odell v. Cormack, 19 Q. B. D. 223.

The business of a company was that of importers and dealers in tinned ox-tongues and other provisions. Hunter was appointed manager of the company's business in South America, "to take the entire charge of the interests of the company there." No express authority was conferred on him to sign or accept bills or promissory notes on behalf of the company. He was desirous of entering into a contract with one Liberos for the supply of ox-tongues to the company in South America. Liberos refused to enter into a contract unless a guarantee was given by some third person, and, at the request of Hunter, one Simpson agreed to give the required guarantee, which he did by depositing 1,000*l.* in a bank to the order of Liberos. As a counter security to Simpson, Hunter gave him a promissory note for 1,000*l.*, signed by him "in representation of" the company. The company made default in carrying out the provisions of the contract with Liberos, and, under a power contained in it, he forfeited the deposit, which was paid over to him by the bank. No goods were supplied to the company under the contract. The company never recognised the promissory note, and it was dishonoured at maturity. The company being in liquidation, Simpson claimed to prove in the winding-up upon the note:—Held, that it not being shewn that the giving of the note was necessary for the carrying on of the business of the company, or that it was in the ordinary course of the business of such a company, the note was not binding upon the company, and the claim in respect of it could not be admitted. Cunningham & Co., In re, Simpson's Claim, 57 L. J., Ch. 169; 36 Ch. D. 532; 58 L. T. 16.

Where B. drew a cheque, and delivered it to his farming bailiff to give to C., in whose favour it was drawn; and the bailiff discounted it with A., a banker residing sixteen miles from where the cheque was drawn; and five days afterwards the drawee stopped payment, A. not having presented the cheque:—Held, that the bailiff was not acting within the scope of his authority in discounting the cheque, so as to bind his principal. Waters v. Brogden, 1 Y. & J. 457.

M., owner of a ship, lets it to the commissioners of the navy, and appoints T. his factor and attorney, with power to receive the freight and profits, and to compare and transact with the commissioners. T. settled the account, and took a navy bill for the money to M.; he then sells it, and indorses it as attorney for M. Quære, whether M. bound. Ekins v. Macklish, Ambl. 184.

Secret Instructions.]—Where an agent is clothed with ostensible authority, no private instructions prevent his acts within the scope of that authority from binding his principal. Where his authority depends, and is known to those who deal with the agent to depend, on a written mandate, it may be necessary to produce or account for the non-production of that writing in order to prove what was the scope of the agent's authority. National Bolivian Navigation Co. v. Wilson, 5 App. Cas. 209; 43 L. T. 70—H. L.

The ordinary rule that a principal is liable for the acts of his agent which are within the authority usually confided to an agent of that character, notwithstanding secret limitations upon that authority, applies also where the existence of any principal was unknown to the person contracting with, and giving credit to, the agent alone. Watteau v. Fenwick, [1893] 1 Q. B. 346; 5 R. 143; 67 L. T. 831; 41 W. R. 222; 56 J. P. 839.

Where an owner of title deeds has placed them in the hands of an agent with authority to raise money on them to a limited amount, and the agent deposits them with a bonâ fide lender who has no knowledge of the limit imposed by the principal, for an amount in excess of that which he had authority to borrow, the principal cannot redeem the deeds except by payment of the full amount which the agent in fact raised upon them. Perry Herrick v. Attwood (2 De G. & J. 21) approved. Brocklesby v. Temperance Permanent Building Society, 64 L. J., Ch. 433; [1895] A. C. 173; 11 R. 159; 72 L. T. 477; 43 W. R. 606; 59 J. P. 676—H. L. (E.)

See also Edmunds v. Bushell, col. 1030.

Variation between Bought and Sold Notes.]—Where a broker employed by the seller alone, effects a contract by means of a note sent to and accepted by the purchaser, a variation between this note and a note sent by the broker to the seller is immaterial. McCaull v. Strauss, 1 Cab. & E. 106.

Effect of Custom.]—If an agent is employed by a principal to deal in a market, the usages and customs of that market are imported into and become part of the contract between them, and bind as well the principal as the agent. Duncan v. Hill, 40 L. J., Ex. 137; L. R. 6 Ex. 255; 25 L. T. 59; 19 W. R. 894. Reversed in Ex. Ch., but not on this point.

Where a contract which requires notice of shipment of goods to be given by the vendor to the purchaser is made at Liverpool by one broker acting for both parties, by the usage of trade there, it is sufficient if notice of the shipment is given by the vendor to the broker:—Held, that this usage of trade was binding on a London merchant, who employed a broker at Liverpool to make a contract for him there. Graves v. Legg, 2 H. & N. 210; 26 L. J., Ex. 316; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 519; 5 W. R. 597—Ex. Ch.

A person who employs a broker to transact business for him in a market, with the usages of which the principal is unacquainted, gives him authority to contract upon the footing of such usages, provided they are only such as relate to the mode of performing the contract, and do not change its intrinsic character. Robinson v. Mollett, 44 L. J., C. P. 362; L. R. 7 H. L. 802; 33 L. T. 544. Reversing 20 W. R. 544.

In order to avoid a sale made by a broker, it may be shewn that, by the custom of that particular trade, the authority of the broker expired with the day on which it was given. Dickinson v. Lilwall, 4 Camp. 279; 1 Stark. 128.

So, by the custom of London, where goods are sold by a broker to be paid for by bill, the vendor has a right to annul the contract within a reasonable time, if he is dissatisfied with the sufficiency of the purchaser. But the intimation of his dissent must be made as soon as he has had an opportunity of making inquiry; and five days were considered too long. Hodgson v. Davies, 2 Camp. 533; 11 R. R. 789.

Implied Authority.]—An agent cannot sell the goods of his principal without authority; but such authority to sell may be implied from circumstances. Dyer v. Pearson, 4 D. & R. 648; 3 B. & C. 38; 27 R. R. 286.

A purchaser of hemp, lying at a wharf, had it, at the time of his purchase, transferred in the wharfinger's books into the name of the broker who effected the purchase for him, and whose ordinary business it was to buy and sell hemp:—Held, that this gave the broker an implied authority to sell it, and that his sale and receipt of the money bound his unknown principal. So, if it had been transferred into the names of the principal or broker. Pickering v. Busk, 15 East, 38; 13 R. R. 364.

Brokers in the usual habit of buying and paying for, and of selling and receiving the value for sugars on speculation, in their own names, and upon their own judgment, for the principal; sometimes, when the market was low, under an unlimited authority as to quantity and price; at other times under special instructions to buy; but guided from time to time by special instructions to sell, and limited in respect of price, and advised from time to time by their principal as to the probable rise or fall of the market; but keeping only a general account with their principal of the sums advanced to and received for him, without accounting separately for each particular lot purchased and resold; may bind him by a resale of a particular parcel of sugars before purchased and paid for in their own names and lodged in their own warehouse, though sold under the price directed by their principal, for whom they received the money, but afterwards failed; the general authority of the brokers to sell, so as to bind their principal in respect of the purchaser, being to be collected from their general dealing, and not merely from their private instructions as to the particular parcel of goods. Whitehead v. Tuckett, 15 East, 400; 13 R. R. 509.

A., a widow, married B., whom she believed to be a single man. She was not the personal representative of her deceased husband, but she was possessed of furniture which had been his property, and which after her marriage with B. continued in the house in which they lived. B. sold and delivered those goods to C., with A.'s concurrence, and C. paid B. for them. After this it was discovered that B. was a married man, and that his marriage with A. was void. This was unknown to either A. or to C. till after the sale. A. sued C. for the value of the goods:—Held, that the property being in the personal representative of her deceased husband, she could not maintain an action against any one but as a wrong-doer, and that as C. had taken the goods with her concurrence, he was not a wrong-doer as against her. And that, even on the supposition that the goods belonged to her, she had constituted B. her agent to sell, and could not dispute the sale made by him as her agent to an innocent party. Waller v. Drakeford, 1 El. & Bl. 749; 22 L. J., Q. B. 274; 17 Jur. 853.

The agent employed by a miner in the management of his mines, and in his communications with the commissioners for setting out the metes and bounds, and fixing the rents and duties in respect hereof, is not therefore the agent of the miner for the purpose of making a contract with the commissioners not within the powers which had been conferred upon them in that character. Att.-Gen. v. Jackson, 5 Hare, 365.

When Instructions Uncertain.]—If a principal gives an order to an agent in such uncertain terms as to be susceptible of two different meanings, and the agent bonâ fide adopts one of them and acts upon it, it is not competent to the principal to repudiate the act as unauthorised, because he meant the order to be read in another sense of which it is equally capable. Ireland v. Livingstone, 41 L. J., Q. B. 201; L. R. 5 H. L. 395; 27 L. T. 79. Affirming 15 W. R. 152.

L. sent an order by letter to T. & Co., commission agents at the Mauritius, to ship him 500 tons of sugar at a certain price—"fifty tons more or less of no moment, if it enables you to get a suitable vessel." T. & Co. purchased and shipped about 400 tons, construing the letter as an order to purchase up to 500 tons, and assuming that the words "fifty tons more or less" had reference only to the capacity of the ship. L. refused to take the sugar on the ground that his letter was an order for a shipment by one vessel of at least 450 tons and not more than 550 tons:—Held, that as the letter was capable of the construction T. & Co. had put upon it, L. was bound to accept the sugar. Ib.

When a principal orders his agent to purchase a certain quantity of goods, and the parties appear to have contemplated that the whole might not be obtainable at once, the order will be construed as divisible, and the agent will be authorised to buy a smaller quantity if the whole is not to be had. Johnston v. Kershaw, 36 L. J., Ex. 44; L. R. 2 Ex. 82; 15 L. T. 485; 15 W. R. 354.

Limitation of Powers.]—The powers of an agent are limited by the limitation of the powers of the principal. Montreal Assurance Co. v. M'Gillivray, 13 Moore, P. C. 87; 8 W. R. 165.

Contracts which would not be binding on a principal as ultra vires, do not become binding by means of their having been entered into through the medium of an agent. Ib.

Evidence of Authority.]—A. was the owner of a saw-mill, and B. was his foreman. B., as the agent of A., but without any express authority, entered into a contract in writing to supply C. with a quantity of Scotch-fir staves:—Held, that this contract was binding on A., inasmuch as B. must be presumed to have had a general authority to enter into such a contract as the one in question. Richardson v. Cartwright, 1 Car. & K. 328.

The plaintiff, having sold and delivered to the defendants granite blocks, which they refused to accept, on the ground that the blocks were of dimensions different from those for which they had contracted; and a dispute having thus arisen, the plaintiffs wrote to the defendants a letter containing the following passage: "I have seen E., and he has consented to see you on the subject of the granite, and I have authorised him to do so, and if possible come to some amicable arrangement in the matter." Shortly afterwards E. went to the defendants, and, on behalf of the plaintiff, agreed with them that on payment of 50*l.* the granite should be theirs, and no further claim in respect of it made by the plaintiff. The plaintiff repudiated the agreement made by E., and sued the defendants for the price of the granite:—Held, that the plaintiff's letter to the defendants constituted E. his agent, with power to make the agreement which in fact he did make, and that the plaintiff was therefore bound by it. Trickett v. Tomlinson, 13 C. B. (N.S.) 663; 7 L. T. 678.

B. employed C. to raise money, and C. procured 160*l.* from A., which he handed to B., from whom he took a cheque for that sum payable to him (C.) or bearer. C. subsequently applied to B. for payment of the cheque. In an action by A. against B. on the cheque:—Held, that C. was clearly B.'s agent, and that delivery to him supported the averment in the declaration of a delivery to A. Samuel v. Green, 10 Q. B. 262; 16 L. J., Q. B. 239; 11 Jur. 607.

Where under the terms of a will, one of two trustees carries on a business as "agent for the trustees," and employs the co-trustee to purchase goods for the business and to pay for them by cheques signed by both, the "agent for the trustees" is liable for the price of goods obtained on credit by the co-trustee from a person who had in previous transactions been paid by those cheques. Brazier v. Camp, 63 L. J., Q. B. 257; 9 R. 852—C. A.

In an action for goods sold, a letter from the defendant's broker announcing to his principals a purchase on their account, on certain terms stated, was held to be evidence of a preceding authority to purchase not merely on precisely the terms stated, but upon terms not unusual nor unreasonable, and in substance the same. Campbell v. Hicks, 28 L. J., Ex. 70.

Proof of authority to hire carts to carry voters, and to employ persons to canvass, &c., at a contested election, will not supply evidence for a jury of an implied authority to open a public-house or order refreshments for persons present at the election. Byrne v. White, 16 W. R. 255—Ir. Ex. Ch.

On a programme for a fête the names of the two defendants appeared as stewards, and the name of P. as "general manager." P. ordered tents and flags from the plaintiff for use at the fête. On the programme was a statement that the stewards reserved the right of altering the programme, that five should form a quorum, and that tents would be provided. At the fête the defendants took an active part. The plaintiff sent in his bill to the stewards. The stewards stated that every one providing things for the fête would be paid:—Held, that there was evidence on which the court might find that P. was authorised to pledge the credit of the two defendants for the tents, and that they were therefore liable. Pilot v. Craze, 52 J. P. 311.

There is a broad distinction between acting stewards, such as those mentioned, and provisional committeemen, who only lend their names. Ib.

If the attorney of a creditor write to A. asking payment of a debt due from B., and A. answer the letter and pay 200*l.* of the debt; and afterwards the attorney again write to A., asking payment of the residue of the debt, and A. send a letter promising payment, this last letter is admissible as evidence in an action against B. with a view to shew that A. acted for B. Roberts v. Gresley (Lady), 3 Car. & P. 380.

What are circumstances sufficient to establish an agent's authority, and a contract made in the exercise of it. Ridgway v. Wharton, 6 H. L. Cas. 238; 27 L. J., Ch. 46; 5 W. R. 804.

The question as to the authority of an agent to sign, denied by the answer and by his deposition, stating his declaration to the contrary at the time of execution, is to be determined by an issue; the evidence of a witness, impeaching the instrument he has attested, as a witness to a will denying the sanity of the devisor, &c., being admissible, but to be received with the most anxious jealousy. Howard v. Braithwaite, 1 Ves. & B. 202.

Answer of defendant read against co-defendant, whose agent he was, to prove the execution of an agreement by the agent, but not to prove his authority. Fagan v. Howard, Wall. Lyn. 33.

A., who was living in the same house with B., was the owner of certain goods therein, which goods A., for a fraudulent purpose, permitted B. to raise and receive money upon by way of bill of sale in his own name to C., who believed the goods to be the goods of B. The goods being afterwards seized upon a fi. fa. against A.:—Held, that the sale to C. of the goods was valid, B. being in effect the agent of A. in the transaction. Low v. McGill, 10 L. T. 495; 12 W. R. 826.

—— Onus of Proof.]—The burthen of proof is on the person dealing with any one as an agent, through whom he seeks to charge another as principal. He must shew that the agency did exist, and that the agent had the authority he assumed to exercise, or otherwise that the principal is estopped from disputing it. Pole v. Leask, 33 L. J., Ch. 155; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 829; 8 L. T. 645—H. L.

Trustees for Debenture Holders of Company—Liability of, for Goods ordered by Receiver.]—See Gosling v. Gaskell, ante, col. 930.

Agreement with Agent to pay fixed Sum.]—The plaintiffs claimed 37*l.* from the defendant for use and occupation of a house, and authorised him to pay the amount to a person whom they named. She called on the defendant, and he then expressed his readiness to pay the amount, but she (having also an interest in the property) refused to receive it. No actual tender was made. The plaintiffs sued the defendant for the use and occupation, claiming 238*l.* The defendant paid 37*l.* into court:—Held, that as soon as the defendant expressed to the agent his readiness to pay the 37*l.* there was a concluded agreement between him and the plaintiffs for that amount, and that the plaintiffs could not recover more. Gretton v. Mees, 7 Ch. D. 839; 38 L. T. 506; 26 W. R. 607.

Contract made by Wife of Lunatic.] — The plaintiff was a tradesman, and the defendant had given his wife authority to deal with the plaintiff, and had held her out as his agent and as entitled to pledge his credit. Afterwards the defendant became insane, and whilst his malady lasted his wife ordered goods from the plaintiff, who accordingly supplied them. At the time of supplying the goods the plaintiff was unaware that the defendant had become insane. The defendant afterwards recovered his reason, and then refused to pay for the goods supplied to his wife by the plaintiff:—Held, that the defendant was liable for the price of the goods. Drew v. Nunn, 48 L. J., Q. B. 591; 4 Q. B. D. 661; 40 L. T. 671; 27 W. R. 810—C. A.

In an action for the price of necessary repairs done to the defendant's house, it appeared that he was a lunatic, and that the work was done by order of his wife, with knowledge on the part of the plaintiff of the husband's lunacy. The wife had always received a sufficient allowance from her husband's estate:—Held, that the husband was not liable, as, under the circumstances, the wife had no more authority to pledge his credit than she would have had if he had been sane, and had provided her with means for all necessaries. Richardson v. Du Bois, 10 B. & S. 830; 39 L. J., Q. B. 69; L. R. 5 Q. B. 51; 21 L. T. 635; 18 W. R. 62.

Contracts on behalf of Foreign Principals.]—A commission merchant has no authority (in the absence of express evidence to the contrary) to pledge the credit of his foreign constituent. The fact that the foreign constituent and the commission merchant have agreed to share the profit and loss on the purchases made by the latter, will not affect the rule. Hutton v. Bullock, L. R. 9 Q. B. 572; 30 L. T. 648; 22 W. R. 956—Ex. Ch.

Therefore, when H. F. & Co., merchants in London, bought goods in their own name from the plaintiff for shipment to the defendant in Rangoon, charging the defendant a commission upon such purchases, and it was agreed between H. F. & Co. and the defendant that such purchases should be on their joint account, and the plaintiff took in payment for the goods the acceptances of H. F. & Co., which were afterwards dishonoured:—Held, that the plaintiff could not recover from the defendant the price of the goods. Ib.

The defendants, jute merchants at Calcutta, appointed L. & Co. their agents for the sale of jute in England at an agreed commission. L. & Co. afterwards entered into a contract in their own name for the sale of a quantity of jute to the plaintiffs, and wrote to the defendants informing them that they had done so. The defendants subsequently wrote to the plaintiffs inclosing the invoice of the goods, and stating that they had drawn upon them for the price. The plaintiffs kept the invoice, accepted the draft, and obtained the bill of lading. The draft was duly taken up by the plaintiffs. The goods arrived in a damaged condition. In an action by the plaintiffs against the defendants for breach of contract:—Held, that the above circumstances excluded the application of the ordinary rule as to contracts between foreign and English principals, made through an agent in England, that privity was established between them, and that the action was maintainable. Malcolm, Flinn & Co. v. Hoyle, 63 L. J., Q. B. 1—C. A.

At the time of making a contract of sale, the party buying the goods represented that he was buying them on account of persons resident in Scotland, but did not mention their names, and the seller did not inquire who they were, but afterwards debited the party who purchased the goods:—Held, that the seller might afterwards sue the principals for the price. Thompson v. Davenport, 9 B. & C. 78; 4 M. & Ry. 110.

A merchant, though in one sense agent for his foreign correspondents, is not by mercantile usage entitled to pledge their credit as purchasers for what he buys in the home market on their account. Poirier v. Morris, 2 El. & Bl. 89; 22 L. J., Q. B. 313; 17 Jur. 1116; 1 W. R. 349.

The right of the seller of goods to resort to an undisclosed foreign principal is barred by any circumstance which shews that the enforcement of that right would operate injustice. Smith or Smyth v. Anderson, 7 C. B. 21; 18 L. J., C. P. 109: 13 Jur. 211.

A foreign principal is in no case liable to an action, at the suit of the vendor, for the price of goods purchased by an agent resident in England. Ib.

Contracts on Behalf of Home Principals.]—The right of the vendor to sue a home principal, when discovered, is undoubted, provided that the vendor has not elected to charge the agent exclusively at all events, provided also that the state of accounts between the principal and his agent is not such as would make it unjust that the former should be sued. Ib.

Contract ultra vires of Agent to Knowledge of Third Party.]—An association was not registered under the companies acts. Persons became members by effecting mutual policies; members were empowered also to effect "special rate policies." The applicants were not members, but had taken out a "special rate policy," signed per procuration by J. and S., the managers, who gave and accepted on their personal liability a bill of exchange for the amount assured. In a similar case, the amount assured had been disallowed by the appeal court as a claim made on the association. J. and S. became insolvent, and their acceptance was dishonoured. De W. & Co. claimed that the amount of the premiums should be repaid them by the members of the association:—Held, that they were not entitled to have the premiums repaid, because, first, as they well knew, J. and S. had no power, as agents, to grant such a policy to non-members; and, secondly, there was no failure of consideration, as J. and S. had made themselves personally liable. Arthur Average Association, In re, De Winton's Case, 34 L. T. 942.

Previous Judgment against Agent set aside.]—The plaintiff had supplied goods on K.'s order to a theatre, and had obtained judgment against K. for the price. Whilst the judgment was still standing the plaintiff commenced an action against the lessee of the theatre for the price of the same goods. The lessee objected that the matter was res judicata. The judgment against K. was set aside before the hearing of an appeal to the divisional court:—Held, that as the judgment had been set aside, the action was rightly brought against the lessee. Partington v. Hawthorne, 52 J. P. 807.

Factor hiring Ship on his own Account.]—A factor makes an agreement with the master for the hire of a ship on his own account for 48*l.* per month, and not on the part of the merchants, his principals; they are not liable, nor are their goods put on board, to satisfy the master's demand, but they are liable to pay the factor the freight for their cargo; and as he was bound by the charterparty, which gave the master a specific lien on the goods, the master has a right to be paid in the first place, before the assignees of a factor under a commission of bankruptcy, for the assignees only stand in the bankrupt's place. Whoever lets a ship to hire must take care that the hirer is substantial, for if he be not competent the master must pay for his neglect; yet a factor may retain goods to pay custom for salvage. Paul v. Birch, 2 Atk. 621.

Joining Agent as Co-Defendant with Principal.]—See post, cols. 1114, 1115.

ii. Notice of Authority.

Duty to Inquire as to Agent's Authority.]—If a society or company had an unlimited power to borrow, but had, nevertheless, given secret orders to its agent not to borrow beyond a certain amount, I should have thought, nevertheless, the society was bound, because the plaintiffs would not have been called upon to inquire as to any secret authority; but where a society or a company has upon the face of its constitution—that is, either by the statute or statutory rules under which it is constituted—only a limited authority to borrow, then it seems to me that a person dealing with such a society or company must either inquire or run the risk. Chapleo v. Brunswick Building Society, 50 L. J., Q. B. 372; 6 Q. B. D. 696; 44 L. T. 449; 29 W. R. 529—C. A.

Where an agent under his power of attorney possessed implied authority to raise money by loan for the purpose of carrying on the business affairs intrusted to him, which authority under circumstances of emergency must be deemed to include power to borrow on exceptional terms outside the ordinary course of business:—Held, that the lender was not bound to inquire whether in the particular case the emergency had arisen or not; but that he was entitled to recover from the principal if he lent to the agent bonâ fide, and without notice that the agent was exceeding his mandate. Montaignac v. Shitta, 15 App. Cas. 357—P. C.

Notice—Construction.]—The ordinary import of language of a letter giving full authority to deal with the property of another ought not to be cut down or restricted by merely ambiguous or uncertain expressions in other parts of the document. Pariente v. Lubbock, 8 De G. M. & G. 5; 20 Beav. 588.

Where, therefore, a foreign merchant wrote to his English correspondent, directing the latter to consider any consignment from him as the property of his son, who was residing in England, so that the son might place and dispose of the father's money as if it was the son's own property, and stating that, as the son informed the father of everything, the consignor would not continue writing, but that whatever the son said for him was to be the same as if he said it himself, and must guide the consignee:—Held, first, that the son was thus constituted an agent with full powers to act for his father. Ib.

Secondly, that, although on one or two occasions the consignee had required a written authority from the son before so acting, neither this circumstance nor the terms of the letters rendered any writing necessary, but that a verbal direction or subsequent adoption by the son was sufficient. Ib.

Thirdly, that the circumstance of the consignee's firm having been changed by the death of a member of it, subsequently to the date of the letters, made no difference in these respects, the letters having imposed a duty on the consignee's house, which continued as long as the relation between the plaintiff and it, however it might be composed. Ib.

—— Means of Knowledge of Third Party.]—W., as agent for the defendant, had occasionally employed B. to purchase wools, which purchases had been ratified by the defendant. In June, 1839, the defendant wrote to B., to say he would have nothing to do with any purchases made by him. This letter, it appeared, had been communicated to the plaintiff, but at what time was left uncertain. In July B. bought wools of the plaintiff, then lying at his premises, and they were sent to a warehouse of another person, where they were weighed and packed by B. (together with other wools) in sheets, which the defendant was in the habit of sending there for the purpose of packing such wools. The wools in question were not paid for, and it was in the course of dealing that wools were not to be removed from such warehouse till payment. In an action to recover the price of the wools:—Held, that there was sufficient evidence to warrant the jury in finding that B. was the defendant's agent for the purchase, and that the plaintiff had not had notice of the countermand of his authority. Dodsley v. Varley, 4 P. & D. 448; 12 A. & E. 632; 5 Jur. 316.

Indorsement on Bills of Exchange.]—An agent who has received from his principal bills indorsed on account of such principal (by which means their negotiability is restrained) cannot deposit them with his bankers as a security for advances; the special indorsement is a sufficient notice to the bankers that the bills are not the property of the party from whom they receive them, to enable him to pledge them. Truettel v. Barandon, 1 Moore, 543; 8 Taunt. 100.

The acceptance or indorsemnet of a bill of exchange, expressed to be per procuration, is a notice to the indorsee that the party so accepting or indorsing professes to act under an authority from some principal, and imposes upon the indorsee the duty of ascertaining that the party so accepting or indorsing is acting within the terms of such authority. Alexander v. Mackenzie, 6 C. B. 766.

But an acceptance in the words "for Richardson & Son, Thomas Popple," is not equivalent, according to the mercantile law, to the form, "per proc. Richardson & Son, Thomas Popple." The former expression does not, like the latter, import a special and a limited authority to do a specific act; nor does it put the drawer of a bill, accepted in that form, upon discovery or inquiry, whether the agent has exceeded his authority or not. O'Reilly v. Richardson, 17 Ir. C. L. R. 74.

Payment Unauthorised by Statute.]—Neither a company created by act of parliament, nor its promoters, directors, or shareholders, can apply the assets of the company except in the manner provided by the act. On the facts of the case, it was held that there had been no ratification or approval by the directors of the respondent company of an agreement entered into by the appellants under which the respondent company was in effect to make an expenditure unauthorised by the act. Mann v. Edinburgh Northern Tramways Co., 62 L. iii. Evidence of Liability.

Signature of Agent.]—Specific performance of a contract concerning land not decreed on the signature of an agent without authority. Howard v. Braithwaite, 1 V. & B. 202.

—— Banker Protected.]—A signature "Smith & Co., per S. Kingsford, agent," is a signature per procurationem, and such a signature on a cheque drawn payable to Smith & Co. is sufficient to justify a banker in paying the cheque so indorsed, and the banker is protected by 16 & 17 Vict. c. 59, s. 19. Charles v. Blackwell, 45 L. J., C. P. 542; 1 C. P. D. 548; 35 L. T. 162; 24 W. R. 737. Affirmed, 46 L. J., C. P. 368; 2 C. P. D. 151; 36 L. T. 195; 25 W. R. 472—C. A.

—— Construction of Contract.]—K. entered by letter into a contract with the plaintiff for the sale of 300 tons of muriate of potash. At the commencement of the letter, K. said that he bought as agent for the defendant. Delivery at the rate of 50 tons per month. Cash payment to be made by K. fourteen days from receipt of bills of lading. A commission of 1 per cent. to be paid to K. The letter was not signed by him as agent:—Held, that on the true construction of the contract, whatever K.'s position might be, the defendant was the buyer, and therefore liable to the plaintiff. Concordia Chemische Fabrik auf Actien v. Squire, 34 L. T. 824—C. A.

—— Employing Illiterate Agent to Sign.]—A man who can read, who sends an agent who cannot read to sign a document or to enter into a contract in which a document must to his knowledge be signed, cannot dispute his liability on the document so signed on the ground that his agent could not read its contents. Foreman v. G. W. Ry., 38 L. T. 851.

—— To Memorandum of Association.] — A man's name may be subscribed to the memorandum of association of a company by his agent, and it is not necessary that the agent should be authorised to sign his principal's name by deed under seal. Whitley Partners, In re, Callan, Ex parte, 55 L. J., Ch. 540; 32 Ch. D. 337; 54 L. T. 912; 34 W. R. 505—C. A.

Signature of Partner to bind Firm.]—Quære, as to the sufficiency of a signature to bind the firm where a deed was executed thus by one partner only, "for self and partners, A. B.," no consent of the other partners being shewn to this mode of execution. Smith v. Winter, 4 M. & W. 454; 8 L. J., Ex. 34.

Cf. Beveridge v. Beveridge, ante, col. 1033.

Statement by Agent forming Part of Contract.]—A. sent to B.'s agent a list of prices at which he would do work; B. wrote a letter to his agent, stating that he would agree to the prices, if A. would consent to be paid at stated periods, the first payment to be "in November." The agent shewed his letter to A., and said that he might consider the 100*l.* to be paid on 1st November. A. afterwards did the work for B. It was left for the jury to say whether that which the agent said to A. formed a part of the actual contract between the parties, or whether it was a mere observation by the agent himself. Knapp v. Harden, 6 Car. & P. 745.

Though an agent may, within the scope of his authority, bind his principal by his agreement, and in many cases by his acts, evidence of his declarations is confined to what is either by the statement itself, or as tending to determine the quality of contemporary acts, the foundation of, or inducement to, the agreement. Fairlie v. Hastings, 10 Ves. 123.

Letter by an agent is not evidence against the principle of a pre-existing agreement, though it may be of an agreement contained in that letter. Ib., 128.

Entry by Booking Clerk of Railway.] — It was the usage of defendants, a railway company, that cattle should be booked for carriage and forwarded in the order in which they were delivered in the defendants' yard. This usage was known to plaintiff and his servant. The plaintiff's cattle were brought to defendants' yard late at night, and could not be taken in owing to the illness of defendants' porter. Next day the booking clerk of the defendants, in the circumstances, booked the cattle, though not yet in the yard. Plaintiff's cattle were not forwarded in the order in which they were booked, but were postponed to those of some other dealers which arrived at defendants' yard before them, and they were in consequence delayed. Plaintiff sued the company for the delay. It appeared that the clerk acted contrary to his instructions, but the jury found that the plaintiff was not at the time aware that he was doing so:—Held, that the company were bound by the act of the booking clerk. Page v. G. N. Ry., Ir. R. 2 C. L. 228; 16 W. R. 566.

Admission of Agent to bind Principal.]—At the trial of an action for the loss of a parcel of money sent via a railway, addressed to the plaintiffs at W., a police superintendent, as witness for the plaintiffs, gave evidence to the effect that the station-master at W. had made a statement as to the absconding of a porter, a servant of the railway company:—Held, that the evidence was admissible on the ground that the station-master, at the time he made the statement, was acting within the scope of his duty, and, being the agent of the company, they were bound by his statement, and could be looked upon as having made it themselves. Kirkstall Brewery Co. v. Furness Ry., 43 L. J., Q. B. 142; L. R. 9 Q. B. 468; 30 L. T. 783; 22 W. R. 876.

An Irish railway company contracted with the plaintiff to carry certain pigs from a station in Ireland through to London, part of the journey being performed on the London and North-Western Railway. In an action against the Irish company, a letter from J. T., an agent of the London and North-Western Company, to the plaintiff, which contained evidence of delay, was held to be admissible. Ruddy v. Midland Great Western Ry., 8 L. R., Ir. 224.

Where an agent had been employed to pay money for work done, and the workmen were referred to him for payment, and he assented to it, an acknowledgment or a promise by him to pay was sufficient. Burt v. Palmer, 5 Esp. 145. See 10 R. R. 707, n.

In an action against the East India Company by the holder of a forged imitation of one of their promissory notes, issued by the governor-general in council at Calcutta:—Held, that the company were not bound by the acknowledgment of it as genuine by a clerk in their accountant-general's office, who was authorised by the accountant-general to compare all such notes with the register, but not authorised to certify their genuineness, although it appeared that it was his practice to do so. Bank of England v. East India Co., 2 Knapp, 245.

—— Husband and Wife.] — In an action against a husband for goods supplied to his wife for her accommodation while he occasionally visited her, a letter written by the wife, acknowledging the debt within six years, was admissible to take the case out of the statute. Gregory v. Parker, 1 Camp. 394; 10 R. R. 712.

But as the 9 Geo. 4, c. 14, s. 1, directed that no acknowledgment or promise shall be sufficient to take a case out of the statute unless in writing "and signed by the party chargeable thereby," an acknowledgment contained in a letter which was written by the wife of the debtor in his name and at his request was insufficient, because the statute gave no authority to an agent to make the acknowledgment. Hyde v. Johnson, 3 Scott, 289; 2 Bing. (N.C.) 776; 2 Hodges, 94; 5 L. J., C. P. 291.

Purchase under False Pretences.]—Purchaser under particulars giving a false description not bound at law or in equity, or by any act of his agent, without a fresh authority. Deverell v. Bolton (Lord), 18 Ves. 509.

Informal Certificate.]—A purchaser of land from a railway company under a condition prohibiting building thereon without the certificate in writing of the company's principal engineer proceeded to build upon the unwritten licence of one of the company's resident engineers:—Held, that the company were not bound, and the building was restrained; upon a prayer to restrain the erection of "new" buildings, the completion of half-built houses was restrained. Att.-Gen. v. Briggs, 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1084.

Knowledge of Agent imputed to Principal.]—B. effected an insurance with the defendant company through their agent against accidental injury. The proposal for the insurance contained a statement by the assured that he had no physical infirmity, and that there were no circumstances that rendered him peculiarly liable to accidents, and it was agreed that the proposal should form the basis of the contract between him and the company. By the terms of the policy, the company agreed to pay the insured 500*l.* on permanent total disablement, and 250*l.* on permanent partial disablement, the policy stating that by permanent total disablement was meant, inter alia, "the complete and irrecoverable loss of sight to both eyes," and by permanent partial disablement was meant, inter alia, "the complete and irrecoverable loss of sight in one eye." At the time when he signed the proposal for the insurance the assured had lost the sight of one eye, a fact of which the defendants' agent was aware, though he did not communicate it to the defendants. The assured during the currency of the policy met with an accident which resulted in the complete loss of sight in his other eye, so that he became permanently blind:—Held, that the knowledge of the defendants' agent was under the circumstances the knowledge of the defendants, and that they were liable on the policy. Bawden v. London, Edinburgh, and Glasgow Assurance Co., 61 L. J., Q. B. 792; [1892] 2 Q. B. 534; 57 J. P. 116—C. A. iv. Election.

Foundation of.]—The knowledge of the real facts required as the foundation of an election to charge the agent or the undisclosed principal must be actual knowledge. Dunn v. Newton, 1 Cab. & E. 278.

When Allowed.]—If the seller of goods, knowing at the time that the buyer, though dealing with him in his own name, is in truth the agent of another, elects to give the credit to such agent, he cannot afterwards recover the value against the known principal; but if the principal is not known at the time of the purchase made by the agent, it seems that, when discovered, the principal or the agent may be sued at the election of the seller, unless where, by the usage of trade, the credit is understood to be confined to the agent so dealing, as particularly in the case of principals residing abroad. Paterson v. Gandasequi, 15 East, 62; 13 R. R. 68.

At the time of making a contract of sale, the party buying the goods represented that he was buying them on account of persons resident in Scotland, but did not mention their names, and the seller did not inquire who they were, but afterwards debited the party who purchased the goods:—Held, that the seller might afterwards sue the principals for the price. Thomson v. Davenport, 9 B. & C. 78; 4 M. & Ry. 110.

Where an agent, without declaring his principal, purchases goods, the vendor, on discovering the principal, may sue him, though he has debited the agent, and though the principal has remitted money to his agent to discharge the debt. Welson v. Powel, 3 Doug. 410.

Within what Time.]—A vendor, who sells to a person known to be the agent of an unknown principal, must elect to proceed against the principal within a reasonable time after discovering him, otherwise he loses his right to treat the principal as vendee, if the state of the accounts between the latter and his agent has been altered to the prejudice of the principal, before he makes his election. Smethurst v. Mitchell, 1 El. & El. 623; 28 L. J., Q. B. 241; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 978; 7 W. R. 226.

The sellers' right to resort to the undisclosed principal on a contract made by a broker in his own name is not affected by their delaying to do so until parties to whom the broker has resold have become insolvent; the defendants, the original purchasers, not having paid the brokers in the meantime or otherwise altered their position. Campbell v. Hicks, 28 L. J., Ex. 70.

In order to discharge a principal from his liability for a debt contracted by his agent, the principal must shew that the creditor has himself misled him into supposing that he has elected to give exclusive credit to the agent, and that the principal has been prejudiced by that supposition. Mere delay in enforcing payment from the agent will not be sufficient for the purpose. Irvine v. Watson (5 Q. B. D. 102), Heald v. Kenworthy (10 Ex. 739), and Smethurst v. Mitchell (28 L. J., Q. B. 241) considered. Davison v. Donaldson, 9 Q. B. D. 623; 47 L. T. 564; 31 W. R. 277; 4 Asp. M. C. 601—C. A.

If one takes the security of the agent of the principal with whom he dealt, unknown to the principal, and gives the agent a receipt as for the money due from the principal, in consequence of which the principal deals differently with his agent, on the faith of such receipt, the principal is discharged, although the security fails. Otherwise, if the principal does not shew that he was injured by means of such false voucher. Wyatt v. Hertford (Marquis), 3 East, 147.

What amounts to.]—P. carried on business in London as agent for K. & Co., paper manufacturers at Vienna. D. ordered of P. paper, addressing the order to him personally, which he acknowledged by letter, and promised to supply the paper in certain quantities and at certain times as he obtained the goods from K. & Co. Some of the parcels were delivered, but D., being unable to obtain any more from P., who alleged default in K. & Co., wrote to them stating their position, and P.'s excuses. In an action against P. for breach of contract in not delivering the paper:—Held, that the letter of P. to D. agreeing to supply the paper amounted to a contract binding on P. personally, and that the subsequent letter of D. to K. & Co. was not an election by D. to substitute K. & Co. as the party bound in the place of P. Dramburgh v. Pollitzer, 28 L. T. 470; 21 W. R. 682.

The seller of goods to an apparent principal upon discovering that the buyer is only an agent may so conduct himself by demanding payment from, and taking proceedings against the agent, that he will be deemed to have elected to look to the agent only for payment, and will be debarred from any remedy against the real principal. MacClure v. Schemeil, 20 W. R. 168. And see Smyth v. Anderson, ante, col. 1041.

Where a broker who had sold goods for the plaintiff to the defendant made an arrangement with the plaintiff unknown to the defendant, altering the time of payment :—Held, that the plaintiff had thereby taken the broker as his debtor, and had discharged the defendant. Thornton v. Meux, M. & M. 43 ; 31 R. R. 711.

—— Proceedings in Bankruptcy.]—The mere fact of filing an affidavit of proof against the estate of an insolvent agent to an undiscovered principal, after the undiscovered principal is known to the creditor, is not a conclusive election by the creditor to treat the agent as his debtor. Curtis v. Williamson, 44 L. J., Q. B. 27 ; L. R. 10 Q. B. 57 ; 31 L. T. 678 ; 23 W. R. 236.

B. purchased goods of the plaintiffs ; he was the agent of the defendants, his undisclosed principals. B. became insolvent, and the plaintiffs then became aware that the defendants were principals. With this knowledge the plaintiffs' clerk sent an affidavit of proof of the debt due to them against the estate of B., whose affairs were being liquidated by arrangement. The plaintiffs endeavoured to prevent the affidavit of proof from being filed, but were unsuccessful :—Held, that the mere filing of the affidavit of proof formed no obstacle to the plaintiffs suing the defendants for the price of the goods sold to B. Borries v. Imperial Ottoman Bank, 43 L. J., C. P. 3 ; L. R. 9 C. P. 38 ; 29 L. T. 689 ; 22 W. R. 92.

A. and B. were both in the habit of sending goods to C., a factor, for sale ; in the course of his dealings with C., B. purchased of him goods belonging to A., which were invoiced to him by C. in his own name, though, upon the balance of accounts between them, C. was indebted to B. A. afterwards filed an affidavit in the court of bankruptcy, in which he alleged that C. was justly and truly indebted for goods belonging to him sold and delivered by C., as the factor or agent of A., to B., and for which goods C. received payment by means of goods sold and delivered to him by B., and which goods were used by C. in his trade of a cheesemonger. Upon this affidavit a fiat was worked out against C. to its termination :—Held, that this affidavit did not estop A. from suing B. for the price of the goods, or afford sufficient evidence to sustain a plea of payment in that action. Morgan v. Couchman, 14 C. B. 101 ; 2 C. L. R. 53 ; 23 L. J., C. P. 36 ; 2 W. R. 59.

The creditors of A. having issued a fiat in bankruptcy against him, and having at the close of the proceedings under the fiat received notice, by means of the examination of the bankrupt and others, that A. was only the agent of B. & Co., proceeded nevertheless to sign A.'s certificate : —Held, that this was not an election by the creditors to treat A. as their sole debtor. Taylor v. Sheppard, 1 Y. & Coll. 271.

Proof of.]—C., a broker, was authorised by the defendant to buy cotton for him, but not to disclose his name. C.'s credit not being good enough to enable him to obtain a contract upon his own sole responsibility, he gave the plaintiffs the name of his principal, and bought and sold notes were exchanged between the plaintiffs and C., in which the latter was named as the buyer. C. sent the defendant an advice note informing him that he had bought the cotton of the plaintiffs "for him," and the defendant did not repudiate the transaction. An invoice was made out to C., and, the market falling, C. was called upon by the plaintiffs to accept and pay for the cotton, and threatened with legal proceedings. Failing to obtain payment from C., the plaintiffs sued the defendant :—Held, that the fact of his name being disclosed at the time of the contract did not preclude the plaintiffs from having recourse to him ; that parol evidence of the circumstances under which the contract was made was admissible ; and that the insertion of C.'s name in the contract, though his principal was known at the time, and the subsequent demands upon C. for payment, did not necessarily amount to an election on the part of the plaintiffs to give credit to C., and to him only. Calder v. Dobell, 40 L. J., C. P. 224 ; L. R. 6 C. P. 486 ; 25 L. T. 129 ; 19 W. R. 978—Ex. Ch.

Question for Jury—To whom Credit given.]—Where, in an action for goods sold and delivered, the question was whether they were purchased by a person on his own account, or for his principal ; and it was left to the jury to say to whom credit was given :—Held, that it was properly left, and that it was not necessary to leave it to them to say whether the vendor knew, at the time of the sale, that he was dealing with the purchaser in his character of agent. Edwards v. Smith, 5 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 11.

Effect of.]—Where an agent having made a contract in his own name has been sued on it to judgment, no second action is maintainable against the principal. Priestly v. Fearnie, 3 H. & C. 977 ; 34 L. J., Ex. 172 ; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 813 ; 13 L. T. 208 ; 13 W. R. 1089.

And see per Cairns, C., in Kendall v. Hamilton, 4 App. Cas. 514.

Subsequent Acknowledgment of Indebtedness.]—Where goods were sold to an agent of a known principal, and the seller gave credit to the agent, who afterwards ran away, after which the principal (who had received the goods) acknowledged his liability to the vendor :—Held, that the vendor could recover against the principal, in an action for goods sold and delivered. Wilding v. Collyer, 1 L. J., C. P. 50.

Of Acceptor or Drawer of Bill.]—A firm abroad drew bills on one of its own partners, trading on his account in England, payable to an agent of the foreign government. The bills were not paid, process of insolvency issued against the foreign firm, and a commission against the English partner :—Held, the agent may prove under the commission, but will be restrained from receiving dividends, unless he elect not to prove under the insolvency abroad. Mattos, Ex parte, Venzeller, In re, 1 Mont. & Ayr. 345. Affirming Cotesworth, Ex parte, 1 Deac. & C. 281 ; Mont. & Bli. 92 ; 2 L. J., Bk. 18.

v. Payment to Agent when a Discharge.

Payment of Purchase-money.]—When goods are sold to an apparent principal for ready money, the seller must, at his peril, obtain immediate payment, and if the buyer is only an agent contracting in his own name, and receives the price forthwith from his principal, the seller who omits to enforce immediate payment cannot at a subsequent time recover the value of the goods from the principal, upon the failure of the agent to pay over to the seller their price. MacClure v. Schemeil, 20 W. R. 168.

If an agent buys goods on credit for an unnamed principal, payment by the principal to his agent of the price of the goods before the credit expires may, under some circumstances, deprive the vendor of his right to sue the principal. Smith or Smyth v. Anderson, 7 C. B. 21; 18 L. J., C. P. 109; 13 Jur. 211.

If goods are bought by a broker, the principal is liable to the vendor, if called upon when payment becomes due; although he may have previously paid the broker. Secus, if the day of payment is allowed to pass without any demand being made upon the principal. Kymer v. Suwercropp, 1 Camp. 109.

A factor made purchases for his principal, who made payments to him on account; afterwards the factor was pressed for payment by a letter, which came to the hands of the principal, who transmitted it to the factor, and, with a knowledge of the fact, paid him the residue:—Held, that the principal was liable over to the sellers for the money he had so paid over to his factor after notice. Powell v. Nelson, 15 East, 65.

The defendant, through the agency of one Yates, granted to the plaintiff an annuity, redeemable at six months' notice. In May, 1830, notice was given to repurchase in November and in August, 1830, the defendant entrusted Yates with the money for the repurchase. In October Yates prevailed on the plaintiff to execute the deed of reassignment, dated in November and indorsed on the annuity deed, without receiving the repurchase money; but the plaintiff did not sign any receipt for the money. Yates afterwards produced the deed to the son of the defendant to satisfy him of the payment, and it was handed back to Yates to be kept by him with the defendant's other documents. Yates acted in the transaction as agent of both parties. He retained the money, and, to deceive both, continued the payment of the annuity, but afterwards died insolvent. The defendants subsequently obtained possession of the deed:—Held, under the circumstances, that the defendant was not discharged, but was bound to pay the plaintiff the repurchase money, with interest from November, 1830, the plaintiff accounting for the subsequent receipts of the annuity. Vandaleur v. Blagrave, 6 Beav. 565; 7 Jur. 1002. Affirmed, 17 L. J., Ch. 45; 11 Jur. 935.

When a principal authorises his agent to pledge his credit, and the latter makes a purchase on his behalf, and thereby creates a debt, the principal is not discharged by payment to the agent, if the money is not paid over to the seller, unless the latter, by his conduct, makes it unjust that the principal should be sued; as, for example, where the seller, by his words or conduct, induces the principal to believe that a settlement has been come to between the seller and the agent, in consequence of which the principal pays the amount of the debt to the agent. Heald v. Kenworthy, 10 Ex. 739; 3 C. L. R. 612; 24 L. J., Ex. 76; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 70; 3 W. R. 176.

A vendor who has given credit to an agent, believing him to be the principal, cannot recover against the undisclosed principal if the principal has bonâ fide paid the agent at a time when the vendor still gave credit to the agent, and knew of no one else as principal. Armstrong v. Stokes, 41 L. J., Q. B. 253; L. R. 7 Q. B. 598; 26 L. T. 872; 21 W. R. 52.

The defendants employed C., a broker, to buy oil for them. C. accordingly bought of the plaintiffs, informing them at the time of the sale that he was buying for principals, though he did not tell them who those principals were. The terms of the sale were "cash on or before delivery"; but though it is not infrequent in the oil trade, in such a case, to require payment before delivery, there is no invariable custom to that effect. The plaintiffs delivered the oil to C. without insisting on prepayment, and the defendants, not knowing that the plaintiffs had not been paid, paid C. Shortly afterwards C. stopped payment, and the plaintiffs thereupon sued the defendants for the price:—Held, that, as the plaintiffs at the time of the sale knew the broker was buying for principals, and not on his own account, the fact of the defendants having paid the broker did not preclude the plaintiffs from suing them for the price, unless, before such payment, they had by their conduct induced the defendants to believe that they had already been paid by the broker; and that the mere omission on the part of the plaintiffs to insist on pre-payment was not, in the absence of an invariable custom to that effect, such conduct as would reasonably induce such belief. Heald v. Kenworthy (10 Ex. 739; 24 L. J., Ex. 76) followed. Armstrong v. Stokes (L. R. 7 Q. B. 598) discussed. Irvine v. Watson, 49 L. J., Q. B. 531; 5 Q. B. D. 414; 42 L. T. 810—C. A. Affirming 49 L. J., Q. B. 239; 5 Q. B. D. 102; 42 L. T. 51; 28 W. R. 353.

On a Promissory Note after Payment to Agent.]—Where an agent tendered the amount of a note for his principal, on condition of having the note given up, which could not be done from its being mislaid, and afterwards failed with the money in his hands:—Held, that the principal was still liable on the note, but without interest from the time of the tender. Dent v. Dunn, 3 Camp. 296; 13 R. R. 809. And see Stewart v. Fry, 1 Moore, 74; 7 Taunt. 339.

vi. Payment by Agent.

What Amounts to.]—In an action for sheep sold and delivered, the defendant pleaded a payment of 175*l.* It was proved by J. that he received 175*l.* from the defendant's wife, and gave it to the plaintiff:—Held, that evidence might be given, that when the wife gave the defendant the money, she told J. to take it to the plaintiff for the sheep. Walter v. Lewis, 7 Car. & P. 344.

Action on a bill of exchange for 419*l.* 2*s.* First plea, as to 4*l.* 18*s.*, parcel of the sum mentioned in the declaration, payment of 5*l.* into court. Second plea, as to the residue of that sum, that the plaintiffs were agents and brokers for H., and, as such, sold property for him for 415*l.* 12*s.* 6*d.*, which was to be paid at a date to arrive before the maturity of the bill; that H. had applied to the plaintiffs to advance him this money, which they had agreed to do if he would procure the defendants' acceptance of the bill, they undertaking to appropriate the purchase money in satisfaction of the bill. Averment, that the purchase money was received before the bill became due, and was sufficient to satisfy the residue of the bill. Third plea, to the residue, payment of 415*l.* 12*s.* 6*d.* before the bill became due and before action, in discharge of the promises and all damages as to the residue. The facts were that the plaintiffs sold shares for H. for 415*l.* 12*s.* 6*d.* Before the settling day he applied to the plaintiffs for this money, and they agreed to advance it if he would procure the defendants' acceptance for the amount, promising to appropriate the purchase money to its discharge. The bill was drawn for a period beyond the settling day, and for 419*l.* 2*s.*, to cover the accruing interest. The defendants accepted the bill on the faith of this arrangement. The purchase money was received in due time:—Held, after a verdict for the defendants on the second and third pleas, first, that the facts were evidence of payment by the defendants, and that the proceeds of the shares, when received by the plaintiffs, was money paid to the plaintiffs on the defendants' account, and by their agent. Hills v. Mesnard, 10 Q. B. 266; 16 L. J., Q. B. 306.

Held, secondly, that the plaintiffs had no right to deduct from the proceeds of the shares a sum due from H. to plaintiffs for brokerage on a previous purchase for him. Ib.

The defendant and K. gave their joint and several promissory note to the plaintiffs, and the latter subsequently agreed with K. and L. to take, and did take, L.'s bill of exchange in satisfaction of the defendant's liability on the note. R., by L.'s authority, paid the bill when due:—Held, in an action on the note, that these facts supported a plea of payment by the defendant. Thorne v. Smith, 2 L. M. & P. 43; 20 L. J., C. P. 71; 15 Jur. 469.

On the insolvency of a banking company, W., one of the principal shareholders, gave bills and other securities to another bank to cover advances to be made by that bank for the payment of the public creditors of the insolvent company, out of which advances the debts of such creditors were paid, and at the same time, the debts were assigned by the creditors to R., as a trustee for W., by a deed which recited these facts, and that R. had agreed to pay the amount of the bills, on having an assignment to him of the debts. In an action brought by one of the original creditors for W.'s benefit against certain of the shareholders of the insolvent company to recover the amount of his debt:—Held, that these facts did not support a plea of payment of the debt by the defendants. M'Intyre v. Miller, 13 M. & W. 725; 2 D. & L. 708; 14 L. J., Ex. 180.

Action on a bond: plea, payment. The sum of 200*l.* having been lent by the plaintiff to the defendant on his bond, through M., the defendant's attorney, and who acted for him generally as his agent in his pecuniary affairs, and repayment being afterwards demanded, M. obtained from his bankers (the real plaintiffs in the case) an advance of 400*l.* for himself, depositing the bond in question and another bond as a security for repayment, stating in a letter to the plaintiff that he had laid down the money to prevent her any further inconvenience. The defendant was not aware of the application for, or of the repayment of, the 200*l.*:—Held, that this was not a payment by the defendant. Lucas v. Wilkinson, 1 H. & N. 420; 26 L. J., Ex. 13; 5 W. R. 197.

Where a mercantile firm in England borrows money of another firm, and both have a common agent abroad, if that agent credit the lending firm with sums received for the borrowing firm, in pursuance of an agreement between them, that credit is not a payment. McLarty v. Middleton, 6 W. R. 379, 853.

The transfer from one account to another in the books of an agent is not payment as between the agent and the transferee of such account, and the entry is not an acknowledgment unless the transferee is informed of the fact. Ib.

—— Acceptance of Bill.] — Where a tradesman, who had supplied goods to a ship, sent in his account to the owner's agent and ship's husband, and took his acceptance at three months for the amount, deducting discount for that time, which was the usual credit, and when the bill became due consented to a renewal of it adding interest, and in like manner took a third acceptance, which was dishonoured, and the agent soon afterwards failed, the balance in his hands in favour of his principal (the shipowner) having during all this time exceeded the amount of the bill, which was however unknown to the principal, who had never inspected the agent's accounts:—Held, that the tradesman might sue the shipowner for the amount of his claim, and that it was not discharged by the acceptance of the agent. Robinson v. Read, 9 B. & C. 449; 4 M. & Ry. 349; 7 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 236.

Ratification of Payment by Stranger.] — Payment by a stranger considered to be for a debtor and on his account, and afterwards ratified by him, is a good payment. Belshaw v. Bush, 11 C. B. 191; 22 L. J., C. P. 24; 17 Jur. 67.

But payment by a stranger, without the authority, prior or subsequent, of the debtor, is not. James v. Isaacs, 12 C. B. 791; 22 L. J., C. P. 73; 17 Jur. 69; 1 W. R. 21. See Cook v. Lister, 13 C. B. (N.S.) 543; 32 L. J., C. P. 121; 7 L. T. 715; 11 W. R. 369.

The ratification in such case may be after the commencement of the action, as where the defendant adopts the payment of the stranger by pleading it as a payment to the plaintiff. Simpson v. Eggington, 10 Ex. 845. S. P., Belshaw v. Bush, supra.

To an action by an indorsee of a bill of exchange against the acceptor, he pleaded that the bill was an accommodation bill; that the drawer indorsed the bill and other bills to the plaintiff as security for the repayment of 30*l.* advanced by him to the drawer, and that the bill was satisfied by payment to the plaintiff by the acceptor of one of the other bills of the money so advanced:—Held, that the plea was no bar to the further maintenance of the action, the payment having been made by a stranger, and not having been ratified by the plaintiff. Kemp v. Balls, 10 Ex. 607; 3 C. L. R. 195; 24 L. J., Ex. 47.

When a creditor accepts payment of a debt from a stranger without the authority of the debtor, it is competent to the creditor, on discovering the want of authority and before any ratification of the payment by the debtor, to cancel the payment by returning the money to the stranger; and the debtor cannot in such a case ratify the payment by placing a plea of payment on the record in an action brought against him for the amount by the creditor. Walter v. James, 40 L. J., Ex. 104; L. R. 6 Ex. 124; 24 L. T. 188; 19 W. R. 472.

When a payment is made, not by way of gift for the benefit of the debtor, but by an agent who intended to be reimbursed by the debtor, but who had not the debtor's authority to make it, it is competent to the creditor, and the party paying, to rescind the transaction at any time before the debtor has affirmed the payment, and to repay the money, when the payment of the debt will be at an end, and the original debtor will be again responsible. Ib.

b. Other Acts of Agents.

i. Generally.

Scope of Authority.]—An agent cannot bind his principal by any act or declaration which is out of the scope of his authority. Olding v. Smith, 16 Jur. 497.

An agent can only act within the scope of his authority as such. Schumack v. Lock, 3 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 57.

Doctrine of Respondeat Superior not to be Extended.]—I agree that the court ought to be very careful how it extends the doctrine "respondeat superior." It has been carried in our law very far indeed—per Jessel, M.R. Smith v. Keal, 9 Q. B. D. 351; 47 L. T. 143; 31 W. R. 67.

Infringement of Patent by Agent.]—A patent consisted of the application of cards or strips of leather covered with wire to rollers at "wide distances." A person who contracted to clothe rollers and supplied to a "nailer" cards of such width that when applied to the rollers they must of necessity leave wide spaces, and who himself paid the nailer, was held to have infringed the patent, though he alleged that his business was that of a cardmaker only, and did not include the nailer's work. Semble, the conclusion would have been the other way if he had merely supplied the cards without making the nailer his agent. Sykes v. Howarth, 48 L. J., Ch. 769; 12 Ch. D. 826; 41 L. T. 79; 28 W. R. 215.

Act of Bankruptcy by Agent.]—A man cannot commit an act of bankruptcy by an act of his agent which he has not authorised, and of which he is not cognisant. Blain, Ex parte, Sawers, In re, 12 Ch. D. 522; 41 L. T. 46; 28 W. R. 334.

ii. Fraud.

Acts within Scope of Authority.]—The fraud of an agent, to make the principal liable therefor, must be committed within the scope of his authority, and for the benefit of the principal. Thorne v. Heard, 64 L. J., Ch. 652; [1895] A. C. 495; 11 R. 254; 73 L. T. 291; 44 W. R. 155—H. L. (E.)

Fraud will vitiate any transaction, though the principal does not personally take any part in the fraud, if the agent does, for the principal is civilly responsible for the acts of his agent. Doe d. Willis v. Martin, 4 Term Rep. 39; 2 R. R. 324.

A local manager of a branch bank, while engaged at the bank, suggested to a lady who had a deposit account, that higher interest might be obtained for her money if she purchased two houses for a sum which would pay off a mortgage held by a third person upon them, and also a lien held by the bank. She assented, and gave him her deposit note, for which he gave her a fresh deposit note for the difference between the amount of the former note and the purchase money, and retained the residue for the purpose of making the investment. This money the local manager appropriated to his own use, and the bank refused to bear the loss:—Held, in an action against them, that they were liable, the jury having found that the manager intended and induced the lady to believe that he was acting as the agent of the bank, and also that as local manager he had authority from the bank to make an assignment of an equitable mortgage. Thompson v. Bell, 10 Ex. 10; 2 C. L. R. 1213; 23 L. J., Ex. 321; 2 W. R. 559.

But where the agent of a wharfinger, whose duty it was to give receipts for goods actually received at the wharf, fraudulently gave a receipt for goods which had never been received, the principal was held not to be responsible, because it was not within the scope of the agent's authority, in the course of his employment, to give such a receipt. Coleman v. Riches, 16 C. B. 104; 3 C. L. R. 795; 24 L. J., C. P. 125; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 596; 3 W. R. 453.

A miller was in the habit of purchasing wheat, and directing the sellers to deliver the wheat at the landing place, at Bristol, of a wharfinger and carrier, to be carried by him from Bristol to Cardiff. B., his agent at Bristol, gave receipts to the sellers for the wheat when delivered, and the miller was accustomed to pay for the wheat upon the production of such receipts, but there was no contract between him and the wharfinger that receipts should be given, on the faith of which the former might pay:—Held, that B. had a limited authority to give receipts only when wheat had been delivered; and, therefore, where B. fraudulently signed a receipt for wheat delivered, when none in fact had been delivered:—Held, to be not an act done within the scope of his authority, as agent, for which his principal was responsible to the miller, who had paid to the seller the price of the wheat, on the faith of the receipt being true. Ib.

The secretary of a benefit building society employed H. as his private clerk to transact the business of the society. H. was not an officer of the society. The directors had drawn cheques from time to time, which were handed over to H. by the direction, and with the knowledge of, the secretary, for the purpose of being paid by him to the withdrawing members; but instead of being so applied they were misappropriated by H.:—Held, that the secretary was responsible for the acts of his clerk, to whom he intrusted the moneys, in the same manner and to the same extent as if the directors had placed the moneys in the hands of the secretary, and he himself had handed them over to his clerk. James, Ex parte, Mutual and Permanent Benefit Building Society, In re, 49 L. T. 530; 48 J. P. 54.

The shares of a proprietor in a joint-stock company were sold out without his authority, and not in conformity with the provisions of the deed by which the company was constituted. On a bill filed by the shareholders, alleging that the sale was the fraudulent act of the secretary of the company, and sanctioned by the directors, but assuming the transaction to be valid, as against the transferee, and praying that the loss might be made good out of the assets of the company; demurrer for want of equity allowed, on the ground that the bill stated no case for making the company liable in damages. Duncan v. Luntley, 2 Mac. & G. 30; 2 Hall & Tw. 78; 14 Jur. 318.

Forgery by Secretary of Company—Certificate for Shares.]—G. having, through the plaintiff, as his broker, purchased 200 shares in the defendant company, had a transfer and apparently regularly issued certificates sent to him in ordinary course. The transfer and certificates were lodged at the company's office with a request for registration, and what purported to be a certificate that G. was the registered proprietor of 200 shares was issued to him, signed by one director and the secretary, and bearing the seal of the company. The form of this certificate was in accordance with the company's deed and resolutions, but, in fact, the name of the director was forged by the secretary. Subsequently G. deposited the certificate, as security for advances, with the plaintiff, who gave the company notice of such deposit, neither G. nor the plaintiff having any knowledge or ground for suspicion that the certificate was not genuine. On a case stated raising the question whether the plaintiff had a good title to the shares as against the company:—Held, that he had; that the company were liable for the fraud of their agent perpetrated in the ordinary course of his employment, as they had here placed the secretary in a position to warrant the genuineness of the signature and the seal. Shaw v. Port Phillip Gold Mining Co., 53 L. J., Q. B. 369; 13 Q. B. D. 103; 50 L. T. 685; 32 W. R. 771.

Holding out Agent as authorised to Borrow Money in Excess of Prescribed Limits—Personal Liability of Directors.]—By the certified rules of an unincorporated building society the directors might borrow money not exceeding a prescribed amount. Loans were made to the society through its secretary, who was also acting treasurer; the usual course of business was that he delivered to the lenders a receipt and undertaking on behalf of the directors to give promissory notes signed by the directors, and subsequently exchanged such notes for the receipt and undertaking. After a total amount had been borrowed exceeding that limited by the rules, the plaintiffs paid a sum to the secretary as a loan to the society, and received from him the usual receipt and undertaking, but no promissory notes. This sum he appropriated to his own use. In an action against the society and directors the jury found that the society held out the secretary to the plaintiffs as having authority to receive the loan on their behalf on the terms on which it was received, and that the directors did the same:—Held, that, as the money had been borrowed in excess of the total amount limited by the rules, the society was not liable; but that, although there was no fraud on the part of the directors, they were personally liable. Chapleo v. Brunswick Benefit Building Society, 50 L. J., C. P. 372; 6 Q. B. D. 696; 44 L. T. 449; 29 W. R. 529—C. A.

Negligence of Principal.]—A plaintiff, appointed by the court paid manager of an estate, who transmitted moneys belonging to the estate to his solicitor in the action for payment into court, was held liable for the solicitor's misappropriation, on the ground of negligence, by reason of his sending the money before the orders for payment in had been actually obtained, and subsequently asking for no vouchers or other direct evidence of payment. Mitchell. In re, Mitchell v. Mitchell, 54 L. J., Ch. 342; 52 L. T. 178.

Fraudulent Mortgage by Agent.]—The defendant employed his attorney to obtain a loan of 100*l.* for him on mortgage, and placed his title deeds in his hands for that purpose. The attorney forged the defendant's signature to a mortgage deed to the plaintiff for 420*l.*, and received the money, and concealed the transaction from the defendant, to whom he afterwards advanced 198*l.* in various sums, and subsequently took from him a mortgage to a third person, to cover that advance:—Held, that the plaintiff had no cause of action against the defendant, even to the extent of 100*l.* Painter v. Abel, 2 H. & C. 113; 33 L. J., Ex. 60; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 549; 8 L. T. 287; 11 W. R. 651.

A husband, being about to leave England for a residence in India, executed an assignment by deed to his wife, who was to remain in England, of a leasehold dwelling-house, "to hold the same unto" the wife, "her executors, administrators and assigns, as her separate estate." No trustees were appointed, the husband and wife being the only parties to the deed. The title deeds were allowed to remain in the possession of the wife. The wife having parted with possession of the deeds (all but the assignment) to an agent, in order to raise a sum of 200*l.* upon them for the wife, and having asked for the return of the deeds without success, the agent, by forging the name of the husband to a mortgage deed and other instruments, raised a sum of 1,200*l.*, which he appropriated to his own use:—Held, that there was no negligence on the part of the wife so as to bar her title to relief against the mortgagees. Fox v. Hawks, Hawks v. Fox, 49 L. J., Ch. 579; 13 Ch. D. 822; 42 L. T. 622; 28 W. R. 656.

Fraudulent Transfer of Mortgage by Agent—Authority to receive Mortgage Money.]—G. and H. were mortgagees for 1,000*l.* on property of S. Their solicitors D. and P., who had the deeds in their custody, applied to the defendant, who was also a client of theirs, saying that they believed he had 1,000*l.* to invest on mortgage, and that G. and H. wanted 1,000*l.* on a transfer of S.'s mortgage. The defendant inspected the property, and being satisfied, he, on the 19th of June, 1878, sent the 1,000*l.* to D. and P., who gave him a receipt for it. In July, D. and P. fraudulently induced G. and H. to execute a deed of transfer to the defendant with a receipt indorsed, which deed they stated to G. and H. to be a deed of reconveyance to S. on his paying off the mortgage. D. and P. shortly afterwards handed his deed with the title-deeds to the defendant, and went on paying him interest as if they had received it from S., who was in fact paying his interest to the agents of G. and H.; G. and H. made no inquiry as to the mortgage, and this went on till 1883, when D. and P. became bankrupts, and the 1,000*l.* received from the defendant, which had never been handed over to G. and H., was lost. G. and H. then brought their action against the defendant asserting a right against the property in the nature of an unpaid vendor's lien:—Held, that, as the plaintiffs by the deed of transfer and receipt which they handed to D. and P. enabled them to represent to the defendant that the 1,000*l.* which he had previously handed to D. and P. had come to the hands of the plaintiffs, they had raised a counter equity which prevented their claiming a vendor's lien, though this would not have been the case if (D. and P. having no authority to receive money for the plaintiffs) the defendant had paid the 1,000*l.* to D. and P. at the time when the deeds were delivered to him, since he would then have known that the plaintiffs had not received the money. Swinbanks, Ex parte (11 Ch. D. 525), distinguished. Gordon v. James, 30 Ch. D. 249; 53 L. T. 641; 34 W. R. 217—C. A.

Quære, per Cotton, L.J., whether D. and P., assuming them to have authority to receive mortgage money on behalf of the plaintiffs, could be taken ever to have, in fact, received this 1,000*l.* on their behalf. Ib.

Fraudulent Act of Agent of which Principal gets the Benefit.]—A secretary and financial agent of a company, having authority to get bills discounted, forged bills and got them discounted. He paid the proceeds into a bank to the account of a firm to which he belonged, and in his character of a member of that firm drew cheques on the account in favour of the company; and it was alleged that out of the amounts so drawn he actually made payments for the benefit of the company. In the winding up of the company it was held, that an inquiry must be directed what amount of the proceeds of the bills had been applied, directly or indirectly, for the benefit of the company, and that a claim for the amount when ascertained would be good. Japanese Curtains and Patent Fabric Co., In re, Shoolbred, Ex parte, 28 W. R. 339.

The plaintiffs and the defendant having each lodged their respective India bonds with the same bankers, who afterwards privily, and without the defendant's authority, sold his bonds, and, upon his demand of them, delivered up to him the India bonds of the plaintiffs to the same total amount, and payable to the same obligee (being always the treasurer of the company, who indorsed such bonds in blank before they were circulated), but having different numbers, and for different separate sums, and therefore manifestly distinguishable from his own bonds, though the defendant did not know that they were the property of another, but was told by the bankers that they had exchanged his original bonds for these:—Held, that the defendant, having sold the plaintiffs' bonds so received from his own agents, who had acted malâ fide in passing them to him, was liable to answer over to the plaintiffs for the amount. Glyn v. Baker, 13 East, 509; 12 R. R. 414.

A company cannot retain any benefit which they have gained through the fraud of their agents. Western Bank of Scotland v. Addie, L. R. 1 H. L. (Sc.) 145.

Corporate bodies may be made responsible for the frauds of agents to the extent to which they have profited by such frauds. Ib.

A. usually employed B. as his agent to buy hops of the several planters in and about Canterbury, but having in a particular season omitted to give him any orders at the usual time, B. enters into a partnership with three others for purchasing hops of that year for their mutual benefit. The hops are accordingly purchased, but A., having intelligence of this transaction before they were delivered, prevails upon B. to declare to the planters, that he bought them as A.'s agent, and by that means A. got the hops delivered to him:—Held, that this was a fraud upon the partners of B., and that A. should account for the value of the hops, according to the highest price for which he sold them. Hunter v. Sheppard, 4 Bro. P. C. 210.

Money borrowed by Agent without Authority—Money had and received.]—Money was lent by the plaintiff upon a cheque drawn by the defendants' manager, who had authority to draw cheques on their account per procuration, but no authority to overdraw or to borrow money. The defendants' account was overdrawn, and the money was borrowed to enable the manager to pay the defendants' workmen their wages, which he was unable to do through want of funds due to his own defalcations. The money was paid into the defendants' account at the bank, and out of it the manager paid the workmen's wages:—Held, that, as the money had come into the defendants' possession and had been paid to the defendants' workmen in discharge of legal obligations of the defendants, they were liable to the plaintiff for money had and received to the use of the plaintiff. Marsh v. Keating (1 Bing. (N.C.) 198) followed. Reid v. Rigby, 63 L. J., Q. B. 451; [1894] 2 Q. B. 40; 10 R. 280.

Lien of Customer on Goods Fraudulently Pledged.]—A horse dealer supplied a customer with a pair of horses, for which he paid 170*l.*, but finding the horses not according to warranty, she returned them. Thereupon the dealer sent another pair no better than the former, requesting the customer to keep them until he could furnish her with a better pair. This she did, until the dealer became bankrupt, without having repaid the 170*l.*, when it was found that the horses did not belong to him, but to an employer, for whom he was agent to sell, but not to pledge, the horses:—Held, that the horses were in the bankrupt's order and disposition; and that the customer could not enforce a lien on them as against the trustee in bankruptcy. Roy, Ex parte, Sillence, In re, 47 L. J., Bk. 36; 7 Ch. D. 70; 37 L. T. 508; 26 W. R. 82.

Putting in Fraudulent Defence.]—Where a solicitor has put in a fraudulent defence for his client without the knowledge of the client, the client is not bound by the act of the solicitor. Williams v. Preston, 51 L. J., Ch. 927; 20 Ch. D. 672; 47 L. T. 265; 30 W. R. 555.

iii. False Representations.

Principal not authorising Representations.]—An owner of a house employed an agent to sell it. The agent described it as being free from rates and taxes, and did not know it to be otherwise; but it was in fact liable to certain rates and taxes, as the owner knew. On the faith of the agent's description, a party bought the house:—Held, that he might maintain an action for deceit against the owner of the house, though it did not appear that he had instructed his agent to make any representation as to rates or taxes. Fuller v. Wilson, 2 Q. & D. 460; 3 Q. B. 58; 11 L. J., Q. B. 251—Ex. Ch.

A principal is liable in an action of deceit for the false and fraudulent representations of his agent as to the quality and value of an article, whereby a person has been induced to purchase it for more than its worth, notwithstanding that the principal neither authorised nor knew of the fraudulent conduct of his agent. Udell v. Atherton, 7 H. & N. 172; 30 L. J., Ex. 337; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 777; 4 L. T. 797.

A timber merchant's traveller, with full knowledge of certain defects in a log of mahogany, induced a party to purchase, and pay for it by representing it to be sound. The timber merchant was neither aware of the defect, nor did he authorise his traveller to make such misrepresentation. In an action of deceit by the purchaser against the timber merchant: — Held, per Pollock, C.B., and Walde, B., that the principal was responsible for the fraud of his agent; per Martin, B., and Bramwell, B., that the principal was not responsible. Ib.

A principal is answerable for the act of his agent in concealing or suppressing deeds, though not done with the knowledge of the principal. Bowles v. Stewart, 1 Sch. & Lef. 209.

The arrangements for a deed between A. and B. were negotiated on A.'s behalf by C., his solicitor. B. cannot maintain a bill to have the deed set aside, on the ground that C., knowing material circumstances, concealed the same from him, unless he shews that A., the principal, at the same time had the same knowledge. But the knowledge of the principal would be the knowledge of the agent. Solomon v. Honywood, 3 N. R. 605; 10 L. T. 186; 12 W. R. 572.

Employing Agent Ignorant of Defect.]—The defendant's son, acting for the defendant, and with the defendant's authority, represented that certain sheep, which he sold to the plaintiff, were all right. The defendant had fraudulently concealed from his son that the sheep had the rot, and fraudulently gave the son authority to sell them for the best price, intending that the son should represent that they were sound:—Held, that the defendant was liable in an action to recover damages for fraudulent misrepresentation. Ludgater v. Love, 44 L. T. 694; 45 J. P. 600—C. A.

Where a principal purposely employs an agent ignorant of the truth, in order that such agent may innocently make a false statement believing it to be true, and may so deceive the party with whom he is dealing, the representation by the agent becomes a misrepresentation by the principal so as to vitiate the contract. Ib.

Liability of Principal.]—A principal is liable to an action for the fraudulent misrepresentation of his agent, acting in the course of his business. Barwick v. English Joint Stock Bank, 36 L. J., Ex. 147; L. R. 2 Ex. 259; 16 L. T. 461; 15 W. R. 877—Ex. Ch.

A master is answerable for every such wrong of his servant or of his agent as is committed in the course of the service and for the master's benefit, though no express command or privity of the master is proved; and there is no distinction between the case of fraud and the case of any other wrong. Mackay v. Commercial Bank of New Brunswick, 43 L. J., P. C. 31; L. R. 5 P. C. 394; 30 L. T. 180; 22 W. R. 473.

When one has suffered, and another has profited, by the fraudulent representation of an agent of the latter, made within the scope of his authority, the former is entitled to recover damages. Ib.

An action of deceit may be maintained against a company, whether it is incorporated or not incorporated, in respect of the fraud of its agent. Ib.

An officer of a banking corporation, whose duty it was to obtain the acceptance of bills of exchange in which the bank was interested, fraudulently, but without the knowledge of the president or directors of the bank, made a representation to A. which, by omitting a material fact, misled him, and induced him to accept a bill in which the bank was interested; and he was compelled to pay the bill:—Held, that he could recover from the bank the amount so paid. Ib.

In an action of deceit, whether against a person or against a company, the fraud of the agent may be treated for the purposes of pleading as that of the principal. Ib.

—— Secretary of Company.]—The defendants, a tramway company, employed contractors to execute certain works. By the contract the defendants had a right to retain a certain percentage of the amounts for which their engineer from time to time certified on account of the price of the works, until after the completion of the same. The contractors applied to the plaintiffs for an advance upon the security of retention moneys under the contract. The defendants' secretary, in answer to inquiries made by the plaintiffs, erroneously represented to them that there was a certain amount of retention money in the defendants' hands which would be payable after the completion of the works, whereas in fact it was not so. The plaintiffs thereupon advanced money to the contractors on the security of an assignment of the retention money. There was no evidence to shew that the secretary had authority to make the representations which he had made:—Held, that it is not within the scope of a secretary's authority to make such representations, and, therefore, in an action by the plaintiffs as assignees of the retention money, the defendants were not estopped from denying that such money was due. Barnett v. South London Tramways Co., 56 L. J., Q. B. 452; 18 Q. B. D. 815; 57 L. T. 436; 35 W. R. 640—C. A.

The secretary of the defendant company falsely, fraudulently, and without the knowledge of the directors of the company, represented to the plaintiff that if the plaintiff took certain shares in the company he would be appointed solicitor to the company, and afterwards represented that the plaintiff had been appointed solicitor. The plaintiff was induced by the secretary's representations to apply for shares in the company. He accepted and paid for the shares, and afterwards paid calls on them, and received a dividend:—Held, in an action by the plaintiff against the company, that the secretary had no such implied authority to make representations on behalf of the company as to render the company liable to the plaintiff for the fraudulent representations of the secretary, and therefore the plaintiff was not entitled to have his name struck off the register of shareholders, nor to recover the price which he had paid for the shares, or the calls which he had paid, and was liable to the defendants on their counterclaim for further calls. Newlands v. National Employers' Accident Association, 54 L. J., Q. B. 428; 53 L. T. 242; 49 J. P. 628—C. A.

—— Of Director for Acts of Co-directors.]—A company formed to work a mine was compelled from want of funds to cease working; money was then advanced to them by some of the directors, and amongst them Barnett and Baldwin. Afterwards, at a general meeting of the company, held in order to provide for the existing deficit and for working expenses, the directors were authorised to issue debentures on such terms and for such amounts as they in their discretion might think fit. The directors accordingly authorised the secretary to employ a firm of brokers to place the debentures. The brokers prepared and issued a prospectus bearing the names of Bell and others as directors, and containing statements as to the condition and prospects of the company on the faith of which the plaintiff and others purchased debentures. The money thus raised was paid to the company's bankers, and part of it was applied by the directors on behalf of the company to repay the advances made by Barnett and Baldwin. The debentures having become worthless, the plaintiff brought an action for damages against Bell and others in respect of the statements in the prospectus, some of which were alleged to be fraudulent. The jury found that the prospectus contained statements of facts which were false to the knowledge of the brokers, and by which the plaintiff was induced to part with his money; that none of the false statements were made by Bell personally or by his authority; that the brokers had authority to issue a prospectus, but no authority to include in it statements which were fraudulent; and that Bell derived no benefit from the money raised by the debentures:—Held, that Bell was not liable, by Cockburn, C.J., and Brett, L.J., on the ground that, though a party as director to the receipt of money, Bell was not aware of the falsehood of the statements contained in the prospectus, and derived no personal benefit from the receipt of the money; by Bramwell, L.J., that Bell had been guilty of no moral fraud, and not being the principal of the brokers, could not be held to have impliedly undertaken for the absence of fraud in them in issuing the prospectus. Weir v. Bell, 47 L. J., Ex. 704; 3 Ex. D. 238; 38 L. T. 929; 26 W. R. 746—C. A.

But by Cotton, L.J., that Bell was liable in an action to the plaintiff, for it was his duty as director to ascertain whether the statements in the prospectus were true or false. Ib.

A director of a company is not liable for a fraud (such as the issue of a fraudulent prospectus) committed by his co-directors, or by any other agent of the company, unless he has either expressly authorised or tacitly permitted its commission. Cargill v. Bower, 47 L. J., Ch. 649; 10 Ch. D. 502; 38 L. T. 779; 26 W. R. 716.

For Agent's own Benefit.]—A principal is not liable in an action of deceit for the unauthorised and fraudulent act of a servant or agent committed, not for the general or special benefit of the principal, but for the servant's or agent's private ends. The secretary of a company answered questions which were put to him as secretary as to the validity of certain debenture stock of the company. The answers were untrue and were fraudulently made by the secretary for his own benefit. In an action against the company for loss arising from the representations, the jury found that the secretary was held out by the company as a person to answer such inquiries on their behalf:—Held, that the company were not liable. British Mutual Banking Co. v. Charnwood Forest Ry., 56 L. J., Q. B. 449; 18 Q. B. D. 714; 57 L. T. 833; 35 W. R. 590; 52 J. P. 150—C. A.

Signature of Agent not Sufficient to satisfy Lord Tenterden's Act as to Representation.]—By 9 Geo. 4, c. 14, s. 6, a false representation as to the credit of another person, in order to maintain an action, must be signed by the person making it, and not by an agent. The plaintiff sued J. and G. jointly for a false representation with respect to the solvency of Sir William Russell. J. was sued as the public officer of a banking company formed under 7 Geo. 4, c. 46, and G. was the manager at one of their branches. The plaintiff was a customer of the S. Bank, and requested the manager of that bank to inquire for him as to Sir William Russell's credit. The manager wrote a letter addressed to the manager of the banking company, requesting information whether Sir William Russell was responsible to the extent of 50,000*l*. G. replied in his own name, signing his letter as manager, and giving a favourable account of Sir William Russell's responsibility. The plaintiff, in consequence of this letter, supplied Sir William Russell with goods, for which he never was paid, in consequence of his insolvency. The statement made by G. was false to his knowledge. The banking company had no knowledge, otherwise than through G., that such letter had been written, and gave him no express authority to write the letter; but the writing of such a letter was an act done within the scope of the general authority conferred on G. as manager:—Held, that the signature of G. to the letter could not be considered the signature of the banking company itself. Swift v. Jewesbury, 43 L. J., Q. B. 56; L. R. 9 Q. B. 301; 30 L. T. 31; 22 W. R. 319—Ex. Ch.

Held, also, that the letter was the representation of G., and not the representation of the banking company. Ib.

Held, also, that G. was liable personally for the false representation. Ib.

The signature of an authorised agent is not a sufficient signature within 9 Geo. 4, c. 14 (Lord Tenterden's Act), s. 6, whereon to charge a party making a false representation. Williams v. Mason, 28 L. T. 232; 21 W. R. 386.

C. M. and A. M. were trading as M. & Son. A. M., the son, wrote to the plaintiff a letter signed "M. & Son," in which he represented G. to be solvent. This letter was shewn to, and tacitly ratified by, C. M., the father. G. proving insolvent:—Held, that, notwithstanding the ratification of the letter by C. M., the letter was not signed by the "party to be charged" within the meaning of the above statute, so as to make him liable for any false representation therein. Ib.

Liability to Penalties for.]—The Queensland Constitution Act, 1867, by s. 6, enacts that any person who shall, directly or indirectly, hold or enjoy any contract for or on account of the public service, shall be incapable of sitting or voting as a member of the legislative assembly; and s. 7 imposes a penalty on any person so disqualified so sitting or voting. The respondent, being part owner of a ship which had been chartered by the government, sat and voted as a member of the legislative assembly. The respondent had instructed his agents, who were also part owners, not to charter the ship to the government, and that if they did, the contract should be made with such part owners only who should be held to have chartered the respondent's share at a rate fixed independently of such contract. The government had no knowledge that the respondent was a part owner :—Held, that under these circumstances the respondent was not liable to the penalties imposed by the act. Freeman v. Cooke (2 Ex. 654) approved. Miles v. McIlwraith, 52 L. J., P. C. 17 ; 8 App. Cas. 120 ; 48 L. T. 689 ; 31 W. R. 591—P. C.

iv. Negligence.

Adjoining Owners, Liability of—Dangerous or Hazardous Work.] — Two dwelling houses adjoined, built independently, but each on the extremity of its owner's soil and having lateral support from the soil on which the other rested. This having continued for much more than twenty years, one of the houses (the plaintiff's) was, in 1849, converted into a coach factory, the internal walls being removed and girders inserted into a stack of brickwork in such a way as to throw much more lateral pressure than before upon the soil under the adjoining house. The conversion was made openly and without deception or concealment. More than twenty years after the conversion the owners of the adjoining house employed a contractor to pull down their house and excavate, the contractor being bound to shore up adjoining buildings and make good all damage. The contractor employed a sub-contractor upon similar terms. The house was pulled down and the soil under it excavated to a depth of several feet, and the plaintiffs' stack being deprived of the lateral support of the adjacent soil sank and fell, bringing down with it most of the factory :—Held, that the plaintiffs had acquired a right of support for their factory by the twenty years' enjoyment, and could sue the owners of the adjoining house and the contractor for the injury. Bower v. Peate (1 Q. B. D. 321) approved. Dalton v. Angus, 50 L. J., Q. B. 689 ; 6 App. Cas. 740 ; 44 L. T. 844 ; 30 W. R. 196—H. L. (E.)

The defendant was the owner of a house standing at the corner of two streets, between a house belonging to the plaintiff and a house occupied by B. The defendant being desirous of rebuilding his house employed a competent architect and competent builders to rebuild it. The defendant's new house was a storey higher than the old house, and the basement was lower. After the house had been nearly finished, the workmen employed by the builders began to fix a staircase ; in so doing they negligently and without the knowledge of the defendant or his architect, cut into a party-wall dividing the defendant's new house and B.'s house. In consequence the defendant's house fell ; and the girders having become displaced, injury was done to the plaintiff's house, for which he now sued the defendant. The fixing of the staircase was not in itself a hazardous operation if it had been carried out with ordinary skill :—Held that an action was maintainable against the defendant for the injury done to the plaintiff's house. Bower v. Peate (1 Q. B. D. 321) considered. Hughes v. Percival, 52 L. J., Q. B. 719 ; 8 App. Cas. 443 ; 49 L. T. 189 ; 31 W. R. 725 ; 47 J. P. 772—H. L. (E.)

Damage having been done by the wrongful acts of a contractor or his workmen, employed under a contract and specification, to a neighbour's vault, it was held under the circumstances that both the employer and contractor were liable for it, and judgment was given for the plaintiff, with costs against the defendants. Lemaitre v. Davis, 51 L. J., Ch. 173 ; 19 Ch. D. 281 ; 46 L. T. 407 ; 30 W. R. 360 ; 46 J. P. 324.

During the removal of refuse grains from a brewery, in pursuance of a contract, and under the superintendence of the foreman of the brewers, so far as the removal inside the brewery was concerned, some of the grains were spilt upon the footpath in front of the brewery. The plaintiff, while passing the brewery, stepped upon the grains and fell and sustained injuries. In an action for damages against the brewers :—Held, that it was no answer on their part to say that the answer arose through the negligence of the contractor's men. Duke v. Courage, 46 J. P. 453.

A steward, manager, or agent is not liable for damage done by the negligence of those employed by him in the service of his principal ; for, the principal, or those actually employed, only are liable. Stone v. Cartwright, 6 Term Rep. 411 ; 3 R. R. 220.

—— Indivisible Contract.] — A proprietor making a dangerous use of his property must use reasonable precautions to prevent damage to his neighbours, or, if he authorises another to act for him, must see that such precautions are taken. Hughes v. Percival (8 App. Cas. 443) followed. Black v. Christchurch Finance Co., 63 L. J., P. C. 32 ; [1894] A. C. 48 ; 6 R. 394 ; 70 L. T. 77 ; 58 J. P. 332—P. C.

A contract "to start falling within three days from this date, and complete the falling by November 30, 1890, and to burn in a favourable time about February next," is a single and indivisible contract for the clearance of land ; and though the contractor violate his contract by burning before the time appointed, the proprietor of the land is liable for injury to his neighbour's property arising therefrom, for the legal consequences of doing an act at an improper time, and doing it in an improper manner are indistinguishable. Ib.

And see further NEGLIGENCE.

Manager of Bank.]—Censure of a manager's conduct in leaving signed cheques, blank as to the amount, in the hands of clerks to be used by them at discretion. Beveridge v. Beveridge, L. R. 2 H. L. Sc. 183.

Censure of manager's conduct in depositing company's cash in certain banks without consent of all the partners. Ib.

A manager exceeds his powers by increasing the wages of the company's servants, and also by substituting, for the original, more expensive machinery without consent of the partners. Ib.

Of Harbour-master — Liability of Harbour Commissioners.]—The "R.," which was anchored in F. outer harbour, having to be beached in the inner harbour, S., the harbour-master, directed the master of the "R." where to beach her. Before the "R." left the outer harbour, S. came on board, although a Trinity-house pilot was on board, and when she had arrived near the place where she had to be beached, gave directions as to the lowering of her anchor. The "R." overran her anchor and grounded on it, sustaining damage. In an action against the harbour commissioners and S., the court found as a fact that there was negligence on the part of S., and that the place where the "R." grounded was outside the jurisdiction of the harbour commissioners:—Held, that the duties of the harbour-master comprised directions as to the mooring and beaching of vessels; that by giving directions when he went on board, S. had resumed the functions as harbour-master, and that he and the commissioners were therefore liable for the damage done to the "R." The Rhosina, 54 L. J., P. 72; 10 P. D. 131; 53 L. T. 30; 33 W. R. 794; 5 Asp., M. C. 460—C. A.

v. Trespass.

General Rule.]—A principal is not liable in trespass for the act of his agent unless he authorised it beforehand, or subsequently assented to it with knowledge of what had been done. Freeman v. Rosher, 13 Q. B. 780; 18 L. J., Q. B. 340.

Wrongful Distress.]—The defendants received, on behalf of the owners, the rent of a house, of which the plaintiff was tenant. Rent being in arrear, the defendants signed, as agents for the owners, a warrant of distress, and delivered it to a broker to be executed. Before it was actually executed, the plaintiff tendered to the defendants the amount due, which they refused to receive on the ground that a distress warrant had issued. The plaintiff subsequently tendered the amount to the broker, who refused to receive it unless certain alleged costs of distress were also paid. The broker having subsequently distrained:—Held, that the distress was unlawful, and that the defendants were not mere agents conveying an authority from the landlords, but persons committing a wrongful act; and therefore liable for the damages sustained by the plaintiff. Bennett v. Bayes, 5 H. & N. 391; 29 L. J., Ex. 224; 2 L. T. 156; 8 W. R. 320.

The right of A. to do an act, e.g. to distrain on the property of B., depends on the authority he really has, not on what he says he has. Snell v. Finch, 13 C. B. (N.S.) 651; 32 L. J., C. P. 117; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 333; 7 L. T. 747; 11 W. R. 341. See also ante, col. 935.

vi. Malicious Prosecution.

Authority of Bank Manager to Prosecute on Behalf of Bank.]—In an action for a malicious prosecution against an incorporated banking company the jury found that the same had been authorised on behalf of the bank by W., the acting manager, and were directed by the judge that it was to be inferred from W.'s position as manager that he had sufficient power under the circumstances for directing a prosecution. A rule nisi to enter a nonsuit or for new trial was discharged:—Held, on appeal, that assuming the prosecution to have been authorised by W., the direction to the jury to the effect that it was to be inferred from W.'s position that he had authority to direct the prosecution, was on the evidence incorrect. Bank of New South Wales v. Owston, 48 L. J., P. C. 25; 4 App. Cas. 270; 40 L. T. 500; 14 Cox, C. C. 267.

The arrest, and still less the prosecution of offenders, is not within the ordinary routine of banking business, and therefore not within the ordinary scope of a bank manager's authority. Evidence accordingly is required to shew that such arrest or prosecution is within the scope of the duties and class of acts such manager is authorised to perform. That authority may be general, or it may be special and derived from the exigency of the particular occasion on which it is exercised. In the former case it is enough to shew commonly that the agent was acting in what he did on behalf of the principal; but in the latter case evidence must be given of a state of acts which shews that such exigency is present, or from which it might reasonably be supposed to be present. Rule made absolute for a new trial. Ib.

Action against Corporation.]—An action for a malicious prosecution will lie against a company. Stevens v. Midland Ry. (10 Ex. 352) not followed. The employment of policemen by a railway company to protect their property is an act within the scope of the incorporation of the company. Edwards v. Midland Ry., 50 L. J., Q. B. 281; 6 Q. B. D. 287; 43 L. T. 694; 29 W. R. 609; 45 J. P. 374.

A railway company, though a corporation, is liable to an action for false imprisonment if the act is committed by the authority of the company; the authority need not be under seal, but it lies on the plaintiff to give evidence justifying the jury in finding that the company's servants who imprisoned him or some of them had authority from the company to do so. Goff v. G. N. Ry., 3 El. & El. 672; 30 L. J., Q. B. 148; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 286; 3 L. T. 850.

vii. In Other Cases.

Conversion.]—Semble, if an agent, acting under the direction of a committee for managing the affairs of an incorporated company, commits a conversion, he renders the company liable. Duncan v. Surrey Canal Proprietors, 3 Stark. 50.

Assault.]—Where the chief and under secretaries for Ireland gave directions to have a meeting legally prevented, it was held in an action against them for assault that they were not responsible for any illegality in the method in which those directions were carried out by the chief commissioner of police and his subordinates, who were the servants of the Crown, to whom alone they were responsible. O'Byrne v. Hartington, Ir. R. 11 C. L. 445—Ex. Ch.

Liability of Members of Trade Union for Acts of District Delegate.]—The plaintiffs were shipwrights, employed by the day by a firm of shiprepairers to execute repairs to the woodwork of a ship. Some ironworkers who were members of a trade union were employed on the ironwork of the ship, and they objected to working in the same yard with the plaintiffs upon the ground that the latter had previously worked at ironwork on ships in another yard. The district delegate of the union was called in by the ironworkers, and he informed the employers that the ironworkers would leave off work unless the plaintiffs were discharged that day. In consequence of that threat the plaintiffs were discharged at the end of the day. The plaintiffs brought an action against the district delegate, the chairman, and the general secretary of the union, for maliciously, and with intent to injure the plaintiffs, inducing the employers to discharge the plaintiffs, and to refuse to engage them again. The jury found that the district delegate had acted maliciously, and that the plaintiffs had been injured thereby, but that the other two defendants did not authorise his acts:—Held, that the district delegate was not the agent or servant of the members of the union, so as to render each member liable for his acts, and that, therefore, the chairman and general secretary were not, merely by reason of their being members of the union, liable in the action. Flood v. Jackson, 64 L. J., Q. B. 665; [1895] 2 Q. B. 21; 14 R. 397; 43 W. R. 453; 59 J. P. 388—C. A. Affirming 72 L. T. 589.

It was held on appeal, however, that no actionable wrong had been committed by the district delegate. See S. C., nom. Allen v. Flood, 67 L. J., Q. B. 119; [1898] A. C. 1; 77 L. T. 717; 46 W. R. 258—H. L. (E.)

Estoppel of Principal by Act of Agent.]—The receipt of money by an agent in ignorance that the principal has struck a docket is not a forfeiture of the debt proved by the principal. Gardner, Ex parte, Strutton, In re, 3 Mont. & Ayr. 46; 2 Deac. 142; 6 L. J., Bank. 66.

Where the Irish agent of an English banking house received payments in Irish currency, and upon the footing of Irish interest, on account of a debt which, upon the construction of the contract, was decided to be payable in English currency:—Held, that the right of the banking house to receive payment in such currency was not prejudiced by the conduct of their agents. Noel v. Rochfort, 10 Bli. (N.S.) 483; 4 Cl. & F. 158.

3. Effect of Factors Acts.

a. Generally.

Statute.]—52 & 53 Vict. c. 45, amends and consolidates the Factors Acts.

Intention of Acts.]—The intention of the Factors Act (5 & 6 Vict. c. 39) is that where a third person has intrusted goods or the documents of title to goods to an agent, who in the course of such agency sells or pledges them, he shall be deemed by that act to have misled any one who bonâ fide deals with the agent, and makes a purchase from or an advance to him without notice that he was not authorised to sell the goods or to procure the advance. Cole v. North-Western Bank, 44 L. J., C. P. 233; L. R. 10 C. P. 354; 32 L. T. 733—Ex. Ch.

The statute was meant to apply to those cases where one person has given an apparent authority to another, and a third person has dealt with that other in the belief that the authority really existed. Ib.

Debt after Date of Act.]—To entitle a person who claims a lien on goods pledged with him by a factor to retain them under 6 Geo. 4, c. 94, the debt for which they are pledged must really and substantially have been incurred after 1st October, 1826, and the act of pledging must have taken place after that day. Ross v. Willis, 6 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 215.

Pledge after Revocation.]—An agent "intrusted with and in possession of goods, or of the documents of title to goods," within the Factors Acts (6 Geo. 4, c. 94, and 5 & 6 Vict. c. 39), is a person who is intrusted as agent for sale; and consequently one whose authority to sell has been revoked cannot make a valid pledge of goods which had been intrusted to him for sale, but which he has wrongfully retained after his authority has been revoked, and the goods demanded from him by his principal. Fuentes v. Montis, 38 L. J., C. P. 95; L. R. 4 C. P. 93; 19 L. T. 364; 17 W. R. 208—Ex. Ch.

Further Pledge.]—A factor by pledging goods in his possession or under his control, as agent, for an amount which does not exhaust their value, has not thereby parted with his control over the goods, so as to preclude himself from making a further pledge for the balance of their value, which shall be valid as against the principal. Portalis v. Tetley, 37 L. J., Ch. 139; L. R. 5 Eq. 140; 17 L. T. 344; 16 W. R. 503.

Cotton was consigned for sale by A. to B. B. deposited the bill of lading with C., a broker, and authorised him to receive and sell the cotton, and subsequently made a further pledge to D. of the balance of the net proceeds of the cotton by order in writing communicated and assented to by C.:—Held, that the pledge to D. was valid as against A. Ib.

Bonâ fide Advance.]—A merchant who has enabled his factor to raise money fraudulently can claim no redress against the party who has bonâ fide made the advance. Vickers v. Hertz, L. R. 2 H. L. (Sc.) 113.

The goods or symbols of property intrusted to the factor may be regarded by unsuspecting third parties as his own, and dealt with accordingly under the Factors Act (5 & 6 Vict. c. 39). Ib.

A factor, after depositing dock warrants with the defendant, as a security for the advance of money, withdrew them from his hands and substituted other dock warrants for silk belonging to the plaintiffs, the defendant having no notice that the factor was not the true owner:—Held, that this transaction was not protected by 6 Geo. 4, c. 94, there being no advance of money on the faith of such warrants. Bonzi v. Stewart, 4 Man. & G. 295; 5 Scott (N.R.) 1; 11 L. J., C. P. 228.

Advance on Promise to lodge Warrants.]—A wood broker gave to a bank, to secure an advance, a letter of hypothecation on certain wools, promising to lodge warehouse warrants for them next day. The bank made repeated application for the warrants, but did not obtain them. After a few days, the broker having left his house, the bankers by pressure obtained the keys of his warehouse, where the wool was stored, and took possession. Part of the wool had belonged to a customer of the broker, but he was under advances and made no claim:—Held, that the bank acquired a valid charge on the wool under the provisions of the Factors Act (5 & 6 Vict. c. 39). North Western Bank, Ex parte, Slee, In re, 42 L. J., Bk. 6; L. R. 15 Eq. 69; 27 L. T. 461; 21 W. R. 69.

In leaving his house the broker was, as it turned out, absconding:—Held, that the bank had no notice of this. Ib.

Nature of Advance—Antecedent Debt.]—A., a manufacturer, having consigned goods to C., who had acted as his agent, C. being liable, together with B., on a bill of exchange which had become due, obtained from B. 300*l.* for the purpose of taking up the bill, and at the same time deposited with B., A.'s goods. A. having brought an action to recover back the goods, the judge told the jury that, if they thought the transaction was only a circuitous mode of paying the bill, on which B. was liable, it was not within 5 & 6 Vict. c. 39. s. 1:—Held, that the direction was right, and that the transaction was not protected by the statute. Learoyd v. Robinson, 12 M. & W. 745; 13 L. J., Ex. 213.

The 5 & 6 Vict. c. 39, does not apply to pledges for antecedent liabilities (whether they may or may not have ripened into debts), where no actual advance is made at the time of the pledge. Macnee v. Gorst, L. R. 4 Eq. 351; 15 W. R. 1197.

H. requested W. to purchase cotton for him, to be delivered and paid for on a future day. W. made such purchase in his own name through C., a broker. When the cotton was ready for delivery, the price had fallen and C. refused to pay for it, unless provided with security sufficient to cover the difference between the contract price and the value at the price of the day. H. accordingly indorsed and deposited with W., who indorsed and deposited with C., a bill of lading of goods consigned to H., and C. thereupon completed the purchase of the cotton. Such goods were in fact consigned to H. as the plaintiff's factor:—Held, that the deposit of the bill of lading was valid as against the plaintiff, and that it was not made in respect of an antecedent debt due from H. to W. Jewan v. Whitworth, 36 L. J., Ch. 127; L. R. 2 Eq. 692; 14 W. R. 1020.

The appellants, merchants at Singapore, employed M. in London as agent to sell, without authority to pledge, cargoes which they from time to time consigned to him. M. employed the respondents, London brokers, to sell the appellants' consignments, and also in speculative purchases on his own account. The respondents purchased shellac for M. without disclosing that they were buying as agents, and therefore were personally liable to the vendors on the contracts. Subsequently they made advances to M. to enable him to pay deposits on the shellac, and took as security bills of lading of some of the appellants' cargoes. They had no notice that M. was acting improperly in pledging the cargoes. On obtaining the advances M. gave the respondents cheques for the amount of the deposits, which were then paid by the respondents:—Held, that the obligation under which M. lay to the respondents to pay the deposits and thus prevent their being called upon to pay them, did not constitute an antecedent debt within the meaning of the Factors Act, 5 & 6 Vict. c. 39, s. 3, and that the pledges were made in respect of bonâ fide advances, and not of antecedent debts, and were valid against the appellants. Kaltenbach v. Lewis, 55 L. J., Ch. 58; 10 App. Cas. 617; 53 L. T. 787; 34 W. R. 477—H. L. (E.)

M. also pledged with the respondents pepper consigned to him for sale by the appellants, to secure an advance protected by the Factors Acts. The goods had been sold for M. by the respondents, but not delivered to the purchasers, nor paid for, when M. died insolvent and heavily indebted to the respondents on a general account. After the sale, but before receiving the proceeds, the respondents had notice that the appellants claimed the pepper and the proceeds:—Held, that after repayment of the respondents' advance the surplus proceeds of sale belonged to the appellants; that the appellants could sue the respondents for such surplus, whether on the ground of privity of contract, or on the ground of property, or under the Factors Act, 5 & 6 Vict. c. 39, s. 7. New Zealand and Australian Land Co. v. Watson (7 Q. B. D. 374), distinguished and explained. Ib.

B., having sold 500 sacks of flour to H. consigned them to him by sea, with 500 more to sell on commission. The captain of the vessel executed and handed to B. two duplicate bills of lading expressed to be "to order or assigns;" and one of them having been forwarded by B. to H. unindorsed, the latter on the 9th of February, 1878, deposited it with a discount company (who carried on business in the same town as himself) to secure an advantage of 600*l.* then made to him. On the 11th of February H., who, in the meantime, and without informing B. of the transaction of the 9th had obtained from him the duplicate bill of lading duly indorsed, deposited it also with the company, at whose instance he, on the 13th, further executed to them a letter of lien, antedated the 9th, upon the whole cargo, in respect both of the 600*l.* advance and of about 800*l.* the amount of certain bills of exchange previously discounted for him by the company, and just reaching maturity. The vessel arrived shortly afterwards, and the company discovered that H. was owner of only half the flour, whereupon B. having brought an action to have his own half relieved from the company's lien:—Held (by Ball, C., and Deasy, L.J., dissentiente Fitzgibbon, L.J.), that the plaintiff was entitled to the relief sought. Blake v. Belfast Discount Co., 5 L. R., Ir. 410—C. A.

Where defendants receiving a pledge from a factor for an antecedent debt, sell it, they cannot, under 6 Geo. 4, c. 94, s. 3, hold the proceeds against the real owner, but are liable to him in trover; but in estimating the damages they are entitled to credit for the balance, if any, due from the owner to the factor. Taylor v. Trueman, 1 M. & M. 453.

Money need not Pass.]—It is not necessary, in order that a purchase may be protected under 6 Geo. 4, c. 94, s. 4, that money should actually pass; the section applies equally where the goods are transferred in consideration of an antecedent debt. Thackrah v. Fergusson, 25 W. R. 307.

In case of Pledge.]—If A. holding B.'s goods with a lien on them against B., transfer them to C., C. cannot hold them against B. to the extent of A.'s lien under 6 Geo. 4, c. 94, s. 5, unless the transfer be expressly made as a pledge. Thompson v. Farmer, 1 M. & M. 48.

Principal Indebted to Factor.]—Whether a factor has a right to pledge the goods of his principal, under 6 Geo. 4, c. 94, s. 5, depends upon the question whether, upon the balance of all accounts between them, the principal is indebted to the factor. Accordingly, a factor, by the desire of his principal, kept separate accounts of sales in one set of which the principal was solely, and in the other but partly interested. The factor made a pledge of goods consigned to him on the latter set, for the purpose of meeting a draft drawn by his principal against that account. At the time of the pledge the factor, if the general account were taken, was indebted to his principal in a larger sum than it was necessary to raise by the pledge. If the accounts were taken separately, the principal was indebted to the factor upon the account on which the draft was drawn, and to which account the goods pledged belonged:—Held, that the factor, in these circumstances, had no right to pledge; and that the person to whom they were pledged could not retain them against the principal. Robertson v. Kensington, 8 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 183.

Where the principal in such a case omitted for some time to make any demand, or any communication to the person who received the pledge :—Held, that such omission could not be considered as an affirmance of the act of the factor, unless it appeared that the delay had caused an alteration in the situation of the parties. Ib.

And see Taylor v. Trueman, supra.

Notice of Agent's Mala fides.]—Under 5 & 6 Vict. c. 39, a contract with an agent for the pledge of goods will be valid as against the principal, though the person dealing with the agent knows him to be only an agent in respect of the goods pledged, provided that the person so dealing acts bonâ fide and without notice that the agent is acting malâ fide and beyond his authority. Navulshaw v. Brownrigg, 2 De G. M. & G. 441 ; 21 L. J., Ch. 908 ; 16 Jur. 979.

To deprive the pledgee of the protection of the statute, he must be fixed with knowledge that the agent is so acting as above stated, and no mere suspicion will amount to notice ; nor will the knowledge that the agent has power to sell the goods constitute notice that he has not power to pledge them. Ib.

Where an agent intrusted with a document of title to goods pledges it malâ fide, or without authority, it is necessary, in order to deprive the transaction of the protection given by 5 & 6 Vict. c. 39, s. 1, and to bring it within the proviso of s. 3, that the jury should find categorically that the lender had notice of the agent's mala fides or want of authority. Gobind Chunder Sein v. Ryan, 9 Moore, Ind. App. 140 ; 15 Moore, P. C. 230 ; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 343 ; 5 L. T. 559 ; 10 W. R. 155. S. P., Douglas v. Ewing, 6 Ir. C. L. R. 395.

To prove such notice it is sufficient to shew that the circumstances attending the transaction were such as that a reasonable man, and a man of business, applying his understanding to them, would certainly infer that the agent had not authority to make the pledge, or that he was acting malâ fide in respect thereof against his principals. Ib.

Bankers having, at the request of I. L., made advances to S. L., and having a lien on certain goods in their possession in respect thereof, it was agreed between the bankers and I. L. that, in consideration of the delivery of those goods to I. L., the latter should deliver to the bankers certain other goods intrusted to I. L. by the plaintiff, his principal, to be held as a lien by the bankers in place of the other goods, and also in respect of any future advances to be made to S. L., and which I. L. requested the bankers to make, and which agreement was carried out, and further advances made to S. L., in pursuance of such request :—Held, that, the bankers having no notice of the plaintiff's title, the transaction was protected by 5 & 6 Vict. c. 39. Sheppard v. Union Bank of London, 7 H. & N. 661 ; 31 L. J., Ex. 154 ; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 264 ; 5 L. T. 757 ; 10 W. R. 299.

—— Pleadings.]—To a plea setting up these facts to detinue by the owner of the goods against the bankers, he replied, first, that he was induced to intrust I. L. with the possession of the goods by the fraud of I. L. ; secondly, that the agreement by I. L. to deliver the goods by way of pledge was not made, nor were the goods delivered to the bankers in the ordinary course of business ; and thirdly, that the goods first deposited with the bankers were not I. L.'s goods, nor had the bankers any lien thereon from I. L. :—Held, that the facts disclosed by the plea constituted an answer to the action under 5 & 6 Vict. c. 39, and that neither replication avoided the plea. Ib.

Power of Agent to Mortgage.]—The Factors Acts do not empower an agent acting under a power of attorney in a non-mercantile transaction to mortgage the property of the principal. Lewis v. Ramsdale, 55 L. T. 179 ; 35 W. R. 8.

b. Documents within the Acts.

Bill of Lading.]—Under 6 Geo. 4, c. 94, s. 2, an intrusting with the bill of lading for the purpose of the sale of goods was not an intrusting with a dock warrant, which represented those goods, notwithstanding that the possession of the bill of lading enabled the holder of it to obtain possession of the dock warrant. Hatfield v. Phillips, 12 Cl. & F. 343 ; 14 M. & W. 665. Affirming 9 M. & W. 647 ; 11 L. J., Ex. 425.

Delivery Orders.]—Nor were delivery orders within 6 Geo. 4, c. 94, s. 2. Jenkins v. Usborne, 7 Man. & G. 678 ; 8 Scott (N.R.) 505 ; 13 L. J., C. P. 196 ; 8 Jur. 1139.

East India Warrants.]—Nor East India warrants. Taylor v. Trueman, M. & M. 453 ; Taylor v. Kymer, 3 B. & Ad. 320 ; 1 L. J., K. B. 114.

Stock Certificates.]—The Neapolitan government raised money upon certain certificats de rentes, or bonds. With each certificat or bond was delivered a document called a "bordereau," annexed to which was a series of coupons, or receipts, for successive half-yearly payments of the rentes, or dividends. When the coupons attached to the bordereau were all made use of, the holder of the certificat and remaining bordereaux was entitled to receive from the Neapolitan government a new bordereau, with a new set of coupons ; both these instruments referred to the certificat, and they were never sold in the London market without being accompanied by the certificat. The plaintiff being possessed of certain of these certificats and bordereaux, deposited the latter with his broker, for the purpose of his procuring from the Neapolitan government new bordereaux, retaining the certificats in his own hands. The broker, having procured new bordereaux with coupons, fraudulently pledged them with the defendant. In detinue by the original owner, it was left to the jury to say—first, whether the bordereaux and coupons (unaccompanied by the certificats) were negotiable securities, passing by delivery, in the same manner as bank notes, exchequer bills, and the like instruments ; secondly, whether the defendant had exercised due caution in receiving them from the broker without inquiring for the certificats to which they referred :—Held, that the direction was right ; and the jury having found a verdict for the plaintiff, the court refused to disturb it. Lang v. Smith, 5 M. & P. 78 ; 7 Bing. 284 ; 9 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 91.

Certificates of railway stock are not goods within the meaning of 5 & 6 Vict. c. 39. Freeman v. Appleyard, 1 N. R. 30 ; 32 L. J., Ex. 175 ; 7 L. T. 282.

Receipts.]—Where, in order to save trouble, delivery orders were not signed, but an arrangement was made that delivery should be made to persons producing cash receipts from the cashiers of the holders of the bill of lading, such receipts cannot be considered as a document of title within s. 5 of the Factors Act, 1877 (40 & 41 Vict. c. 39). Kemp v. Falk, 52 L. J., Ch. 167; 7 App. Cas. 585; 47 L. T. 457; 31 W. R. 128; 5 Asp. M. C. 1—H. L. (E.)

Warrants.]—Where a factor, the consignee of goods for sale, and indorsee of the bills of lading, had landed and warehoused the goods, and taken the wharfinger's certificates and dock warrants in his own name, and then pledged the certificates and dock warrants for an advance of money on his own account:—Held, that such pledge was not protected by 6 Geo. 4, c. 94, s. 2, in an action of trover by the real owner of the goods. Close v. Holmes, 2 M. & Rob. 22.

A. purchased and paid for East India silks, the warrants for which he sent to B., his broker, with bills to nearly their value drawn upon B., which he accepted. B. did not pay his acceptances when due, but received from A. the acceptances of A. to nearly the same amount, for the purpose of taking up his own acceptances, but which he applied to his own use, and afterwards pledged the warrants with C. In trover for the warrants by A. against C.:—Held, that by 6 Geo. 4, c. 94, s. 8, B., not having paid his own acceptances, had no lien upon the warrants which he could transfer to C.; and that therefore C. had no right to detain them as against A. Fletcher v. Heath, 1 M. & Rob. 335; 7 B. & C. 517; 6 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 95.

Security of Furniture.]—The 5 & 6 Vict. c. 39 applies to mercantile transactions, and not to the cases of advances made upon the security of furniture used in a furnished house—not in the way of trade—to the apparent owner of such furniture, such apparent owner afterwards appearing to be the agent intrusted with the custody of the furniture by the true owner. Wood v. Rowcliffe, 6 Hare, 191; 11 Jur. 707, 915.

c. Agents Intrusted with Possession.

Warehouse-keepers.]—A warehouse-keeper who has goods deposited with him as such is not "an agent intrusted with the possession" of them within the Factors Act (5 & 6 Vict. c. 39), although he is also a broker, and is usually employed to sell the goods, but always upon specific instructions for that purpose received from the principal. Cole v. North-Western Bank, 44 L. J., C. P. 233; L. R. 10 C. P. 354; 32 L. T. 733—Ex. Ch. Affirming 22 W. R. 861.

One Slee carried on the business of a sheep's wool broker in Liverpool, and also that of a warehouse-keeper. In his capacity of warehouse-keeper he was in the habit of receiving from the plaintiffs, merchants in London, bills of lading for sheep's wool and goats' wool to arrive in Liverpool, which when landed was deposited in his warehouses, under directions to send the plaintiffs a report and valuation, but he was not authorised to sell without specific instructions. The sheep's wool so deposited with him was usually sold by Slee, and the proceeds received by him for the plaintiffs. The goats' wool Slee never sold, he not being a goats' wool broker. Having wools of the plaintiffs of both descriptions in his warehouse, but not having received any instructions as to the sale of either, Slee professed to pledge the whole with the defendants, bankers in Liverpool, by a letter in which he undertook to hold them as trustee for the defendants, to secure the sum advanced:—Held, that Slee was not, as to any of the wools so agreed to be pledged, "an agent intrusted with the possession" within the Factors Act (5 & 6 Vict. c. 39). Ib.

Wharfingers.]—A wharfinger, who was also a flour factor, having flour sent to him to keep till further orders, was not an agent intrusted with the flour within 6 Geo. 4, c. 94, s. 4, so as to give validity to a sale by him of the flour. Monk v. Whittenbury, 2 B. & Ad. 484; 1 M. & Rob. 81.

Merchants' Clerk.]—A clerk to a wine merchant, who is authorised by his employer to sign delivery orders per procuration, and who by doing so obtains the possession of dock warrants relating to goods belonging to his master, and afterwards obtains an advance of money upon the security of such dock warrants, is not an agent intrusted with the possession of documents within the meaning of the statute, so as to give validity to the contract, and his employer may recover possession of such warrants from the person with whom they are pledged, though the advance was made bonâ fide. Lamb v. Attenborough, 1 B. & S. 831; 31 L. J., Q. B. 41; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 280; 10 W. R. 20.

Insurance Agents.]—Merchants in London upon the instruction of shipping agents at Havannah with respect to a cargo of tobacco to be consigned to the London merchants, and after receiving the shipping documents, effected policies of marine insurance in the ordinary form on behalf and for the benefit of all parties whom it might concern. The Havannah agents shipped and consigned the tobacco in their own names, but were in fact acting as commission agents for Havannah merchants to whom the tobacco belonged; and the London merchants before effecting the policies had notice that the Havannah agents had an unnamed principal. A total loss having occurred, the London merchants received the policy moneys, but before receipt had notice that the moneys were claimed by the Havannah principals:—Held, by Lord Blackburn, that the case fell within the Factors Act (6 Geo. 4, c. 94), s. 1. Sed quære by Lord Fitzgerald. Mildred v. Maspons, 53 L. J., Q. B. 33; 8 App. Cas. 874; 49 L. T. 685; 32 W. R. 125; 5 Asp. M. C. 182—H. L. (E.)

Pictures were deposited by the owner with J. (whose ordinary business was that of an agent for procuring business for two insurance offices in Liverpool), with instructions then or subsequently given to sell them for him for a certain commission:—Held, that J. was an agent intrusted with the possession of goods, and consequently that the owner was bound by a contract of pledge bonâ fide made with him. Heyman v. Flewker, 13 C. B. (N.S.) 519; 1 N. R. 479; 32 L. J., C. P. 132; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 895.

Forwarding Agent.]—The plaintiffs, being silk manufacturers in Germany, appointed, in addition to other agents in London, Fahrnbach to act as their agent in London. The course of business was as follows:—It was Fahrnbach's duty to call upon certain named customers of the plaintiffs and get orders for silks. These orders he then transmitted to the plaintiffs, giving a list of the buyers, and of the quantities ordered by each buyer. The goods ordered were then sent over together from Germany to Fahrnbach, whose duty it was then to forward to each buyer the amount purchased by him. It did not appear that Fahrnbach, in the usual course of business, was allowed to represent himself to buyers as principal in the transactions. Fahrnbach, in the course of the business, from time to time collected the money due from the customers, and accepted bills drawn upon him by the plaintiffs for the amount of the invoices of goods sent to him from Germany. Fahrnbach pledged some of the goods so sent over to him with the defendant for advances. The pledging was in fraud of his instructions, but the defendant, in making the advances, acted bonâ fide, and without knowledge of the fraud. In an action to recover the goods so pledged, or their value :—Held, that Fahrnbach was not an agent intrusted with the possession of the goods within the meaning of the Factors Acts (4 Geo. 4, c. 83 ; 6 Geo. 4, c. 94 ; and 5 & 6 Vict. c. 39) ; that he was, in the first portion of his duty, merely an agent to make contracts, and in the second portion merely a forwarding agent. Hellings v. Russell, 33 L. T. 380.

Picture Dealer.]—In 1887 T. intrusted A. T. with an oil painting for sale. In the same year A. T., who was a dealer in drawings and etchings, and occasionally sold pictures on commission, deposited the painting with B., in substitution for certain drawings and etchings, as security for a loan. B. died. A. T. became insolvent. T. brought an action against B.'s executors for the recovery of the picture. The painting was sold, and the proceeds were paid into court. B.'s executors counter-claimed a charge on the fund in court for the amount payable in respect of the loan :—Held, that A. T. was an agent "intrusted with the possession of goods" within the meaning of 5 & 6 Vict. c. 39 ; that the pledge was valid ; and that the executors were entitled to the charge claimed on the fund in court. Tremoille v. Christie, 69 L. T. 338.

Condition against Selling without Further Authority—Sale in Ordinary Course of Business.]—Plaintiff was the owner of an opal matrix tabletop, which he intrusted to an agent who was a dealer in jewels and gems, and, as a known part of his business, sold jewels and gems for other people in his own name, and having them in his own possession. The tabletop was intrusted on the terms that it should not be sold to any person or at any price without plaintiff's authority, and that the cheque received in payment should be handed to plaintiff intact, plaintiff agreeing to pay certain commission. The agent sold the tabletop to defendant for 200*l.*, which was satisfied by defendant giving to a judgment creditor of the agent a diamond worth 120*l.*, and paying him 50*l.* in satisfaction of a judgment for 170*l.*, and paying 30*l.* to the agent. In an action to recover possession of the tabletop :—Held, that, as by the conditions on which the tabletop was intrusted to the agent he could not sell it without obtaining further authority, he was acting outside his authority in selling at all, and therefore defendant acquired no title by the sale, and plaintiff was not estopped from disputing his title, but was entitled to recover in spite of the sale :—Held, also, that as the tabletop never was intrusted for sale, and as, having regard to the manner in which payment was made, the sale was not in the ordinary course of business, defendant was not protected by the Factors Act, which was in force at the date of the transaction (6 Geo. 4, c. 94, s. 4). Biggs v. Evans, [1894] 1 Q. B. 88 ; 69 L. T. 723 ; 58 J. P. 84.

Person intrusted to sell only—Goods pledged with Pawnbroker.]—Where a person intrusted with goods for the purpose of sale only pledges them with a pawnbroker, he is not a mercantile agent "acting in the ordinary course of business of a mercantile agent" within the meaning of s. 2 of the Factors Act, 1889, and the pawnbroker is not protected by that section from an action by the owner to recover the value of the goods. Hastings v. Pearson, 62 L. J., Q. B. 75 ; [1893] 1 Q. B. 62 ; 5 R. 26 ; 67 L. T. 553 ; 41 W. R. 127 ; 57 J. P. 70.

Goods to be returned to Sender—Pledge not Protected.]—Where there is a power by law to sell, a purchaser may obtain from the vendor, even as against the true owner, a good title, but that cannot extend, by implication, to a pledge. Barrow was a leather merchant in London. Bonnell was a tanner in Canada. Barrow agreed to pay Bonnell 1½*d.* per pound for every hide tanned by Bonnell in the mode of the country, and Bonnell was to procure freight, and send back the hides. Barrow sent out a large number of the hides ; they were tanned, and freight was procured for them, but in the meantime Bonnell had obtained from the Toronto Bank advances, on his own account, on bills, and hypothecated the hides to the bankers as security for such advances, engaging to hand over to them the bills of lading if his bills of exchange were not duly honoured. They were not duly honoured, and the bankers (who had acted in entire ignorance of the transactions between Barrow and Bonnell) claimed to retain the bills of lading and the hides until their demands were satisfied :—Held, that, under the circumstances of the case, Bonnell could not, under any law, English or Canadian, claim to be a factor or agent of Barrow entitled to pledge Barrow's goods, and that consequently the bankers could not set up any title to the goods, as derived from him, against the real owners. City Bank v. Barrow, 5 App. Cas. 664 ; 43 L. T. 393—H. L. (E.)

Not intrusted by Owner with Document.]—H., a merchant dealing in tobacco and a broker in that trade, had fifty hogsheads of that article lying in bond in his name in the docks. The warrants for them had been issued to him. The plaintiff bought the tobacco from H., and paid for it, but he left the dock warrants in the possession of H., and took no steps to have any change made in the books of the dock company as to the ownership of the tobacco. H. being the ostensible owner of the tobacco, fraudulently obtained advances on the pledge of a portion of the tobacco from the defendants respectively, and handed to them the dock warrants. Both the defendants acted in good faith, and took fresh warrants from the dock company :—Held, that H. was not intrusted by the plaintiff as his factor or agent with the documents of title within 6 Geo. 4, c. 94, s. 2 ; and that the conduct of the plaintiff, in leaving the indicia of title in H.'s hands and thus enabling him to obtain advances on the security of the goods, was not such as to disentitle the plaintiff to recover their value from the defendants. Johnson v. Crédit Lyonnais Co. and Johnson v. Blumental, 47 L. J., C. P. 241 ; 3 C. P. D. 32 ; 37 L. T. 657 ; 26 W. R. 195—C. A.

A foreign owner of goods consigned them to a factor in London, to whom he indorsed the bill of lading in blank, and transmitted it, with instructions to receive and sell the goods. The factor received the goods, paid the freight and charges thereon, and entered them in his own name at the custom-house, by reason of which, and without the privity or express assent of the owner, he obtained a dock warrant, which he pledged for advances beyond the amount for which, as a factor, he had a lien on the goods:—Held, that, under these circumstances, he was not intrusted with the dock warrant within 6 Geo. 4, c. 94, s. 2. Hatfield v. Phillips, 12 Cl. & F. 343; 14 M. & W. 665. Affirming 9 M. & W. 647; 11 L. J., Ex. 425.

In order to make the factor a party intrusted with the dock warrant within the meaning of this act, it must appear that the owner of the goods intended that the factor should be possessed of it at the time of the pledge, or that he should exercise the power which the possession of the bill of lading gave him of obtaining the dock warrants, whenever he in his discretion might think fit. Phillips v. Huth, 6 M. & W. 572; 10 L. J., Ex. 65.

The plaintiffs, cloth manufacturers, were applied to by E., who was a factor and a commission agent, for a sample of their cloths, on the representation that he could get them a purchaser. The sample having been sent, E. afterwards told the plaintiffs that he had got them an order for a certain number of ends at a stated price. The plaintiffs required to know the firm, and S. being mentioned as the firm, they sent the goods to the warehouse of E., who was to pass them on to S. after seeing the process of perching performed upon them, for which he was to receive a commission from the plaintiffs of 1*s.* per end. E. had no authority from S., and he sold the goods to the defendants, who were cloth merchants, and bought them bonâ fide:—Held, per Wightman and Crompton, JJ., that E. was an agent intrusted with the cloths within 6 Geo. 4, c. 94, s. 4, and 5 & 6 Vict. c. 39, s. 4, and consequently the purchase of them from E. by the defendants was protected; per Blackburn, J., that, E. being in possession of the goods, he was, according to 5 & 6 Vict. c. 39, s. 4, to be taken to be intrusted with them by the owner, unless the contrary was shewn, and that was a question for the jury. Baines v. Swainson, 4 B. & S. 270; 32 L. J., Q. B. 281; 8 L. T. 536; 11 W. R. 945.

M., a merchant and factor of London, employed by V., a merchant in Holland, to negotiate sales as a commission agent, obtained and transmitted to V. an offer from L. and F. to purchase a quantity of oil. V. accepted the offer, and subsequently shipped a quantity of oil in pursuance of the contract, and sent the bill of lading, specially indorsed to L. and F., to M., in order that it might be exchanged for L. and F.'s acceptance of V.'s draft. Before this, M., without any authority from V., agreed to cancel the contract with L. and F., and when the bill of lading arrived, M. procured L. and F. to indorse it in blank and deliver it to him by falsely representing that the special indorsement had been made by mistake. M. then caused the oil to be warehoused in his own name, and immediately pledged it to the plaintiff as security for an advance of 350*l.*:—Held, that the pledge was not protected by the Factors Acts (6 Geo. 4, c. 94, and 5 & 6 Vict. c. 39). Vaughan v. Moffat, 38 L. J., Ch. 144.

d. Person in Possession under Contract of Sale.

Vendee in Possession of Document of Title—Statute of Frauds, s. 17.]—The Factors Act, 1877, s. 4, provides that, where any goods have been sold or contracted to be sold, and the vendee obtains possession of the documents of title thereto from the vendor, any sale, pledge, or disposition of such goods or documents by such vendee so in possession shall be as valid and effectual as if such vendee were an agent or person intrusted by the vendor with the documents within the meaning of the principal acts as amended by the act itself, provided the person to whom the sale, pledge, or other disposition is made has not notice of any lien or other right of the vendor in respect of the goods. It is not necessary, in order that the above-mentioned section should be applicable, that there should be a memorandum of the contract for sale of the goods so as to satisfy the Statute of Frauds; it is sufficient that there should be a de facto contract for sale, the vendee under which has obtained from the vendor possession of the documents of title to the goods; and a sale by such a vendee will give to a bonâ fide purchaser without notice a good title to the goods, free from any lien or other right of the original vendor in respect thereof. Hugill v. Masker, 58 L. J., Q. B. 171; 22 Q. B. D. 364; 60 L. T. 774; 37 W. R. 390—C. A.

Agreement for Hire and Purchase.]—An agreement for the hire of furniture, providing that the hirer shall pay certain sums at certain dates by way of rent, and that, after all such payments have been made, the furniture shall be the absolute property of the hirer, but that no property in the furniture other than as tenant shall vest in the hirer until the whole of such payments have been made, is an agreement to buy goods within the meaning of s. 9 of the Factors Act, 1889. Therefore, where the hirer under such an agreement sells and delivers the furniture to a person who takes the same in good faith and without notice of the right of the owner, such sale and delivery is valid. Lee v. Butler, 62 L. J., Q. B. 591; [1893] 2 Q. B. 318; 4 R. 563; 69 L. T. 370; 42 W. R. 88—C. A.

Where a party to a contract has agreed to hire goods on condition that he may terminate the contract at any time by returning them to the owner, but that upon payment of certain instalments they shall become his property, the hirer is not a person who has "agreed to buy goods" within s. 9 of the Factors Act, 1889, and consequently a pledge by the hirer to a third party without notice of the rights attaching to the goods is invalid as against the owner. Lee v. Butler (62 L. J., Q. B. 591; [1893] 2 Q. B. 318) distinguished. Helby v. Matthews, 64 L. J., Q. B. 465; [1895] A. C. 471; 11 R. 232; 72 L. T. 841; 43 W. R. 561; 60 J. P. 20—H. L. (E.)

W. had obtained possession of goods from the plaintiffs under an agreement by which W. agreed to hire the goods, value 23*l.*, "and to pay the sum of 12*s.* 6*d.* per month for the hire thereof, commencing with the date of this agreement, and payable in advance on the seventh day of each succeeding month until the full sum of 23*l.* be paid, at which time, and on the completion of such payments, the said company agree to give up all claim to the said goods." There was a stipulation that, upon default in payment, W.

would give up possession of, and that the plaintiffs might seize, the goods; and there was also a declaration that the goods should remain the property of the plaintiffs until the sum of 23*l.* was paid, and that they were only lent on hire:—Held, that W. was in possession of the goods under an agreement to buy within the meaning of s. 9 of the Factors Act, 1889, and that a transfer by way of pledge by him to the defendant, who received the goods in good faith and without notice of the claims of the plaintiffs, was valid. Thompson v. Veale, 74 L. T. 130—C. A.

An agreement by a hirer to pay a stated sum per month till the full price of the subject-matter be paid, when it was to become his own property, is, in the absence of a provision that he might terminate the hiring by delivering up to the owner, an agreement to buy within s. 9 of the Factors Act, 1889, notwithstanding provisions that the owner might put an end to the arrangement for sale on various contingencies. Helby v. Matthews (64 L. J., Q. B. 465) distinguished. Lee v. Butler (62 L. J., Q. B. 591) followed. Hull Ropes Co. v. Adams, 65 L. J., Q. B. 114; 73 L. T. 446; 44 W. R. 108.

—— Conviction of Hirer—Title of Purchaser.]—Where a hirer in possession of goods under a hire-and-purchase agreement sells them to a bonâ fide purchaser without notice before all instalments agreed upon are paid, and is prosecuted to conviction for larceny as a bailee, the owner can maintain an action for conversion against the purchaser. Payne v. Wilson, 65 L. J., Q. B. 150; [1895] 2 Q. B. 537; 15 R. 239, n.; 73 L. T. 12; 43 W. R. 657—C. A.

—— Disposition by Hirer.]—Sect. 9 of the Factors Act, 1889, protects an auctioneer who, in good faith and without notice of any lien or other right of the original seller, receives and sells goods delivered to him for that purpose by a person who had obtained possession of the goods under a hire-and-purchase agreement which provided for payment by instalments, but some of the instalments had not been paid. Shenstone v. Hilton, 63 L. J., Q. B. 584; [1894] 2 Q. B. 452; 10 R. 390; 71 L. T. 339.

Where a debtor makes an assignment for the benefit of his creditors, having in his possession at the time a chattel under a hire-purchase agreement, e.g. a gas engine which has not yet become his property, and there is no specific delivery thereof, the trustee of the deed though he has no notice of the nature of the transaction acquires no title under s. 9 of the Factors Act, as against the true owner. It is not a "delivery or transfer" under a "sale, pledge or other disposition." Semble, ss. 9 and 2 of the Factors Act, 1889, do not apply to an assignment in favour of creditors at all. Kitto v. Bilbie, Hobson & Co., 15 R. 188; 72 L. T. 266; 2 Manson, 122.

The addition by the owner of a mortgaged ship of some equipment to the ship is a "transfer under a disposition" to the mortgagee within s. 9 of the Factors Act, 1889. There is also a like transfer within that section where the mortgagee takes possession under the power in his mortgage. Hull Rope Works v. Adams, supra.

e. At Common Law before the Statutes.

Factor—Right to Pledge.]—The mere circumstance of a principal's drawing bills on his factor, to whom goods were consigned, to be provided for out of the proceeds of such goods, did not authorise the factor to pledge them for the purpose of raising money to meet the bills. Gill v. Kymer, 5 Moore, 503. S. P., Fielding v. Kymer, 2 Br. & B. 639.

Neither could a factor pledge the goods of his principal by indorsement and delivery of the bill of lading, any more than by the delivery of the goods themselves, though the indorsee knew not that he was a factor. Newson v. Thornton, 6 East, 17; 2 Smith, 207; 8 R. R. 378. S. P., Guichard v. Morgan, 4 Moore, 36.

A factor could not pledge, unless the owner of the goods armed him with such indicia of property as to enable him to deal with them as his own. Boyson v. Coles, 6 M. & S. 14; 18 R. R. 284.

Where goods were delivered to a person on a contract of sale and return:—Held, that he had no authority to pledge them. Delauney v. Barker, 2 Stark. 539.

Under a general power to sell, assign and transfer, an agent cannot pledge for his own debt. De Bouchout v. Goldsmid, 5 Ves. 211.

Where a principal gave his broker a clear and unequivocal power to dispose of the goods at his discretion:—Held, that he had no power to pledge in the absence of an express authority. Graham v. Dyster, 6 M. & S. 1; 2 Stark. 21.

Acceptances of a factor for his principal which are provided for by the principal before they became due, do not constitute such a demand against the principal, as to enable the factor, previous to 6 Geo. 4, c. 94, s. 2, to pledge the warrants for goods belonging to the principal, as a security for advances made to himself. Blandy v. Allan, 3 Car. & P. 447.

Lien.]—Where goods were consigned to a factor, to be sold on account of the consignor, and a bill of lading was sent to deliver the goods to the factor or his assigns, who afterwards indorsed and delivered the bill of lading, together with the goods, to the defendant as broker, with instructions to do the needful, and they made advances to him on the credit of those and other goods, without knowing that he was not the owner of them:—Held, that the defendant could not retain the goods against the consignor until payment of the debt due to them from the factor on account of these advances. Martini v. Coles, 1 M. & S. 140.

A foreign merchant remitted bills to his factor in London for the purpose of being sold, with a view to enable the factor to meet bills which the foreign merchant had drawn or was about to draw upon him. The bills remitted were indorsed by the foreign merchant to the factor, and by the latter in his own name to the purchaser. Before the purchase-money of the bills was paid the factor became bankrupt:—Held, that the proceeds of the bills belonged to the foreign merchant, and were not subject to a lien claimed by the purchaser in respect of a debt owing to him by the factor. Pauli, Ex parte, Trye, In re, 3 Deac. 169; 2 Jur. 208.

Right of Owner to Recover.]—Where a factor pledged the goods of his principal, the latter might recover the value of them in trover against the pawnee, on tendering to the factor what was due to him, without any tender to the pawnee. Daubigny v. Duval, 5 Term Rep. 604.

So a pawnee for a valuable consideration, who claimed under the tortious act of the broker, had no right to retain the goods against the principal in trover for the amount of the lien which the broker had on the goods, for a balance due from the principal at the time of such pledge, the lien being personal and not transferable by such tortious act of the broker. M'Combie v. Davies, 7 East, 5 ; 3 Smith, 3 ; 8 R. R. 534.

A., who was a foreign merchant, consigned goods to B., his correspondent in L. ; B. pledged them with C., a factor, as his own property, and obtained the value of the goods in advance. B. afterwards became bankrupt :—Held, that A. might, in an action of trover, recover the goods from C. Duclos v. Ryland, 5 Moore, 518, n.

A. and B. having by their brokers purchased cottons, warrants for delivery were made out in the name of the brokers, and the cottons were left in their possession, as the brokers of A. Immediately after the purchases B. paid A. the value. When considerable purchases had been made, the brokers were informed that B. had an interest in the goods purchased, and upon directions of A. and B., divided the goods held on their joint account by appropriating specific warrants to each party. A., after this, directed the brokers to procure him a loan on the security of the warrants, and C. advanced money by discounting bills drawn by A. upon the brokers ; as a security for which, the whole of the warrants were deposited with C. by the brokers. Before the bills became due, the brokers were directed by A. to get one half renewed, C. having discounted fresh bills for this purpose, the brokers who had obtained the warrants from C. for the purpose of dividing them and returning him one half, left in the hands of C., as a security, the warrants belonging to B., C. not knowing that B. had any interest in them : —Held, that B. might recover from C. in respect of the goods thus pledged to him by A. Williams v. Barton, 3 Bing. 139 ; 10 Moore, 139 ; 24 R. R. 448.

A company of foreign merchants who had been accustomed to send cottons to England from Brazil consigned to a commission merchant for sale, sent three consignments to him by three ships at different times. By a letter they requested him to send them remittances before the cottons were sold. The bags were marked with the initials of that company, and the same marks were mentioned in the bills of lading. The merchant gave the bills of lading to a company of brokers to dispose of the cotton, but did not inform them whether he was principal or only factor. The brokers, before the goods were sold, advanced money to the merchant, who afterwards became a bankrupt, and the consignors sued them for the proceeds. The court held that the brokers had the means of knowing that the merchant was only a factor ; that the authority went no further than for the merchant to have a lien for any advance he might make himself, not by a third person ; that the whole transaction was in the nature of a pledge, and that the action was well brought against the brokers by the foreign merchants. Queiroz v. Trueman, 3 B. & C. 342 ; 5 D. & R. 192 ; 3 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 36.

A factor, with whom goods are deposited for sale, indorses the bills of lading to the defendants, who, knowing him to be a mere agent, accept a bill in his favour. He directs them to sell the goods, and to reimburse themselves the amount out of the proceeds. The defendants accordingly sell the goods in the usual course of business. Trover will not lie by the original owner, but his remedy is for money had and received for the proceeds. Stierneld v. Holden, 4 B. & C. 5 ; 6 D. & R. 17 ; 1 R. & M. 219 ; 3 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 127.

Where the plaintiffs consigned goods to their factor and at the same time drew bills upon him for the amount, which they themselves ultimately paid, and the factor sent them to the defendant, with whom he had general dealings, without intimating that they were the property of a third person, and drew a bill upon him for the amount, which the defendant accepted and paid ; after which the factor became insolvent, having previously told defendant that he had received a notice of countermand of the sale from the plaintiffs, but the defendant afterwards sold the goods :—Held, that the defendant was liable for the value of the goods, in an action for money had and received, and that he would have been equally liable had he not known that the goods were the property of the plaintiffs. Jackson v. Clarke, 1 Y. & J. 216.

A foreign monarch raised five million pounds sterling by his agents in London, as a loan, for the repayment of which he signed a general bond, containing stipulations for the payment of the interest, and the gradual reduction of the principal. Special bonds, reciting the general bond, and made payable to bearer, were given to the contractors to be disposed of. The plaintiff being owner of five such bonds, put them into the hands of a factor to receive the interest for him. He pledged them to the defendants :— Held, that such bonds could not be recovered back from the defendants, who were ignorant that they were not the property of the factor. Gorgier v. Mieville, 3 B. & C. 45 ; 4 D. & R. 641 ; 2 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 206 ; 27 R. R. 290.

Pledge for Benefit of Principal.] — A., the owner of certain chattels, pledged them to B., who was a broker, to secure advances made on his behalf by B. ; and B. afterwards, in his own name, and unknown to A., re-pledged the same chattels to C. to secure advances made by C. to B., but of which, unknown to C., A. was to have the benefit. C. having subsequently applied in vain to B. for payment of his advances, threatened to realise his security by a sale, which, however, he was from time to time induced to postpone by the solicitations of B. and his assurances of speedy payment ; and this was communicated by B. to A., his principal. In a suit by A. against B. and C., praying to redeem the property in pledge on payment of any balance found due on the account between himself and B., it was held that A. had no equity to restrain C. from proceeding to an immediate sale. Nicholson v. Hooper, 4 Myl. & C. 179. Reversing 2 Jur. 9.

F. RIGHTS AND LIABILITIES OF AGENTS AND THIRD PARTIES.

1. ACTIONS BY AGENT.

Principal Undisclosed.]—A person contracting as agent for an unknown and an unnamed principal may himself sue as principal, unless the defendant relied on his character as agent only, and would not have contracted with him as principal if he had known him so to be. Schmalz v. Avery, 20 L. J., Q. B. 228 ; 15 Jur. 291.

Brokers bought goods on account of H., and by his authority. The purchase was made in their own names, but the vendor was told that there was an unnamed principal. They afterwards, under a general authority from H., contracted to sell the same goods, which the vendor had not yet delivered. H., on hearing of the latter contract, told the brokers that he would have nothing to do with the goods, either as buyer or seller, and in this they acquiesced. The vendor then refused to deliver the goods, and the brokers sued him for damages sustained by them in consequence:—Held, that the renunciation of the contract by H., and their acquiescence in it, formed no objection to their right to recover. Short v. Spackman, 2 B. & Ad. 962.

As Agent, but really Principal.]—Where a party made a written contract for the sale of goods, in which he described himself as the agent of A., and the buyer accepted and paid the price of a portion of the goods, and had then notice that the plaintiff was himself the real principal in the transaction, and not the agent of A.:—Held, that the plaintiff might sue in his own name for the nonacceptance of and nonpayment for the residue of the goods. Rayner v. Grote, 15 M. & W. 359; 16 L. J., Ex. 79.

By Trustees.]—The plaintiffs chartered a vessel of the defendants to carry a cargo from Liverpool to Calcutta. The charterparty contained a clause that the vessel was to be consigned to E. & Co., merchants at Calcutta, on the usual terms. One of those terms was, that E. & Co. might procure the homeward freight at 5*l.* per cent. commission. The defendants consigned the vessel to E. & Co., but contracted with another party for the homeward freight. The plaintiffs having agreed with E. & Co. for a share in the commission, brought an action against the defendants for their breach of contract, but failed to prove in what proportion the commission was to be divided:—Held, that as the clause was inserted for the benefit of E. & Co., the plaintiffs were entitled to recover as trustees on their behalf, notwithstanding they failed to shew their interest in the commission. Robertson v. Wait, 8 Ex. 299; 22 L. J., Ex. 209; 1 W. R. 132.

Principal Disclosed — Form of Contract.]—The manager of an unincorporated association who, save as such manager, is a total stranger to the consideration, cannot sue in his own name upon a contract made with him as manager for his disclosed principals, although by the contract itself the manager was empowered to sue on it. Corner v. Irwin, Ir. R. 10 C. L. 354.

In whose Name.]—When a del credere agent sells for a disclosed principal he cannot sue the purchaser on the contract of sale in his own name. Bramble v. Spiller, 21 L. T. 672; 18 W. R. 316.

A broker cannot sue in his own name upon contracts made by him as broker. Fairlie v. Fenton, 39 L. J., Ex. 107; L. R. 5 Ex. 169; 22 L. T. 373; 18 W. R. 700.

A broker signed and delivered a bought-note for cotton in the following form: "I have this day sold you on account of T., &c. (Signed) E. F., broker":—Held, that he was not a contracting party, and could not sue the defendant for breach of the contract in refusing to accept the cotton. Ib.

A broker signing a contract note as selling as broker for undisclosed principals cannot sue in his own name on the contract. Sharman v. Brandt, 40 L. J., Q. B. 312; L. R. 6 Q. B. 720; 19 W. R. 936—Ex. Ch.

An agent who insures for another with his authority may sue for the insurance-money in his own name. Provincial Insurance Co. of Canada v. Leduc, 43 L. J., P. C. 49; L. R. 6 P. C. 224; 31 L. T. 142; 22 W. R. 929—P. C.

A factor who sells goods for a principal may bring an action in the name of the principal against the vendee, or a vendor of goods to a factor for the use of his principal may maintain an action against the principal. Snee v. Prescot, 1 Atk. 248.

Agents must sue in name of principal. Leigh v. Thomas, 2 Ves. 313.

Deposit payable to Auctioneer — Acceptance of I O U—Right to sue.]—Under conditions of sale the deposit was payable to the auctioneer immediately after the sale. The auctioneer, without the vendor's consent, took the purchaser's I O U for the amount:—Held, that an action lay at suit of the auctioneer against the purchaser for the amount of the I O U. Hodgens v. Keon, [1894] 2 Ir. R. 657. Affirmed in C. A.

Right of Association to sue as Agent for Members.]—An association of shipowners and others formed for the protection of the shipping trade, but not carrying on such trade or owning goods in its corporate capacity, together with a firm of shipowners, brought an action against a dock company for an injunction to restrain them from imposing certain regulations and charges, as being ultra vires, and for a declaration that they were invalid until confirmed as required by statute:—Held, that the association, not being themselves shipowners, had no locus standi, nor were they entitled to sue as agent for their members. London Association of Shipowners v. London and India Docks Joint Committee, 62 L. J., Ch. 294; [1892] 3 Ch. 242; 2 R. 23; 67 L. T. 238; 7 Asp. M. C. 195—C. A.

Action on behalf of Foreign Principal—Staying Action until Discovery made by Real Plaintiff.]—Where an action is brought by an agent, on behalf of a principal who is resident abroad, and such agent is only a nominal plaintiff, the real plaintiff will be compelled to make discovery to the same extent as if he had been the plaintiff upon the record, and the action will be stayed until such discovery is made through the nominal plaintiff. Willis v. Baddeley, 61 L. J., Q. B. 769; [1892] 2 Q. B. 324; 67 L. T. 206; 40 W. R. 577—C. A.

Counterclaim against Principal in Action by Agent.]—In an action of trover and for goods sold and delivered, a defendant cannot set off a claim for unliquidated damages which he has against a third party on another transaction, although the third party happens to be the plaintiff's principal. Tagart v. Marcus, 36 W. R. 469.

Agent of Trustees—Right to Indemnity against Trust Fund.]—The indemnity of the trustees under a deed of trust does not give the persons employed by them a right as creditors against the trust fund. Worrall v. Harford, 8 Ves. 4.

When Agent may be made Co-Plaintiff in Action by Principal.]—If of several plaintiffs some have an interest in the matter of the suit and others have no interest in it, but are merely the agents of their co-plaintiffs, a general demurrer to the whole bill is a good defence. Spain (King) v. Machado, 4 Russ. 225 ; 6 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 61 ; 28 R. R. 56.

A. ships goods from Cadiz, in 1793, for B. in Flanders, and receives payment for them from B. : Flanders being occupied by the French, the ship enters an English port, and C., being agent for the shipowners, and acting and holding himself out also as agent for the persons interested in the cargo, possesses himself of the cargo, sells it, and retains the proceeds. Upon a bill filed by the representatives of B. against C. for an account :—Held, that A. ought not to be made a party to such a bill. Moons v. Bernales, 1 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 53.

As C. was the agent of the shipowners, it is not necessary to make them, or the captain, parties to such bill, in respect of the freight due on B.'s share of the cargo. Ib.

If in a bill for discovery in aid of the defence to an action, a plaintiff who is not a party to the record at law be joined with co-plaintiffs, the defendants in the action, the bill is demurrable. Certain bills of exchange, the second parts of which were made payable to the order of the treasurer of the royal treasury of Portugal, were accepted by bankers in London, on behalf of a customer who was substantially interested in such bills as one of the subscribers to a loan raised by the government of Portugal, under the regency of Don Miguel. After the expulsion of Don Miguel and the establishment of Donna Maria as Queen of Portugal, the second parts of the bills in question were indorsed by the treasurer of the royal treasury of Portugal (the same individual who filled that office at the time when the bills were drawn), to an agent of the Queen of Portugal, and by that agent were presented for payment to the bankers. The bankers refused payment on the ground that they had reason to doubt whether the indorsee was the officer to whose order the bills were meant to be payable, and whether he had any property or interest in the bills ; and an action was thereupon brought by the indorsee against the acceptors to recover the amount. To a bill filed by the bankers, the acceptors, and by the customer on whose behalf they accepted the bills, against the indorsee and the Queen of Portugal, praying for a discovery in aid of the defence to the action, a commission to examine the witnesses abroad, and an injunction, a demurrer was allowed on the ground of misjoinder of plaintiffs, who were defendants in the action, but who had no interest except as agents in the subject matter of the suit, with a plaintiff who was no party to the action, but substantially interested in the subject matter of the suit. Whether the bill was not demurrable on the ground of the Queen of Portugal having been improperly made a defendant, quære. Glyn v. Soares, 3 Myl. & K. 450.

2. Liability of Agent.

a. On Contracts.

Election by Third Party.]—If the seller of goods, knowing at the time that the buyer, though dealing with him in his own name, is in truth the agent of another, elects to give the credit to such agent he cannot afterwards recover the value against the known principal ; but if the principal is not known at the time of the purchase made by the agent, it seems that, when discovered, the principal or the agent may be sued at the election of the seller : unless where, by the usage of trade, the credit is understood to be confined to the agent so dealing ; as particularly in the case of principals residing abroad. Paterson v. Gandasequi, 15 East, 62 ; 13 R. R. 68. See also cases ante, cols. 1047 et seq.

Notice of Agency.]—The circumstance of persons selling goods being described in the catalogue of sale as sworn brokers, is not sufficient notice to the purchaser that they are only agents, to prevent him from dealing with them as principals. Thornton v. Meux, M. & M. 43 ; 31 R. R. 711.

When a party gives an order for another, and at the time tells the tradesman for whose use he orders the goods, he is not personally liable, unless the tradesman refuses to deliver them to the order of the person for whom they are directed, but will only give credit to the agent who ordered them. Owen v. Gooch, 2 Esp. 567.

In answer to an action for goods sold and delivered, it is not enough for a defendant to prove that he was agent for another person, without shewing that the plaintiff knew at the time of the sale that he was so ; but it is too narrow a direction to the jury to tell them that unless the agency was disclosed at the time of the purchase, the purchaser must be taken to be the principal ; the proper way of leaving the question being, whether the plaintiff knew at the time of the contract that the purchase was made by defendant, merely as agent. Seaber v. Hawkes, 9 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 217.

Agent not responsible if he names his principal as the person to be responsible. Hartop, Ex parte, 12 Ves. 352.

Broker or factor not naming principal, may be examined on action in name of principal, but simply for benefit of trade ; if principal is declared, action must be against him. Dixon v. Parker, 2 Ves. 221.

But such broker or factor must act for another at the very time ; no subsequent consent or agreement will do. Ib.

Where really Principal.]—Where a defendant bought goods of the plaintiffs in the name and upon the credit of Smith & Co., but whose purchases were made in reality on his own account, he was held to be liable. Railton v. Hodgson, 15 East, 67 ; 13 R. R. 373, 691, n.

Where a son had ostensibly appeared as the proprietor and conductor of the business in a trade, not an extensive one, and the father, to whom the business really belonged, was superannuated and incapable of conducting it :—Held, that the son was liable on contracts connected with the business. Turrell v. Collet, 1 Esp. 321.

When no Principal.]—Where a contract is signed by one who professes to be signing as agent, but who has no principal existing at the time, and the contract would be wholly inoperative unless binding upon the person who signed it, he is personally liable on it ; and a stranger cannot by a subsequent ratification relieve him from that liability. Kelner v. Baxter, 36 L. J., C. P. 94 ; L. R. 2 C. P. 174 ; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 1016 ; 15 L. T. 213 ; 15 W. R. 278.

If a person describes himself in a written contract as an agent for a principal not named, he is liable upon the contract, if proved to be the real principal. Carr v. Jackson, 21 L. J., Ex. 137.

A party who executes an instrument in the name of and expressly as agent for another, cannot be treated as a party to the instrument, so as to be sued upon it, unless he is shewn to be the real principal. Jenkins v. Hutchinson, 13 Q. B. 744; 18 L. J., Q. B. 274; 13 Jur. 763.

There is no rule of law by which an agent professing to contract on behalf of a principal, either non-existent, or under a legal disability to contract, is to be deemed to be himself the contracting party. Hollman v. Pullin, 1 Cab. & E. 254.

Admissibility of Evidence to shew Non-liability.]—Where a defendant on the face of a written agreement has contracted as a principal, it is competent to him, by way of equitable plea to an action against him, to shew that, in fact, he signed as agent for a third party, and that the plaintiff verbally agreed that he should not be responsible as a principal. Wake v. Harrop, 1 H. & C. 202; 31 L. J., Ex. 451; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 845; 7 L. T. 96; 10 W. R. 626—Ex. Ch.

In an action on a charterparty executed, not by the plaintiff but by a third person, who in the contract described himself as "owner of the ship":—Held, that evidence was not admissible to shew that such person contracted merely as the plaintiff's agent. Humble v. Hunter, 12 Q. B. 350; 17 L. J., Q. B. 310; 12 Jur. 1021.

In an action on a written agreement, purporting on the face of it to be made by the defendant and subscribed by him for the sale and delivery by him of goods above the value of 10*l*., it is not competent for him to discharge himself on an issue on the plea of non assumpsit, by proving that the agreement was really made by him by the authority of and as agent for a third person, and that the plaintiff knew those facts at the time the agreement was made and signed. Higgins v. Senior, 8 M. & W. 834; 11 L. J., Ex. 199.

When Agent is Personally Liable.]—A contract for the conveyance of goods from Liverpool to Australia was entered into as follows: "It is this day mutually agreed between J. and R. W., owners of the ship 'Jessica,' of the first part, and S. J. C., of the other part," that the ship should be ready by a given day to take on board certain goods, and should proceed therewith to Geelong, and there deliver the same. The rates of freight determined upon by the parties to this agreement are as under, &c.; "one-third to be paid in London, on receipt of bills of lading, and the remainder by the Geelong and Melbourne Railway Company at Geelong"; "goods to be taken on board at Liverpool, at ship's expense"; and the agreement was signed, J. & R. W., S. J. C.":—Held, that S. J. C. was personally bound by this contract, and entitled to sue for a breach of it. Cooke v. Wilson, 1 C. B. (N.S.) 153; 26 L. J., C. P. 15; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1094; 5 W. R. 24.

A person signing a contract in his own name, without qualification, is not exempted from liability on the contract by merely describing himself in the body of the contract as agent for a named principal, without words expressly or by necessary implication shewing that he only signs as agent. Paice v. Walker, 39 L. J., Ex. 109; L. R. 5 Ex. 173; 22 L. T. 547; 18 W. R. 789.

Walker and Strange signed a contract for the sale of wheat in the following form: "Sold A. J. Praice, Esq., London, about 200 quarters wheat (as agents for John Schmidt & Co., of Danzig). Signed, Walker and Strange":—Held, that they were personally liable upon the contract. Ib.

A broker signed and sent to the plaintiffs a note of a contract in the following terms:—"Messrs. Southwell,—I have this day sold by your order and for your account to my principals five tons of anthracene, payment in cash in fourteen days after delivery, less 2½ per cent. discount and 1 per cent. brokerage. W. A. Bowditch." In an action for goods sold and delivered:—Held, that in the absence of usage making the broker personally liable, he was not personally liable upon the contract. Southwell v. Bowditch, 45 L. J., C. P. 630; 1 C. P. D. 374; 35 L. T. 196; 24 W. R. 838—C. A.

The defendant, who was an agent of the Bebside Colliery Company, with whom B., W. & Co. had previously contracted for a supply of coals, gave to B., W. & Co. an undertaking as follows: "I undertake to load the ship 'Der Versuch' with Bebside coals in ten colliery working days. On account of Bebside Colliery, W. S. Huggett." This undertaking was obtained by B., W. & Co. because the plaintiff, the captain of the ship "Der Versuch," refused (without such an undertaking being procured for him) to sign a charterparty whereby B., W. & Co., chartered the ship "Der Versuch" to carry a cargo of coals to Elsinore, and in which no provision was made for payment of damages for detention in loading. The undertaking made no mention of the person contracted with by it, but it was communicated by B., W. & Co. to the plaintiff, who then signed the charterparty. The ship being detained beyond the ten days, the plaintiff applied to the defendant for comqensation; this the defendant at first refused, but afterwards offered 20*l*., which was declined by the plaintiff. The plaintiff then sued on the undertaking to recover damages for such detention:—Held, that there was evidence that the undertaking was a contract between the plaintiff and defendant, and that, even independently of the offer of 20*l*., there was such evidence, and that the defendant had rendered himself personally liable. Weidner v. Hoggett, 1 C. P. D. 533; 35 L. T. 368.

Where a contract in writing for the sale of goods is entered into by one who describes himself as agent, and as making the contract "as agent and on behalf of" his principal, naming him, the party so making the contract is not personally liable. Greene v. Kopke, 18 C. B. 549; 25 L. J., C. P. 297; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1049; 4 W. R. 598.

By a charterparty it was agreed between the plaintiff, owner of the ship "N.," and the defendants, of London, merchants, that the ship should proceed to T., and there load from the factors of the merchants, a full and complete cargo at the merchants' risk and expense, which the merchants bound themselves to ship; and being so loaded, should proceed to Memel, and deliver the same on being paid freight, half to be paid on unloading, in cash, and the remainder by good bill on London; thirty running days to be allowed the merchants for loading at T., and discharging at Memel. "By authority of and as agents for S., of Memel, R. & F., J. M. L." (signatures of the defendants and the plaintiff). In an action for demurrage:—Held, that the defendants were contracting parties, and therefore were personally liable. Lennard v. Robinson, 5 El. & Bl. 125; 3 C. L. R. 1363; 24 L. J., Q. B. 275; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 853.

A memorandum of charterparty was expressed to be made "between P. of the good ship 'C.,' and W., agent for E. W. & Son," to whom the ship was to be addressed; it was signed by W. without any restriction:—Held, that he was personally liable as charterer. Parker v. Winlow, 7 El. & Bl. 942; 27 L. J., Q. B. 49; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 584.

A charterparty made in London between the shipowner and the defendants, "as agents of S. F., of Anamaboo, merchants and charterers," was signed "for D." (the plaintiff), "owner, H. G., as agent. For S. F., of Anamaboo, G. Brothers" (the defendants), "as agents." The charterparty was partly written and partly printed, the words "merchants and charterers" being printed, and in the plural throughout it. The defendants, merchants in London, acted in England as agents for S. F., a native of Africa, and residing at Anamaboo, in that country. By the charterparty, the plaintiff's ship was chartered for a voyage from London to Africa and back, and freight was made payable on delivery of the return cargo:—Held, that the defendants were not personally liable, as principals, on the charterparty. Deslandes v. Gregory, 2 El. & El. 602; 30 L. J., Q. B. 36; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 651; 2 L. T. 634; 8 W. R. 585—Ex. Ch.

A charterparty was entered into between plaintiffs, shipowners, and defendants, "as agents for charterers." It was signed by the defendants without any qualification, but contained a clause that the ship was to load "from the agents of the said freighters," and a cesser clause that, the charter being entered into on behalf of others, all liability of charterers should cease on completion of loading and payment of advance. In an action for breach of the charterparty, the defendants by their statement of defence denied their personal liability:—Held, on demurrer, that the defendants were liable on the charterparty. Hough v. Manzanos, 48 L. J., Ex. 398; 4 Ex. D. 104; 27 W. R. 536.

The defendants agreed in their own names to charter a vessel to be loaded on the usual berth terms, 2 per cent. commission to be paid to them:—Held, that they were liable as principals as they had contracted in their own names without any qualification. Hick v. Tweedy, 63 L. T. 765; 6 Asp. M. C. 599.

Plaintiffs and defendants entered into a charter of the ship "R." to load a cargo of deals. In the body of the charter defendants were described as follows: "It is this day mutually agreed between Messrs. J. H. & Co., of Newcastle, for owners of the good ship 'R.'" Defendants signed the charter, "For owners, J. H. & Co." A cargo was loaded on the "R." at H., for which the captain signed a bill of lading stating that he had received it in good condition, &c. The cargo was ultimately delivered to plaintiffs at G., where it was found injured to extent of 50*l.* In an action by plaintiffs against defendants for the damage, three letters which had passed between the plaintiffs and the defendants and their solicitors, were admitted in evidence, and as soon as plaintiffs' evidence was closed, defendants' solicitor objected that there was no evidence against defendants as principals, and applied for a nonsuit, on the ground that it appeared upon the charter that defendants were only agents of the owner. The judge decided that defendants were liable as principals:—Held, that his decision was right. Adams v. Hall, 37 L. T. 70.

If a man describes himself in the beginning of an agreement to grant a lease, as making it on behalf of another, but in a subsequent part of it says that he will execute the lease, he is personally liable. Norton v. Herron, 1 Car. & P. 643; R. & M. 229; 28 R. R. 797.

Where A., an auctioneer, being employed to sell an estate, belonging to B., entered into and signed an agreement with C. for the purchase, in his own name, as agent of B., and B. shortly afterwards signed it, and added, "I hereby sanction this agreement, and approve of A.'s having signed the same on my behalf":—Held, that A. was not personally responsible. Spittle v. Lavender, 5 Moore, 270; 2 Br. & B. 452; 23 R. R. 508.

A contract was made in London, as follows: "Contract between Messrs. V. T., of Morlaix, in France, and M. M., of London. M. M. engages himself hereby with Messrs. V. T., from, &c., to, &c., for the proper and merchantable cutting of French provisions at Morlaix, on receiving a free passage out to Morlaix from London, and back again, and wages of 30*s.* sterling per week; Messrs. V. T. finding the requisite tools." This contract was signed, "for V. T., C. K., M. M.":—Held, that the contracting parties were V. T. and M. M., and that C. K., by signing on behalf of V. T., did not render himself personally liable. Mahony v. Kekulé, 14 C. B. 390; 2 C. L. R. 343; 23 L. J., C. P. 54; 18 Jur. 313; 2 W. R. 155.

A written agreement was expressed to be made "between C. for and on behalf of N. of the first part, and T. of the second part." By it C., on the part of N., agreed to let T. premises for a term of years, T. paying rent to C. for the use of N. No auction to be held on the premises without the consent in writing of C. on the part of N. T. to take a lease and execute a counterpart when called upon to do so by C. on the part of N. C. signed this in his own name. N. did not sign it. In an action by T. against C. for not completing the lease:—Held, that it sufficiently appeared to be the intention of the parties that C. should himself contract, and that therefore he was personally liable. Tanner v. Christian, 4 El. & Bl. 591; 24 L. J., Q. B. 91; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 519; 3 W. R. 204.

The defendant, an estate agent, contracted to sell land to the plaintiff who paid a deposit. The defendant signed a receipt in his own name for the deposit, and the plaintiff signed an agreement containing the terms of the purchase. The owner of the land refused to complete the purchase, and the plaintiff sued the defendant for damages for breach of the contract to sell. At the trial the jury found that the defendant sold as principal:—Held, that the defendant was personally liable, and that the agreement and receipt taken together formed a sufficient contract to satisfy the Statute of Frauds, s. 4. Long v. Millar, 48 L. J., C. P. 596; 4 C. P. D. 450; 27 W. R. 720—C. A.

A. articles on behalf of B. to purchase some houses, and covenants to pay 800*l.* for the same, and the houses are afterwards destroyed by an earthquake. Though A. had no effects of B.'s in his hands, yet the court decreed him to pay the 800*l.* Cass v. Rudele, 2 Vern. 280.

An attorney on behalf of his client, the defendant, promises to pay 500*l.* to plaintiff; this being done by the authority of the client, attorney not liable, but only client; otherwise if the attorney had no authority from client to make the engagement. Johnson v. Ogilby, 3 P. Wms. 277.

Brokers and factors who act or agree for their principals are not liable in their own capacities. Ib.

Liability on Invoices or Bought and Sold Notes.]—The plaintiff bought a quantity of hemp by auction at the rooms of the defendants, who were brokers in Liverpool. The defendants delivered an invoice in their own names as sellers. On payment being made by the plaintiff, the defendants gave him an order on C. and D. for the goods, which, on presentation, was refused, and the plaintiff could not obtain the delivery of the goods:—Held, that the defendants were bound by the representation in the invoice, and could not offer evidence to shew that they sold as agents for C. and D., and that the plaintiff knew C. and D. to be the principals at the time of the sale by auction. Jones v. Littledale, 1 N. & P. 677; 6 A. & E. 486; 6 L. J., K. B. 169.

A., a broker employed by B. to sell railway shares, agreed with C., D.'s broker, to sell him fifty shares, of which A. afterwards informed his clerk at his office, who made an entry in the book as of a sale from A. to C.; and a contract note to the same effect was sent to C. A. subsequently saw the entry in the book, and altered it, by writing the name of B. as seller, and directed another note to be sent to C., with the name of B. as seller. A fresh note was accordingly sent the same evening, or the next morning, but C. received them both together the next morning. C. did not return the first note nor did A. request to have it returned. In an action by D. against A. for breach of the agreement, in not completing the sale, the judge left it to the jury to say whether the second note was a correction of a mistake in the first, and told the jury that if the defendant had entered into a written contract in his own name, he could not afterwards set up that he was acting as broker merely; and that, although known to be a broker, if he signed the contract in his own name he was liable:—Held, no misdirection. Magee v. Atkinson, 2 M. & W. 440; 6 L. J., Ex. 115.

D. entered into the following contract with R.: "22nd March, 1860. From J. D., corn broker, to Mr. R., Liverpool. I have this day sold to you two cargoes of French maize, to consist of 800 to 1,000 quarters, shipment all April, from the port of Bordeaux, at 33*s.* 3*d.* per 480 lbs., cost and freight, payment in London, less sixty days' interest and 1 per cent. brokerage. Mr. Walker, London, will send contracts." On the following day Walker forwarded contracts for the two cargoes on behalf of T., of Bordeaux, the owner of the maize, but omitting the stipulation as to brokerage. R. remonstrated, and D. said he would write to Walker; but R., in order to obtain the cargoes, was subsequently compelled to pay the 33*s.* 3*d.*, without any deduction for brokerage:—Held, that D. was responsible for the failure of Walker to send the contracts stipulated for. Reid v. Dreaper, 6 H. & N. 813; 30 L. J., Ex. 268; 4 L. T. 650.

See cases post, SALE OF GOODS, Vol. XII., cols. 395, 396.

Agent Bidding at Auction.]—B. became the purchaser of premises at an auction, declaring himself the agent of C. in C.'s presence, but the vendor's solicitor required B. to sign the agreement, and declined to substitute the name of C. Communications afterwards took place between the vendor's solicitor and C. with reference to the title. The vendors afterwards brought their bill against B. and C. for specific performance of the contract:—Held, that supposing B. to be the agent of C., yet the signature of B. to the contract made him personally liable to perform it; that the communication between the vendor's solicitor and the solicitor of C. with reference to the title, was not an adoption of C. as the purchaser in place of B., but should be assumed to be made in furtherance of the original contract, in which, according to B.'s representation, he was (as between himself and C.) only a formal party; that the acceptance of the title by C. in such communications would not be binding upon B., for such acceptance would be regarded as having been made in C.'s own right as claiming through B., and not as agent for B. Chadwick v. Maden, 9 Hare, 188.

A solicitor who attends a sale, and bids for his client, is responsible for the payment of the deposit, and will be attached if it is not paid. Hobhouse v. Hamilton, 1 Hog. 401.

Auctioneers not disclosing Principals.]—A. bought at auction three lots of one hundred railway shares each, one of the conditions of sale being that, "the balance of the purchase-money shall be paid at the office of the auctioneers on the day following the sale, except in cases where any special transfers are required, and to such the utmost expedition will be given." After the sale, A. received the three hundred shares, together with a bill of parcels describing the transaction as a sale of three hundred shares, and paid the price. The name of the owner of the shares was not disclosed at the time of the sale; but upon A. applying for a transfer the constitution of the company requiring a transfer, by deed, the auctioneers informed him that they were only agents in the transaction, and referred him to B., as their principal, and as the party who alone could procure the transfer to be executed. In an action against the auctioneers for not transferring:—Held, that, inasmuch as they had not disclosed their principal at the time of sale, they were personally liable. Franklyn v. Lamond, 4 C. B. 637; 16 L. J., C. P. 221; 11 Jur. 780.

Contracts on Behalf of Foreign Principals.]—There is no rule of law that a person contracting in England as agent for a foreign principal resident abroad, is personally liable on the contract. Green v. Kopke 18 C. B. 549; 25 L. J., C. P. 297; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1049; 4 W. R. 598.

In all cases, whether the principal or agent is liable is a question of intention, to be ascertained from the terms of the contract and the surrounding circumstances. Ib.

K., being agent in London of R., a foreign resident abroad, contracted by bought and sold notes to sell to the plaintiff tar, to be shipped from a foreign port. The sold-note, which was signed by K., as agent, ran, "Sold on behalf of R., Gothenberg"; and the bought-note, signed by the plaintiff, "Bought through K. of R.":—Held, that K. was not liable on the contract. Ib.

Fruit brokers in Liverpool gave a fruit merchant the following sold-note: "We have this day sold to you on account of James Morand & Co., Valencia, 2,000 cases Valencia oranges, of the brand James Morand & Co., at 12*s.* 9*d.* per case free on board, shipment from commencement of season to not later than the 7th of December next," and signed it without any addition. The purchaser having brought an action against the brokers for nondelivery of the oranges:—Held, that the words "on account of James Morand & Co." shewed an intention to make the foreign principals, and not the brokers, liable, and that the brokers were not liable upon the contract. Gadd v. Houghton, 46 L. J., Ex. 71; 1 Ex. D. 357; 35 L. T. 222; 24 W. R. 975—C. A.

Where the act of the principal is lawful in the country where it is done, and the authority under which such act is done is complete, binding and unquestionable there, the servant who does the act cannot be made responsible in the courts of this country (of which he is a subject) for the consequence of such acts, merely by reason of a personal disability, imposed by the law of this country upon him for contracting such engagement. Dobree v. Napier, 3 Scott, 201; 2 Bing. (N.C.) 781; 5 L. J., C. P. 273.

A. having set up some mill machinery at Roanne, in France, for a French millowner there, was requested by him to engage an overlooker to manage the machinery, and, on the 7th of December, 1876, a written agreement was drawn up and signed by A. and B. at Bury, in the following terms: "I hereby agree on behalf of M. B. P., Roanne, France, to engage B. as overlooker, at the rate of 4*l.* per week, with travelling expenses there and back. The sum of 30*s.* per week to be paid to his wife every fourteen days." B. proceeded to Roanne, receiving 10*l.* from A., and entered on his duties as overlooker at the mill there, and continued there in that capacity till the middle of October, 1877, when he returned to England. During his stay in France the 30*s.* was paid to his wife every fortnight by the defendant at Bury, and upon his leaving France a sum of 12*l.* was paid to him by A.'s agent at Roanne to enable him to return to England. The remainder of his wages under the contract, except a balance of some 17*l.* was regularly paid by the French millowner. For this balance he now sued the defendant:—Held, diss. Kelly, C.B.), that the words "on behalf of" in the body of the contract made it immaterial that A. signed the document in his own name without qualification, and that he did not thereby render himself personally liable. Ogden v. Hall, 40 L. T. 751.

Express Terms in Contract as to.]—By a charterparty between shipowners and the defendants' agents in England for foreign charterers, it was agreed that the ship should proceed to J. and there load in regular turn in the customary manner, from the defendants, a full and complete cargo of coffee. It was also agreed that as the defendants were acting for foreign principals all their liability in every respect, and as to all matters and things as well before and during, as after the shipping of the cargo, should cease as soon as they had shipped the cargo. The defendants having loaded and shipped the agreed cargo, the shipowners afterwards sued them for not having shipped it in regular turn:—Held, that the action could not lie, for that the charterparty limited the defendants' liability to the actual shipment of the cargo and protected them from responsibility for any irregularity or delay in the shipment. Milvain v. Perez, 3 El. & El. 495; 30 L. J., Q. B. 90; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 336; 3 L. T. 736; 9 W. R. 269.

A memorandum for a charterparty, made between the shipowners and the defendant, "as agent for the freighter" (no principal being named), after providing for demurrage over and above the laying-days, at 7*l.* per day, stated, that "it is further agreed that this charter, being concluded by the defendant for another party, the liability of the former, in respect and as to all matters and things as well before as after the shipping of the cargo shall cease as soon as they have shipped the cargo":—Held, that he was not liable, upon this memorandum, for demurrage at the port of discharge. Oglesby v. Yglesias, El. Bl. & El. 930; 27 L. J., Q. B. 356; 6 W. R. 690.

Liability by Custom in Trade.]—M. and W., brokers, being employed by P. to purchase raisins, sent the following, addressed to F. and D.: "We have this day sold for your account to our principal, to arrive per steamer from Trieste, fifty to seventy tons of good sound Chesne raisins, usual market terms. Customary allowances. M. and W., brokers." A portion of the raisins was accepted and paid for by M. and W. on behalf of P., whose name was declared before delivery. P. having subsequently made default in accepting the residue:—Held, in an action by F. and D. against M. and W. for not accepting the residue, that evidence of a custom in the fruit market, that if the principal's name is not declared on the contract, the broker is personally liable on default of the principal, was admissible. Fleet v. Murton, 41 L. J., Q. B. 49; L. R. 7 Q. B. 126; 26 L. T. 181; 20 W. R. 97.

Held, also (dubitante Cockburn, C.J.), that evidence of an analogous usage in the colonial trade was properly admitted to prove the usage in the fruit trade. Ib.

An agent contracting and signing, as such, for an undisclosed principal, may be rendered personally liable on the contract, if a custom, among merchants in the course of ordinary trade constantly entering into similar contracts, can be shewn to exist, that an agent so signing shall be personally liable in the event of his not disclosing his principal's name within a reasonable time, and evidence is admissible to prove the existence of such a custom and, by inference, the implied presence of such a term in the written contract—a liability so incurred not being considered as inconsistent with the general terms of such a contract. Hutchinson v. Tatham, 42 L. J., C. P. 260; L. R. 8 C. P. 482; 29 L. T. 103; 22 W. R. 18.

In an action upon a charterparty expressed to be made between the shipowners and T. & Co., "as agents to merchant," and signed "T. & Co., as agents for merchant":—Held, that although T. & Co. were primâ facie not personally liable upon this contract, yet that parol evidence was admissible to prove a custom of trade rendering agents who enter into such an agreement for an unnamed principal themselves personally liable if the name of their principal was not disclosed within a reasonable time, and that the jury was justified in finding a delay of two months before the name of the principal was given, was unreasonable. Ib.

According to the usage of the London dry goods market, a broker who buys for an undisclosed principal is personally liable to the seller for the price of the goods. Imperial Bank v. London and St. Katharine Docks Co., 46 L. J., Ch. 335; 5 Ch. D. 195; 36 L. T. 233.

D., a broker, bought of C. for undisclosed principals a quantity of gum sandrac then lying at the St. Katharine Dock, to be paid for on Saturday, March 18th, and obtained a delivery order from C., which he gave to his principals on the faith of their representation that the goods were wanted for immediate shipment. D.'s principals, however, pledged the delivery order with a bank, and on the evening of March 17th they stopped payment. On the morning of March 18th the bank sent the delivery order to the dock office in the city with a request for a warrant, which they were told would be ready on Monday. Notice of the delivery order having been lodged was sent by the dock company in due course to their warrant office at the dock, where, through a mistake of the messenger, it did not arrive until 3 p.m., and in the meantime a clerk of D., who had, in accordance with the usage of the trade, paid the price of the goods to C. that morning, applied at the warrant office in C.'s name for a warrant for the goods, which was made out and given to him, as the goods were clear in the cargo ledger. C. indorsed the warrant to D., and, in consequence of what had happened, the dock company on the Monday refused to act on the bank's delivery order. In an action by the bank against the dock company, D. and C.:—Held, that D. was entitled to the goods, for the bank had never obtained either actual or constructive possession of the goods, and that D., having paid the price of the goods as surety for his principals, was, notwithstanding his prior application for the delivery order and indorsement thereof, entitled, by virtue of s. 5 of the Mercantile Law Amendment Act (19 & 20 Vict. c. 97), to the benefit of the unpaid vendor's lien subsisting in C. Ib.

The defendants, who were hop-brokers, gave to the plaintiffs the following sold-note: "Sold by Ongley & Thornton (the defendants) to Messrs. Pike, Sons, & Co., for and on account of owner, 100 bales . . . hops . . . (Signed) for Ongley & Thornton, S. T." In an action for non-delivery of hops according to sample, the plaintiffs sought to make the defendants personally liable on the above contract, and tendered evidence to shew that, by the custom of the hop trade, brokers who do not disclose the names of their principals at the time of making the contract are personally liable upon it as principals, although they contracted as brokers for a principal. No request was made by the plaintiffs to the defendants to name their principal:—Held, that the custom gave a remedy against the brokers as well as against the principals, that it was not in contradiction of the written contract, and that evidence of the custom was properly admitted at the trial. Hutchinson v. Tatham (supra) considered. Pike v. Ongley, 56 L. J., Q. B. 373; 18 Q. B. D. 708; 35 W. R. 534—C. A.

A written contract, made by brokers on behalf of undisclosed principals for the sale of hides, provided that "if any difference or dispute shall arise under this contract, it is mutually agreed between the sellers and buyers that the same shall be settled by the selling brokers, whose decision in writing should be final and binding on both sellers and buyers." In an action against the brokers in respect of inferior hides delivered under the contract, the buyers made a claim for the breach against the brokers as principals by custom of the trade:—Held, that evidence of a custom of the trade that a broker who does not disclose his principal is personally responsible for the performance of the contract and liable for the breach was rightly rejected, as such custom was inconsistent with the arbitration clause, which would, if the custom were incorporated, make the brokers judges in their own cause. Barrow v. Dyster, 13 Q. B. D. 635; 51 L. T. 573; 33 W. R. 199.

By a contract in writing, the defendants "sold to" the plaintiffs a cargo of cotton seed cake of a specified quality. The contract contained a clause that "should any of the above goods turn out not equal to quality specified, they are to be taken at an allowance, which allowance, together with any dispute arising on this contract, is to be settled by arbitration." The defendants signed the contract with the addition of the word "brokers," and were acting as agents. Some time after the contract was signed, the defendants named their principals. The cargo proved to be of inferior quality, and an arbitration (which the plaintiffs did not attend) to determine the liability of the defendants was held; the arbitrators decided by their award that the defendants were not liable, inasmuch as a custom existed that a broker upon naming his principals ceases to be liable on the contract. At the trial of the action, the jury found that the alleged custom did not exist:—Held, that the defendants were personally liable on the contract. Hutcheson v. Eaton, 13 Q. B. D. 861; 51 L. T. 846—C. A.

In the rice trade a custom exists that where a broker does not disclose in the contract note the name of the principal dealt with, although he may mention it orally, he is liable on the contract as a principal. Baemeister v. Fenton, 1 Cab. & E. 121.

Quære, whether a custom exists on the London Stock Exchange that a broker not disclosing the name of the principal dealt with renders himself personally liable. Wildy v. Stephenson, 1 Cab. & E. 3.

Action brought against Agent without joining Principals.]—An action was brought against the agent-general in this country for a colonial government, the plaintiffs being equitable assignees of persons who had entered into a contract with that government, claiming relief in respect of a sum of money which the plaintiffs alleged had been received by the defendant from that government as trustee for the plaintiffs, and afterwards in breach of trust repaid by him to that government. The money in question was deposited in the personal name of the agent-general, and the plaintiffs contended that on that ground he was personally responsible for it. The government was not made a party to the action:—Held, that the defendant was the mere agent of the government, and could not constitute himself a trustee against his principals; and that therefore the question could not be tried in the absence of the government, the foundation of the plaintiff's case being that there was a trust which the government could not intercept. Wright v. Mills, 63 L. T. 186.

Joint owner not necessary party to bill against factor on a demand against the other moiety, defendant having kept separate accounts, and admitted the produce of that moiety to be in his possession. Weymouth v. Boyer, 1 Ves. J. 416.

b. On Bills and Promissory Notes.

Personal Liability—Trustees and Managers.]—A bill directed as follows, "To Messrs. Jackson and Shepherd, joint managers of the Royal Mutual Marine Insurance Association," was accepted thus: "Accepted, J. J., W. S., as joint managers of the Royal Mutual Marine Association": —Held, that they were personally liable, and that the introduction of the word "as" before the words "joint managers" made no difference with respect to such liability. Jones v. Jackson, 22 L. T. 828.

A promissory note in this form, "On demand we promise to pay Mr. James Allan 200*l.*, value received for the Second Gateshead Provident Building Society, and interest thereon, at 5 per cent. per annum, payable half-yearly," signed thus: "G. M., C. D. G., J. N., trustees; T. N., secretary": —Held, that the trustees were personally liable on the note. Allan v. Miller, 22 L. T. 825.

—— Directors of Companies.]—A person advanced money for purposes of a company in which he was a shareholder, and received a promissory note: "We, the directors of the Isle of Man Slate and Flag Company, Limited, do promise to pay to John Dutton 1,600*l.*, with interest at the rate of 6*l.* per cent. per annum until paid." It bore the seal of the company, and was signed by four directors. The lender had stated that he would lend the money to the directors only: —Held, that the directors who had signed the note were personally liable upon it. Dutton v. Marsh, 40 L. J., Q. B. 175; L. R. 6 Q. B. 361; 24 L. T. 470; 19 W. R. 754.

A resolution to wind up a banking company voluntarily was confirmed on the 22nd, and advertised in the London Gazette on the 26th of November. On the 24th of the same month one of the directors, who had been appointed one of the liquidators, accepted, as director, a bill of exchange on the bank. This bill was afterwards indorsed for value to a person who had no notice that the bank was in liquidation: —Held, that the bill was not a bill of the company, and therefore that the holder could not prove against the company for the amount. London and Mediterranean Bank, In re, Bolognesi's Case, 40 L. J., Ch. 26; L. R. 5 Ch. 567; 18 W. R. 876. See also COMPANY.

—— General Agent.]—A bill of exchange to pay to the drawer's order at three months after date 137*l.* 10*s.*, value received in account (fire policy No. 597), was directed to Henry Connah, Esq., general agent of L'Unione Compagna D'Assicurazione Generale (Firenze), 8, York street, Manchester, who wrote upon it: "Accepted, payable at 8, York street, Manchester, on behalf of the company. H. Connah." In an action against him on this bill: —Held, that he was personally liable as acceptor. Herald v. Connah, 34 L. T. 885.

Where agent was obliged as such to indorse bill, and fact was known to indorsees, injunction was granted to restrain proceedings thereon against him. Kidson v. Dilworth, 5 Price, 564; 19 R. R. 656.

Agent presenting for Payment.]—A. drew bills in favour of B. in India upon the E. I. Co. in London, which the latter accepted: C., as the agent of B., indorsed the bills to D. and E., under the supposed authority of a power of attorney from B., which the E. I. Co. had inspected; D. and E. indorsed the bills to their bankers and agents, F. & Co., with instructions to present them for payment when due. F. & Co. indorsed the bills, presented them for payment when due, received the money, and paid it over to their principals, D. and E. The power of attorney from B. did not authorise C. to indorse the bills, and B. having died, his administrator recovered the amount of them from the acceptors. The latter brought an action against F. & Co., upon an alleged undertaking by them that they were entitled to receive payment of the bills. The jury found that the plaintiffs paid the bills, not on the faith of the indorsement by the defendants, but on the faith of the power of attorney, and that the defendants received the money as agents, and paid it over to their principals before they knew that the first indorsement by C. was unauthorised: —Held, that the action could not be maintained against them. East India Co. v. Tritton, 5 D. & R. 214; 3 B. & C. 280; 3 L. J., (o.s.) K. B. 24; 27 R. R. 353.

Agent promising to honour Bill.]—A general demurrer for want of equity allowed to a bill alleging, that the defendant, who was the agent of A., and had in his hands moneys and effects of A., had written a letter to a creditor of A. in which he promised to honour, on presentation, certain bills of exchange, drawn by that creditor, at A.'s request, upon the defendant, and praying that the defendant might be decreed to pay the bills of exchange out of the moneys and effects of A. in his hands, or otherwise out of his own moneys. Baillet v. Mitchell, 1 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 197.

c. For Moneys received for Use of Principal and Others.

Money Paid to Agent by Mistake.]—An action lies against an agent for money paid to him by mistake, although he has forwarded his account to his principal, and placed the sum to his credit. Cox v. Prentice, 3 M. & S. 344; 16 R. R. 288.

One Liverpool cotton broker bought cotton of another, each in his own name; in consequence of a mistake by a clerk of the selling broker, the buying broker paid over too much money. The selling broker gave credit to his undisclosed principal for the sum which he had received, the principal being largely in his debt: —Held, that the buying broker was entitled to recover back from the selling broker the sum so overpaid to him, the case not falling within the rule by which an agent is relieved from responsibility where he has bonâ fide paid over moneys received by him on account of his principals. Newall v. Tomlinson, L. R. 6 C. P. 405; 25 L. T. 382.

If money is paid by mistake to an agent, and placed by him to the account of his principal, but not paid over, an action for the money had and received to the use of the person so paying it by mistake will lie against the agent. The mere passing such money in account, or making rest, without any new credit given, fresh bills accepted, or further sums advanced for the principal in consequence of it, is not equivalent to the payment of it over. Buller v. Harrison, Cowp. 565.

A receipt signed by an agent for his principals is not evidence to support an action against him to recover the money back. Edden v. Read, 3 Camp. 339.

To make it a defence to an agent that he has paid over money, it is necessary that the money should have been paid to the agent expressly for the use of the person to whom he has so paid it over. Snowdon v. Davis, 1 Taunt. 359.

Money Retained for Special Purpose.]—A. having received money as agent for B. and others, in specific proportions for each, paid it over to C. as a banker in his own name, and having drawn out part of it, directed C. not to pay away the remainder, except by his order :—Held, that C. was bound to hold the money for A., and that therefore B. could not recover the remainder of his share from C., though he had given C. notice that A.'s agency was at an end. Pinto v. Santos, 1 Marsh. 132 ; 5 Taunt. 447.

Where persons have received money for the express purpose of taking up a bill of exchange two days after it became due, and upon tendering it to the holders and demanding the bill find that they have sent it back protested for non-acceptance to the person who indorsed it to them :—Held, that such persons, having received fresh orders not to pay the bill, were not liable to an action by the holders for money had and received when, upon the bills being reprocured and tendered to them, they refused to pay the money. Stewart v. Fry, 1 Moore, 74 ; 7 Taunt. 339. And see Dent v. Dunn, 3 Camp. 296 ; 13 R. R. 809.

Where a bill is drawn on an agent, and made payable out of a particular fund, and the agent says he will pay it when he gets money from the principal, this is binding on him ; and if he gets money at any subsequent time, he is bound to pay the bill. Stevens v. Hill, 5 Esp. 247.

The assignee of an agent cannot retain bills sent to the agent with a direction to hand them over to a third party, to whom notice is also given of the appropriation. In this case the parcel containing the bills and letters, though sent before the bankruptcy of the agent, was not received till afterwards. Cotterill, Ex parte, Douglas, In re, 3 Mont. & Ayr. 376 ; 3 Deac. 12 ; 7 L. J., Bk. 2 ; 1 Jur. 825.

Upon allegations, that, under the decrees of the Cortes and orders of the Spanish government, the plaintiff had a lien for the payment of a debt due to him on a certain portion of stock, which, along with other stock, had been, by the commissioners of the Spanish government, placed at the disposal of, and sold by certain agents here, a bill is filed praying an account (amongst others) against the agents : — Held, that a good and complete defence may be made to such a bill by a plea stating matter from which it appears that the stock placed at the disposal of these agents was intended for special purposes, unconnected with the satisfaction of the plaintiff's demand, and did not include the stock specifically appropriated to meet his demand ; and that it is no objection to the plea, that after the special purposes are answered there may be in the hands of the agents a surplus in which the plaintiff may have an interest. Jabat v. Campbell, 3 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 8.

A creditor cannot file a bill for an account against the agent of the principal, against whom his claim is, unless he makes out a case of collusion between the principal and agent. Ib.

M. & Co. abroad, through the agency of A. & Co., procure B. to consign goods to them. M. & Co. remit to A. & Co. bills, specifically appropriating them to pay B., and also write to B. to say they have done so. Before payment A. & Co. became bankrupt :—Held, that, as the original transaction was through the agency of A. & Co., they must be considered as agents throughout the transaction, and that there was sufficient privity to entitle B. to recover the bills from them, although M. & Co. were indebted to A. & Co. at the time. Thompson, Ex parte, Douglas, In re, 2 Jur. 734.

Where no Action lies.]—J., an attorney, who was accustomed to receive certain dues for the plaintiff, his client, went from home, leaving B., his clerk, at the office. B., in the absence of his master, received money on account of the dues for the client (which he was authorised to do), and gave a receipt, signed "B., for Mr. J." J. was in bad circumstances when he left home, and he never returned, but it did not appear that his intention so to act was known at the time of the payment to B. B. afterwards refused to pay the money over to the client, who brought an action against him for the money :—Held, that the action did not lie ; for that the defendant received the money as the agent of his master, and was accountable to him for it, the master, on the other hand, being answerable to the client for the sum received by his clerk : and there was no privity of contract between the present plaintiff and the defendant. Stephens v. Badcock, 3 B. & Ad. 354 ; 1 L. J., K. B. 75.

A., B., and others were owners of a ship in the service of the East India Company. B. was managing owner, and employed C. as his agent for general purposes, and to receive and pay moneys on account of the ship ; and C. kept a separate account in his books with B., as such managing owner. To obtain payment of a sum of money due from the East India Company on account of the ship, it was necessary that the receipt should be signed by one or more of the owners, besides the managing owner ; and upon a receipt signed by B. and one of the other owners, C. received on account of the ship 2,000*l.* from the East India Company, and placed it to B.'s credit in his books, as managing owner. The part owners having brought an action for money had and received to recover the balance of that account :—Held, that C. had received the money as the agent of B., and was accountable to him for it ; that there was no privity between the other part owners and C., and consequently that the action was not maintainable. Sims v. Brittain, 2 N. & M. 594 ; 4 B. & Ad. 375.

A return cargo belonging to the plaintiff was consigned by the defendant to A. and B. to "be held at the orders of the latter," who had a lien on it ; and the cargo was sold by them and their lien satisfied :—Held, that the plaintiff could not consider them as agents of the defendant, so as to entitle him to maintain an action against the defendant for the balance remaining in their hands. Tennant v. Mackintosh, 1 B. & Ald. 594.

Her Majesty by royal warrant "granted" booty of war to the secretary of state for India in council, "in trust" to distribute amongst the persons found entitled to share it by the decree of the judge of the Court of Admiralty, to whom the matter had been referred by the sovereign for that purpose, with a direction that doubts should be finally determined by the secretary of state unless her Majesty should otherwise order. An action having been brought against the secretary of state for India in council by K., on behalf of himself and all the other parties entitled, alleging that a portion only of the fund had been distributed, and claiming an account and the distribution of the residue :—Held, that the warrant did not operate as a transfer of property or create a trust; and that the defendant, being merely the agent of the sovereign to distribute the fund, was not liable to account to any of the parties found entitled. Kinloch v. Secretary of State for India, 51 L. J., Ch. 885; 7 App. Cas. 619; 47 L. T. 133; 30 W. R. 845—H. L. (E.)

Agents in London of a foreign government, having money in their hands for the payment of a dividend on a loan, on the 22nd May advertised that the coupon due on the 1st June would be paid in full; but on the 1st June, being advised by the foreign government, they advertised that the payment would be made less 5 per cent. On action brought by a bondholder against the agents:—Held, that the announcement to pay in the future a debt due in the future was not a contract, and did not bind the agents; also that, if the decree authorising the deduction of 5 per cent. was valid according to the law of the foreign government, the revocation of the advertisement of payment in full was valid. Henderson v. Rothschild, 55 L. J., Ch. 939; 33 Ch. D. 459; 55 L. T. 165; 34 W. R. 769. Affirmed 56 L. J., Ch. 471; 56 L. T. 98; 35 W. R. 485—C. A.

Deposit Paid to Vendor's Solicitor—Repayment where Sale goes off.]—Upon a sale of land the purchaser paid a deposit to the vendor's solicitor as agent for the vendor. The vendor being unable to make a good title, the sale went off:—Held, that, as the solicitor received the deposit solely as the vendor's agent, he was not liable to repay it to the purchaser. Ellis v. Goulton, 62 L. J., Q. B. 232; [1893] 1 Q. B. 350; 4 R. 267; 68 L. T. 144; 41 W. R. 411—C. A.

Agent retaining Assets against Administratrix—Liability for Interest.]—A firm in India collected the estate of a deceased person in that country under power of attorney from the administratrix in England, and remitted the amount to their agents, a firm in London, with an order to pay it to the administratrix upon receiving a proper discharge. The London firm declined to pay over the fund to the administratrix, on the ground that the letters of administration which she had obtained did not bear a sufficient stamp. A suit was soon afterwards instituted by other persons, claiming to be next of kin of the intestate, for the administration of the estate and to restrain the payment to the intestate. The London firm were defendants to the suit. No application was made to pay the money into court for upwards of ten years, and during the whole of this period it remained in the hands of the London firm, mixed with their own moneys:—Held, that the London firm was not liable to pay interest on such moneys. Wolfe v. Findlay, 6 Hare, 66; 16 L. J., Ch. 241; 11 Jur. 82.

d. For Conversion of Goods.

Thirteen bales of cotton were fraudulently bought by B. from the plaintiffs' brokers; the defendants, who were cotton brokers, without notice of any fraud, bought, in their own name as principals, the cotton from B., and afterwards sold it to M. at the same price at which they had bought it, charging a commission. The defendants obtained B.'s signature to a delivery order, and took delivery of it from B.'s warehouse and conveyed it to a railway station, whence it was forwarded to M., by whom it was spun into yarn. The defendants in buying the cotton intended to act as brokers, believing the cotton would suit M. Afterwards the plaintiffs demanded the cotton from the defendants. The jury found that the cotton was bought by the defendants as agents in the course of their business as brokers, and that they dealt with it only as agents to their principal:—Held, by Martin, Channell, and Cleasby, BB., that the defendants were liable to the plaintiffs in trover for the value of the cotton, Kelly, C.B., Byles and Brett, JJ., dissentientibus. By Martin and Channell, BB., that, the defendants having bought the cotton as principals from B., it was immaterial that they intended to deal with it only as agents to their principal, and that whoever deals wrongfully with the goods of another is equally liable whether he is an agent or a principal. By Cleasby, B., that by reason of the real principals not being known, and therefore not disclosed at the time the bargain was made, the defendants necessarily became the parties to the contract until the real principals being ascertained were adopted by the sellers, and by their dealing with the cotton became liable for a conversion. By Kelly, C.B., and Byles, J., that the defendants were not guilty of a conversion, inasmuch as they acted only as brokers, and exercised no dominion over the cotton in their own right and for their own benefit. By Brett, J., that a possession or detention, which is a mere custody or mere asportation made without reference to the question of the property in chattels, is not a conversion, and that the defendants, acting only as brokers by negotiating a bargain of purchase and sale and by passing a delivery order, were not guilty of a conversion. Hollins v. Fowler, 41 L. J., Q. B. 277; L. R. 7 Q. B. 616; 27 L. T. 168; 20 W. R. 868—Ex. Ch. Affirmed 44 L. J., Q. B. 169; L. R. 7 H. L. 757; 33 L. T. 73.

The London agent, who was also a member of a firm which was commissioned to sell goods on behalf of the local government of a Spanish colony, was held to be justified in refusing to give them up to the Spanish consul-general in England till he had communicated, through his immediate principals, with the local government. Spain (Queen) v. Parr, 39 L. J., Ch. 73; 21 L. T. 555; 18 W. R. 110.

e. For Misrepresentation or Assumption of Authority.

General Rule.]—If a person enters into a contract in writing on behalf of his principal, he is not personally liable on such contract, unless he had no authority to make it, or in making it exceeded his authority. Bowman v. Williams, 7 Q. B. 103; 14 L. J., Q. B. 226; 9 Jur. 454—Ex. Ch.

A promise in the following terms: "I undertake on behalf of E. to pay," is upon the face of it a promise as agent of another, and not as principal; and, in order to affect the party making it with a personal liability, it lies upon the party to whom it is made to prove either that there was no agency or authority, or that it was exceeded. Ib.

Contract "as Agent" without Authority.]—If a person professes to contract as agent only, and contracts in such terms as may express the character of agent only, he cannot, on the ground of his having had no authority to contract as agent, be held liable as a contractor, in an action on the contract, whether that which he assumed to do was done in fraud or not. Lewis v. Nicholson, 18 Q. B. 503; 21 L. J., Q. B. 311; 16 Jur. 1041.

Verbal Contract for Sale of Land.]—Where a person assumes, without authority, to act as agent for the sale of real estate, and the contract is merely verbal, the person injured by relying on his representations has no remedy in equity against him for damages on the ground of part performance; and there is nothing in the Judicature Acts to alter this rule. Warr v. Jones, 24 W. R. 695.

Warranty of Authority — Liability for Breach.]—A party who makes a contract as agent thereby warrants that he has authority as agent to make the contract; and if he has no such authority, he is liable for the damages necessarily occasioned by a breach of his warranty, although he acted bonâ fide under a mistaken belief that he had authority as agent to make the contract. Collen v. Wright, 8 El. & Bl. 647; 27 L. J., Q. B. 215; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 357; 6 W. R. 123—Ex. Ch.

W., professing to act as agent for G., made an agreement with the plaintiff for the lease of a farm belonging to G., and signed it "W., agent to G., lessor." He had not, in fact, authority from G.:—Held, that there was a contract on the part of W. that he had authority, on which he was liable. Ib.

If a person represents himself as having authority to do an act when he has not, and the other side is drawn into a contract with him, and the contract becomes void for want of such authority, he is liable for the damage which may result to the party who confided in the representation, whether the party making it acted with the knowledge of its falsity or not. Cherry v. Colonial Bank of Australasia, 6 Moore, P. C. (N.S.) 235; 38 L. J., P. C. 49; L. R. 3 P. C. 24; 21 L. T. 356; 17 W. R. 1031.

The warranty which the law implies in such cases depends on the position of the parties and on the nature and effect of the representation, but when ascertained, as a matter of fact, the legal effect is the same as if the warranty had been express. Ib.

The remedy by special action, where there is fraud or deceit, is a distinct matter. Ib.

Two directors of a public company wrote to their bankers informing them that one C. had been appointed manager of the company, and had authority to draw cheques on the account of the company. At the date of the letter the account was, to the knowledge of these directors, overdrawn, and C. further overdrew the account. The directors, as such, had no authority to overdraw:—Held, that there was evidence of an implied warranty on the part of the directors that C. had authority to bind the company, and that the directors were personally liable. Ib.

A person lent 70*l.* to a building society, and received a receipt signed by two directors of the society, certifying that he had deposited 70*l.* with the society for three months certain, to be repaid with interest after fourteen days' notice. The society was formed under 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 32, and had no power to borrow money; and the lender being unable to get her money back from the society, sued the two directors:—Held, that they were liable to the lender in damages for a breach of warranty of authority, they having, by signing the receipt, in effect represented that they had authority to make a binding contract of loan on behalf of the society, and so induced her to part with her money. Richardson v. Williamson, 40 L. J., Q. B. 145; L. R. 6 Q. B. 276.

By the articles of association of the T. Company, Limited, the directors, with the sanction of the company in general meeting, were empowered to borrow money on mortgage of the company's lands, or upon debentures, bonds, promissory notes, bills of exchange, and other transferable securities, or otherwise, as they should deem requisite for carrying on the works, &c. The plaintiff having been requested by the defendants, who were three of the directors of the company, to advance money to the company, agreed to advance 500*l.* upon having an agreement signed by the defendants to pay the 500*l.* and interest at the end of six months, upon the security of the machinery and tools of the company. The following agreement was afterwards written out and signed by the defendants and the plaintiff: "Agreement between the T. Company of the one part and W. M. [plaintiff] of the other part. In consideration for the advance of 500*l.* paid by the said W. M. to the said company, we the undersigned, three of the directors of the said company, hereby agree to repay the said sum of 500*l.*, with interest, in six calendar months from this date hereof. And we do hereby assign to the said W. M., as security for the said advance of 500*l.*, the machines and tools, as invoiced to him 3rd June, 1878. . . ." This document was not sealed with the seal of the company, nor countersigned by the secretary, pursuant to the articles of association, nor did the defendants express that they signed on behalf of the company. The plaintiff, upon default in repayment of the loan at the expiration of six months, took possession of the machinery and tools, upon which the company obtained an injunction in the Chancery Division restraining him from dealing with the machinery, on the ground that the directors were not authorised to make the alleged assignment:—Held, after hearing parol evidence to explain the ambiguity of the agreement, that the defendants were personally liable to repay the 500*l.* McCollin v. Gilpin, 6 Q. B. D. 516; 44 L. T. 914; 29 W. R. 408; 45 J. P. 828—C. A. Reversing 49 L. J., Q. B. 558.

The defendants, two directors and the secretary of an incorporated limited company, which had no power to accept bills, at the request of their engineer, and in accordance with a resolution that the company should accept his draft on account of professional services, gave to the engineer an acceptance in the following terms:—"Accepted payable at . . . for and on behalf of the tramway company—G. K., S. F. P. directors), B. W. (secretary)." When giving the acceptance the directors told the engineer that they did so on the understanding that he should not negotiate it, and only as a recognition of the company's debt to him, as the company had no power to accept bills; and the engineer, on pressing them for the acceptance, told them that he could raise money on it from his father-in-law. The engineer indorsed the bill to the plaintiffs for value, and without notice to them of the understanding between him and the defendants. The bill was dishonoured, and the defendants were sued by the holders:—Held, that the defendants were personally liable, as by accepting the bill and putting it within the power of the drawer to negotiate it, they represented that they had authority to accept, and such representation being false in fact would therefore support an action. West London Commercial Bank v. Kitson, 53 L. J., Q. B. 345; 13 Q. B. D. 360; 50 L. T. 656; 32 W. R. 757—C. A.

Where a person by asserting that he has the authority of the principal, induces another person to enter into any transaction which he would not have entered into but for that assertion, and the assertion turns out to be untrue, to the injury of the person to whom it is made, it must be taken that the person making it undertook that it was true, and he is liable personally for the damage that has occurred. Firbank v. Humphreys, 56 L. J., Q. B. 57; 18 Q. B. D. 60; 56 L. T. 36; 35 W. R. 92.

The plaintiffs supplied a limited company with goods upon a contract made with the board of the company, of which the defendant was chairman, whereby it was provided that a special portion of the purchase-money should be paid in first mortgage debentures. The debentures were never delivered to the plaintiffs, and neither at the time of the contract nor at any time subsequently had the company sufficient debentures at their disposal to satisfy the contract, although a sufficient number could have been made available if the company had been able to redeem a mortgage to which they were subject. The plaintiffs claimed to recover the amount in question from the defendant, upon the ground that the directors had made a representation which they were severally bound to make good:—Held, that there was no legal ground upon which the defendant was liable to the plaintiffs. Firbank v. Humphreys, supra, distinguished. Elkington v. Hurter, 61 L. J., Ch. 514; [1892] 2 Ch. 452; 66 L. T. 764.

A firm of shipbrokers signed a charterparty in the form, "by telegraphic authority" of the charterer "as agent." Owing to a mistake made by the officials in its transmission, the rate of freight offered by the charterer had been misrepresented in the telegram which the shipbrokers had received from him:—Held, in an action brought by the owners of the ship against the shipbrokers for breach of warranty of authority, that evidence of persons engaged in the business was admissible to explain the effect of the form of signature, that such evidence shewed that it was commonly adopted in order to negative the implication of any further warranty by the agent than that he had received a telegram, which, if correct, authorised such a charter as that which he was signing, and that the shipbrokers were therefore not liable. Lilly v. Smales, [1892] 1 Q. B. 456; 40 W. R. 544

Servant of the Crown.]—No action lies against a public servant of the Crown contracting on behalf of the Crown upon any implied warranty of authority to make the contract. Dunn v. Macdonald, 66 L. J., Q. B. 420; [1897] 1 Q. B. 555; 76 L. T. 444; 45 W. R. 355—C. A.

—— Damage must be Proved.]—In an action against directors of a company for false representation that they had authority to bind the company by their acceptance of a bill of exchange drawn on the company, it is incumbent on the plaintiff to shew that he has sustained damage, and an action is not, therefore, maintainable by the indorsee, unless he shews that he gave value for it, or was otherwise damnified. Eastwood v. Baine, 3 H. & N. 738; 28 L. J., Ex. 74; 7 W. R. 90.

Measure of Damages.]—A declaration stated that the defendant falsely and fraudulently represented to the plaintiffs that he was authorised by J. to order, and did order, certain stone for the building of a church, to be charged to J. and others, and did falsely and fraudulently write to the plaintiffs a letter (set out); and that the plaintiffs, relying on the representation of the defendant, supplied the stone, whereas the defendant had no authority to order it, and J. refusing to pay for it, the plaintiffs brought an action against him for the price, and failed in it, and were obliged to pay J.'s costs, and their own costs:—Held, first, that the declaration was sufficient, even if the letter set out did not itself shew a false representation of authority; and, secondly, that the plaintiffs were entitled to recover, by way of damages, not only the price of the stone supplied, but the costs which they had paid in the action against J. Randell v. Trimen, 18 C. B. 786; 25 L. J., C. P. 307.

The defendant entered into a contract on behalf of R. for purchase of a ship then being built by the plaintiff, and required extra work to be done to it. R., having given no authority to the defendant to purchase the ship, repudiated the contract, and the plaintiff resold it at a loss. In an action against the defendant for breach of the implied warranty that he had authority to enter into the contract for R.:—Held, that the plaintiff could recover as damages the loss on the resale, as well as the cost of the extra work. Simons v. Patchett, 7 El. & Bl. 568; 26 L. J., Q. B. 195; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 742; 5 W. R. 500.

The plaintiff instituted a suit in equity for specific performance of an agreement against G. The plaintiff gave notice, on hearing that G. denied the authority of W., to W. that the plaintiff would proceed with the suit at W.'s risk, unless W. gave him notice not to proceed; and in the event of his bill being dismissed on account of absence of authority, would hold W. liable. W. answered by denying all liability, but without retracting his assertion that he had authority. The bill was dismissed on the ground of his want of authority:—Held, that he was liable for the costs of the suit, they being, under the circumstances, a natural and direct consequence of the contract that there was authority. Collen v. Wright, 8 El. & Bl. 647; 27 L. J., Q. B. 215; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 357; 6 W. R. 123—Ex. Ch.

An agent professed to let premises by parol agreement for a term of seven years on account of his principal, and put the tenant in possession, no proper lease having been executed. Afterwards the principal brought an ejectment against the tenant, which the latter defended unsuccessfully, upon consulting the agent and his attorney, and being guided by their advice. Thereupon the tenant sued the agent for pretending to have authority to let for seven years, and claimed to recover the costs of the unsuccessful defence to the ejectment:—Held, that these costs were not recoverable. Pow v. Davis, 1 B. & S. 220; 30 L. J., Q. B. 257; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1010; 4 L. T. 399; 9 W. R. 611.

The defendant, acting as broker for both buyer and sellers, made a contract for the sale of some wool on certain terms. The sellers afterwards repudiated the contract, alleging (as was the fact) that they had not authorised the defendant to sell on those terms. The wool had been imported from California, and could therefore have been exported to America free of duty; and there was no other wool similarly circumstanced in the market. The defendant persisting that he had authority, the buyer filed a bill in chancery for specific performance against the sellers, and obtained an interim injunction; the bill was dismissed, and the injunction dissolved, with costs, on the ground of want of authority, in the defendant. In an action by the buyer against the defendant for the breach of his promise that he had authority:—Held, that the plaintiff could maintain the action, although the defendant was his agent as well as agent of the sellers; that the chancery suit was a reasonable course to adopt; and that the plaintiff was entitled to recover, as damages, the taxed costs of the chancery suit and the plaintiff's own costs taxed as between solicitor and client; and also the difference between the contract price of the wool and the value of that or similar wool, taking into account that it could have been exported duty free to America, and all the mercantile circumstances affecting the value. Hughes v. Greeme, 33 L. J., Q. B. 335; 12 W. R. 857.

The plaintiff was the holder of a nearly-expired lease of premises for twenty-one years. The defendant, professing to act as the agent of the landlord, agreed with the plaintiff that the landlord should renew the lease. The plaintiff then assigned to B. the residue of the lease and all interest under this agreement. The landlord refused to grant the new lease because the defendant acted without authority, and B. had to leave. The plaintiff brought a suit in chancery for specific performance, in which the landlord and the defendant swore there was no authority, and the bill was dismissed. B. then brought an action against the plaintiff, and recovered damages and costs:—Held, in an action by the plaintiff against the defendant, first, that in the absence of proof that the defendant had not persisted in his representation and told the plaintiff not to bring the suit, he was entitled to recover the costs of the chancery suit; secondly, that the plaintiff was entitled to a sum arrived at by capitalising the difference between the rent he was to have paid and the actual annual value of the premises, as and for the value of the term; but, thirdly, that as in the particular case a resale was not in the contemplation of the parties, he could not recover the damages and costs in B.'s action. Spedding v. Nevell, 38 L. J., C. P. 133; L. R. 4 C. P. 212.

L. instructed his brokers to apply for fifty shares at 1*l.* each in a company which he named. They by mistake applied for and obtained an allotment to L. in another company. L. repudiated the shares, but his name was placed on the register. The company had at that time a very large number of shares unallotted, and in the opinion of the court the shares were unsaleable in the market. The company was soon afterwards wound up, and the name of L. was removed on his application from the list of contributories. The official liquidator then claimed 50*l.* from the brokers by way of damages for their misrepresentation of authority:—Held, that the general rule as to measure of damages for breach of warranty of authority was applicable; that the liquidator was entitled to recover from the brokers the amount which the company had lost by losing the contract with L.; and that as L. was solvent and the shares unsaleable in the market, that loss was represented by the whole sum of 50*l.* payable for the shares. National Coffee Palace Co., In re, Panmure, Ex parte, 53 L. J., Ch. 57; 24 Ch. D. 367; 50 L. T. 38; 32 W. R. 236—C. A.

The plaintiff brought an action in England against a marine insurance company carrying on business in the United States, and obtained judgment in default of appearance for 1,000*l.* Negotiations for a settlement then took place between the plaintiff and the defendants, the agents of the company in England, and the defendants by mistake represented to the plaintiff in good faith that they were authorised by the company to offer 300*l.* in settlement of the plaintiff's claim. The plaintiff, relying upon the accuracy of the representation, entered into an agreement with the defendants, on behalf of the company, for the settlement of his claim for 300*l.*, but it afterwards appeared that the defendants were not authorised to make the agreement, and he was unable to enforce the performance of it. In an action against the defendants to recover damages for breach of warranty of authority, the defendants paid into court a sum representing the expenses incurred by the plaintiff in negotiating the compromise:—Held, on the authority of National Coffee Palace Co., In re, Panmure, Ex parte, supra, that the measure of damages was the loss by the plaintiff of the gain which he would have derived from the contract which the defendants warranted should be made, and that inasmuch as the judgment obtained by him was of no value (for the company had no assets in England, and the judgment could not under the circumstances be enforced in the American courts), and the value of the plaintiff's remedy on the policy could not be estimated, the plaintiff was entitled to recover from the defendants 300*l.* in addition to the sum paid into court. Meek v. Wendt, 21 Q. B. D. 126; 59 L. T. 558; 6 Asp. M. C. 331.

Warranty of Title.]—Where an auctioneer sells by auction standing corn with the straw, for an unnamed principal, the price to be paid at once, and the crop to be removed immediately after it has arrived at maturity at the purchaser's expense, there is a contract by the auctioneer to give the purchaser all proper authority to enter upon the land and to cut and carry away the corn and straw, but there is no actual warranty of the validity of the title of his principal to sell. Wood v. Baxter, 49 L. T. 45.

f. Fraud and False Representation.

Generally.]—The rule that an agent who induces persons to deal with his principal by means of false representations is personally liable to make good his representations, does not extend to an incorrect statement of a matter of law. Beattie v. Ebury, 41 L. J., Ch. 804; L. R. 7 Ch. 777; 27 L. T. 398; 20 W. R. 994. S. C., in H. L., infra.

In the absence of fraud, an agent acting within the scope of his authority is not personally liable for a misrepresentation made by him on behalf of his principal. Eaglesfield v. Londonderry (Marquis), 38 L. T. 303; 26 W. R. 540—H. L. Affirming 4 Ch. D. 693—C. A.

All persons directly concerned in the commission of a fraud are to be treated as principals, and must not be permitted to excuse themselves on the ground that they acted as the agents or servants of others; for the contract of agency or of service cannot impose any obligation on the agent or servant to commit or assist in the committing of fraud. Cullen v. Thomson, 4 Macq. H. L. 441; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 85; 6 L. T. 870.

An agent, charged with personal fraud, cannot, by disclaiming interest, avoid answering fully. Bulkeley v. Dunbar, 1 Anstr. 37.

By Directors.]—A direction given by persons who are directors of a company to their bankers, when the company had a balance in the hands of the bankers, to honour cheques drawn and signed in a particular manner, does not of itself impose on the directors any personal responsibility as to those cheques. This direction is in no sense a misrepresentation, so as to make those who gave it personally liable to those who acted upon it. Beattie v. Ebury (Lord), 44 L. J., Ch. 20; L. R. 7 H. L. 102; 30 L. T. 581; 22 W. R. 897.

Nor, though that direction should continue to be acted on by the bankers after the company's account has been overdrawn, will it entail on the directors who gave it any personal liability. Nor will it entail any such liability on those who, at a subsequent meeting of the board of directors, confirmed the minutes of the board meeting at which it was given, and who drew cheques in accordance with it, though the account was overdrawn when these latter cheques were issued and honoured. Ib.

Bankers under advances to a railway company made a demand on the directors of the company to deliver to them as security for the advances "unissued shares" of the company, and "such preference shares and debentures as you may obtain authority to raise in next session of parliament." This demand was not construed to mean that the shares and debentures should be paid-up shares and debentures, and the directors by delivering unissued shares and debentures (on which money had not been paid), were not guilty of any misrepresentation, and did not render themselves liable to make good to the bankers those shares and debentures. Ib.

The directors of a railway company which had fully exercised the borrowing powers conferred upon it by its special act, in August, 1864, advertised that they were "prepared to receive proposals for loans on mortgage debentures," "to replace loans falling due." W. offered a loan of 500*l.*; and, his offer being accepted, he in the same month sent his cheque for 500*l.* to the directors, for which he requested that a debenture should be issued to him. In pursuance of a resolution of the directors to that effect, the cheque was handed to H., the contractor for the works, who had been (but had then ceased to be) the holder of seven debenture bonds for 500*l.* each; and H. was requested to transfer one of them to W.; and it was by the same resolution directed "that such bond be on the 1st of October exchanged for a new one." H. kept the cheque (which was duly honoured), but was unable to transfer the debenture; and in pursuance of a resolution of the directors of the 5th of October, a new debenture bond for 500*l.* was sealed and sent to the executor of W. The defendant, a director of the company, was a party to each of the above transactions. By a decree of the Court of Chancery of the 14th of February, 1868, the above-mentioned debenture was declared void, as being for a sum in excess of the borrowing powers of the company:—Held, that the defendant was liable as for a breach of warranty; that the directors had power under the circumstances to issue a debenture, which would be valid and binding upon the company; and that the plaintiff was entitled to recover as against him the 500*l.*, together with interest by way of damages. Weeks v. Propert, 42 L. J., C. P. 129; L. R. 8 C. P. 427; 21 W. R. 676.

By Agent to Sell.]—If a person employed as the agent of another in the sale of any property has notice that what he is about to sell is not his principal's, and he yet continues to sell, he is personally liable for the produce of the sale. Hardacre v. Stewart, 5 Esp. 103.

An agent, employed by seller and purchaser on the purchase of a business, may be liable to the purchaser for false representations as to its value, and if he declares that he has personal knowledge of the facts, and his statements are found to be false, that is evidence that they are false to his knowledge. Wright v. Self, 1 F. & F. 704.

Attorney as agent, on sale of an estate, not disclosing to the buyer an incumbrance, and leading him to suppose the title would be a good one, held liable to make satisfaction in default of the vendor. Arnot v. Biscoe, 1 Ves. 95.

By Broker Purchasing Goods.]—Brokers in the city of London being directed to purchase iron delivered to the buyer bought-notes, purporting to be notes of the contract for the iron, not disclosing the name of the seller, the brokers guaranteeing the performance of the contract; and the buyer paid the brokers their commission, together with a deposit in part payment of the price of the iron. The buyer afterwards discovered that there was no principal seller of the iron other than one of the firm of brokers, who intended himself to perform the contract; and upon a bill filed by parties from whom the buyer had obtained money on the security of the contracts, the deposits were ordered to be repaid with interest. If in such a case the plaintiffs had, before the bill was filed, abandoned all interest in the contracts for the iron, they could not afterwards sue for the recovery of the deposits; that the cancellation of certain letters, which gave the plaintiffs an interest in the contract as against the brokers, the plaintiffs being at the time of such cancellation ignorant, and the brokers knowing the truth of the case, does not in equity protect the brokers from the claim of the plaintiffs for the recovery of the deposits. If the plaintiffs had known that the brokers were also the sellers of the iron, or if the plaintiffs were otherwise not deceived by their representations, they would not have been entitled to relief in equity. Knowledge by the buyer of the fact that there was not any seller of the iron other than the brokers, would not affect parties advancing money to the buyer on the faith of representations made to them by the brokers that the contract was regular and valid, nor deprive such parties of their right of rescinding the transaction, and recovering payments which had been made. Wilson v. Short, 6 Hare, 366; 17 L. J., Ch. 289; 12 Jur. 301.

False Representation as to Credit.]—The plaintiff sued G., a manager, for false representations as to the credit of a customer; G. on being written to by the plaintiff, signed his reply as manager, giving a favourable account of the credit of the customer. This representation was false to G.'s knowledge, and the plaintiff, on supplying goods to the customer, suffered loss:—Held, that G. was personally liable. Swift v. Jewesbury, 43 L. J., Q. B. 56; L. R. 9 Q. B. 301; 30 L. T. 31; 22 W. R. 319—Ex Ch.

Liability for Acts of Sub-agent.] — As a general rule one agent is not responsible for the fraudulent acts of the other unless he does something which makes himself a principal in the fraud. Cargill v. Bower, 47 L. J., Ch. 649 ; 10 Ch. D. 502 ; 38 L. T. 779 ; 26 W. R. 716.

A principal agent is not responsible for the act of a sub-agent with respect to a representation made in favour of his principal ; and therefore the directors of a company cannot be held personally liable for a fraudulent representation made by an agent of the company, unless they have induced or authorised him to make it. Bear v. Stevenson, 30 L. T. 177—P.C.

A company was in negotiation with S. for an advance upon the security of sheep and wool, the property of the company ; an agent of the company wrote, in answer to a question of S., " The mortgage to N. is the only incumbrance on the sheep and wool : " in fact, there were two other outstanding incumbrances, but at the time of writing the agent had them both in his possession on behalf of the company, under an agreement that they should be paid off out of the advance to be made by S., which was in fact done :—Held, that there was no evidence that the agent was guilty of making a false representation of the position of the company. Ib.

S. & Co. employed F. as their agent to make advances on goods. F. employed a sub-agent to make such advances, with power to draw on S. & Co. for the amount. The sub-agent fraudulently drew on S. & Co. for an amount not advanced : — Held, that such sub-agent was acting within his authority, and that F. was liable for the act of his sub-agent. Swire v. Francis, 47 L. J., P. C. 18 ; 3 App. Cas. 106 ; 37 L. T. 554.

Refunding Commission in Case of Fraud.]—A company being unable to get its shares taken up, the directors resolved to give 2*s.* 6*d.* per share to any one who found persons to take shares. B., the secretary and solicitor of the company, proposed for the allotment of 2,000 shares to a client of his. The directors approved, and ordered 250*l.* to be paid to B. The shares were duly allotted to K., the company's engineer, and by him transferred to R. B., who was chairman of the company and the father of B. The directors knew that R. B. was the person really taking up the shares. The company was wound up, and, upon a summons for the purpose, it was held that B. must refund to the liquidator the sum of 250*l.* which he had received. Stapleford Colliery Co., In re, Chatteris, ex parte, 49 L. J., Ch. 253 ; 42 L. T. 12 ; 28 W. R. 341.

g. Torts of Principal.

There is no agency as between wrongdoers ; each of them is personally liable. Hugh v. Abergavenny (Earl), 23 W. R. 40.

Where there was a dispute between the plaintiff and one of the defendants about a weir situate on the plaintiff's land, and the other defendant was charged with intending to enter forcibly on the land and destroy the weir :—Held, that the last-mentioned defendant could not sustain a demurrer to a bill for injunction on the ground that he had no interest in the subject-matter of the dispute, and was a mere agent acting on the orders of the principal defendant. Ib.

Importation and Transhipment of patented Article—Custom-house Agents.]—A patent was granted in England for an invention rendering nitro-glycerine less dangerous. Foreigners imported into England an article compounded of nitro-glycerine and other substances which they had manufactured abroad according to the patent process. The respondents, acting as custom-house agents for the importers, passed the article through the custom-house, and obtained permission (as required by the Explosives Act, 1875) for landing and storing it in magazines belonging to the importers :—Held, that the respondents being only custom-house agents for the importers, and not themselves the importers, and having neither possession of nor control over the goods, their acts did not amount to an exercise or user of the patent, and that no action could be maintained against them for an infringement of the patent. Nobel's Explosives Co. v. Jones, 52 L. J., Ch. 339 ; 8 App. Cas. 5 ; 48 L. T. 490 ; 31 W. R. 388—H. L. (E.)

h. Joining Agent as co-Defendant with Principal.

In Action for Specific Performance.]—To a bill against vendor for specific performance, his stewards and receivers ought not to be made parties ; a specific performance being decreed, bill as against them dismissed with costs. M'Namara v. Williams, 6 Ves. 143.

A.'s solicitors and B.'s solicitors, acting as agents for A. and B., entered into an agreement of compromise to the effect that all litigation between A. and B. should be stayed in consideration of a sum of money. A bill was afterwards filed by A. against B. for the specific performance of this agreement ; and by amendment B.'s solicitors were made parties, the bill alleging that they had authority from B., but that B. alleged that they had no such authority ; and the bill prayed in the alternative relief personally against B.'s solicitors :—Demurrer by B.'s solicitors allowed with costs, on the ground that there was no allegation by the plaintiff to support the prayer for relief against them. Clark v. Rivers, (Lord), L. R. 5 Eq. 91 ; 17 L. T. 166 ; 16 W. R. 123.

In Action for Forcibly Regaining Possession of Goods Seized.]—A solicitor who, in the belief that his client's goods had been improperly seized under a bill of sale, assisted him in forcibly regaining possession of them, was made a co-defendant in a suit in the county court by the holders of the bill of sale, on the ground that he had colluded with his client in resisting their proceedings. The judge made a decree against him, and subsequently, on further consideration, ordered him to pay a certain sum into court. Whereupon he appealed against both the decree and order, on the grounds that he had merely acted as solicitor in the transaction, and that there was nothing due from him to the holders of the bill of sale :—Held, that he had been improperly made a party. Fallows v. Slatter, 20 L. T. 104.

For Payment of Costs.]—The practice of making the agents of a party defendants, when nothing but costs is prayed against them, is improper, and should be met by directing an issue. Attwood v. Small, 6 Cl. & F. 232 ; 2 Jur. 200, 226, 246. Reversing Younge, 407.

Semble, the cases in which a mere agent may be made a party to a suit, and costs prayed as relief against him, are limited to cases of fraud, in the sense in which fraud is understood in a court of equity, to which the agent is a party, and do not apply to a case in which, though the agent acts erroneously, he acts openly and avowedly. Marshall v. Sladden, 7 Hare, 428 ; 19 L. J., Ch. 57 ; 14 Jur. 106.

For Discovery or Production of Documents.]—Demurrer by a married woman to a bill praying discovery only against her, and relief against her husband, as to contracts, &c., by her agent for her husband: alleging the vouchers, &c., to be in her possession, allowed upon the objection that it was making a mere agent a party. Le Texier v. Anspach (Margravine), 15 Ves. 159.

The plaintiff claimed upon the decease of the testator's widow to be entitled to a messuage, as the only surviving cestui que trust in remainder under the trusts of the will. It appeared by the bill that the testator had no right to devise the messuage, but that his widow became entitled to it by survivorship ; the widow, however, took certain benefits under the will, and, as was alleged in the bill, had elected to take thereunder. The bill was filed against a mortgagee, in whom the legal estate was vested, and against a solicitor, having the custody of the deeds :—Held, that the suit could be sustained against the solicitor. Baker v. Strickland, 3 Jur. 1047.

An agent is liable to account only to his principal, and the case of charity forms no exceptions to the rule. The trustee of a charity managed its affairs by an agent, who received the income, and had the title deeds in his possession. The agent was made party to an information for an account and a scheme :—Held, on demurrer, that he was not a proper party. Att.-Gen. v. Chesterfield (Earl), 18 Beav. 596 ; 18 Jur. 686 ; 2 W. R. 499.

II. POWER OF ATTORNEY.

A. BY AND TO WHOM.

By Churchwardens having no Corporate Seal.]—Semble, that churchwardens and overseers, having no corporate seal, have no power to execute a power of attorney, authorising a party to continue receiving the dividends of stock, notwithstanding the fluctuations in the number and identity of the numbers of the corporation. Annesley, Ex parte, 2 Y. & Coll. 350 ; 6 L. J., Ex. Eq. 81.

By Prisoners.]—A prisoner under a charge of felony may, before trial, execute a power of attorney to obtain money from a savings bank, in order to pay his attorney for conducting his defence, or to pay any other bonâ fide debt. Rex v. Cowon, 7 Car. & P. 651.

By Husband and Wife.]—A power of attorney by husband and wife severally and respectively appointing an attorney to surrender the wife's customary tenement into the lord's hands, is a nullity. Graham v. Jackson, 6 Q. B. 811 ; 14 L. J., Q. B. 129 ; 9 Jur. 275.

To Partners.]—A general power of attorney granted to one partner does not give any authority to the others. Edmiston v. Wright, 1 Camp. 88.

B. THE INSTRUMENT.

Execution—Seal.]—A power of attorney must be under seal. Berkeley v. Hardy, 8 D. & R. 102 ; 5 B. & C. 355 ; 4 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 184.

—— Subsequent Insertion of Attorney's Name.]—A power of attorney was executed abroad, appointing B. the attorney. It was delivered to Henry B., who was the party meant to be authorised by it, and he filled up the blank with his christian name, "Henry" :—Held, that the power was not invalidated thereby. Eagleton v. Gutteridge, 11 M. & W. 465 ; 2 D. (N.S.) 1053 ; 12 L. J., Ex. 359.

—— Abroad — Proof of.] — In an action brought to recover a piece of land in Lower Canada, the pleadings challenged a strict proof of the title. The land had been devised to Mary, the wife of "James" L. The plaintiff claimed the land under a power of attorney executed by "Alexander" L. and Mary his wife ; and on the face of the power of attorney it was stated that this Alexander L. was the same person who in the will was called "James," but no other evidence of their identity was produced. To the power of attorney there were two attesting witnesses, one of whom was a notary public of Upper Canada. Neither of these witnesses was produced, but a certificate that the notary public had been duly appointed was put in :—Held, that the plaintiff had failed to make out his title, because the notarial certificate was not sufficient proof of the execution of the power of attorney. Nye v. Macdonald, 39 L. J., P. C. 34 ; L. R. 3 P. C. 331 ; 23 L. T. 220 ; 18 W. R. 1075.

A power of attorney from a creditor resident abroad to sign the bankrupt's certificate, is sufficiently authenticated by the attestation of a notary public, without any affidavit to verify the signature. Myers, Ex parte, 2 Deac. & C. 406.

A power of attorney to sign a bankrupt's certificate, executed by a creditor resident abroad, is sufficiently authenticated if attested by the British consul. Wilkinson, Ex parte, 2 Deac. & C. 585 ; Mont. & Bli. 257.

Power of attorney to sue in plaintiff's name need not be stated in bill, but if stated, proof will be directed of it before master in taking the accounts. Edney v. Jewell, 6 Madd. 165.

Where a power of attorney has been executed before a notary public in a British colony, an affidavit verifying the notarial signature is not necessary under 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, s. 22. Goss' Estate, In re, Liddal v. Nicholson, 12 Jur. (N.S.) 595 ; 14 L. T. 727.

It is not necessary that the notarial seal or signature mentioned in 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, s. 22, should be verified, and the section applies to the notarial attestation of a power of attorney to be used in the Court of Chancery. Hayward v. Stephens, 36 L. J., Ch. 135 ; 15 L. T. 173.

To Whom it Belongs.]—A person who pays money to another, who is authorised to receive it by a power of attorney, is not entitled to keep possession of the power of attorney. Pridmore v. Harrison, 1 Car. & K. 613.

In an action upon a lease, executed on behalf of the lessor under a power of attorney, there being notice to the defendant to produce the power, but no subpœna duces tecum to the party who executed the lease:—Held, that the power of attorney was the property of the party who executed the lease under its authority, and that secondary evidence of its contents was inadmissible. Hibberd v. Knight, 2 Ex. 11; 17 L. J., Ex. 119; 12 Jur. 162.

C. EXTENT OF AUTHORITY CONFERRED.

Means Necessary for Carrying out Power.]—A power of attorney must be pursued strictly; but it is to be so construed as to include all the necessary means of executing it with effect. Howard v. Baillie, 2 H. Bl. 618.

—— General Words.]—When limited powers are given by a power of attorney, words of general power in it are not to be construed at large, but as giving general powers to carry into effect the special purposes for which the power was given. Attwood v. Munnings, 7 B. & C. 278; 1 M. & Ry. 78; 6 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 9; 31 R. R. 194.

Where there is a power of attorney to do a particular act, followed by general words, the general words are not to be extended beyond what is necessary for doing the particular act. Perry v. Holl, 2 De G. F. & J. 38; 29 L. J., Ch. 677; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 661; 2 L. T. 585; 8 W. R. 570.

General words in a power of attorney held limited by its special purpose. Lewis v. Ramsdale, 55 L. T. 179; 35 W. R. 8.

Where an agent is authorised by power of attorney to enter into contracts for (a) the purchase or sale of goods, (b) the chartering of vessels, and (c) the employment of agents and servants; and, as incidental thereto or consequential thereon, to do certain specified acts and other acts of the same kind as those specified, such an authority does not confer upon the agent powers at large, but only the necessary powers, in addition to those named, which are requisite to carry into effect the declared purposes of the power of attorney. Bryant v. La Banque du Peuple, 62 L. J., P. C. 68; [1893] A. C. 170; 1 R. 336; 68 L. T. 546; 41 W. R. 600—P. C.

To Indorse Bills in Name of Principal.]—A power of attorney giving the agent full powers as to the management of certain specified real property, with general words extending those powers to all the property of the principal of every description, and, in conclusion, authorising the agent to do all lawful acts concerning all the principal's business and affairs, of what nature or kind soever, does not authorise the agent to indorse bills of exchange in the name of his principal. Esdaile v. La Nauze, 1 Y. & C. 394. S. C., nom. Esdaile v. Lanoge, 4 L. J., Ex. Eq. 46.

So a power of attorney authorising an agent to demand, sue for, recover and receive, by all lawful ways and means, all moneys, debts and dues whatsoever, and to give sufficient discharges, does not authorise him to indorse bills for his principal. Murray v. East India Co., 5 B. & Ald. 204; 24 R. R. 325.

And trover may be maintained for the bills indorsed by the agent, where the power of attorney was to receive all salary and money, with all the principal's authority to recover, compound and discharge, and to give releases and appoint substitutes. Hogg v. Snaith, 1 Taunt. 347.

A power of attorney having been given by the payee of notes, to agents, empowering them to sell, indorse and assign, they, under the power, indorsed the notes to a bank, by way of security for a loan to them. The agents failed:—Held, that the transaction was valid, and that the payee could not recover from the bank. Bank of Bengal v. M'Leod, 7 Moore, P. C. 35; 13 Jur. 945.

An indorsement of bills of exchange "per pro," by an agent, when within the powers conferred on him by power of attorney, is binding on his principal as against bonâ fide holders for value, though the agent abuse his authority. Bryant v. La Banque du Peuple, 62 L. J., P. C. 68; [1893] A. C. 170; 1 R. 336; 68 L. T. 546; 41 W. R. 600—P. C.

To Dissolve Partnership.] — One of two partners gave his son a power of attorney, "to act on his behalf in dissolving the partnership, with authority to appoint any other person as he might see fit":—Held, that this gave the son power to submit the accounts to arbitration. Henley v. Soper, 8 B. & C. 16; 1 M. & Ry. 153; 6 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 210.

P., a partner in the firm of B. W. & Co., gave A. a power of attorney "for the purposes of exercising for me, all or any of the powers and privileges conferred by an indenture of partnership constituting the firm of B. W. & Co."; and the power afterwards went on, "and generally to do, execute, and perform any other act, deed, matter or thing whatsoever . . . in or about my concerns, engagements, and business of every nature and kind whatsoever":—Held, that the former words restrained the generality of the latter words, and consequently that A. could not under this power execute a deed in P.'s name dissolving the partnership of B. W. & Co., and assigning over P.'s share of the partnership property. Harper v. Godsell, 39 L. J., Q. B. 185; L. R. 5 Q. B. 422; 18 W. R. 954.

To Sell Share in Partnership—Stipulation as to User of Firm's Name.]—Certain persons carried on business in partnership, one of whom, residing abroad, executed a power of attorney, empowering one of his partners to sell any of his real or personal property in such manner as the attorney should approve, and to sign any deeds, and generally to do and transact any other act or thing whatsoever which might be found requisite for transacting or settling all other his affairs and concerns whatsoever. The attorney entered into an agreement to sell the partnership business, which contained clauses allowing the purchaser to use the firm's name, and preventing the vendors from carrying on a similar business within fifty miles. On the vendors refusing to perform the said agreement, on the ground that the attorney had exceeded the powers conferred on him by one of themselves:—Held, that on the purchaser waiving the benefit of these two clauses, he was entitled to specific performance on the ground that the said clauses being only for the benefit of the purchaser, he might sever them from the rest of the agreement, and that the power of attorney was sufficient to authorise the attorney to enter into such an agreement as remained after the two clauses had been waived:—Semble (per Lord Justice A. L. Smith), that the power did not authorise the attorney to consent to the purchaser using the name of the old firm, because it might have rendered the donor of the power liable to an action on the ground of his holding out that he was the trader. Hawksley v. Outram, 62 L. J., Ch. 215; [1892] 3 Ch. 359; 2 R. 60; 67 L. T. 804—C. A.

To Assign Passage-money of Ship.]—The owners of a ship gave a power of attorney authorising their agent to do many acts for them, and "to sign any bottomry bond or instrument of hypothecation on the vessel or her cargo, and to sell and dispose of, either absolutely or by way of mortgage or otherwise as he should think proper, the vessel or any share thereof, and to execute all instruments and to do all acts which should be requisite and necessary for completing such sales, transfers, mortgages or any of them, and generally to do all acts about the business and affairs aforesaid, which the owner if present could have done." Under this power the agent, by a deed reciting a mortgage of the ship, and the necessity for further advance to enable the ship to set sail, and the advance of 4,000*l.* for that purpose by the plaintiffs, assigned all the freight, hire and passage-money, and earning of the ship in her intended voyage from Port Jackson to Liverpool, with a proviso for redemption if within ten days after arrival the 4,000*l.* should be paid. After the ship had sailed, the agent of the owners received the passage-money of certain passengers by bills on England, payable at sight, which bills were remitted to the owners in England, and the amounts received by them before the arrival of the ship:—Held, that the power of attorney authorised the assignment of the passage-money, and gave the mortgagees an immediate right to it before they took possession of the ship, and consequently that they were entitled to recover back the amount so received. Willis v. Palmer, 7 C. B. (N.S.) 340; 29 L. J., C. P. 194; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 732; 2 L. T. 626; 8 W. R. 295.

To Enter into Charterparty.]—The owners of a vessel, which had once been classed A 1 at Lloyd's in London, authorised their agent, by power of attorney, to charter the vessel or to employ her as a general ship on any voyage, on such terms and in such manner and in all respects as he should think proper, and generally to represent the owners in relation thereto, and in relation to her management or sale, as fully as if the owners were personally present, and to do all things necessary for that purpose, though the same were not specially mentioned:—Held, that the agent had authority to enter into a charterparty with a warranty that the ship was at the time of the charterparty A 1 at Lloyd's, though she was not so described in the power of attorney, and though she had ceased to be so classed when the power was given. Routh v. MacMillan, 2 H. & C. 750; 33 L. J., Ex. 38; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 158; 9 L. T. 541; 12 W. R. 381.

To Dismiss Captain—Construction for Judge.]—A., who was agent abroad for the owners of a vessel, under a written power of attorney from them, which gave him general authority to take care of their interests and to act as their representative, dismissed there the captain of such vessel for alleged misconduct, and he ceased afterwards to act as such captain. In an action by the captain against the owners for wages, secondary evidence was given of the contents of such power of attorney, in the absence of the document, which was lost, and the judge ruled that it gave A. power to dismiss the captain:—Held, that the construction of the contents of such document was properly for the judge, and not the jury, and that his decision on such construction was right; and the dismissal, therefore, being with the authority of the owners, the captain could not claim wages subsequently thereto. Berwick v. Horsfall, 4 C. B. (N.S.) 450; 27 L. J., C. P. 193; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 615; 6 W. R. 471.

To Receive Payments.]—Where the plaintiff, resident abroad, and appointed special administrator in a foreign court of the goods of a deceased native subject, appointed the defendant in this country his attorney, to receive moneys due here to the deceased, and he obtained administration in the prerogative court limited to receive the fund, and "until the plaintiff should obtain administration to the deceased":—Held, that he might pay over the money received to the plaintiff, although he had not obtained such administration. De La Viesca v. Lubbock, 10 Sim. 629.

A legacy of 100*l.* was ordered to be paid to a person having a general power of attorney from the legatee, without any power authorising him to receive this legacy specifically. Carr v. Eastbrook, 2 Cox, 390.

To give Discharge for Payment of Money.]—Actual payment of money to an attorney under a power is not requisite to enable him to give a discharge. Perry v. Holl, 2 De G. F. & J. 38; 29 L. J., Ch. 677; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 661; 2 L. T. 585; 8 W. R. 570.

To Borrow.]—An agent, authorised by power of attorney to enter into contracts for (a) the purchase or sale of goods, (b) the chartering of vessels, and (c) the employment of agents and servants; and as incidental thereto, or consequential thereon, to do certain specified acts and other acts of the same kind as those specified, would exceed his authority by borrowing money on behalf of his principal. Bryant v. La Banque du Peuple, 62 L. J., P. C. 68; [1893] A. C. 170; 1 R. 336; 68 L. T. 546; 41 W. R. 600—P. C.

To Pledge.]—A power of attorney authorised the holder "from time to time to negotiate, make sale, dispose of, assign and transfer" a promissory note:—Held, that the holder had no authority to pledge the note. Jonmenjoy Coondoo v. Watson, 53 L. J., P. C. 80; 9 App. Cas. 561; 50 L. T. 411—P. C.

Under a general power to sell, assign and transfer, an agent cannot pledge for his own debt. De Bouchout v. Goldsmid, 5 Ves. 211.

To Execute Bill of Sale.]—A duly authorised attorney may properly execute a bill of sale on the grantor's behalf, and such attorney may be the grantee himself. Furnivall v. Hudson, 62 L. J., Ch. 178; [1893] 1 Ch. 335; 3 R. 230; 68 L. T. 378; 41 W. R. 358.

To Execute Mortgage.]—Where a principal, resident abroad, gave a power of attorney to his solicitor in England, with ample powers, but not in terms authorising the agent to borrow money, and subsequently directed him as his agent to do so:—Held, he could not repudiate a mortgage which the agent had effected in his name. Perry v. Holl, 2 Giff. 138; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 491. Affirmed on appeal, 2 De G. F. & J. 38; 29 L. J., Ch. 677; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 661; 2 L. T. 385; 8 W. R. 570.

A. gave a power of attorney to P., authorising him to manage his affairs whilst he was residing abroad. P. kept an account at a bank in A.'s name, and, being agent for the estate of M., obtained 1,500*l.* from it, and paid it into A.'s account at the bank. A., whilst abroad, was induced by P. to execute an assignment to him of a policy of insurance as a security for an alleged debt of 1,500*l.* due from A. to P., but this allegation was subsequently by A. discovered to be untrue. M. appointed P. and B. his executors, and P., having become insolvent, deposited the policy of insurance and the assignment with B. to secure 1,500*l.*, and B. claimed to hold the documents against A. as a security for that sum:—Held, that they must stand as a security in B.'s hands for only what, if anything, might be found due from A. to P., there being nothing to shew that any payment had been made to A., he being ignorant of the circumstances, and P. having had full control over the banking account in A.'s name. Perry v. Parkinson, 6 Jur. (N.S.) 493; 2 L. T. 261.

An authority to borrow money on mortgage, though deficient in the formalities necessary for creating a valid mortgage on land, may be effectual to bind the giver of the authority as to the money advanced. Denyssen v. Botha, 8 W. R. 710.

The chairman of a company borrowed of the company a sum of money in January, 1872. Soon afterwards he gave the secretary of the company a general power of attorney to execute for him all deeds that might be necessary, and in August left the country and never returned. On the 1st November, 1872, the secretary, purporting to act under the power, executed a mortgage to the company to secure the sum borrowed by the chairman. In the following month the chairman was adjudicated a bankrupt:—Held, that the mortgage was invalid, as not being authorised by the power of attorney, and that it was not necessary to decide whether it was void as a fraudulent preference. Bowles' Mortgage, In re, 31 L. T. 365—L.JJ. Affirming, on different grounds, 22 W. R. 817.

A partnership, consisting of A. & B., was in insolvent circumstances, the separate estates of the partners being also insolvent. On the 14th September, B. executed a power of attorney to C., authorising him in general terms to deal with his property. The power contained no reference to the partnership. It contained express powers as to a ship which was in reality partnership property, though the fact did not appear in the power. On the same day B. left England, under circumstances which constituted his departure an act of bankruptcy. In November A. and C. (as B.'s attorney) executed a mortgage of all the partnership property to S., a creditor of the partnership, and also a separate creditor of both parties, to secure all the past debts and such future advances as might be made. At the same time a bill of sale of the ship was executed by A. and C. (as attorney), in consideration of a sum of money paid by S. on account of the partnership. In April A. and B. were both adjudicated bankrupts. S., at the date of the deeds, knew the circumstances under which B. had left England, but he declared in his evidence that he did not infer that B. had any intent to delay or defeat his creditors, and therefore did not know that he had committed an act of bankruptcy:—Held, that the execution of the mortgage by C., as B.'s attorney, was void, as not being within the scope of the power of attorney. Snowball, Ex parte, Douglas, In re, 41 L. J., Bk. 49; L. R. 7 Ch. 534; 26 L. T. 894; 20 W. R. 786.

A., B. and C., as the only next of kin with D., the administrator of their intestate father, signed a memorandum in 1872 authorising D. to borrow, upon mortgage or otherwise, as he might deem best, upon the security of certain house property held by the intestate under an agreement for a lease to be granted on completion of repairs, such money as D. required for carrying out these matters, and to charge their respective shares with the interest. A lease of the houses was soon afterwards granted to D. as the sole legal personal representative of the intestate, which, with the memorandum, was shortly afterwards deposited by D. as a security for his own debt with E. In 1875 the administration accounts, shewing a balance due to D., were settled between A., B., C. and D., and D. then told A., B. and C. that he had not borrowed any money upon the security of their shares under the memorandum of 1872. In 1877, D., who had previously mortgaged his share of the house property to E., executed a further mortgage to him of the entirety, reciting the authority of 1872. No notice was given by E. to A., B. and C., that he held any charge upon their shares under the memorandum:—Held, that, in the absence of any notice by E. to A., B. and C., of a charge to him of their shares by D. under the authority of 1872, the mortgage of 1877, after that authority had been withdrawn by the settlement of accounts, did not affect their shares, and that they were entitled to an assignment from E. of their shares of the property comprised in the lease, which had been mortgaged by D. Jones v. Stolwasser, 50 L. J., Ch. 625; 16 Ch. D. 577; 44 L. T. 333; 29 W. R. 497.

A. gave a power of attorney to B. to manage real estate, recover debts, settle actions, also to "sell and convert into money" personal property, and to execute and perform any contract, agreement, deed, writing, or thing that might in B.'s opinion be necessary or proper for effectuating the purposes aforesaid, or any of them, and "for all or any of the purposes" of those presents to use A.'s name, and generally to do any other act whatsoever which in B.'s opinion ought to be done in or about A.'s concerns as fully as if A. were present and did the same, his desire being that all matters respecting the same should be under the full management and direction of B.:—Held, that the general words were limited by the special purpose of the power of attorney, and did not authorise a mortgage of his personal property. Lewis v. Ramsdale, 55 L. T. 179; 35 W. R. 8.

—— Operative Part controlled by Recital.]—A power of attorney contained a recital that the donor was about to return to South Australia, and was "desirous of appointing an attorney or attorneys to act for him during his absence from England." The operative part of the deed, which gave the attorney large powers of mortgaging the donor's property, contained no mention of the duration of those powers:—Held, that the operative part of the deed was controlled by the recital, and consequently that charges effected by the attorney upon the property of the donor while he was in England were invalid as against him. Danby v. Coutts, 54 L. J., Ch. 577; 29 Ch. D. 500; 52 L. T. 401; 33 W. R. 559.

—— Ratification.]—See Munnings v. Bury, ante, col. 938.

To Execute Lease.]—An agreement for a lease made with an agent who acts under a power of attorney, and a lease executed by such agent in pursuance of the agreement, shall effectually bind the principal. Hamilton v. Clanricarde (Earl), 1 Bro. P. C. 341.

To Sell Land.]—B. executed a voluntary settlement of land in favour of his wife and children, which contained a power of sale. Subsequently B., being about to leave England, executed a power of attorney to E. authorising him to sell all or any of his lands, but in general terms. E., as B.'s attorney, agreed to sell a portion of the land comprised in the settlement to the defendant; and the defendant contracted the next day, the 4th May, 1876, to sell the same piece of land to the plaintiffs. On the execution of this contract a deposit of 200*l.* was paid, and the purchase was to be completed on the 1st January, 1877. The title was objected to by the plaintiffs on the ground that the power of attorney did not authorise the sale to the defendant, and an action was commenced in the Exchequer Division, in August, 1877, for the return of their deposit, and for damages for breach of the contract; the defendant asserted that the contract was binding, and the title good, and by his counter-claim asked for specific performance. An order had been obtained by consent in another action to administer the trusts of the settlement, confirming the proposed sale by E. to the defendant, and it had also been decided in the action that an order might be made directing a person to convey for B. The defendant subsequently offered a conveyance direct from B. or from the trustees of the settlement, which was declined:—Held, by the vice-chancellor, that the power of attorney did not authorise E. to sell to the defendant any portion of the land comprised in the settlement, and that such a sale was not sufficient to call into operation the statute 27 Eliz. c. 4; that the plaintiffs could not be affected by the order in the administration action; and that, the title being defective, the plaintiffs were entitled to recover the deposit, with the costs of the action; the damages, to be ascertained, to be limited to the conveyancing costs. General Meat Supply Association v. Bouffler, 41 L. T. 719—C. A.

Decision of the vice-chancellor affirmed on appeal, on the ground that the trustees' suit being a suit for the execution of the trusts of the settlement, there was no jurisdiction in it to make an order to confirm a sale in derogation of those trusts. Ib.

To Instruct Solicitor on Behalf of Donor.]—Where a person on leaving this country has authorised another, either in writing or verbally, to act for him generally in his absence, the latter has authority to instruct a solicitor to appear on behalf of the former to shew cause against an adjudication of bankruptcy against him. Frampton, Ex parte, 1 De G. F. & J. 263.

To Sue.]—The manager of an insurance company, by power of attorney, was authorised to sue for all sums due from members:—Held, that he could not maintain an action in respect of unpaid premiums from members. Gray v. Pearson, L. R. 5 C. P. 568; 23 L. T. 416.

A joint power of attorney from husband and wife to receive and to sue for moneys belonging to them or either of them is not sufficient authority to justify the attorney in maintaining an administration suit in respect of a legacy given to the wife for her separate use. Kenrick v. Wood, 39 L. J., Ch. 92; L. R. 9 Eq. 383; 19 W. R. 57.

A mere attorney has no right to sue in equity in his own name. Spain (King) v. Machado, 6 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 61.

Transactions with a foreign prince and his government do not concern the trade of merchandise. Sturt v. Mellish, 2 Atk. 612.

A letter of attorney from one merchant to another to get in the debts will not make the person so deputed a merchant within the exception of 21 Jac. 1, c. 16, s. 3. Ib.

To Sign Bankruptcy Petition.]—A power "to commence and carry on, or to defend, at law or in equity, all actions, suits, or other proceedings in which I or my property may be in any wise concerned":—Held, to confer on an attorney a right to sign a bankruptcy petition on behalf of his principal. Richards or Wallace, Ex parte, Wallace, In re, 54 L. J., Q. B. 293; 14 Q. B. D. 22; 51 L. T. 551; 33 W. R. 66; 1 Morrell, 246—C. A.

To Apply for or Consent to Supersedeas.]—Semble, that a power of attorney to transact any business in the courts of law authorises the attorney to apply for a supersedeas. Crowther, Ex parte, 4 Deac. & C. 31.

Where all creditors consent to supersedeas except A., who is abroad, and B. holds power of attorney from A. authorising him to consent:—Held, B. was entitled to consent, and an attested copy of power ordered to be filed with the proceedings. Hamilton, Ex parte, 2 Deac. & C. 139.

Where a creditor gave a power of attorney in general terms, but without any express power to consent to a supersedeas, and the signature of the creditor himself to such consent was easily attainable:—Held, that his own signature ought to be procured. Sampson, In re, 3 Deac. & C. 198.

Liability of Attorney to be sued by Principal.]—A person acting under a letter of attorney from administrators may be sued by them in their own right as their bailiff or receiver, and they need not name themselves as administrators. Hudson v. Hudson, 1 Atk. 462.

D. AUTHORITY, HOW EXERCISED.

Execution of Deed—Signature.]—In executing a deed for the principal, under a power of attorney, the proper way is to sign in the name of the principal. White v. Cuyler, 6 Term Rep. 176; 1 Esp. 200.

One who executes a deed for another, under a power of attorney, must execute it in the name of his principal; but if that be done, it matters not in what form of words: and such execution is denoted by the signature of the names, as if opposite the seal is written "for J. B." (the principal), "M. W." (the attorney), ("L. S.") Wilks v. Back, 2 East, 142.

The execution of an indenture by an attorney must be in the name of the principal, in order to be binding upon the latter. Berkeley v. Hardy, 8 D. & R. 102; 5 B. & C. 255; 4 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 184.

And the power of attorney must be under seal, as well as the deed itself. Ib.

A deed executed by A. on behalf of B. must, in order to bind B., be executed by A. in the name of B., or by A. in his own name, with such words as shew that he is acting solely as the agent of B. in such execution. M'Ardle v. Irish Iodine Co., 15 Ir. C. L. R. 146.

Signature of Bankruptcy Petition on behalf of Principal.]—A bankruptcy petition signed by an attorney on behalf of his principal is sufficiently signed, provided that the power under which the attorney acts is wide enough to confer upon him the necessary authority. Richards or Wallace, Ex parte, Wallace, In re, 54 L. J., Q. B. 293; 14 Q. B. D. 22; 51 L. T. 551; 33 W. R. 66; 1 Morrell, 246—C. A.

A power "to commence and carry on, or to defend, at law or in equity, all actions, suits, or other proceedings in which I or my property may be in any wise concerned," was held to confer such authority. Ib.

Power of Attorney to Several—Exercise by some only.]—When a power of attorney was given to fifteen persons therein named, jointly or severally to execute such policies as they or any of them should jointly or severally think proper:—Held, that an execution of such power by four of the persons named was sufficient. Guthrie v. Armstrong, 5 B. & Ald. 628.

E. REVOCATION.

When Allowed.]—A power of attorney is revocable. Bromley v. Holland, 7 Ves. 28.

A creditor, at the solicitation of a certificated bankrupt, executes a power of attorney to A. B. to receive the dividends on his debt for the bankrupt's use, the bankrupt undertaking to pay the debt in full, and for that purpose giving the creditor a bill of exchange, which is, however, never paid. A second commission issues against the bankrupt, under which the assignees claim to be entitled to the dividends under the first commission, by virtue of the power of attorney:—Held, that the power of attorney was revocable by the creditor, the consideration failing for which it was given; and the creditor and not the assignees under the second commission was entitled to the dividends. Smithers, Ex parte, 1 Deac. 413.

Where coupled with an Interest.]—A., being indebted to B., in order to discharge the debt, executed to B. a power of attorney, authorising him to sell certain lands belonging to him (A.):—Held, that this, being an authority with an interest, could not be revoked. Gaussen v. Morton, 9 B. & C. 731; 8 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 313.

But when a power of attorney is given as part of a security for money, it is not revocable. Walsh v. Whitcomb, 2 Esp. 565. S. P., Abbott v. Stratten, 3 Jo. & Lat. 609. See Smart v. Sanders, 5 C. B. 916.

P. being seised under a lease of lives renewable for ever of premises in Dublin, and being indebted to F. in 448*l.*, in order to secure the repayment executed a power of attorney, whereby he authorised F. to mortgage the premises, and which power of attorney he declared to be irrevocable until F. should have received the whole of his account against P., or payment of any bill, promissory notes, or bills of exchange for which P. is or shall become liable to or on behalf of F.:—Held, that the power of attorney constituted an equitable mortgage of the premises. Parkinson, In re, 13 L. T. 26.

A power of attorney to receive rents, accompanied by an agreement that it should be irrevocable until the principal and interest of a loan, and the premiums on a policy of assurance effected to secure it, should be paid off by instalments, as specified in the agreement, is irrevocable, and amounts to an equitable mortgage, and the mortgagee is entitled to priority over a subsequent creditor by judgment, affecting the legal estate in possession by a receiver. Whitworth v. Gaugain (3 Hare, 421) approved of. Abbott v. Stratten, 9 Ir. Eq. R. 233; 3 Jo. & Lat. 603.

A., being entitled to a life estate in lands, with remainder to his wife B. for life, and C. being entitled to an annuity, and D. having a judgment against A. and a policy of assurance, A., B., C. and D., in consideration of 350*l.*, advanced to A., conveyed to E. the lands, annuity, and policy of assurance, subject to redemption; and it was provided that A. should become tenant to E. of these lands, at a yearly rent, in case of non-payment of the interest and premiums on the policy; and A., B. and C. appointed F. irrevocably their attorney, to receive the rents of the mortgaged premises and the annuity, for the purpose of paying (after receiver's fees and outgoings) the interest and premiums of the policy, and for the purpose, out of the annuity, of investing a sum to form a fund for payment of the principal, and of paying the balance of the annuity to C., and of the rents to A.; and the sums secured by the judgment and policy of assurance, when they should be paid, after deducting the 350*l.* and interest, were to be applied by E. to pay D. any demand due to her by A., and the balance to A.; and it was provided, that F. should not act as receiver until the interest or premium on the policy should be in arrear. F. entered into receipt of the rents (as he alleged, under a subsequent power of attorney from A.) and of the annuity, no portion of which he invested to form the fund for payment of the annuity, and applied the rents for the purposes of A., and in payment of the interest of a mortgage due to himself (F.), by the directions of A., and the annuity in payment of the interest on the 350*l.*, with the consent of C., who had, before such consent, taken the benefit of the Insolvent Act:—Held, that A. could not revoke the power of attorney in the mortgage deed. M'Dowell v. Reede, 14 Ir. Ch. R. 190.

But see Watson v. King and Spooner v. Sandilands, infra, col. 1127.

What constitutes.]—C. and D., who had since died, holders of stock as trustees, had given a power of attorney to bankers to receive the dividends and pay them to the cestui que trust, a married woman. She had given the bankers directions to pay the dividends, when received, to S., who had lent money to her and her husband. Subsequently, however, she wrote to the bankers, that in consequence of the death of one of the trustees she had been obliged to have a new power of attorney made to receive her own dividends, and that she would not trouble them any longer to receive them. No new power of attorney was in fact made. After this letter the bankers received a dividend and paid it over to S.:—Held, that an action by C. against the bankers for not paying the dividends to the cestui que trust was not sustainable, as her letter did not amount to a revocation of the direction to pay to S. Clark v. Laurie, 2 H. & N. 199; 26 L. J., Ex. 317; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 647; 5 W. R. 629—Ex. Ch.

By Death.]—A power of attorney to a creditor to receive a debt not accompanying any assignment of it, nor making part of any security given, but with declarations that it was to enable the creditor to apply the money to his debt, is not an appropriation, and therefore fails by the death of the debtor. Lepard v. Vernon, 2 Ves. & B. 51.

A payment under a power of attorney, made after the death of the principal, is illegal. Wallace v. Cook, 5 Esp. 117.

Semble, that a power of attorney by husband and wife severally and respectively appointing an attorney to surrender the wife's customary tenement into the lord's hands is revoked by the death of the wife, and a surrender subsequently made by the attorney is inoperative. Graham v. Jackson, 6 Q. B. 811; 14 L. J., Q. B. 129; 9 Jur. 275.

As to the necessity of shewing that a party who has given a power of attorney is alive at the time it is acted on. Bailey v. Collet, 18 Beav. 179; 23 L. J., Ch. 230; 2 W. R. 216.

An Indian power of attorney to receive funds in a suit is valid, if the party executing it be proved to be living at the date of the decree. Goodson v. Alexander, 1 Jur. 39.

—— Where an Interest.]—A power of attorney is revoked by the death of the party giving it, even though the party to whom it is given has an interest, or the act is not to be performed until after the death of the party. Watson v. King, 1 Stark. 121; 4 Camp. 272.

A power of attorney authorising the sale of a vessel is revoked by the death of the owner. Ib.

A. having joined as a surety for B. in a bond to C. for securing the payment of the interest of a principal sum secured by a mortgage from B. to C., and having also executed a warrant of attorney as a collateral security with the bond, afterwards executed to C. a letter of attorney authorising C. to take possession of a rectory and glebe lands, of which A. was the incumbent, and of certain freehold lands and hereditaments of which he was seised in fee simple, and to hold such possession, and receive and take the tithes, fees, perquisites, emoluments, rents, and profits thereof, until thereby and therewith, or otherwise, he should be paid the interest secured by the bond and warrant of attorney:—Held, that the letter of attorney operated not merely as a letter of attorney, but also as a charge on the freehold estates, and that C. was entitled to retain possession of the freehold estates until, by means of the rents and profits, all arrears of the interest should be satisfied, notwithstanding the death of A., and the revocation by that event of the power of attorney. Spooner v. Sandilands, 1 Y. & Coll. C. C. 390.

By Lunacy.]—Where A., acting under a power of attorney of creditor, assented to an arrangement by which the joint liability of two debtors of his principal was transferred to one, who afterwards became bankrupt, and the principal was afterwards found, under a commission, to have been a lunatic previous to the date of his power, and A. was appointed his committee, and proved as such under the above arrangement against the separate estate, the court upheld the proof against the petition of other creditors, lunacy not being per se a revocation of a power. Bradbury, Ex parte, Walden, In re, Mont. & C. 625; 4 Deac. 202; 9 L. J., Bk. 7; 3 Jur. 1108.

A demurrer will not lie to a bill for specific performance of an agreement to buy land on the ground that the present mental incapacity of a necessary party to the conveyance to join therein or to concur in a parol variation of the original written contract appears on the face of the bill. Whether an attorney can act under a power of attorney during the mental incapacity of the principal, quære. Beaufort (Duke) v. Glynn, 1 Jur. (N.S.) 888; 3 W. R. 463. S. C. on appeal, 3 W. R. 502.

By Bankruptcy.]—But a power of attorney to execute the indorsement of sale upon the register of a ship when she returns home is not revoked by the bankruptcy of the party giving the power. Dixon v. Ewart, Buck. 94; 3 Mer. 327.

In 1828 the plaintiff mortgaged freehold property to B., and in 1832, being about to reside abroad, he gave a full power of attorney to the defendant, who was a solicitor, to receive the rents and profits of all his property, and to apply them in payment of the incumbrances. In 1841 the plaintiff settled accounts with the defendant, shewing a large balance due to the defendant, which the plaintiff agreed to secure by a mortgage of his real estates when required. In 1845 the plaintiff became bankrupt, but his assignee did not interfere with the mortgaged property, and the defendant continued to receive the rents and profits. In 1849 the defendant took a transfer himself of B.'s mortgage, to which the plaintiff was not a party. In 1865 the defendant wrote a letter to the plaintiff expressing his readiness to settle all accounts. In 1877 the plaintiff's bankruptcy was annulled, and the plaintiff brought an action against the defendant claiming to redeem the mortgage, and claiming an account against him as mortgagee in possession, and, by amendment, as agent and trustee for him. The defendant pleaded the Statute of Limitations:—Held, that on the plaintiff's bankruptcy the defendant ceased to be the agent and attorney of the plaintiff, and did not become the agent of the assignee; and that even if the assignee would have been entitled to call upon the defendant to account, the plaintiff did not, on the annulment of the bankruptcy, succeed to the assignee's right; that, the plaintiff's estate as mortgagor having ceased on the bankruptcy, the letter written to him in 1865 could not operate as an acknowledgment either of his title, or that of the assignee, to the equity of redemption, so as to take the case out of the Statute of Limitations; that, as the assignee was barred by the statute, the plaintiff was also barred, notwithstanding the annulment of the bankruptcy. The action was therefore dismissed with costs. Markwick v. Hardingham, 15 Ch. D. 339; 43 L. T. 647; 29 W. R. 361—C. A.

As a general rule a power of attorney must be treated as revoked by an act of bankruptcy committed by the giver of it as against the trustee under his subsequent bankruptcy. Snowball, Ex parte, Douglas, In re, 41 L. J., Bk. 49; L. R. 7 Ch. 534; 26 L. T. 894; 20 W. R. 786.

But if, after the act of bankruptcy, but before an adjudication, property of the bankrupt is conveyed under the power to a bonâ fide purchaser without notice of the act of bankruptcy, he may hold the property as against the trustee. Ib.

A., having an interest in a fund, executes to the trustee of the fund a power of attorney to sue in respect of it, and afterwards takes the benefit of the Insolvent Act; his interest in the fund is thereby devested out of him, and the power of attorney is recalled. Dawson v. Sexton, 1 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 185.

A. NATURE OF CONTRACT.

1. Operation of the Statute of Frauds.

a. What Promises within.

To Debtor.]—A promise to a debtor to pay his debt to a third person is not a promise to answer for the debt of another, within the statute, which applies only to promises made to the person to whom another is answerable. Eastwood v. Kenyon, 11 A. & E. 438; 3 P. & D. 276; 9 L. J., Q. B. 409; 4 Jur. 1801.

To Stranger.]—Where one advances money at the request of another (and on his promise to repay it) to pay the debt of a third party, the payment creates no debt as against such third party, if it was not made at all on his credit, and therefore the liability of the party on whose request and promise it was made, is original, and not collateral; and his promise is not a promise to "answer for the debt of another" within the Statute of Frauds. Pearce v. Blagrave, 3 C. L. R. 338.

To Pay Debt of Another.]—A promise to pay the debt of another is within the statute, and void, if not in writing. Fish v. Hutchinson, 2 Ld. Ken. 537; 2 Wils. 94.

So the parol promise to pay the debt of another, and also to do some other thing, is void. Chater v. Beckett, 7 Term Rep. 201; 4 R. R. 418.

And the plaintiff cannot separate the two parts of such a contract. Ib.

In a letter written by the defendant to the plaintiff relating to a proposed mortgage, the following words are not a sufficient guarantee within the Statute of Frauds: "I will take any responsibility myself respecting it, should there be any." Holmes v. Mitchell, 7 C. B. (N.S.) 361; 28 L. J., C. P. 301; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 73.

A testator appointed his son and three other persons his executors and trustees. The son disclaimed and renounced probate, and afterwards purchased a portion of the testator's property. The other legatees raised a claim for losses incurred by the trustees, and the son's solicitor wrote on his behalf to the claimants, agreeing to pay 300*l.* in satisfaction of the losses:—Held, that this letter was not within the Statute of Frauds, as an agreement to answer the debt, default, or miscarriage of another; and that it was not invalid for want of consideration. Orrell v. Coppock, 26 L. J., Ch. 269; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1244; 5 W. R. 185.

The plaintiff, the grantee of a bill of sale, having taken possession of the goods, the defendant, the brother of a grantee under a subsequent bill of sale, reimbursed the plaintiff part of the money he had paid to satisfy a distress for rent on the goods and gave him his I O U for the residue upon an undertaking of the plaintiff not to sell or remove the goods:—Held, first, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover upon the I O U under a count upon an account stated; secondly, that the defendant's promise was not a promise to pay the debt of another, and, therefore, did not require to be in writing, under the 4th section of the Statute of Frauds. Bain v. Harris, 1 L. T. 40; 8 W. R. 79.

As to engagement to pay the debt of another, requiring writing under the Statute of Frauds. Carr, Ex parte, 3 Ves. & B. 110; 13 R. R. 158.

To Pay upon Completion of Work.]—A board of health had been formed in a town, L. being its chairman. M., a contractor, had under the orders of the board, formed a main sewer in the town, and, under the orders of the board, had purchased pipes which would be required to be used in making the connecting drains between certain private houses and the main sewer. The board had, under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 69, given notice to the inhabitants of certain streets to make these connecting drains, the effect of the notice being that if the inhabitants did not make these connecting drains the board might make them and charge the expenses on the defaulting inhabitants. The notice was disregarded. No subsequent resolution was passed by the board. M. was about to take away his carts and working materials, when L. said to him, "What objection have you to making the connections?" to which M. answered, "None, if you or the board will order the work, or become responsible for the payment": and L. replied, "M., go on and do the work, and I will see you paid." M. did the work, and the board refusing to pay, sued L. for the amount:—Held, that the words of L. were properly left to the jury as evidence to sustain a claim against him personally, and that they did not constitute a promise to pay the debt of another, so as to come within the operation of the Statute of Frauds. Lakeman v. Mountstephen, 43 L. J., Q. B. 188; L. R. 7 H. L. 17; 30 L. T. 437; 22 W. R. 617.

When the promise is made to answer for the debt or default of a third person, and there is no actual, but only a supposed liability on the part of that third person, the promise is equally void, whether it is in writing or not. But where the promise is made in respect of a future contemplated liability on the part of a third person, such a promise is within the 4th section of the Statute of Frauds. Ib.

A. having commenced certain business for B., which he had undertaken, refused to proceed without a promise from C. to pay the further expenses:—Held, that C. was not liable on such a promise without a note in writing. Barber v. Fox, 1 Stark. 270.

W. undertook to complete the carpenter's work in H.'s house and find all materials; W. being delayed for want of credit or funds to procure timber, it was supplied by M. on H.'s signing the following undertaking: "I agree to pay M. for timber to house in A. C. out of the money that I have to pay W., provided that W.'s work is completed":—Held, that this was not a guarantee to pay if W. should fail, but a direct undertaking to pay when the work should be completed." Dixon v. Hatfield, 2 Bing. 439; 10 Moore, 42; 3 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 59; 27 R. R. 686.

H. was employed to do work on certain houses, and the defendant was employed as surveyor over him, and to receive moneys to be paid to H. for such work; and, in consideration that the plaintiff would provide and deliver to H. such materials as should be required to enable him to do the work, the defendant promised the plaintiff to pay him for them out of such moneys received by him as should become due to H. for that purpose:—Held, that the defendant's promise was an original and not a collateral one. Andrews v. Smith, 2 C. M. & R. 627; 1 Tyr. & G. 173; 5 L. J., Ex. 80.

Upon Sales.]—Though a tradesman is induced to send goods upon credit to another, by a promise made in these words, "If you do not know him, you know me, and I will see you paid"; yet this is void by the statute, not being in writing. Matson v. Wharam, 2 Term Rep. 80; 1 R. R. 429. S. P., Peckham v. Furia, 3 Dougl. 13.

A parol promise to pay for goods sold to B., if B. did not pay for them, though made before delivery of the goods, is a collateral undertaking within the statute. Jones v. Cooper, Cowp. 227; Lofft, 769; 2 Term Rep. 80; 1 R. R. 429.

A count averring that A. made a bill of sale of goods to the plaintiff in consideration of a debt of 122*l.* 19*s.* due from A. to the plaintiff, and that the plaintiff being about to sell the goods, the defendant undertook to pay him the debt, if he would forbear to sell, does not shew with sufficient distinctness that it is a promise to pay the debt of another, so as to bring the case within the statute. Barrell v. Trussel, 4 Taunt. 117.

A. introduced B. to C., an upholsterer, and A., in B.'s premises, asked C. if he had any objection to supply B. with some furniture, and that if he would, he would be answerable. C. asked A. how long credit he wanted, and A. replied, "he would see it paid at the end of six months." C. agreed to it, and A. gave him the order, and the goods were supplied accordingly. At the end of six months, B. not having paid the amount. C. applied to A. for payment, and he paid the money. The entry in C.'s books was, "Mr. B. per Mr. A.":—Held, that the jury was warranted in finding that the undertaking on the part of A. was not a collateral undertaking. Simpson v. Penton, 2 C. & M. 430; 4 Tyr. 315; 3 L. J., Ex. 126.

A. sold goods to B., who, being unable to pay, transferred them to C., who promised A. to pay for them:—This is a new sale to C., and not a mere promise by C. to pay the debt of B. Browning v. Stallard, 5 Taunt. 450.

A. applied to B. for goods, who asked for a reference; A. referred him to C., who on being applied to, inquired the amount of the order, and on what terms the goods were to be furnished, and on being told, said, "You may send them, and I'll take care they are paid for at the time." He was afterwards written to, to accept a bill for the amount, to which he replied that he was not in the habit of accepting bills, but that the money would be paid when due. After this, B., the seller, wrote to C. about the goods, and spoke of them in his letter as goods which C. had guaranteed; and the attorney of the assignees of B. (who afterwards became bankrupt) wrote to A. for the money, and threatened process; but this letter was a circular, written in pursuance of a list made out for him by B., and without knowledge of the circumstances under which the debt was contracted:—Held, that on this evidence C. was not primarily liable, but only as a guarantor of the debt of A. Rains v. Story, 3 Car. & P. 130.

Sale of Shares.]—The defendant and P. agreed for the sale by P. to the defendant of the "put or call" of fifty foreign railway shares, at a certain price per share premium, at any time on or before the 18th of February, 1844. Before that day the defendant agreed to resell the option to the plaintiff, and to guarantee the performance of the agreement by P. On the 16th February the plaintiff called the shares (i.e. required the delivery of them, pursuant to the agreement); but it was at the same time verbally agreed between him and the defendant and P., that they should be delivered by P. to the plaintiff not on the 18th February, but on the 2nd March, at Paris:—Held, that this was not an agreement by the defendant to be answerable for the default of P., but an original promise by the defendant for the delivery of the shares by P., for which a note in writing was not required by the Statute of Frauds. Hargreaves v. Parsons, 13 M. & W. 561; 14 L. J., Ex. 250.

Promise to be answerable for Loss on Business Introduced.]—The plaintiffs, a firm of stock-brokers, by a verbal agreement with the defendant, undertook to transact ordinary business and be answerable upon the Stock Exchange for customers whom the defendant should introduce, upon the terms that the defendant should receive half of the commission earned upon, and be liable to the plaintiffs for half the losses arising from, such transactions. Owing to the default of a customer a loss was incurred by the plaintiffs, the half of which they sought to recover under the above agreement:—Held, that the promise to be answerable for the losses was the ulterior consequence only to the above agreement, the main object of which was to regulate the terms of the defendant's employment in respect of transactions in which he was interested; that, therefore, the contract was one of indemnity and not a promise to guarantee the debt of another person; and that s. 4 of the Statute of Frauds did not apply. Sutton v. Grey, 63 L. J., Q. B. 633; [1894] 1 Q. B. 285; 9 R. 106; 69 L. T. 673; 42 W. R. 195—C. A.

Promise to pay Bills.]—A., an agent for some manufacturers, sold to B., who likewise acted as an agent, a quantity of shoes, and received bills of exchange in payment; B., being pressed to indorse them, refused, but wrote a letter to A., in which he inclosed the bills, and added, "that should they not be honoured when due, he, B., would see them paid":—Held, that this was a sufficient agreement, within the statute, to bind B. to pay for the goods in default of his principal. Morris v. Stacey, Holt, N. P. 153.

In an action on a bill of exchange where the defendant had indorsed it as surety for the acceptor:—Held, that as the action was brought on the bill, and not on the guarantee, the agreement to become surety could be proved by parol evidence. Wilkinson v. Unwin, 50 L. J., Q. B. 338; 7 Q. B. D. 636; 46 L. T. 123; 29 W. R. 458—C. A.

Promissory Notes.]—A. at the request of and on a verbal offer by B. to indemnify him against loss, joined with C. in a joint and several promissory note, which he was afterwards compelled to pay:—Held, that the offer to indemnify A. was not an agreement within the Statute of Frauds, s. 4, and, therefore, need not be in writing, and that A., having afterwards become the executor of B., was entitled to retain the amount paid by him on the note as a debt due to him from B.'s estate. Wildes v. Dudlow, 44 L. J., Ch. 341; L. R. 19 Eq. 198; 23 W. R. 435.

To Discount Bills.]—The plaintiff had contracted to supply goods to C. & Co., to be paid for in cash on each delivery. C. & Co., being desirous of obtaining the goods at a month's credit instead of cash, the defendant (who had an interest in the performance of the work upon which the goods were to be used) promised the plaintiff that if he would supply the goods to C. & Co., drawing upon them at one month, and would allow him (the defendant) 3*l.* per cent. upon the amount of the invoice, he would pay the plaintiff cash, and take C. & Co.'s bill without recourse; in other words, buy the bill of him:—Held, that this was a contract to answer for the debt or default of another, within the Statute of Frauds. Mallett v. Bateman, 1 H. & R. 109; 35 L. J., C. P. 40; L. R. 1 C. P. 163; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 122; 13 L. T. 410; 14 W. R. 225—Ex. Ch. See further Cases, post, cols. 1151 et seq.

Credit, to whom Given.]—The defendant having employed a builder to erect some houses, and given a guarantee for a supply of materials to the builder to a certain amount, and afterwards an order for a further supply, and more materials having been supplied on the order of the builder, the defendant being constantly on the premises:—Held, that it was for the jury whether he had so acted as to lead the plaintiff to believe that the latter supply was to be on his credit. Smith v. Rudhall, 3 F. & F. 143.

A tradesman delivered goods to A., at the request and credit of B., who said, before the delivery, "I will be bound for the payment of the money, as far as 800*l.* or 1,000*l.*" This promise of B. not being in writing, is void, if it appears that credit was given to A. as well as to B. Anderson v. Hayman, 1 H. Bl. 120; 2 R. R. 734. And see Croft v. Smallwood, 1 Esp. 121.

A mother took her son to school, and saw the master; but no evidence was given of what passed at this time; afterwards a bill was delivered to the boy's uncle, who said it was quite right to deliver the bill to him, for he was answerable:—Held, that the Statute of Frauds did not apply, and it was proper to leave it to the jury to say, under those circumstances, whether the original credit was not given to the uncle. Darnell v. Fealt, 2 Car. & P. 82.

Forbearance to Sue.]—A promise by the defendant to pay the debt of a third person whom the plaintiff had sued, in consideration of staying proceedings in the action, is within the statute. Fish v. Hutchinson, 2 Wils. 94; 2 Ld. Ken. 537.

A promise by a party to execute a bail-bond on a writ to be sued out against A., in consideration of the plaintiff forbearing to arrest A. on a writ already sued out, is not a promise to answer for the debt of another under the statute. Jarmin v. Algar, 2 Car. & P. 249; R. & M. 348.

A. having wrongfully, and without the licence of B. ridden his horse, and caused its death, a promise by a third person to pay the damage thereby sustained, in consideration that B. would not bring any action against A. is a collateral promise within the statute, and must be in writing. Kirkham v. Marter, 2 B. & Ald. 613; 1 Chit. 382; 21 R. R. 416.

A guarantee for payment of the debt and costs in an action pending against a third person unless paid by a certain day, was in writing, but did not stipulate for forbearance of the action. An action having been brought on the guarantee, the declaration alleged a stay of further proceedings in the first action as the consideration for the promise:—Held, that no such consideration appeared on the written instrument, or could necessarily be implied from it, as to satisfy the statute. Cole v. Dyer, 1 Tyr. 304; 1 C. & J. 461; 9 L. J. (o.s.) Ex. 109.

The plaintiff's agent wrote to the defendant:—"I have this morning received the most peremptory instructions to settle this account. Be good enough to arrange something by to-morrow." The defendant in reply: "I undertake to pay 500*l.* on the account between my late brother, Mr. O. D. Hughes, and your client on or before this day three weeks." The plaintiff did not expressly agree to forbear suing, but did in fact forbear for three weeks:—Held, that the correspondence, together with the plaintiff's actual forbearance for three weeks to sue, constituted a good and binding promise to pay on the part of the defendant. Wynne v. Hughes, 21 W. R. 628.

A promise to pay damages by a third person, in case the plaintiff will withdraw a record for trial is not within the statute. Read v. Nash, 1 Wils. 305.

A suit in chancery was pending between A. and B., which C. conducted for A., as A.'s attorney. An agreement made between B. and C., with the consent of A., purporting that in consideration of the suit being put an end to, B., the defendant in equity, promised to pay C., the attorney, the costs due to him from A., the plaintiff in equity, is an agreement by B., the defendant, to pay the debt of another, and, therefore, it ought to be in writing. Tomlinson v. Gell, 1 N. & P. 588; 6 A. & E. 564; W. W. & D. 229; 6 L. J., K. B. 139.

Forbearance to Distrain.]—A promise to pay rent to a landlord going to distrain, by a person who is in possession of the goods under a bill of sale, by which the landlord is induced to forego his distress, is not a contract within the statute, and, therefore, good without being in writing. Williams v. Leper, 2 Wils. 302; 3 Burr. 1806.

An auctioneer, employed to sell goods on certain premises, for which rent was in arrear, was applied to by the landlord for the rent, the landlord saying it was better to apply so than distrain. The auctioneer answered, "You shall be paid; my clerk shall bring you the money":—Held, that an action lay on this promise without any note in writing. Bampton v. Paulin, 4 Bing. 264; 12 Moore, 497; 5 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 168.

A., being indebted to his landlord for half a year's rent of a farm, due on the 25th of March, an auctioneer was about to sell the goods of A. on the premises in the month of August. On the day of the sale the landlord came there to distrain for his rent. The auctioneer, in consideration that the landlord would not distrain, verbally promised to pay, not only the rent due but the rent that would become due at the Michaelmas following:—Held, that the promise to pay the accruing rent was a promise founded on a new consideration distinct from the demand which the landlord had against A., and therefore void by the Statute of Frauds; and that the promise being entire and in the commencement void in part, was void altogether. Thomas v. Williams, 10 B. & C. 664; 8 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 314.

The defendant, in consideration of the plaintiff's withdrawing a distress for rent, undertook to pay the sum due for rent out of the sale of the produce of the effects:—Held, that it was a positive engagement to pay if the goods were sufficient; and therefore, in an action on the guarantee, proof that the goods produced the amount of rent, entitled the plaintiff to recover although there were prior claims. Stephens v. Pell, 2 C. & M. 710; 4 Tyr. 267; 3 L. J., Ex. 214.

A landlord, having authorised a distress for rent, is responsible for the necessary expenses; and although the plaintiff was sent by the defendant to take possession of the goods distrained, and he promised to pay him, the latter will not be liable without a note in writing. Colman v. Eyles, 2 Stark. 62.

Discharge from Execution—Persons.]—Where a defendant taken on a ca. sa. is discharged out of custody by consent of the plaintiff, the debt itself is extinguished; and therefore a promise by a third person to pay that debt on condition of that discharge is an original promise, and not within the statute. Goodman v. Chase, 1 B. & Ald. 297; 19 R. R. 322.

A declaration alleged that the plaintiff recovered against S. 3,007*l.* 12*s.*, and sued out a ca. sa., indorsed to levy 2,611*l.* 7*s.* 3*d.* and interest on 2,578*l.*, besides sheriff's poundage and officer's fees; by virtue of which writ the sheriff arrested S., and detained him in custody; and thereupon, and whilst S. was in custody, in consideration that the plaintiff would procure his release, on payment of poundage and officer's fees, he, the defendant, promised the plaintiff to pay to him 500*l.*, part of the damages and interest, within one month, and to give a bond for payment of the remainder in five years:—Held, that the contract was not one required to be in writing by the Statute of Frauds. Butcher v. Steuart, 11 M. & W. 857; 1 D. & L. 508; 12 L. J. Ex. 391; 7 Jur. 774.

M. having obtained in a county court a warrant of commitment against H., in default of payment of 34*l.*, H. was arrested upon this warrant by the plaintiff. M. at the same time gave instructions to the plaintiff to release H., on payment of 17*l.* The defendant thereupon verbally promised plaintiff that if he would release H. he would pay him 17*l.*, or redeliver H. into his custody on the following Saturday. The plaintiff accordingly released H.; but the defendant neither paid the money nor redelivered H., in accordance with the undertaking:—Held, that for this default the plaintiff might recover; for that the promise was not one to answer for the debt, default, or miscarriage of another person, within the statute. Reader v. Kingham, 13 C. B. (N.S.) 344; 32 L. J., C. P. 108; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 797; 7 L. T. 789; 11 W. R. 366.

An undertaking, that if the plaintiff would discharge A. out of custody, the defendant would pay the debt at all events, is not such a guarantee to pay the debt of another as is required to be in writing; but an undertaking that if the plaintiff would discharge A. and take his bill for the debt, the defendant, without indorsing it would pay in case A. dishonoured it, must be in writing. Maggs v. Ames, 4 Bing. 474; 1 M. & P. 294; 6 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 75.

—— Property.]—B. holding A.'s warrant of attorney for 340*l.*, signed judgment thereon, and sued out a fi. fa. A. having other creditors, his brother-in-law, C. looked into his accounts, and with the assent of B. and the rest of the creditors, had all A.'s property conveyed to him, upon his undertaking to pay A.'s creditors in full B. relinquished his execution against A.; but, after waiting some years for payment of his debt, was eventually obliged to sue C. On objection that his promise was to answer for the debt, default, or miscarriage of another, and should, therefore, have been in writing:—Held, that it was an original promise, and not within the Statute of Frauds. Bird v. Gammon, 3 Bing. (N.C.) 883; 5 Scott, 213; 3 Hodges, 224; 6 L. J., C. P. 258.

Although a promise on a consideration not to sue out execution on a judgment against another is at its commencement by parol, yet if it afterwards is acknowledged in writing to a third party, it is not within the statute. Longfellow v. Williams, Peake's Add. Cas. 225.

Promise to pay Debt on Assignment.]—A promise in writing to pay a debt to be transferred from the promisor's account to that of a third party, his agent, is valid as a guarantee, and parol evidence to identify the debt is admissible. Brunton v. Dullens, 1 F. & F. 450.

Where A., being indebted to B. & Co. for goods sold, upon being released from his liability, assigned to the latter a debt which was due to him from C. & Co.; and notice of the assignment was given to a partner in the house of C. & Co., who promised in the name of the firm to pay the debt to B. & Co. out of the partnership funds:—Held, in an action by B. & Co. against C. & Co. for money had and received, that the promise was not within the statute. Lacy v. M'Neile, 4 D. & R. 7.

A. was indebted to B., and C., who resided abroad, was indebted to A. A. proposed to assign to B. the debt owing from C. to him, which B. agreed to accept. A. wrote to C.'s agents in this country, "As soon as you have funds belonging to C. pay on my account to B. 291*l.* 19*s.*, and I will credit C., having received his order to this effect." C.'s agents verbally promised B. to pay him, as they had funds of C. in hand. A. afterwards ordered C. to pay to another creditor the debt owing from C. to A., and C. gave an undertaking to pay that creditor, with a memorandum stating, that, as it was alleged that a payment had been made by some person to A. on account of C., it was declared that, should C. prove such payment to have been made, the amount should be deducted. C. having refused to pay the debt to this latter creditor, on the ground that the agents were liable to pay it to B.:—Held, that C.'s promise to pay was not a promise to pay the debt of a third person within the statute. Hodgson v. Anderson, 5 D. & R. 735; 3 B. & C. 842.

A. being insolvent, a verbal agreement, entered into between several of his creditors and B., whereby B. agreed to pay the creditors 10*s.* in the pound, in satisfaction of their debts, which they agreed to accept, and to assign their debts to B., is not within the statute, not being a collateral promise to pay the debt of another, but an original contract to purchase the debts. Anstey v. Marden, 1 Bos. & P. (N.R.) 124; 2 Smith, 426; 8 R. R. 713.

A., who was agent for the plaintiff, being desirous of retiring, the defendant applied for the agency. A. was indebted to the plaintiff, and also claimed a commission for introducing customers. It was agreed that the plaintiff should allow A. 25*l.* on that account, and that the defendant on taking the agency should allow the plaintiff to retain six months' salary, which amounted to 52*l.* In an action by the plaintiff for money received by the defendant as such agent, to which he pleaded a set-off for six months' salary:—Held, that this was not an undertaking to answer for the debt of another. Walker v. Hill, 5 H. & N. 419.

Where a person assigns a debt or contract to which he is entitled, and guarantees to the assignee the due discharge of it, his guarantee is not within the statute, because the debt or liability guaranteed is due to himself and not to the assignee, and the statute intends only promises to answer for debts and defaults in respect of which the promisee himself is the creditor. Hargreaves v. Parsons, 13 M. & W. 561; 14 L. J., Ex. 250.

Promise to Pay Debt on being Appointed Administrator.]—One promises, if the widow of an intestate would permit him to be joined with her in letters of administration, he would make good any deficiency of assets to pay debts:—Held, the promise was binding, and not within the Statute of Frauds. Distinction where a promise is to pay the original debt on the foot of the original contract, and where it it is a new consideration; the former is within the Statute of Frauds, the latter is not. Tomlinson v. Gill, Ambl. 330.

Promise on Abandonment of Lien.]—If a tradesman, having goods in his possession, upon which he has a lien, parts with the goods on the promise of a third person to pay the demand, such promise is not within the Statute of Frauds. Houlditch v. Milne, 3 Esp. 86; 6 R. R. 815.

A broker, having a lien on certain policies of insurance effected for his principal, for whom he had given his acceptances, the defendant promised that he would provide for the payment of the acceptances as they became due, upon the brokers giving up to him such policies, in order that he might collect for the principal the money due thereon from the underwriters; which was accordingly done, and the money was afterwards received by the defendant:—Held, that this was not a promise for a debt or default of another within the Statute of Frauds; and that the broker might recover against the defendant, as well for the breach of agreement in not providing for the payment of the acceptances, as also upon a count for money had and received. Castling v. Aubert, 2 East, 325.

A., through the agency of B., a broker, sold a parcel of linseed to C., who, through the same broker, sold at an increased price to D. The time for D. to pay the price was to arrive before that fixed for the payment by C. D. sent a clerk to the broker for the delivery order for the seed. The broker took him to A., from whom the clerk obtained the order upon the faith of his engagement that D. would pay A. for the seed. D., on the following day, sent the broker a cheque for 900*l.* on account, the precise quantity not having then been ascertained. Upon the seed being afterwards measured, it was found that the amount payable to A., under his contract with C., was 971*l.* 15*s.* 6*d.* In an action by A., against D., to recover the difference between that sum and the 900*l.* cheque:—Held, that the agreement by D.'s clerk was not a contract or a promise to pay the debt of a third person, within the Statute of Frauds, the seed, the giving up the delivery order for which was the consideration for that promise, being the property of D., subject only to A.'s lien for the contract price. Fitzgerald v. Dressler, 7 C. B. (N.S.) 374; 29 L. J., C. P. 113; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 598; 7 W. R. 190.

—— Charterparty—Retention of Ship.]—The owners of a ship hired on charterparty by S. refused to let her sail till certain disputes about the freight between them and S. were settled by S. giving security; whereupon the defendant, in consideration that the owners would let S. sail without giving security, undertook to get M. to sign a guarantee for the payment of the freight set forth, and deliver it to the owners within a week:—Held, that this was not an undertaking for the debt, default, or miscarriage of another within the statute. Bushell v. Bevan, 4 M. & Scott, 622; 1 Bing. (N.C.) 103; 3 L. J., C. P. 279.

—— Stop on Freight.]—A declaration stated that the plaintiff, a shipbroker, was retained by the shipowner to procure a charter for a ship, on the terms that the plaintiff should collect the freight, and thereof retain his commission; that the plaintiff did procure a charterparty; that the defendants, in consideration of the plaintiff's abandoning his right of collecting the freight, promised to pay him his commission. The facts were that the plaintiff agreed with the shipowner to procure a charter for the ship, and that he should be authorised to collect the freight on the supposed voyage, as a security for his commission. The ship having sailed and returned, the defendants, as brokers of the then owners, put a stop on the freight. A written agreement, on which the action was brought, was afterwards made, and signed by the plaintiff, the defendants, and the charterers, that the stop should be taken off the freight, that the commission on the charterparty payable to the plaintiff should be paid to him by the defendants, and that no person signing that agreement should put any stop on the freight:—Held, that the agreement was an agreement to answer for the debt of another, within the statute, and not a transfer of liability. Gull v. Lindsay, 4 Ex. 45; 18 L. J., Ex. 354.

Indemnity against Debt of Another.] — A partner in a firm agreed to indemnify the firm against certain debts owing by a named person to the firm:—Held, that this contract was not a promise to answer for the debt of another person within s. 4 of the Statute of Frauds. Hoyle, In re, Hoyle v. Hoyle, 62 L. J., Ch. 182; [1893] 1 Ch. 84; 2 R. 145; 67 L. T. 674; 41 W. R. 81—C. A.

A promise to be liable primarily or in any event for a debt for which another person is already or is to become liable, irrespective of the question whether or not that person fails to satisfy that liability, is an indemnity and not a guarantee, and need not be in writing. Thomas v. Cook (infra) approved. Guild v. Conrad, 63 L. J., Q. B. 721; [1894] 2 Q. B. 885; 9 R. 746; 71 L. T. 140; 42 W. R. 642—C. A.

Indemnity on Prosecution of Action.] — A promise by the indorser of an unpaid note to indemnify the owner if he will proceed to enforce payment against the other parties on the note, must be in writing, or it is void under the Statute of Frauds. Winckworth v. Mills, 2 Esp. 484.

Where a party desires an action brought against another person to be defended, in which action he is concerned, and may be benefited by the event; and such action is defended, and the party fails, he is liable to pay the expenses of the defence: nor is it within the Statute of Frauds in such case requisite to have a note in writing. Howes v. Martin, 1 Esp. 162.

An occupier of land, at the request of the defendant, and upon a promise of indemnity, resisted a suit of the vicar for tithes:—Held, that this was not a promise required by the Statute of Frauds to be in writing. Adams v. Dansey, 6 Bing. 506; 4 M. & P. 245; 8 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 165; 31 R. R. 480.

Becoming Bail.] — If the plaintiff becomes bail for a stranger, in consideration of the defendant's request, and of the defendant promising to indemnify the plaintiff against the consequences, no action lies upon such promise, unless it is in writing. Green v. Cresswell, 10 A. & E. 453; 2 P. & D. 430; 9 L. J., Q. B. 63; 4 Jur. 169.

The plaintiff having promised to indemnify G. against the consequences of a bail-bond into which G. had entered at the plaintiff's request, and G., being forced to make a payment in consequence, it was agreed between the plaintiff and the defendant that the plaintiff should obtain the money by discounting a bill drawn by the plaintiff, and accepted by the defendant. The plaintiff sued the defendant on the bill, and he pleaded that it was accepted for the plaintiff's accommodation:—Held, that a jury might find for the defendant on this issue, although the plaintiff was not liable on his promise to indemnify, it not being in writing. Cresswell v. Wood, 10 A. & E. 460.

To co-Surety.]—A promise by one co-surety to indemnify another is not within the 4th section of the Statute of Frauds, and need not be in writing. Thomas v. Cook, 3 M. & Ry. 444; 8 B. & C. 728; 7 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 49.

b. Sufficiency of Note or Memorandum.

Generally.]—A memorandum written by the plaintiff's clerk, in the presence of the defendant, that "the latter had called to say that he would be responsible for goods delivered to Mr. H.," is not a sufficient undertaking within the Statute of Frauds. Dixon v. Broomfield, 2 Chit. 205.

The defendant addressed the following letter to the plaintiff relating to a proposed mortgage of leasehold property: "I saw Mr. L. this day, and I told him he had better call on you, as he seemed very anxious to have the mortgage completed, and I thought he offered very fair terms; but do as you please about it. I will take any responsibility myself respecting it, should there be any." After the letter had been received, the plaintiff had an interview with Mr. L., and on the faith of such letter lent 400*l.* to A. on the leasehold security:—Held, that the letter was not a sufficient guarantee within the Statute of Frauds, as the whole promise could not be made out without reference to parol evidence. Holmes v. Mitchell, 7 C. B. (N.S.) 361; 28 L. J., C. P. 301; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 73.

I O U.] —The defendant, having verbally agreed to pay a debt of a third party, provided the plaintiff delivered up certain leases on which he claimed a lien, gave an I O U for the amount, upon which the leases were given up:—Held, that there being no release of the debt, there was no consideration for the I O U, and that as a guarantee it was bad, as it did not constitute a memorandum in writing to satisfy the Statute of Frauds. Nokes v. Thompson, 2 W. R. 78.

Bill of Exchange.] — Where the contract between a creditor, debtor and surety is contained in a bill of exchange, in an action by the creditor against the surety on the bill no other evidence save the bill is required to satisfy the Statute of Frauds, if the obligation appearing on the face of the bill is the precise obligation the surety has agreed to undertake. Holmes v. Durkee, 1 Cab. & E. 23.

Indorsement.]—Where A. by letter entered into an agreement with B., who acknowledged its terms by writing a memorandum at the foot of a copy of the letter, and signing it; and afterwards C. became guarantor for B. to A. by an indorsement on the back of the copy of the same letter, referring to the terms of the agreement therein contained:—Held, in an action on the guarantee, that the reference by the indorsement to the terms of the agreement as forming part of one transaction, was a sufficient memorandum of the consideration within the statute. Stead v. Liddard, 8 Moore, 2; 1 Bing. 196; 1 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 52.

The plaintiff, at the request of the defendant, sold to C. some wine, to be paid for by bills, and received from the defendant the following guarantee, signed by him: "Upon your handing me your two drafts upon C. for 200*l.* and 146*l.* at six months from this date, I undertake to get them accepted by him, and to see that they are duly paid." It was afterwards discovered that the draft for the sum mentioned as for 146*l.* should have been for 150*l.*; and accordingly the plaintiff drew bills for 200*l.* and 150*l.*, which the defendant got accepted by C., and gave to the plaintiff, and then wrote across the guarantee as follows: "I have received the two drafts (one being for 150*l.* instead of 146*l.*, there being an error in the invoice of 4*l.*), both accepted by C." The plaintiff signed this receipt, but not the defendant. The plaintiff having declared on the instrument as a contract, in consideration that the plaintiff would, at his own expense, procure stamps for and draw two bills, one for 200*l.* and the other for 150*l.*, at six months, and deliver them to the defendant, he would get them accepted and see them paid:—Held, that the instrument was a valid memorandum of the contract declared on, within the Statute of Frauds, since the indorsement, having been made for the purpose of correcting the mistake, and being written by the defendant on the same piece of paper as the original undertaking, must be considered as authenticated by the signature of the defendant. Black v. Gomperts, 7 Ex. 862; 21 L. J., Ex. 278.

Reference to other Documents.]—Action on an Irish judgment. Plea, that the judgment was recovered against the defendant as surety for Scott Brothers, for moneys advanced by the plaintiff to them; that after the judgment recovered, the plaintiff settled with Scott Brothers, and that there was nothing due upon the judgment for moneys advanced. Replication, that a deed was executed between the plaintiff and Scott Brothers, whereby, after reciting the judgment and various disputed accounts, an agreement was made between the plaintiff and Scott Brothers, for the settlement of all disputes, by which it was agreed that the plaintiff should advance 800*l.* to a banking company, which he had guaranteed to them, and 200*l.* to Scott Brothers, and that the debt from Scott Brothers should be fixed at 1,000*l.*, and that the agreement should be without prejudice to the security of the judgment against the defendant. Averment, that after the making of the deed, and before the execution by the plaintiff, in consideration that the plaintiff would execute it, and would advance 800*l.* and 200*l.*, the defendant promised that the judgment should stand security for the repayment of 1,000*l.* and interest. Averment of performance by the plaintiff, and that 800*l.* and 200*l.* had been advanced, but never repaid. Rejoinder traversing the promise as alleged. To prove this issue, the plaintiff put in the following letter from the defendant, and another surety, dated before the execution of the deed by the plaintiff: "We hereby consent to the within deed being executed by and between the parties without prejudice to the rights and remedies of the plaintiff, under his judgment for 10,000*l.* to recover 1,000*l.*" This letter had been annexed to the deed, and was intended to have been sent therewith to the defendant for signature, but the letter alone was sent, and the defendant signed it without seeing the deed. Semble, that this was not a promise to pay the debt of another within the Statute of Frauds; but that if it was, there was a sufficient memorandum in writing, as the letter signed by the defendant incorporated so much of the deed as formed the consideration of his promise. Macrory v. Scott, 5 Ex. 907; 20 L. J., Ex. 90.

Where the defendant undertook to guarantee to the assignees of a bankrupt the payment of 100*l.* due to the estate of the bankrupt from S. for articles delivered to the latter for the use of his trade, so that the guarantee should not be put in force against the defendant for two whole years from its date; and the defendant, previously to the guarantee, wrote a letter to the assignees proposing the terms on which it was to be given, and afterwards recognised it:—Held, that the correspondence and guarantee were to be taken together, and constituted a sufficient consideration for the promise, although it was objected that no consideration was expressed on the face of the guarantee itself. Coe v. Duffield, 7 Moore, 252.

The defendants, who were in partnership as railway contractors, under the name of W., A. & Co., contracted with a railway company to do certain works. U. and R. made a sub-contract with the defendants to do part of the work, and for that purpose, requiring coals to make bricks, A., without the knowledge or assent of his co-partners, signed in the name of the firm, and delivered to the plaintiffs a guarantee, not addressed to any person, for payment of coals to be supplied to U. and R. The plaintiffs having pointed out the omission, a clerk of W., A. & Co., by the direction of A., wrote to the plaintiffs, stating that the guarantee was intended for them. The clerk also, without the knowledge of the other partners, wrote to the plaintiffs certain letters amounting to evidence of an account stated in respect of the amount due on the guarantee:—Held, that the guarantee and subsequent letter constituted a sufficient note in writing within the statute. Breitel v. Williams, 4 Ex. 623; 19 L. J., Ex. 121.

The defendants wrote to the plaintiff by letter dated September 15th: "Burton, Balderson. Dear sir,—We hereby guarantee the safety of the above investments": and by letter dated September 16th. "We acknowledge to have received from you the sum of 710*l.* as under: a mortgage on the estate at T., the property of Mr. Burton, 360*l.*; a mortgage on the estate at F., the property of Mr. Balderson, 350*l.*" The plaintiff advanced money through the defendants on mortgage of the property, and subsequently sued them as guarantors of the mortgage:—Held, that the two letters could be read together and were a sufficient memorandum of the contract within s. 4 to the Statute of Frauds, and that the defendants guaranteed that the loan would be repaid. Sheers v. Thimbleby, 76 L. T. 709—C. A.

Guarantee addressed to no one.]—A guarantee not addressed to any one will enure to the benefit of those to whom and for whose use it is given. Walton v. Dodson, 3 Car. & P. 162.

Payment of Consideration, by whom.]—"I hereby guarantee you the payment of the proceeds of the goods you have consigned to my brother, and also any future shipments you may make in consideration of 2*s.* 6*d.* paid me," is a sufficient memorandum within the statute to make the subscriber liable to the vendor, notwithstanding it does not expressly disclose by whom the 2*s.* 6*d.* was paid. Dutchman v. Tooth, 5 Bing. (N.C.) 577; 7 Scott, 710.

The intendment will be, that it was paid by the party to whom the memorandum was given. Ib.

See further, CONTRACT.

2. STAMP.

Necessity of.]—Where the consideration did not appear on the face of the guarantee, a stamp was held nevertheless necessary. Whitfield v. Moojen, 1 F. & F. 290.

Relating to Sales of Goods.]—A broker, when he bought goods for his principal, agreed for a half per cent. to indemnify him from any loss on the resale; the agreement, if reduced to writing, need not be stamped, because it is a contract relating to the sale of goods. Curry v. Edenser, 3 Term Rep. 524.

So a guarantee for the payment of goods thereafter to be purchased by a third person to a certain amount, is within the exception in the stamp act as a contract relating to the sale of goods, and does not require to be stamped. Warrington v. Furbor, 8 East, 242; 6 Esp. 89. S. P., Watkins v. Vince, 2 Stark. 368.

Charterparty.]—A guarantee for the due performance of a charterparty does not require to be stamped as a charterparty or an agreement for the charter of any ship, or any memorandum, letter, or any other writing between the captain or owner of any ship and any other person, for or relating to the freight or conveyance of goods, on board such ship, within 5 & 6 Vict. c. 79, s. 2. Rein v. Lane, 8 B. & S. 83; 36 L. J., Q. B. 81; L. R. 2 Q. B. 144; 15 L. T. 466; 15 W. R. 345.

Collateral Purposes.]—A declaration stated, as the consideration of a promise, the giving up of a certain guarantee; plea, that the plaintiff did not give up the guarantee:—Held, that the guarantee might be given in evidence, though unstamped. Haigh v. Brooks, 3 P. & D. 452; 10 A. & E. 309; 9 L. J., Q. B. 194.

H., being a tenant to E., G. signed the following document: "August 2nd. According to Mr. H.'s request, the land at B., under Mr. E., I will be bound for until next Lady-day, rent 48*l.*" This document being tendered in evidence in an action by S. against H. for money paid to the landlord:—Held, that it required an agreement stamp. Glover v. Hackett, 2 H. & N. 487; 26 L. J., Ex. 416; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1083; 5 W. R. 881.

Bond to Sheriff—Addition of Obligor after Execution — New Stamp.] — The addition of another obligor in a bond given to the sheriff after the bond has been executed, but before the sheriff has accepted it, with the assent of the sheriff and the prior obligors, does not vacate the bond nor make a new stamp necessary. Matson v. Booth, 5 M. & S. 223.

3 PARTIES.

Relationship of Parties Generally.]—There are three kinds of cases between which it seems important to distinguish. (1) Those in which there is an agreement to constitute, for a particular purpose, the relation of principal and surety, to which agreement the creditor thereby secured is a party; (2) those in which there is a similar agreement between the principal and surety only, to which the creditor is a stranger; and (3) those in which, without any such contract of suretyship, there is a primary and a secondary liability of two persons for one and the same debt, the debt being, as between the two, that of one of those persons only, and not equally of both, so that the other, if he should be compelled to pay it, would be entitled to reimbursement from the person by whom (as between the two) it ought to have been paid. Duncan, Fox & Co. v. North & South Wales Bank, 50 L. J., Ch. 355; 6 App. Cas. 11; 43 L. T. 706; 29 W. R. 763—H. L. (E.)

A. and B. desiring to borrow money of a bank, the bank refused unless C. would join to secure them; C. agreed to join, and A., B. and C. drew a cheque, and the money was paid to them:—Held, that this was a joint, and not a joint and several liability; and that C. was in the nature of a surety only. Other v. Iveson, 3 Drew. 177; 3 Eq. R. 562; 24 L. J., Ch. 654; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 568; 3 W. R. 332.

Signature by Agent.]—By 9 Geo. 4, c. 14, s. 6, a false representation as to the credit of another person, in order to maintain an action, must be signed by the person making it, and not by an agent. The plaintiff sued J. and G. jointly for a false representation with respect to the solvency of Sir William Russell. J. was sued as the public officer of a banking company formed under 7 Geo. 4, c. 46, and G. was the manager of one of their branches. The plaintiff was a customer of the S. bank, and requested the manager of that bank to inquire for him as to Sir William Russell's credit. The manager wrote a letter addressed to the manager of the banking company, requesting information whether Sir William Russell was responsible to the extent of 50,000*l.* G. replied in his own name, signing his letter as manager, and giving a favourable account of Sir William Russell's responsibility. The plaintiff, in consequence of this letter, supplied Sir William Russell with goods, for which he never was paid, in consequence of his insolvency. The statement made by G. was false to his knowledge. The banking company had no knowledge, otherwise than through G., that such letter had been written, and gave him no express authority to write the letter; but the writing of such a letter was an act done within the scope of the general authority conferred on G. as manager:—Held, that the signature of G. to the letter could not be considered the signature of the banking company itself. Swift v. Jewesbury, 43 L. J., Q. B. 56; L. R. 9 Q. B. 301; 30 L. T. 31; 22 W. R. 319—Ex. Ch.

The signature of an authorised agent is not a sufficient signature within 4 Geo. 4, c. 14 (Lord Tenterden's Act), s. 6, whereon to charge a party making a false representation. Williams v. Mason, 28 L. T. 232; 21 W. R. 386.

C. M. and A. M. were trading as M. & Son. A. M., the son, wrote to the plaintiff a letter signed M. & Son, in which he represented G. to be solvent. This letter was shewn to and tacitly ratified by C. M., the father. G. proving insolvent:—Held, that, notwithstanding the ratification of the letter by C. M., the letter was not signed by the "party to be charged," within the meaning of the above statute, so as to make him liable for any false representation therein. Ib.

Joint and Several Guarantees.]—A. and B. gave a joint and several guarantee to be responsible for the printing account of a company; B. afterwards became the secretary of the company; A. was sued separately on the guarantee, and pleaded equitably, that he gave it on the faith that some other person than B. should be secretary, which the plaintiff well knew, and assented to, and that he had never consented that B. should be secretary:—Held, bad. Burridge v. Child, 10 Jur. (N.S.) 106.

A declaration by A. against B. upon a guarantee is supported by proof of a document drawn up in the plural number, and concluding, "as witness our hands," but signed by B. alone. Norton v. Powell, 4 Man. & G. 42; 11 L. J., C. P. 202.

A., as principal, and three sureties, B., C. and D., executed a bond to E. for the fidelity of A. in certain duties for which he was employed by E., the bond being in the following form: "We, A., B., C. and D., are held and firmly bound to E. in the sum of 50*l.* each, to be paid to E., his executors, administrators, and assigns, to which payment, well and truly to be made, we hereby bind us, and each of us, our and each of our heirs, executors and administrators, and every of them, by these presents":—Held, that the bond was the separate bond of each obligor, binding each to pay the sum of 50*l.* in the event of default by the principal; and that, therefore, the payment of 50*l.* by B., one of the obligors, after breach, was no answer to an action on the bond against another obligor, C. Armstrong v. Cahill, 6 L. R., Ir. 440.

A firm of bankers took a continuing guarantee for advances to a customer in the form of a joint and several bond from two sureties. One of the sureties died, and after notice thereof the bank made further advances to the customer:—Held, that the surviving surety was liable to the bank in respect of such advances. Beckett v. Addyman, 51 L. J., Q. B. 597; 9 Q. B. D. 783—C. A.

The defendants had given the plaintiffs a guarantee, which, after stating the consideration, was in the following form: "We undertake and guarantee that the 400*l.* and interest shall be duly paid to you when the acceptance arrives at maturity, in the proportion of 200*l.* each." This was signed by both the defendants:—Held, that they were not liable jointly for the whole amount. Fell v. Goslin, 7 Ex. 185; 21 L. J., Ex. 145.

Second tenant in tail joins in a mortgage and bond with the first, who receives the money lent:—Held, to be only a surety, and the real estate not liable in aid of the personal estate of the first, although he had joined in hopes to prevent a recovery. Robinson v. Gee, 1 Ves. 251.

Action by one of several Parties.]—E., as attorney for the executors of M., having sold an estate, to a share of the proceeds of which W. was entitled, as legatee of M., and the defendant claiming W.'s share of such proceeds under an agreement with W., the executors paid the amount to the defendant on receiving from him a guarantee, addressed to E., and also to the executors of M., to indemnify them and each of them against any action by W.:—Held, that they might sue on this guarantee without joining E. Place v. Delegal, 4 Bing. (N.C.) 426; 1 Arn. 185; 6 Scott, 249; 7 L. J., C. P. 227.

F. covenanted with the three plaintiffs to complete certain houses by a day fixed, on three several parcels of land mortgaged to the three plaintiffs respectively, and they covenanted to advance money to enable him to do so. In consideration of this arrangement the defendants jointly and severally guaranteed to the plaintiffs that F. should duly fulfil his covenant; and it was agreed that their joint and several liability should not exceed 100*l.* F. having made default:—Held, that the three plaintiffs were entitled to recover in a joint action on this guarantee, in respect of damages sustained by any one of them, to the extent of 100*l.* Pugh v. Stringfield, 27 L. J., C. P. 225; 6 W. R. 487. And see S. C., 4 C. B. (N.S.) 364.

Where a man covenants with two or more jointly, yet if the interest and cause of action of the covenantees be several, and not joint, the covenant shall be taken to be several, and each of the covenantees may bring an action for his particular damages, notwithstanding the words of the covenant are joint. Palmer v. Sparshott, 4 Man. & G. 137; 4 Scott (N.R.) 743; 11 L. J., C. P. 204.

By Partners.]—One partner has no incidental authority to bind another in the name of the firm by a guarantee of the debt of a third person; and therefore it is necessary in such case to give some evidence of authority from him who did not sign for his subsequent recognition. Duncan v. Lowndes, 3 Camp. 478; 14 R. R. 815.

But a subsequent parol acknowledgment of the other partner is evidence of such an authority. Ib.

A partner may give a guarantee where the obligation has reference to business connected with the partnership, and where the guarantee is notified to the firm, and they do not dissent from it. Nolte, Ex parte, 2 Glyn & J. 295.

A., B. and C. were railway contractors in partnership, and had entered into a contract to do certain work for a railway company. D. had entered into a sub-contract to do part of the work, for which part bricks were required; and it was necessary that D. should have coals to burn the bricks. In order to induce the plaintiff to supply D. with coals, A., without the previous knowledge or subsequent assent of his co-partners, entered into a guarantee, in the name of the firm, to secure the payment of the price of the coals to be supplied to D. by the plaintiff:—Held, that B. and C. were not liable on the guarantee. Brettel v. Williams, 4 Ex. 623; 19 L. J., Ex. 121.

By Directors of Company.]—Where some only of a body of directors have given a guarantee, they are primarily liable, unless the other directors adopt it. Dover, Deal, and Cinque Ports Ry., In re, Londesborough (Lord), Ex parte, 1 Eq. R. 271; 1 W. R. 363.

To Member of Firm.]—A guarantee for goods addressed to one of two partners may be declared on as given to both, if it appears that the partner to whom it was addressed did not carry on any separate business. Walton v. Dodson, 3 Car. & P. 162.

Where a guarantee was given personally and individually to one of several partners in a firm:—Held, that an action should be brought in the names of all the firm, as it appeared that the guarantee was intended for the benefit of all. Garrett v. Handley, 7 D. & R. 144; 4 B. & C. 664; 1 Car. & P. 483; 27 R. R. 405.

If a plaintiff has been applied to to lend money to A., and the plaintiff requests a firm of which he is a member to do so, and they advance the money, debiting A. in their books, the plaintiff cannot maintain an action against a third person, who has guaranteed the repayment of the money to be advanced to A. by the plaintiff. Ib.

A., a member of a firm of A. Brothers, of South America, went to Hong Kong, to enforce a debt due by B. & Co., of that place, to his firm. Upon B. & Co. being threatened with proceedings, they applied to C. & Co. for assistance. C. & Co. agreed to advance B. & Co. the money to pay their debt by remitting the amount to A. & Co., and afterwards, in pursuance of this agreement, and in consideration of A.'s not proceeding to sue B. & Co., gave an undertaking in writing whereby C. & Co. promised to remit the amount to A.'s agent in London at the expiration of six months, whereon A. gave B. & Co. a receipt in full for the debt due to the firm of A. & Co. C. & Co. afterwards repudiated their obligation to remit the amount to A. & Co. A. brought an action against C. & Co.:—Held, that the contract being entered into with A. personally, upon his undertaking not to sue B. & Co., constituted a personal agreement; and that A. was entitled to sue C. & Co. in his own name, without joining his partners in the action. Agacio v. Forbes, 14 Moore, P. C. 160; 4 L. T. 155; 9 W. R. 503.

Guarantee to Mortgagee—Right of Transferee of Mortgage to Sue—Amount Recoverable.]—In 1879 the defendants wrote to the plaintiff, by letter dated September 15: "Burton, Balderson. Dear Sir,—We hereby guarantee the safety of the above investments"; and by letter dated September 16: "We acknowledge to have received from you the sum of 710*l.* as under: a mortgage on the estate at T., the property of Mr. Burton, 360*l.*; a mortgage on the estate at F., the property of Mr. Balderson, 350*l.*" The plaintiff A. advanced to Burton on mortgage of the estate at T. the sum of 360*l.*, through the defendants. In 1891 the plaintiff A. conveyed and transferred to the plaintiff B., in consideration of 300*l.*, the benefit of the mortgage. In 1896 the plaintiffs sued the defendants to recover the sum of 360*l.* from them as guarantors of the mortgage:—Held, that the plaintiff B. could not sue upon the guarantee, and the plaintiff A. could recover only 60*l.* Sheers v. Thimbleby, 76 L. T. 709—C. A.

Guarantee to Inhabitants of Town.] — The defendant, on occasion of there being a great run upon a banking house, went to the bank and told the holders of notes issued by the bank, who were waiting for payment, that he had come to a resolution to support the bank with 30,000*l.*, at which the holders present were satisfied, and said they would take no more money than was necessary, and would keep the rest of their notes till they got again into currency; and afterwards the defendant signed the following written paper: "I do hereby authorise G. B. to assure the inhabitants of Pembroke and its vicinity, that I do hereby undertake to be accountable for the payment of the notes issued by the Milford Bank as far as the sum of 30,000*l.* will extend to pay":—Held, that, the bank having afterwards stopped payment, the defendant was not liable upon this undertaking to an action by an individual holder who had taken the notes after notice of such undertaking, but before the stoppage. Phillips v. Bateman, 16 East, 356—Ex. Ch.

Evidence as to.]—A letter addressed by the defendant to Mr. G., who was the plaintiff's attorney, stating that "the bearer, D. Williams, has a sum of money to receive from a client of mine some day next week, and I trust you will give him indulgence till that day, when I undertake to see you paid," and signed by the defendant, is evidence to charge him with the debt due from Williams to the plaintiff, upon parol proof of its amount, and that Mr. G., to whom it was addressed, was the attorney of the plaintiff, and received the letter in that character from Williams, the bearer, and not as the principal and creditor. Bateman v. Phillips, 15 East, 270.

—— Authority of Agent.]—The managing clerk of the firm, without the knowledge of B. and C., wrote letters to the plaintiff containing evidence of an account stated respecting the amount due under a guarantee:—Held, that, as the giving the guarantee was not a partnership business, the letters of the clerk respecting it were not evidence of an account stated as against B. and C. Brettel v. Williams, 4 Ex. 623; 19 L. J., Ex. 121.

Evidence that a son had in three or four instances signed bills of exchange for his father is sufficient, in an action on a guarantee, to warrant the production and reading an instrument which purports to be a guarantee by the father in the handwriting of the son. Watkins v. Vince, 2 Stark. 368.

4. When Concluded.

What is an Acceptance of Offer.]—The defendant being desirous of having goods shipped to R. & Co., his agents in India, applied by letter on the 9th July, 1868, to the plaintiffs, who were manufacturers of edge tools, carrying on business at Sheffield, asking the price of certain tools to be sent out to India to the firm of R. & Co. The plaintiffs in reply stated their lists of prices, and that their terms were cash settlement in England within a few weeks. On the 11th of the same month the defendant wrote to them as follows: "I shall be very glad that you should come to an arrangement with R. & Co. that they should be your agents there; but that requires direct correspondence between you and them. I am quite willing to guarantee the first shipment." The same day the plaintiffs inclosed a list of prices, and requested a confirmation of the order, which the defendant accordingly sent. The goods, amounting in value to 800*l.*, were accordingly shipped to R. & Co. in India. Other shipments followed. The sum of 300*l.* only having been paid by R. & Co. in respect of this first shipment, the plaintiffs in July, 1871, wrote to the defendant, "We sincerely hope it may not be necessary to act upon your letter of the 11th July, 1868." In two letters which the defendant subsequently wrote to the plaintiffs he never disclaimed his liability, but on the 26th September, 1871, he wrote, "As the event on which I expressed my willingness to guarantee never took place, it never became effective." R. & Co. having stopped payment, and there being 530*l.* still due upon the first shipment of goods, the plaintiffs sued the defendant upon his guarantee:—Held, that there was an express offer of a guarantee, and an intimation of acceptance. Sorby v. Gordon, 30 L. T. 528.

A written proposal to pay a moiety of the debt of another, if the creditor will, at a specified time of meeting, accept the proposal and discharge the debtor, is not binding unless the creditor accedes to the terms in writing. Gaunt v. Hill, 1 Stark. 10.

A written undertaking was given by the defendant to A. (to whose house the plaintiffs had declined to furnish goods on their credit alone) to the following effect: "I understand that A. & Co. have given you an order for rigging. I can assure you, from what I know of A.'s honour and probity, you will be perfectly safe in crediting them to that amount; indeed, I have no objection to guarantee you against any loss from giving them this credit," which paper was handed over by A. to the plaintiffs, together with a guarantee from another house, which they required in addition; and the goods were thereupon furnished:—Held, that the paper did not amount to a guarantee, there being no notice given by the plaintiffs to the defendant that they accepted it as such, nor any consent of the defendant that it should be a conclusive guarantee. M'Iver v. Richardson, 1 M. & S. 557.

Guarantee in the following form: "F. informs me that you are about publishing an arithmetic for him. I have no objection to being answerable as far as 50*l.*; for my reference apply to B." Signed G. T. B. wrote this memorandum, and added "witness to G. T., J. B." It was forwarded by B. to the plaintiffs, who never communicated their acceptance of it to G. T. In an action against the latter on a guarantee:—Held, that the plaintiffs, not proving any notice of acceptance to the defendant, were not entitled to recover. Mozley v. Tinkler, 1 C., M. & R. 692; 5 Tyr. 416; 1 Gale, 11; 4 L. J., Ex. 84.

In an action on a guarantee, the plaintiff gave in evidence a letter in the handwriting of the defendant, but without date, in which the latter stated, "I have no objection to guarantee the payment of the rent as far as each quarter during Mr. T. Want's continuance in possession"; he also proved that T. Want rented certain premises from him. This is not sufficient without shewing that the plaintiff accepted the defendant's offer. Symmons v. Want, 2 Stark. 370.

In an action on articles of agreement under which a banking company was to make advances to a firm, to be guaranteed by the defendants at a limited rate of interest, and in consideration of the guarantee the banking company was to release a debt due from the firm, the performance of the agreement extending over several years, a plea, that it was not executed on behalf of the company, "nor otherwise agreed to" by them (it appearing that the defendants brought it to the company, executed it, and left it with them, who had acted upon it by making the advances at the specified rate of interest, but had never executed it):—Held, that the plea was not supported, and that the company was entitled to recover. Liverpool Borough Banking Co. v. Eccles, 4 H. & N. 139; 28 L. J., Ex. 122.

Time for.]—In an action for goods sold, the defendant pleaded that the defendant and M. agreed with the plaintiffs that M. should give a guarantee for payment of the debt by instalments, and that the guarantee was given and was accepted by the plaintiffs in satisfaction. Replication denying the agreement, and the acceptance of the guarantee. It was proved by Mr. L., the plaintiffs' attorney, that he had asked him to propose to the plaintiffs to accept his guarantee, and that, Mr. L. having consented to do so, M. signed a guarantee, which was on the next day sent by Mr. L. to the plaintiffs, who kept it three weeks, and then returned it:—Held, that if the plaintiffs did not return the guarantee within a reasonable time, they must be taken to have accepted it; and that, unexplained, three weeks was an unreasonable time. Pope v. Andrews, 9 Car. & P. 565.

Representation as to Credit of Another—Evidence.]—C. representing that he was acting for the stepbrother of the other defendant, D., bought a business and lease of premises in his own name, and carried on the business for about three years, and then assigned to the defendant D., who referred the persons, the plaintiffs among others, who supplied goods on her orders, to C. for a reference, who certified that she was able to pay. C. then got D. to assign all to him by a bill of sale for an alleged debt:—Held, that the judge at the trial was right, on this evidence, in telling the jury that there was no evidence to fix C. with liability to pay plaintiffs for goods so supplied to D. Block v. Cox, 2 L. T. 517—Ex. Ch.

Mistake.]—Under a judicial sale of real estate in St. Lucia, L., professing to act as attorney for W. and wife, resident in France, purchased the estate on their behalf. The purchase-money was to be paid, according to the ordinance in force in that island, by instalments, and D. became surety, in solido, for payment of the second instalment. The deed for the purchase and the notarial deed were executed by one of the trustees, who was resident in the colony, and by such deed it was stipulated that the sale should be confirmed and ratified by the two trustees resident in England within six months. By a deed poll, the sale to W. and his wife was confirmed and ratified by the trustees in England. Default was made in payment of the second instalment. It was afterwards discovered that the power of attorney to L. was confined to W. alone, and contained no authority from his wife when the trustees discharged the wife from the contract:—Held, that D. was not liable as surety, as the sale professed to be to W. and wife by the three trustees, while in fact the sale was to W. only, and as such was an ineffectual and void sale. De Brettes v. Goodman, 9 Moore, P. C. 466.

The plaintiffs' agent entered into a contract to supply bricks to a builder at certain prices "to be taken within four months from the date thereof. Month's account, and bill at five months from date thereof, the due performance of this contract by" the builder being guaranteed by the defendant. This was signed by the defendant, but he and the plaintiffs' agent both understood and agreed that he was thereby guaranteeing only the acceptance of bills by the builder. The plaintiffs always believed the defendant had guaranteed the payment of the bills, and heard nothing of the agreement of their agent with the defendant. The agent had received no authority from the plaintiffs to assent to such a guarantee as the defendant intended, and the plaintiffs supplied the bricks on the faith of the guarantee, as they interpreted it:—Held, that the contract was a guarantee for the payment of these bills, and that this was not such a mutual mistake between the parties as to constitute an equitable ground of defence to an action upon the guarantee. Haymen v. Gover, 25 L. T. 903.

Subsequent Ratification.]—In an action for a balance due upon a note, it appeared that the amount had been advanced by the payee to one of the makers, on his undertaking that three other persons, of whom the defendant was one, would sign it with himself as his sureties. Two of the three did sign it, and the money was advanced. The defendant, when afterwards applied to, declined to sign it for some time, declaring that he had not authorised a note for so large an amount; but ultimately he signed it, and made payments upon account:—Held, that he was liable upon it for the balance. Dodge v. Pringle, 29 L. J., Ex. 115.

5. On Acceptance or Payment of Bills or Notes.

Effect of Acceptance.]—The acceptor of a bill of exchange knows that by his acceptance he does an act which will make him liable to indemnify any indorser of it who may afterwards pay it. The indorser is a surety for the payment to the holder, and, having paid it, is entitled to the benefit of any securities to cover it deposited with the holder by the acceptor. Duncan, Fox, & Co. v. North and South Wales Bank, 50 L. J., Ch. 355; 6 App. Cas. 11; 43 L. T. 706; 29 W. R. 763—H. L. (E.)

Extent of acceptance of bills by a surety. M'Fee v. Morris, 7 Jur. 387.

Proof or Guarantee by Parol.]—In an action on a bill of exchange, where the defendant had indorsed it as security for the acceptor:—Held, that, as the action was brought on the bill, and not on the guarantee, the agreement to become surety could be proved by parol evidence. Wilkinson v. Unwin, 50 L. J., Q. B. 338; 7 Q. B. D. 636; 46 L. T. 123; 29 W. R. 458—C. A.

A. wanting money, he and the defendant applied to the plaintiff to draw a bill, to be accepted by A., and indorsed by the defendant, and the defendant promised the plaintiff that she should not be called upon. The jury found that A. and the defendant were both principals in the transaction:—Held, that the plaintiff, having paid the bill, was entitled to receive the amount without proof of a promise in writing under the Statute of Frauds. Batson v. King, 4 H. & N. 739; 28 L. J., Ex. 327.

A., at the request of and on a verbal offer by B. to indemnify him against loss, joined with C. in a joint and several promissory note, which he was afterwards compelled to pay:—Held, that the offer to indemnify A. was not an agreement within the Statute of Frauds, and need not be in writing, and A., having afterwards become the executor of B., was entitled to retain the amount paid by him on the note as a debt due to him from B.'s estate. Wildes v. Dudlow, 44 L. J., Ch. 341; L. R. 19 Eq. 198; 23 W. R. 435.

A., as agent for some manufacturers, sold to B., who likewise acted as an agent, a quantity of shoes, and received bills of exchange in payment; B., being pressed to indorse them, refused, but wrote a letter to A., in which he inclosed the bills, and added, "that, should they not be honoured when due, he (E.) would see them paid":—Held, that this was a sufficient agreement to bind B. to pay for the goods in default of his principal. Morris v. Stacey, Holt, N. P. 153.

Discounting Bills.]—The plaintiff had contracted to supply goods to C. & Co., to be paid for in cash on each delivery. C. & Co. being desirous of obtaining the goods at a month's credit instead of cash, the defendant (who had an interest in the performance of the work upon which the goods were to be used) promised the plaintiff that if he would supply the goods to C. & Co., drawing upon them at one month, and would allow him (the defendant) 3*l.* per cent. upon the amount of the invoice, he would pay the plaintiff cash and take C. & Co.'s bill without recourse; in other words, buy the bill of him:—Held, that this was a contract to answer for the debt of another, and must be in writing. Mallett v. Bateman, 1 H. & R. 109; 35 L. J., C. P. 40; L. R. 1 C. P. 163; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 628; 13 L. T. 410; 14 W. R. 225—Ex. Ch.

M. drew bills upon the B. and A. Company; and a banking company, under an agreement with M., guaranteed the acceptors (also a company) that they would supply them with funds to meet the bills. S. discounted the bills, being informed by M. of the guarantee of the banking company, but he gave no notice to the banking company or to the acceptors. Afterwards the banking company and the acceptors suspended payment and were wound up. M. also executed a deed of composition with his creditors:—Held, that S. had no equity to rank as a creditor of the banking company in respect of the guarantee. Barned's Banking Co., In re, Stephens, Ex parte, L. R. 3 Ch. 753; 19 L. T. 198; 16 W. R. 1162.

"Renewal"—Variation—Discharge of Surety.]—The holder of two bills about to fall due agreed with the drawer (F.) to renew them if the testator guaranteed the new bills, and the holder wrote to the testator to that effect; the testator replied, "I hereby guarantee the payment by F. of two bills you intend to renew for him, one for 1,048*l.* 10*s.* 5*d.* and the other for 462*l.* 6*s.* 6*d.*, due respectively 28 inst. and 4 prox." Two bills were drawn by the holder on F. at three months, both dated the same day, for amounts differing from the former bills, but for the same amount in the aggregate. These bills were not met:—Held, that the word "renew" was not used in the technical sense by the testator, but that he meant to guarantee the payment of the amount of the old bills, and that nothing had happened to discharge him from his guarantee. Barber v. Mackrell, 2 R. 72; 68 L. T. 29; 41 W. R. 341—C. A.

Principal or Surety.]—Where two persons give a joint note for the debt of one, it is necessary, in order to give the other the rights of a surety as against the creditor, to show that he was only a surety, that the creditor knew him to be so, and that he accepted him as such. Strong v. Foster, 17 C. B. 201; 25 L. J., C. P. 106; 4 W. R. 151.

A person appearing on the face of an instrument to be a principal debtor, jointly with another, cannot at law set up, as against third parties that he was only a surety. Ib.

A., being a customer of a bank, got B. to join him in a note to the bank, and sent the note to the bank, intimating that he had got B. to join him in it, but the note was not entered in A.'s account. After it became due, A. had a balance at the bank larger than the amount of the note. In an action on the note, by the bank against B., he pleaded that he was only surety, and was accepted as such by the bank; that the bank gave A. time for the payment of the note, and forbore to enforce payment, and the bank might have obtained payment from A. if they had not given him time:—Held, that even if B. could say in equity that he was surety, the plea was not proved, that it did not appear that he was accepted as surety, that there was no evidence that time had been given to A. so as to discharge B., and that the bank did not, by refraining from appropriating A.'s balance to the payment of the note, discharge B. from his liability on it. Ib.

A bonâ fide holder of a bill or note cannot be prejudiced in the rights which he has, according to the terms of the instrument, by knowledge that the acceptor or maker is surety for another, and where there is no specific agreement at the time when he takes the instrument to receive it from the acceptor or maker as a surety only. Manley v. Boycot, 2 El. & Bl. 46; 22 L. J., Q. B. 265; 17 Jur. 1118.

If one maker of a note signs as surety only for the other, and the payee has notice of this when he takes the note as security for money advanced to the principal, he cannot give time to the principal without the consent of the surety. If he does so, the surety is discharged in equity, although the payee has never agreed to treat him otherwise than as a principal liable upon the note, for an equity arises from the relation of principal and surety, and notice thereof to the payee, and if the surety is sued on the note after such time given, he may set up the defence by a plea on equitable grounds. Greenough v. M'Clelland, 2 El. & El. 424; 30 L. J., Q. B. 15; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 772; 2 L. T. 571; 8 W. R. 612—Ex. Ch. S. P., Taylor v. Burgess, 5 H. & N. 1; 29 L. J., Ex. 7; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1317; 1 L. T. 12; 8 W. R. 27.

Action by payee against maker of a note. Plea, on equitable grounds, that the note was made by the defendant jointly with H. as the surety only of H., and was delivered to the plaintiff, and accepted by him, upon an express agreement that the defendant should be liable thereon as surety only for H., and that the plaintiff at the time the note was made had knowledge of the same having been so made by him as such surety; and that the plaintiff, without the consent of the defendant, gave H. time for the payment of the note:—Held, that the defendant was entitled to judgment, on the ground that the plea sufficiently stated that the relation of principal and surety existed between the defendant and the principal debtor inter se, and that the plaintiff had knowledge of that fact when the note was made and received by him, and when he gave time to the principal debtor. Pooley v. Harradine, 7 El. & Bl. 431.

One of the makers of a joint note may show that he was a mere surety for the other party, and so known to the plaintiff, the payee of the note; and that the plaintiff has taken a composition from the principal debtor. Hall v. Wilcox, 1 M. & Rob. 58.

A. and B. gave a joint promissory note, upon which money is lent by C. to them, and by them to D. B. becomes a bankrupt, and A. is obliged, after the bankruptcy, to pay the note:—Held, that he is not a surety for B., but that A. and B. are principal debtors or co-sureties, and therefore that A. could not prove for a moiety of the note against B.'s estate. Porter, Ex parte, 4 Deac. & C. 774; 2 Mont. & Ayr. 281; 4 L. J., Bk. 86.

Joint or Several Liability.]—A surety, who as such was indebted together with his principal upon a joint note, received from the holder a letter, stating that the holder was about to make the principal a bankrupt, but could not proceed without joining the surety, and asking whether the surety would join the principal in a fresh note payable jointly and severally. The surety's solicitor answered that the surety would in a post or two pay the amount and interest due on the joint security:—Held, that the contract was not changed, and that the surety had, neither at law nor in equity, rendered himself severally liable. Jones v. Beach, 2 De G. M. & G. 886; 22 L. J., Ch. 425.

Quære, whether the dicta in Thorp v. Jackson (2 Y. & Coll. 561) can be supported, and whether a joint loan creates in equity a joint and separate liability. Ib.

Appropriation of Balance of Current Account to Payment of Note.]—The plaintiffs lent 1,000*l.* to B., one of their customers, upon the security of a joint and several promissory note, payable on demand, made by B. and the defendant, a solicitor, and also upon the deposit of the deeds of a house of which B. was the owner, together with a memorandum signed by B. that the deeds were deposited as security for any general balance not exceeding 1,000*l.*, which might then or thereafter be due to the plaintiffs from him. The memorandum contained an undertaking by B. to execute a legal mortgage of the house, but this undertaking was not carried out. Subsequently, in March, 1875, an arrangement was entered into without the knowledge of the defendant, between the plaintiffs and B., whereby it was agreed that the plaintiffs should not press for repayment of the loan, but that B. should pay instead a higher rate of interest than that on which the loan was originally made, and this higher rate was afterwards debited to B. in his current account. The loan and current account were always kept distinct, and for some months subsequent to this arrangement the plaintiffs always had a balance exceeding 1,400*l.* to the credit of B. The plaintiffs having pressed for the execution of a legal mortgage with the usual power of sale, the defendant's partner, on behalf of and in the name of his firm, prepared a legal mortgage to the plaintiffs, another solicitor acting for B. This mortgage, which was executed by B., secured the payment to the plaintiffs of any sum not exceeding 1,500*l.* which might thereafter be due to the plaintiffs upon B.'s general account, with interest at 6 per cent., and also contained a covenant for payment three months after demand, and a power of sale in case of default. In an action brought upon the promissory note against the defendant, after default made by B. :—Held, that the defendant had signed and was liable upon the promissory note as principal, and that as there was no evidence to show that the plaintiffs had agreed to accept the defendant merely as surety, he was not entitled to be treated as such. York City and County Banking Co. v. Bainbridge, 43 L. T. 732 ; 45 J. P. 158.

The defendants signed a note as security for a loan from a club of which they were members. By the rules certain payments were made at every monthly meeting for particular purposes : —Held, that the defendants, who signed as sureties for the other defendant, had no right to set off these monthly payments by the principal, as made on account of the sum secured by the note. Wright v. Hickling, 36 L. J., C. P. 40 ; L. R. 2 C. P. 199 ; 15 L. T. 245.

Presentment Unnecessary.]—Where a party guarantees the payment of a promissory note, if it is not duly honoured and paid by the maker according to its tenor and effect, he is liable on his guarantee, if the note is not paid by the maker when due, without any presentment to him for that purpose. Walton v. Mascall, 13 M. & W. 452 ; 2 D. & L. 410 ; 14 L. J., Ex. 54.

A. guaranteed to B., that if B. would furnish C. with goods on credit, and draw upon C. from time to time for the price of them, A. would pay for the goods. B. supplied C. accordingly, and drew upon him, for the price of the goods, a bill which C. accepted, but did not pay at maturity. In an action against A. by B. for the value of the goods, he was not able to prove presentment of the acceptance to C. for payment, nor notice of dishonour to A. :—Held, that it was not requisite for B. to produce such proof ; for since A. was not a party to the bill, but only a collateral security, he was not entitled to take advantage of the provisions of the law merchant respecting transactions on bills of exchange or promissory notes ; nor could he set up any laches on the part of B. with respect to the bill in question, unless he had sustained special damage thereby. Hitchcock v. Humphrey, 6 Scott (N.R.) 540 ; 5 Man. & G. 559 ; 12 L. J., C. P. 235 ; 7 Jur. 423.

Interest.]—A party who guarantees the due payment of a bill of exchange by the acceptor is liable for interest upon it, if it is not paid when due. Ackerman v. Ehrensperger, 16 M. & W. 99 ; 16 L. J., Ex. 3.

Lending Acceptance.]—Where a plaintiff lent his acceptance to a defendant :—Held, that the term implied a contract of indemnity, and might be declared on as such. Reynolds v. Doyle, 1 Man. & G. 753 ; 2 Scott (N.R.) 45 ; 1 Drink. 1.

Bill Brokers—Custom as to implied Authority from Acceptor to make themselves Liable to their Bankers.]—It being proved to be the common and almost invariable practice of bill brokers in the city of London, not to indorse each bill of exchange which they have discounted for a customer when they rediscount it with their bankers, but to give to the bankers a general guarantee for all bills which they rediscount with them :—Held, that when an accommodation bill is drawn and accepted for the purpose of raising money for the drawer and the acceptor, the drawer in discounting the bill with bill brokers in the city of London has an implied authority from the acceptor to deal with them in the ordinary course of their business, and, consequently, that the bill brokers have an implied authority from the acceptor to make themselves liable on the bill under their guarantee to their bankers, and are, in the event of the bankruptcy of the acceptor, entitled to prove against his estate for what they have paid to the bankers in respect of the bill under their guarantee. Bishop, Ex parte, Fox, In re, 50 L. J., Ch. 18 ; 15 Ch. D. 400 ; 43 L. T. 165 ; 29 W. R. 144—C. A.

6. CONSTRUCTION AND EFFECT.

a. Generally.

For the Court.]—In an action on a guarantee, alleged to be contained in a letter and telegram in which there were no words of doubtful trade meaning, and the extrinsic facts not being in controversy :—Held, that the question, whether the words used amounted to a contract of guarantee, was for the determination of the court alone. Bank of Montreal v. Munster Bank, Ir. R. 11 C. L. 47.

Form of Instrument.] — The following words were held not to constitute a contract to guarantee : "Our friends H. and M. have purchased a cargo from G. Last year there was delay and trouble owing to bills of lading coming in different lots, and through more than one source, and without insurances being perfected. If you obviate a repetition of this now you will oblige us much. On presentation of cash order, and all documents at Union Bank, payment will be promptly made. Excuse this trouble." Ib.

A. & Co. bought certain wools of B. & Co., payable by the buyers' acceptance at eight months ; but before the sale was completed, B. & Co. requiring some security in consideration of 1*l.* per cent. obtained the following instrument from C., signed by him : "Gentlemen,—In consideration of 1*l.* per cent. I hereby guarantee the due and correct payment of half the amount of 136 bales of wool sold to A. & Co., as per contract," &c. Before the bill given to A. & Co. fell due, a fiat in bankruptcy issued against C., and shortly afterwards against A. & Co., and no dividend was declared under either fiat. The bill was duly presented, and remaining unpaid : —Held, that the instrument was a guarantee. Willis, In re, 4 Ex. 530 ; 19 L. J., Ex. 30.

Where A. wrote an order to B. to deliver two pipes of spirits to C., and it was objected that it did not amount to a guarantee, but was a mere order for the delivery of goods, without any promise to pay for them :—Held, that the effect of the order was either to make A. the principal debtor for or in the place of C., or to make him answerable for the debt, if C. should make default. Langdale v. Parry, 2 D. & R. 337; 1 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 70.

A recommendation by letter of the education of infants, with an assurance that the writer was willing to go himself towards its object as far as a certain sum, construed to be a promise to pay that sum for the purpose. Dowell v. Wilson, Coop. t. Brougham, 504.

Mortgage Debt—Statute of Limitations.]—In January, 1881, A. executed a mortgage to secure an advance of 2,000*l.* and interest, which contained the usual covenants for payment of the principal and interest. On 9th May, 1882, B. executed a document in which he was expressed to "guarantee" to the mortgagee "repayment of the sum of 2,000*l.* and interest for the same." A. paid off 600*l.* of the mortgage debt and also the interest down to July, 1891. The mortgagee in October, 1891, called upon B. to pay the balance remaining due with interest under his guarantee, and upon his refusal to do so the mortgagee in May, 1892, brought an action against him to recover the same:—Held, upon the construction of the document of 9th May, 1882, that B. made himself answerable for the repayment of the 2,000*l.* and interest in accordance with the terms of the mortgage; that as the mortgagee did not bind himself not to sue A., he must be treated as having agreed to abstain from suing for a reasonable time; that such time expired long before the commencement of six years before the action was brought, and that therefore the mortgagee's claim against B. was barred by the Statute of Limitations (21 Jac. 1, c. 16). Henton v. Paddison, 3 R. 450; 68 L. T. 405.

Letter by Solicitor—Personal Liability.]—The defendant, an attorney, wrote the following letter to the plaintiff: "Sir,—Mr. W. has handed me your letter of the 3rd respecting the non-payment of the bill for 91*l.* due on Saturday. I am now making arrangements for an advance to Mr. W., to enable him to pay this and other claims upon him; and if you will have the goodness to hold the bill for a few days, I shall be prepared on his behalf to take it up." The plaintiff had no further communication with the defendant, and on the receipt of the letter was not aware that the defendant was an attorney:—Held, in an action against the attorney as surety for the amount of the bill of exchange, that this letter did not render the defendant personally liable. Allaway v. Duncan, 16 L. T. 264; 15 W. R. 711.

The solicitor for the petitioning creditor, on the commission being superseded, writes to the bankrupt, "I am ready and hereby offer to allow and pay the costs" incurred by the bankrupt in petitioning for the supersedeas:—Held, that the solicitor was personally liable on this undertaking, and that the bankrupt might petition for an order on the solicitor to pay these costs, notwithstanding a subsequent commission had issued against him, under which he had not obtained his certificate, his assignees disclaiming all interest in the matter. Bentley, Ex parte, 2 Deac. & C. 578; 2 L. J., Bk. 39.

Agreement to Answer Draft of Principal—Liability on Draft drawn at request of Principal.]—An agreement by C. & Co. to answer the draft of S. for repairs, will not give any right to another person in whose favour a draft or bill is drawn on C. & Co. at the request of S. to proceed against C. & Co., there being no consideration between the drawee and C. & Co. Rattenbury v. Fenton, 3 Myl. & K. 505; 3 L. J., Ch. 203.

Semble, that if the agreement had gone on to state in whose favour the draft was to be drawn, there would have been an equity raised. Ib.

There is no consideration between the purchaser and the vendor's creditor to entitle the latter to recover from the purchaser the amount of repairs done to the subject matter of the sale. Ib.

Clause giving time to Makers.]—A document, in the form of a joint and several promissory note by a principal debtor and a surety for 5*l.* payable by instalments, with the proviso that, in case of default in payment of any one of the instalments, the whole amount remaining unpaid should become due, concluded with the following clause, namely: "Time may be given to either without the consent of the other and without prejudice to the rights of the holders to proceed against either party, notwithstanding time may be given to another":—Held, that the clause was a mere consent or licence that time may be given to the principal debtor, and that if time be so given the surety will not avail himself of that as a defence. Yates v. Evans, 61 L. J., Q. B. 446; 66 L. T. 532; 56 J. P. 565.

Contract that Notes be held as Security only.]—The payee of two promissory notes being about to sue the maker, the brother of the maker agreed to pay 200*l.* to the payee in trust for E., or 6*l.* 10*s.* per quarter, so long as the 200*l.* should be unpaid, so that the notes should be suspended and rendered inoperative so long as the brother continued to pay 6*l.* 10*s.* a quarter to the payee; and on payment of the 200*l.*, all claim on the notes to cease, and the same to be given up. The brother not having paid the 6*l.* 10*s.* to the payee for two quarters, but having paid these sums to E., the cestui que trust (as the latter admitted), the payee brought his action upon the notes against the maker:—Held, in error, reversing the judgment of the queen's bench, that the agreement could not be pleaded in bar to the action upon the note, but might be the subject of a cross-action. Held, in equity, that the agreement must be construed as a contract by the brother to provide for E. the annuity of 25*l.* or the gross sum of 200*l.*, as a substitute for the two notes, and by the payee that the two notes should thenceforth be only as security for the performance of such contract; and not as an agreement, under which the original right of the payee against the maker would revive on any failure of the quarterly payments by the brother; that the brother was entitled to the specific performance of the agreement in equity, not on the ground of the circuity of cross-actions which the rule of law occasioned, but on the ground that this court, by modifying its decree, could give to all parties the benefit of the agreement, whilst a court of law, being unable so to modify its judgment, could not give to one party the benefit of the agreement, without depriving another party altogether of such benefit. Beech v. Ford, 7 Hare, 208.

Deed of Surety—Effect of.]—The deed of a surety does not extinguish the simple contract debt of the principal. White v. Cuyler, 6 Term Rep. 176; 1 Esp. 200; 3 R. R. 147.

b. Continuing Guarantees.

Termination of—Effect of Death and Notice.]—A continuing guarantee is not ipso facto revoked by the death of the guarantor. But notice of the death of the guarantor and of the existence of a will, given to the holder of the guarantee, is constructive notice of the determination of the guarantee as to future advances. Coulthart v. Clementson, 49 L. J., Q. B. 204; 5 Q. B. D. 42; 41 L. T. 798; 28 W. R. 355.

A. desiring to become an underwriting member of Lloyd's, B. gave a guarantee to the committee of that body on behalf of A., in which he held himself responsible "for all his engagements in that capacity":—Held (affirming the decision of Fry, J.), that the guarantee was not determined by the death of the guarantor or by notice of his death. Calvert v. Gordon (3 M. & Ry. 124) followed. Lloyd's v. Harper, 50 L. J., Ch. 140; 16 Ch. D. 290; 43 L. T. 481; 29 W. R. 452—C. A.

A firm of bankers took a continuing guarantee for advances to a customer, in the form of a joint and several bond. One of the sureties died and, after notice thereof, the bank made further advances to the customer. Held, that the remaining surety was liable for such advances. Beckett v. Addyman, 51 L. J., Q. B. 597; 9 Q. B. D. 783—C. A.

A guarantee was determinable by six months' notice. The guarantor died, leaving as his executor the debtor on whose behalf the guarantee was given. The creditors to whom the guarantee was given continued to make advances to the debtor, knowing that there was no personal estate to answer the guarantee:—Held, that, under the circumstances, the creditors were not entitled to the benefit of the guarantee for their advances subsequent to the death. The death alone did not determine the guarantee. Harris v. Fawcett, 42 L. J., Ch. 502; L. R. 8 Ch. 866; 29 L. T. 84; 21 W. R. 742.

A. having guaranteed thus: "To C. D. I request you will credit E. F., and in consideration thereof I guarantee the running balance":—Held, that this promise was not revoked by A.'s death without notice to C. D. from the executor. Bradbury v. Morgan, 1 H. & C. 249; 31 L. J., Ex. 462; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 918; 7 L. T. 104; 10 W. R. 776.

When a guarantee is terminable by notice by the guarantor "or his representatives," but is otherwise silent as to its continuance after the death of the guarantor, his legal personal representatives are meant, and notice of the death of the guarantor given to the obligees otherwise than by such legal personal representatives is not sufficient to determine the guarantee. Coulthart v. Clementson (5 Q. B. D. 42) discussed. Silvester, In re, Midland Ry. v. Silvester, 64 L. J., Ch. 390; [1895] 1 Ch. 573; 13 R. 448; 72 L. T. 283; 43 W. R. 443.

S. guaranteed the account of T. at a bank by two guarantees, one for 150*l.*, the other for 400*l.* By the terms of the guarantees the surety guaranteed to the bank "the repayment of all moneys which shall at any time be due from" the customer "to you on the general balance of his account with you"; the guarantee was moreover to be "a continuing guarantee to the extent at any one time of" the sums respectively named, and was not to be considered as wholly or partially satisfied by the payment at any time of any sums due on such general balance; and any indulgence granted by the bank was not to prejudice the guarantee. S. died, leaving T. and another executors. The bank on receiving notice of his death, without any communication with the executors beyond what would appear in T.'s pass-book, closed T.'s account, which was overdrawn, and opened a new account with him, in which they did not debit him with the amount of the overdraft, but debited him with interest on the same, and continued the account until he went into liquidation, when it also was overdrawn:—Held, that there was no contract, express or implied, which obliged the debtor and creditor to appropriate to the old overdraft the payments made by the debtor after the determination of the guarantee, and that the bank was entitled to prove against the estate of S. for the amount of the old overdraft, less the amount of the dividend which they had received on it in the liquidation. Sherry, In re, London and County Banking Co. v. Terry, 53 L. J., Ch. 404; 25 Ch. D. 692; 50 L. T. 227; 32 W. R. 394—C. A.

—— Death of Joint Guarantor—Estoppel by Conduct.]—A joint guarantee is not determined by the death of one of the guarantors if the survivors give no notice that they will not be answerable. Three directors of a company gave a joint guarantee to a bank to secure the balance of the company's account to the amount of 2,000*l.* The company was afterwards wound up and reconstructed, but the bank was only told that the company had changed its name, and the account was continued as before:—Held, in an action by the bank to recover 2,000*l.* due on the account, that the guarantors were estopped by their conduct from denying that the guarantee remained in force. Ashby v. Day, 54 L. T. 408; 34 W. R. 312—C. A.

—— Withdrawal.]—Semble, that a general guarantee under seal may, under certain circumstances, be withdrawn upon the terms of paying all that may be due under it at the time of giving notice of withdrawal. Burgess v. Eve, 41 L. J., Ch. 515; L. R. 13 Eq. 450; 26 L. T. 540; 20 W. R. 311.

Upon a bond conditioned for a collecting clerk truly accounting for and paying over moneys received by him from time to time, and at all times during his continuance in the service, the obligor cannot discharge himself from further liability by giving notice on a particular day that from thenceforward he will not remain surety. Calvert v. Gordon, 3 M. & Ry. 124; 7 B. & C. 809; 7 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 77.

Nor can the personal representative of the obligor discharge himself by such notice. Ib.

A surety may protect himself, by stipulating in the guarantee that he shall be at liberty to determine his liability at the expiration of a specified time after notice. Ib.

A company, by deed, guaranteed the defendants, upon their gross annual returns, against loss in their business, during the term of two years, by purchasers of goods becoming bankrupt. The guarantee was subject to the following condition: "Every guarantee shall be made for a specified term, but all guarantees upon gross annual returns, floating risks, or rent, whatever may be the original term of the same, shall, from the expiration of such original term, be treated as a renewed contract of the like nature and conditions, unless either the member interested therein or the board of directors shall give two calendar months' notice of an intention not to renew the same" :—Held, that in the event of no notice being given, the guarantee became a renewed contract for any one period of two years from the expiration of the original term, and was not from time to time renewable. Solvency Mutual Guarantee Co. v. Froane, 7 H. & N. 5 ; 31 L. J., Ex. 193 ; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 899.

To an action on the deed of guarantee, the defendants pleaded that, at the expiration of the original term, the guarantee was rescinded : —Held, no objection to the plea that it did not state that the guarantee was rescinded by deed. Ib.

To an action on the agreement for the guarantee for nonpayment of the money falling due on the renewal of the original term, it is a good plea that the defendant had exonerated the plaintiff from giving notice of an intention not to renew, and the agreement was mutually rescinded, and that no claim had been made since the expiration of the original term in respect of the agreement as renewed. Ib.

A guarantee to secure moneys to be advanced to a third party on discount, to a certain extent, "for the space of twelve calendar months," is countermandable within that time. Offord v. Davies, 12 C. B. (N.S.) 748 ; 31 L. J., C. P. 319 ; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 22 ; 6 L. T. 579 ; 10 W. R. 758.

Discharge in Bankruptcy.]—The unconditional discharge of a debtor in liquidation does not release his sureties, although they do not assent to, but protest against his discharge. Ellis v. Wilmot, 44 L. J., Ex. 10 ; L. R. 10 Ex. 10 ; 31 L. T. 754 ; 23 W. R. 214. S. P., Jacobs, Ex parte, Jacobs, In re, 44 L. J., Bk. 34 ; L. R. 10 Ch. 211 ; 31 L. T. 745 ; 23 W. R. 251 ; and Glegg v. Gilbey, 46 L. J., Q. B. 325 ; 2 Q. B. D. 209 ; 35 L. T. 927 ; 25 W. R. 311.

The defendant gave the plaintiff a guarantee, to the extent of 200*l.*, but revocable at his option on giving him notice in writing ; and afterwards became bankrupt, and obtained his certificate of conformity, under the 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, but did not give notice to determine the guarantee : —Held, that the certificate was no bar to claims under the guarantee. Boyd v. Robins, 5 C. B. (N.S.) 597 ; 28 L. J., C. P. 73 ; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 715 ; 7 W. R. 78—Ex. Ch.

What are Continuing.]—P., who had annually given C. a guarantee expressly limited for a year, by each of which P. guaranteed the amount "for the time being due" from F. to C. for coals sold to him, gave C., during the currency of the last of these annual guarantees, a guarantee which, after reciting that F. was indebted to C. in 2,205*l.* 3*s.* 9*d.*, in addition to his liability upon two acceptances of P. for 750*l.* each, indorsed by F. to C., and that C. was pressing for the immediate payment of the 2,205*l.* 3*s.* 9*d.*, was as follows : "Now I do hereby in consideration of your forbearing to take immediate steps for the recovery of the said sum, guarantee the payment of and agree to become responsible for any sum of money for the time being due from F. to you, whether in addition to the 2,205*l.* 3*s.* 9*d.* or not" :—Held, that this was a continuing guarantee, and extended to a debt due from F. to C. for goods supplied after the guarantee had been given, and that there was therefore a good consideration for such guarantee. Coles v. Pack, 39 L. J., C. P. 63 ; L. R. 5 C. P. 65 ; 18 W. R. 292.

—— Amounts Due.]—A father gave his son a promissory note for 2,000*l.*, which was indorsed by the son, and discounted by a banking company, who took from the father an agreement under seal, that in consideration of their discounting the note, certain deeds of the father's deposited at the same time should remain a security for all the money due or to become due from the son to the company on any account whatsoever. At the date of the agreement the son owed the company 3,000*l.* upon a running account, and the amount was subsequently increased to 5,000*l.* The father having died :— Held, that the agreement was a continuing guarantee, and that the bank was entitled to prove against the father's estate, not only for the 2,000*l.*, the amount of the note, but for all sums due to them from the son. Burgess v. Eve, 41 L. J., Ch. 515 ; L. R. 13 Eq. 450 ; 26 L. T. 540 ; 20 W. R. 311.

Where a bond which, on the face of it, appears to be a simple money bond, is given to secure a sum certain with interest, it must be construed, so far at least as regards the surety, as given to secure the debt then existing, and not to cover floating balances. Walker v. Hardman, 4 Cl. & F. 258 ; 11 Bligh, 292. See Pease v. Hurst, 5 M. & Ry. 88 ; 10 B. & C. 122 ; 8 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 94.

Primâ facie, a continuing guarantee limited in amount to secure a floating balance is, as between surety and creditor, a guarantee of so much only of the debt as does not exceed the sum named in the limitation, for it is to be presumed that the surety does not contemplate the creditors allowing the debtor to become indebted to him beyond that amount. No such presumption arises where the debt, in respect of which the bond is given, is an ascertained amount exceeding the sum named in the limitation. Ellis v. Emanuel, 46 L. J., Ex. 25 ; 1 Ex. D. 157 ; 34 L. T. 553 ; 24 W. R. 832.

—— "Advances"—Parol Evidence.]—G., knowing that his son C., who was a stock-broker in London, required advances for the purpose of his business, gave to a bank a letter of guarantee, undertaking to guarantee any advances made to C. to the extent of 1,000*l.* After the death of G., the bank sought to prove on his estate in respect of four items :—1, a promissory note of C. to the bank for 440*l.* dated the 30th August, 1880, at six months ; 2, a sum of 32*l.*, balance due on a bill of exchange drawn by D., and accepted by E., dated the 6th October, 1880, at six months ; 3, a promissory note for 490*l.* of B. to the bank, dated the 18th October, 1880, at six months, and 4, 7*l.* 6*s.* 6*d.*, the overdraft of C.'s current account. The promissory note for 440*l.* had been renewed more than once, and this note, and the renewals, and the bill of exchange had been placed to the credit of C.'s account with the bank while current, and transferred to the debit side of his account when due, discount being charged in cases of renewal to C.'s account. C. drew upon the bank to the full amount for which he was thus credited. C.'s name was not on the bill of exchange, but the bank cashed it on his guarantee, and the proceeds were placed to C.'s credit. The promissory note for 490*l.* represented a note given to the bank by B. some years previously to the date of G.'s guarantee, the amount of which had been then advanced to C. No entry of this note or its renewals appeared in C.'s current account, although the amount of the discounts on it were charged:—Held, (1), that to aid in the construction of the guarantee, parol evidence was admissible of the circumstances under which it was given; (2), that under the circumstances, the guarantee was a continuing guarantee, extending to advances made after its date; (3), that "advances" was not confined to cash advances or overdrafts, but included the proceeds of bills or notes discounted by the bank, and placed to C.'s credit; (4), that the right of the bank to sue on bills and notes being suspended during their currency was not a giving of time within the rule which discharges a surety; but that, whether each renewal was equivalent to a fresh and independent advance or not, the amount advanced by the bank to C. was within the guarantee; (5), that the bank could not sustain against G.'s estate a claim upon the note for 490*l.* Grahame v. Grahame, 19 L. R., Ir. 249.

—— Until Notice.]—The plaintiffs (of whom D. had been in the habit of buying goods) having heard of a bill of sale given by D. to the defendants, declined to let D. have certain goods which he had then bought of them without a telegram from the defendants that they would be answerable for them. They sent such telegram, and D. had the goods, and in due time paid for them. By the post of the same day on which the telegram was dispatched, the defendants sent to the plaintiffs a letter, in which, after referring to the telegram, and stating that they had done business with D. for five years, and had never known anything dishonest in his transactions, they wrote, "What you have heard was done to protect him from a dishonest tradesman, and will in no way, we hope, be to the injury of his creditors. Having every confidence in him, he has but to call upon us for a cheque, and have it with pleasure, for any account he may have with you. When to the contrary, we will write you":—Held, that this letter was a continuing guarantee for the amount of goods D. should buy of the plaintiffs until they should hear from the defendants to the contrary. Nottingham Hide, Skin, &c., Co. v. Bottrill, 42 L. J., C. P. 256; L. R. 8 C. P. 694; 29 L. T. 134; 21 W. R. 739.

Action against one of the obligors of a joint and several bond. By the condition which recited an agreement by a banking firm, to discount bills, and otherwise to advance to one of the obligors any sums of money not exceeding at any one or more time or times 200*l.* upon security, the bond was to be void, if the obligors, or any or either of them, should pay to the banking firm, and any other person who should become a partner in the firm, all such sums not exceeding 200*l.*, as the firm or any future partner should advance the obligor on bills, &c., which he might from time to time draw upon or get discounted by them, within three months after notice to pay such sums:—Held, first, that the bond was a continuing security. Batson v. Spearman, 3 P. & D. 77; 9 A. & E. 298.

Held, secondly, that an averment that 200*l.* was due, and that notice thereof had been given to the defendant, was no notice to him to pay, and so the nonpayment by him no breach of the condition shown. Ib.

—— Until Payment.]—R. & Co. being about to open an account with the Union Bank, the defendant and one Black signed the following guarantee:—"In consideration of the Union Bank agreeing to advance and advancing to R. & Co. any sum or sums of money they may require during the next eighteen months, not exceeding in the whole 1,000*l.*, we hereby jointly and severally guarantee the payment of any such sum as may be owing to the bank at the expiration of the said period of eighteen months." 1,000*l.* was placed by the bank to the credit of R. & Co.'s drawing-account, and R. & Co. were debited with 1,000*l.* in a loan account. R. & Co. from time to time drew cheques against, and paid money to the credit of, their drawing account. Over 1000*l.* was thus paid in by R. & Co., and they were not debtors on the drawing account when it was finally closed. The loan account remained unaltered. The bank sued the defendant for 1,000*l.* on the guarantee, and after the commencement of the action Black paid the bank 500*l.* in discharge of his liability. The defendant did not plead this payment:—Held, that the guarantee was a continuing one, and that the defendant's liability was not discharged by the payments made by R & Co. Laurie v. Scholefield, 38 L. J., C. P. 290; L. R. 4 C. P. 622; 20 L. T. 852; 17 W. R. 931.

—— Limited Credit.]—Certain of the creditors of a company guaranteed personally to the company's bankers the drafts of the agent of the company to the extent of 1,000*l.*, and 1,000*l.* further, undertaking to provide the bankers with funds to meet the acceptances before maturity. The company kept a current account with the bankers, and the drafts of its agent were from time to time honoured and debited to this current account. One of the guarantors died, and his estate was under the administration of the court. The company's current account had been constantly overdrawn; at the date of the testator's death it was overdrawn to the amount of 1,605*l.* 18*s.* 6*d.*; and the company was now in liquidation:—Held, that the guarantees given were a continuing security not satisfied by the earlier credits in the current account, and that, therefore, the bankers were entitled to prove against the testator's estate for the sum of 1,605*l.* 18*s.* 6*d.* and interest at four per cent. from the date of the testator's death. Booth, In re, Browning v. Baldwin, 40 L. T. 248; 27 W. R. 644.

Other Cases.]—The defendant gave to the plaintiff, a cattle dealer, a guarantee in the following words:—"50*l.* I, J. M., of &c., will be answerable for 50*l.* sterling that W. Y., of &c., butcher, may buy of Mr. J. H.":—Held, a continuing guarantee to the extent of 50*l.*, as it appeared from the circumstances under which the guarantee was given that the parties contemplated a continuing supply of stock to W. Y. in his trade of a butcher. Heffield v. Meadows, L. R. 4 C. P. 595; 20 L. T. 746.

Where, by a written guarantee, A. becomes bound to B. for any debt C. may contract with him, not exceeding 100*l.*, the guarantee is not extinguished by one dealing between B. and C. to that amount, but extends to any debt of 100*l.* which C. may afterwards owe to B. Merle v. Wells, 2 Camp. 413.

A guarantee by the defendant to the plaintiff "for any goods he hath or may supply W. P.

with, to the amount of 100*l.*," is a continuing or standing guarantee to that extent for goods which may at any time have been supplied to W. P. until the credit is recalled, although goods to more than 100*l.* have been before supplied and paid for. Mason v. Pritchard, 12 East, 227 ; 2 Camp. 436 ; 11 R. R. 369.

B. being indebted to the firm of W. & P. gave them a memorandum of charge on leasehold premises, subject to a prior mortgage. The memorandum charged the premises "with the payment of 100*l.* for goods delivered, or to be delivered, to me by you to that amount." The prior mortgage was afterwards transferred to the defendant. Between the date of the memorandum of charge and the transfer of the prior mortgage, W. & P. had delivered goods to B., and received cash from him on account to 120*l.* ; but on the balance of account, just before the transfer the sum of 81*l.* 4*s.* 4*d.* was due to W. & P. :—Held, that the security given by the memorandum of charge of 100*l.* and payment thereon did not expire upon the delivery of goods to the amount, but was a continuing security. Weston v. Empire Assurance Corporation, 19 L. T. 305.

An undertaking to be answerable to a given amount for any goods supplied by A. to B., after goods to that amount have been supplied and paid for, still remains in force while A. supplies B. with goods on the same footing, until revoked by the surety. But as soon as A. alters the credit on which he supplies the goods to B., the surety is discharged. Bastow v. Bennett, 3 Camp. 220.

"I hereby agree to guarantee the payment of goods, to be delivered in umbrellas and parasols to I. and E. S., according to the custom of their trading with you, in 200*l.* ;" and the custom of trading between the plaintiff and I. and E. S. being to make up monthly accounts of goods delivered, and for I. and E. S. to give acceptances for the amount of each monthly account, is a continuing guarantee. Hargrave v. Smee, 3 M. & P. 573 ; 6 Bing. 244 ; 8 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 46 ; 31 R. R. 407.

"In consideration of your supplying my nephew V. with china and earthenware, I guarantee the payment of any bills you may draw on him on account thereof, to the amount of 200*l.*" is a continuing guarantee, and the defendant is liable upon it, although, after it was given, goods to a greater amount than 200*l.* have been supplied to, and paid for by, V. Mayer v. Isaac, 6 M. & W. 605 ; 9 L. J., Ex. 225 ; 4 Jur. 437.

The following guarantee, "In consideration of your agreeing to supply goods to K. at two months' credit, I agree to guarantee his present or any future debt with you to the amount of 60*l.* Should he fail to pay at the expiration of the above credit, I bind myself to pay you within seven days from the date of receiving notice from you," is a continuing guarantee. Martin v. Wright, 6 Q. B. 917 ; 14 L. J., Q. B. 142 ; 9 Jur. 178.

"In consideration of your extending the credit already given to my son, and agreeing to draw upon him at three months from the 1st of the following month for all goods purchased up to the 20th of the preceding month, I hereby, at your request, guarantee the payment, and agree to pay you any sum that shall be due and owing to you on his account for goods supplied," is a continuing guarantee. Hitchcock v. Humphrey, 6 Scott (N.R.) 540 ; 5 Man. & G. 559 ; 12 L. J., C. P. 235 ; 7 Jur. 423.

"In consideration of the plaintiff having agreed to stay all further proceedings at law against the defendant, I hereby undertake, and promise and agree with the plaintiff, that, if J. B. M. shall die in the lifetime of his father, I will, within six months after his father's decease, pay the plaintiff 165*l.*," is a guarantee continuing, and may be declared on as executory. Tanner v. Moore, 9 Q. B. 1 ; 15 L. J., Q. B. 391 ; 11 Jur. 11.

A bond conditioned to indemnify and save harmless the obligees, for "such sums as they in their banking business should within ten years advance or pay, or be obliged to advance or pay for on account of their accepting, discounting, &c., any bill of exchange, notes, &c., which A. should from time to time draw upon or make payable at their house ; and also other sums which they, within the period aforesaid, should otherwise lay out, pay, &c., on the credit of A., or on his account ; and also all such wages and allowances for advancing, paying, &c., such bills, &c., advances, payments, &c., engagements, and accommodations, not exceeding 5,000*l.* in the whole, together with interest on such advances, &c."—guarantees running accounts, and is not satisfied by the first payment of 5,000*l.* Williams v. Rawlinson, 3 Bing. 71 ; 10 Moore, 362 ; R. & M. 233 ; 3 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 164 ; 28 R. R. 584.

The following guarantee, "Whereas W. C. is indebted to you in a sum of money, and may have occasion for further purchases from you ; as an inducement to you to sell him such goods, and continue your dealings with him, I agree and undertake to guarantee you in 100*l.*, payable to you in default on the part of W. C. for two months," is a continuing guarantee. Allan v. Kenning, 2 M. & Scott, 769 ; 9 Bing. 618.

The defendant's son being indebted to the plaintiffs for goods supplied to the amount of 170*l.*, which was made up of several small monthly accounts, was pressed for payment or security. He thereupon paid 9*l.* in cash, and gave a promissory note for 61*l.*, and a guarantee by the defendant in the following terms : "In consideration of the credit given by the H. G. Co. to my son for coal supplied by them to him, I hold myself responsible as a guarantee for the sum of 100*l.*, and, in default of his payment of any accounts due, I bind myself to pay the H. G. Co. whatever may be owing, to an amount not exceeding 100*l.*" The supply of goods having been subsequently continued, and a further debt contracted, exceeding 100*l.* :—Held, that the defendant was liable to pay 100*l.* towards the price of the goods supplied to his son after the date of the guarantee. Wood v. Priestner, 36 L. J., Ex. 127 ; L. R. 2 Ex. 282 ; 15 W. R. 912—Ex. Ch. Affirming, 15 L. T. 317.

A guarantee in the following words, "I hereby agree to be answerable for the payment of 50*l.* for T. Lerigo, in case T. Lerigo does not pay for the gin which he receives from you, and I will pay the amount," is not a continuing guarantee. Nicholson v. Paget, 1 C. & M. 48 ; 3 Tyr. 164 ; 5 Car. & P. 395 ; 2 L. J., Ex. 18.

A written memorandum to guarantee the payment of A. to the extent of 60*l.* at quarterly account, bill two months, for goods to be purchased by him of the plaintiff, is not a continuing guarantee to that extent for goods to be supplied at any time to A. until the credit is recalled, but is applicable only to the first quarterly payment after it is given. Melville v. Hayden, 3 B. & Ald. 593; 22 R. R. 495.

A bond entered into by A. and B. to the plaintiff, to enable A. to carry on his trade, conditioned for the payment of all such sums not exceeding 3,000*l.*, which should at any time thereafter be advanced by the plaintiff to A., is not a continuing guarantee to the extent of 3,000*l.* for advances made at any time, but only a guarantee for advances once made to the extent of 3,000*l.* Kirby v. Marlborough (Duke), 2 M. & S. 18; 14 R. R. 573.

"I hereby agree to be answerable to K. for the amount of five sacks of flour, delivered to T., payable in one month, November 18th. T. G.," is a guarantee for flour, not exceeding five sacks delivered at one time, and not a continuing guarantee for parcels delivered at various subsequent periods, though not exceeding in the whole five sacks. Kay v. Groves, 6 Bing. 276; 3 M. & P. 634; 4 Car. & P. 72; 8 L. Amount of Liability on.]—See post, col. 1189.

c. Conditional Guarantees.

Nature of Condition.]—A bank having advanced certain sums to a company, made a further advance upon the personal security of three of the directors. Five of the guarantors for the amount secured by an earlier bond signed an agreement that they would join the three directors in guaranteeing repayment to the bank of the further advance in equal proportions with the three directors. One of the five who signed this agreement stated by his affidavit that his signature (if he did sign) was obtained "on the express engagement and understanding" that the agreement should be signed by all the guarantors for the sum secured by the bond:—Held, that the words, "express understanding," were utterly unmeaning, and that the court would never pay any attention to a statement that something was done on an express engagement, unless the engagement was spoken to in a manner which was admissible in evidence. Dallas v. Walls, 29 L. T. 599—C. A.

Prosecution of Servant for Embezzlement.]—By an agreement and a policy of insurance the defendants agreed to reimburse the plaintiff any pecuniary loss, to the amount of 1,000*l.*, which he might sustain by reason of any such fraud or dishonesty of A. in connection with his employment by the plaintiff as should amount to embezzlement, and should be committed and discovered during the continuance of the policy. The policy provided (among other things) "that the employer shall, if and when required by the company, but at the expense of the company, if a conviction be obtained, use all diligence in prosecuting the employed to conviction for any fraud or dishonesty as aforesaid, which he shall have committed, and in consequence of which a claim shall have been made under this policy, and shall, at the company's expense, give all information and assistance to enable the company to sue for and obtain reimbursement by the employed or his estate of any money which the company shall have become liable to pay":—Held, by Lords Blackburn and Watson (Lord Selborne, C., diss.), that the prosecution of A. for embezzlement was a condition precedent to the plaintiff's right of action upon the policy. London Guarantee and Accident Co. v. Fearnley, 5 App. Cas. 911; 43 L. T. 390; 28 W. R. 893; 45 J. P. 4—H. L. (Ir.)

Completion in accordance with Contract—Surveyor's Certificate.]—The respondent advanced money to the appellant on a guarantee to be repaid "on the completion of six houses in accordance with a contract between himself and T." One of the terms of the contract was that the houses were to be built to the satisfaction of a surveyor, and payment was to be made upon his certificate. No such certificate had been given. In an action on the guarantee, brought by the respondent against the executors, the jury found that, as a matter of fact, the houses were completed:—Held, that the respondent was entitled to recover, notwithstanding the absence of the certificate. Lewis v. Hoare, 44 L. T. 66; 29 W. R. 357—H. L. (E.)

—— Deviation.]—C. & Co., before their bankruptcy, guaranteed to A. the payment of 300*l.* for the erection of a sugar-mill for D. on the production of a certificate from the engineer that the mill was erected according to the terms of a specification; A. produced a certificate of the erection of the mill, stating, however, a deviation from the original plan, with the consent of D.; upon which C. & Co., without making any objection to such deviation, informed A. that it was not in their power to pay the money:—Held, that A. might prove the 300*l.* under a fiat issued against C. & Co. Ashwell, Ex parte, 2 Deac. & C. 281.

Condition that Notice of Dishonesty should be given.]—Two guarantors, by their agreement, contracted to guarantee the plaintiff against loss sustained from any act of fraud or dishonesty by a rate collector, or from any failure on his part to collect and pay into the bank of Ireland the rates to be collected by him, and produce to the plaintiff, as collector-general, the receipt of the bank for such payment, or from any failure on his part to deliver to the plaintiff true accounts of the moneys collected, and lists of the persons in arrear, "provided that the plaintiff should, within ten days after the discovery by him of any fraud or dishonesty of the 'said persons employed,' and of any matter in respect of which any claim may be intended to be made, give notice in writing, at the office of the society, as far as the case will admit, of all the particulars thereof; and after any such discovery, the guarantee herein contained shall, as to loss by any act of fraud or dishonesty, subsequent thereto, be at an end":—Held, that the proviso required notice to be given of such fraud or dishonesty only as would form the foundation of a claim under the guarantee and did not impose upon the plaintiff an obligation to give notice if he discovered that fraud or dishonesty had occurred on the part of the person employed, before the guarantee was entered into or the employment under himself commenced. Byrne v. Muzio, 8 L. R., Ir. 396.

Notice of Arrears.]—The defendants were sureties for the repayment, by weekly instalments, of money borrowed by A. of a loan society. One of the rules of the society provided "that if any member becomes more than four weeks' payments in arrear, the committee immediately inform the sureties of the same, and have power to institute legal proceedings against them." A. died, being more than four weeks' payments in arrear, but no application was made to the sureties until two years afterwards:—Held, that the rule was no part of the contract between the society and the sureties, and that the omission to give notice in pursuance of it did not afford an equitable defence to an action against the sureties. Price v. Kirkham, 3 H. & C. 437; 34 L. J., Ex. 35; 11 L. T. 314.

On Condition of Others joining.]—The defendant signed a guarantee upon a condition, orally agreed to, that M. should also sign as a co-security. M. did not sign, and subsequently, and without notice of the condition, the guarantee was signed by the plaintiff, who, having been obliged, upon the default of the principal debtor, to pay the whole debt, sought to recover contribution from the defendant in the ordinary course for money paid to his use:—Held, that condition was a good defence to the action. Barry v. Moroney, Ir. R. 8 C. L. 554—Ex. Ch.

A surety, who has contracted to become so on the understanding that he is to be co-surety with another, is wholly released in equity if the intended co-surety does not execute. Evans v. Bremridge, 2 Kay & J. 174; 25 L. J., Ch. 102; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 134. Affirmed, 8 De G. M. & G. 100; 25 L. J., Ch. 334; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 311; 4 W. R. 350.

In an action against a surety on an equitable plea, founded on the non-execution of the security by a co-surety:—Held, that there must be evidence of an agreement by the plaintiff with the defendant that such co-surety should execute, or that the defendant executed on the faith of the other's doing so, and where the proposal of another surety came from the plaintiff, and was not at the time made a condition by the defendant, the defence failed. Traill v. Gibbons, 2 F. & F. 358.

A surety, who has executed a bond on the faith of its being executed by the principal debtor also, cannot be released from his obligation on the ground that the principal has never executed it, if the principal has executed an instrument on which the surety may sue him and become a specialty creditor of his. Cooper v. Evans, 36 L. J., Ch. 431; L. R. 4 Eq. 45; 15 W. R. 609.

To a declaration stating that T. was the lessee of certain tolls, and that S. and the defendant agreed to join with T. in a bond, conditioned for payment of the rent under the lease; and alleging as a breach that the defendant refused to join T. in the bond; the defendant pleaded, first, that at the time of tendering the bond to him S. had not executed the same, nor was he present ready to execute it jointly with the defendant; and secondly, that S. died before the commencement of the suit, and that before his death the bond was not tendered to the defendant for execution, nor was he requested to execute it:—Held, that the pleas were bad. Horne v. Ramsdale, 9 M. & W. 329; 11 L. J., Ex. 100.

The defendant in two letters, addressed to C. J., the brother of the plaintiff's intestate, R. J., in the first of which he pressed C. J. to join, and to induce his brothers to join in a security for the repayment of money to be advanced to the defendant for carrying on a suit in chancery; and in the second he again urged, that they should lend their names for this purpose, and added, "I should consider it a matter of favour to myself, if your brothers will join, and I will see that they come to no harm." C. J., in consequence, joined in the security:—Held, that the letters amounted to an actual guarantee, on which the defendant was liable to the plaintiff; and not merely to a representation, with a view to the parties doing an act against the consequence of which they should afterwards be protected. Jones v. Williams, 7 M. & W. 493; 9 D. P. C. 252; 10 L. J., Ex. 120.

That Life Insurance should be Effected.]—By a mortgage deed between the mortgagor and two others, as sureties, and the mortgagee, after reciting that the mortgagor was possessed of certain hereditaments, and of a policy of insurance on his life for ——l., and that the mortgagee had agreed to lend him 1,000*l.* to be secured as therein provided, and that "upon treaty for the loan, it was agreed that the repayments should be further secured by the sureties joining in the deed"; the mortgagor mortgaged the hereditaments and the policy of insurance for ——l., and all moneys assured or to become payable under it, as security for the debt. There were covenants by the mortgagor and the two other sureties to pay the interest, and to pay the premiums on the policy and any sums necessary for effecting another, if it should become void. There was a power of sale by the mortgagee of the hereditaments and the policy. The mortgagor covenanted that if the mortgagee should be unable to execute the power of sale, or if the proceeds should not be sufficient, he would pay the deficiency to the amount of 300*l.* To an action on this covenant it was pleaded that no policy was effected; and that one of the sureties had not executed the deed:—Held, first, that it was a condition precedent that a policy should have been effected. Coyte v. Elphick, 22 W. R. 541.

Held, secondly, that in the absence of express provision it was not a condition precedent that the other surety had signed. Ib.

To supply Deficiency on "Sale" being completed.]—Where defendants, on consideration that plaintiffs would advance 1,200*l.* to a third person upon mortgage of certain leasehold premises, promised that if after any sale of the said premises duly made under the power of sale to be contained in the mortgage deed, the purchase-money should not be sufficient to satisfy the principal sum, interest, expenses, &c., they would immediately make good to the plaintiff such deficiency:—Held, that the word "sale" meant a sale completed. Moor v. Roberts, 4 C. B. (N.S.) 830.

To Pay out of "Receipts."]—A contract, by way of guarantee, to pay over to the creditor moneys received as the proceeds of the property of the debtor, is conditional, not only upon the receipt of money, the proceeds of such property, but on the receipt of such money properly payable to him, and does not apply to money received only subject to a prior claim of a third party, and which, therefore, is not payable to the creditor. Jupp v. Richardson, 26 L. J., Ex. 261.

Giving Satisfactory References.]—By a written guarantee in consideration that the plaintiffs would stay execution upon a judgment against T., until a day named, the defendant undertook that the balance of debt and costs should be paid to the plaintiffs on or before that day, and if not paid by T., the defendant undertook to pay it, and, in consideration of the undertaking, the plaintiffs agreed to stay execution until that day if the defendant gave M. satisfactory references as to his ability to pay the amount, but not otherwise; and if the references were not satisfactory, the guarantee to be given up within a week:—Held, that, assuming the plaintiffs might waive the stipulation as to satisfactory references, it being a condition inserted for their benefit, they could not enforce the guarantee against the defendant until they had given him notice of the waiver. Morten v. Marshall, 2 H. & C. 305; 33 L. J., Ex. 54; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 651; 8 L. T. 462.

Supply of a Certain Quantity of Goods.]—A declaration stated, that in consideration that the plaintiff, at the request of the defendant, would sell and deliver to S. on credit, goods of the price to an extent not exceeding 100*l.*, the defendant promised the plaintiff, that if S. did not pay for the same, he would do so on receiving three months' notice requiring payment. At the trial, the following guarantee was proved: "In consideration of your supplying S. with goods to the extent of 100*l.*, I undertake to pay you for the same, if he does not, on receiving three months' notice:"—Semble, that there was a variance between the declaration and the guarantee proved; but assuming the true construction of the guarantee to be, that the defendant was not to be liable until 100*l.* worth of goods had been supplied, the declaration might be amended accordingly. Dimmock v. Sturla, 14 M. & W. 758; 15 L. J., Ex. 65.

Advance—"Work to be done as Security."]—H. & Sons being engaged, under a written contract, in the erection of certain engineers' work for N., for which iron and brass castings were required, and Hill, the founder from whom the castings were procured, having a claim against H. & Sons to the amount of 218*l.* for goods already supplied, and refusing to continue to supply without obtaining payment or security for that sum, N. consented to give H. a guarantee in the following terms: "May 22, 1861. Mr. J. N. agrees to pay Mrs. Hill, ironfounder, on H. & Sons' account, 218*l.*, being the amount owing to her by them, together with interest, in six months from the above date, providing he has work done as security for the same." In an action by the representatives of Hill against N. on this guarantee:—Held, that, it was a condition of N.'s liability thereon, that, at the end of the six months, work should have been done by H. & Sons for him in respect of which a debt should be due from him to them; and that the plaintiffs could not recover without producing the contract between H. & Sons and N., under which the work was done. Hill v. Nuttall, 17 C. B. (N.S.) 262.

To induce Hill to go on with the castings in the meantime, the following memorandum was drawn up and signed by her, by H. & Sons, and by N.: "May 22, 1861. M. Hill agrees to make and deliver castings required for N.'s shed, as usual, and N. to pay for the same in monthly payments on H. & Sons' account:"—Held, that the representatives of Mrs. Hill were entitled to recover from N. the price of castings delivered to H. & Sons under this agreement, without showing that they were used by them in the work done for N. Ib.

Indemnity as to Costs—Further Proceedings.]—A plaintiff, having been sued by C. on a cause of action, as to which he would have had an action over against the defendants, and they against other parties, and C. having been nonsuited in the former action, but having tendered a bill of exceptions, the plaintiff entered into a written agreement with the defendants, reciting that C. would consent to forego further proceedings if he was not called upon for costs by the now plaintiff on the nonsuit, and that they should pay an equal proportion of the costs, and that he should indemnify them from all further costs:—Held, that this was conditional on C.'s going no further, for that otherwise there would be no consideration; and that C. having moved for a new trial, the defendants were not liable. Crick v. Warren, 2 F. & F. 348.

A declaration stating that the plaintiffs commenced an action against A. to recover a sum due to them from A., and another action against B., as a party liable in respect of the same debt; that in consideration that the plaintiffs would consent to stay the proceedings in the action against A. until a given day, and would proceed to trial with the action against B. at a certain sitting, or as soon after as the practice of the court would admit of, the defendant promised that he would indemnify the plaintiffs against all costs and expenses connected with the action against B., whether the same should be decided in favour of the plaintiffs or of B., and that he the defendant would pay the same costs and expenses when requested by the plaintiffs; that the plaintiffs did stay the proceedings in the action against A., and that they duly proceeded to trial with the action against B., and obtained a verdict thereon; that the verdict was afterwards set aside, and a new trial ordered, upon payment of costs by B.; that the plaintiffs again set down the cause for trial; that by the direction and at the request of the defendant, the record was withdrawn; and that the plaintiffs incurred and paid costs and expenses in connection with the action, and assigning for breach the defendant's refusal to reimburse them,—discloses a good cause of action, the final determination of the action against B. not being a condition precedent to the plaintiffs' right to sue for costs, and the consideration being satisfied by the plaintiffs staying proceedings against A. and going to trial against B. Wilson v. Bevan, 7 C. B. 673; 18 L. J., C. P. 244.

Forbearance to Sue.]—Where A. at the request of W. & D., in consideration of the plaintiff having furnished goods to them, and of the plaintiff forbearing to take proceedings against them, guaranteed to the plaintiff a certain sum on the 13th December next:—Held, that forbearance till the 13th December was a condition precedent to the plaintiff's right to sue A.; and that the guarantee was not general as to the time of forbearance, and that forbearance for part of the time gave the plaintiff no right of action. Rolt v. Cozens, 18 C. B. 673; 25 L. J., C. P. 254; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1073.

7. Consideration.

a. Generally.

Classification of Guarantees.]—Guarantees may be divided into two classes, the one in which the consideration is entire and the other in which the consideration is fragmentary, supplied from time to time, and therefore divisible. (a) An instance of the first is where a person enters into a guarantee that in consideration of the lessor granting a lease to a third person he will be answerable for the performance of the covenants. The moment the lease is granted there is nothing more for the lessor to do, and such a guarantee as that of necessity runs on throughout the duration of the lease. (b) In the other, where the consideration is supplied from time to time, it is reasonable to hold, unless the guarantee stipulates to the contrary, that the guarantor may at any time terminate the guarantee. Instances of the second class are more familiar. They are, where a guarantee is given, to secure the balance of a running account at a banker's, or a balance of a running account for goods supplied—per Lush, L.J. Lloyd's v. Harper, 50 L. J., Ch. 140 ; 16 Ch. D. 290 ; 43 L. T. 481 ; 29 W. R. 452.

Statement of.]—In an agreement in writing to pay the debt of another, the consideration must be either stated in express words, or to be implied with certainty from the terms used. Jarrett v. Williams, 5 B. & Ad. 1109.

—— Between Creditor and Surety.]—Undertaking in writing to guarantee the debt of another is sufficient, within the statute of frauds, without stating any consideration as between the creditor and the surety. Gardom, Ex parte, 15 Ves. 286.

Lease.]—A declaration set out an agreement, whereby the plaintiff agreed to let, and T. to take, a house at a yearly rent, and the defendant thereby also agreed to see the rent paid by T., or to pay it for him :—Held, that the consideration for the defendant's promise was the letting of the house, and that it sufficiently appeared on the face of the agreement. Caballero v. Slater, 14 C. B. 300 ; 23 L. J., C. P. 67.

Supply of Goods.]—An undertaking by A., at B.'s request, to supply such goods to C. as C. may require, and A. may think fit to supply, is not a sufficient consideration to support a promise. Westhead v. Sproson, 6 H. & N. 728 ; 30 L. J., Ex. 265 ; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 502 ; 4 L. T. 408 ; 9 W. R. 695.

A guarantee in writing to pay for any goods which the vendor delivers to a third person, is good within the statute, as containing a sufficient description, as well of the consideration of the promise (namely, the delivery of the goods when made), as of the promise itself. Stadt v. Lill, 9 East, 348 ; 1 Camp. 242. S. P., Warrington v. Furbor, 6 Esp. 89 ; 8 East, 242.

The plaintiff, being a merchant abroad, was in the habit of dealing with J. S., and having shipped goods for him to the amount of 1,026*l.*, and suspecting his solvency, requested the defendant to enter into a guarantee for the payment of the above sum ; when he wrote a letter addressed to the plaintiff, stating, "that J. S. having accepted a bill drawn on him by the plaintiff for 1,026*l.*, he gave his guarantee for the due payment of the same, in case it should be dishonoured by the acceptor" :—Held, that this was a sufficient agreement to bind the defendant for the payment of the goods. Boehm v. Campbell, 3 Moore, 15.

A memorandum in the following terms : "I undertake to pay R. J. the sum of 6*l.* 4*s.*, for a suit of clothes, ordered by D. P.,"—is a guarantee which discloses, on the face of it, a sufficient consideration to support the promise. Jarvis v. Wilkins, 7 M. & W. 410 ; 10 L. J., Ex. 104 ; 5 Jur. 9.

A declaration stating that, in consideration that A. would sell and deliver goods to B., the defendant promised A. to guarantee to him the payment of the amount of or the balance unpaid to A. for any goods then sold and delivered, and to be thereafter sold and delivered to, and of any money lent or to be lent to or paid for, C. by A., to the extent of 1,000*l.*, and that A. should be at liberty at any time thereafter to call upon B. for the payment of the 1,000*l.*, which might be applied by A. as A. thought proper, either in payment or part payment of any debt which might be due, or have been due to A., and should not have been paid by C., discloses a sufficient consideration for the promise. Boyd v. Moyle, 2 C. B. 644.

A guarantee as follows : "In consideration of your agreeing to supply S. with goods upon credit in the way of your trade (the amount to be in your own discretion), I hereby guarantee you the due and regular payment of such sum or sums as he may now or at any time, and from time to time hereafter owe to you. My liability under this guarantee is to be limited to principal sum in running account of 100*l.*,"—discloses a sufficient consideration. White v. Woodward, 5 C. B. 810 ; 17 L. J., C. P. 209 ; 12 Jur. 439.

Joint Sale—Part Payment.] — A declaration that B. and the defendant, joint owners of a horse and mare, agreed that the defendant should sell them, and pay one moiety of the proceeds to the plaintiff as the agent of B., who was abroad ; that the defendant sold the horse to C. for 60*l.*, and the mare for 30*l.*, and did not receive the price of the horse, but took from the purchaser of the mare a note for 30*l.*, which the defendant indorsed to the plaintiff, as the agent of B., and the amount of which was received by the plaintiff as such agent ; that the defendant afterwards requested the plaintiff, upon his own responsibility, to pay the defendant one moiety of the 30*l.* in the plaintiff's hands as such agent, and the plaintiff paid the defendant 5*l.* ; that the defendant again requested the plaintiff, on his own responsibility, to pay the defendant 10*l.*, the residue of the moiety of the 30*l.*, which the plaintiff was willing to do, provided the defendant, in consideration of the 5*l.* and the sum of 10*l.* when paid, would undertake either to deliver to the plaintiff a bill of exchange for 23*l.* 3*s.* (being B.'s moiety of the proceeds of the sale of the horse, less the forfeits in respect of the same) drawn by the defendant upon and accepted by C. at two months, or pay the plaintiff 23*l.* 3*s.* in cash within two weeks ; and thereupon the defendant delivered to the plaintiff the following undertaking : "In consideration of your having paid me 15*l.* on account of my share of the mare, I hereby undertake to deliver to you a bill for 23*l.* 3*s.*, drawn by me upon and to be accepted by C., at two months, or the above sum in cash within two weeks from this date :"—Held, that the declaration disclosed a sufficient consideration for the defendant's promise. Surtees v. Lister, 7 H. & N. 1 ; 30 L. J., Ex. 369.

Withdrawing Note.]—Action on the following guarantee : "You will be so good as to withdraw the promissory note, and I will see you at Christmas, when you shall receive from me the amount of it, together with the memorandum of my son's, making in the whole 45*l*." A promissory note for 35*l*., made by the defendant's son, and payable to the plaintiff, was proved at the trial. The guarantee was proved, and a subsequent admission by the defendant that he had to pay the plaintiff 45*l*. due from his son:—Held, that the consideration, viz. the withdrawing of the promissory note was sufficient to satisfy the statute of frauds, though the amount and maker's name were not specified, there being no evidence of any other note to which the agreement could apply. Shortrede v. Cheek, 1 A. & E. 57; 3 N. & M. 366; 3 L. J., K. B. 125.

Withdrawing Summons.]—A declaration stated that W. was indebted to the plaintiff in 236*l*. 14*s*.; that the plaintiff, according to the Bankrupt Act, 1849, filed an affidavit in bankruptcy against W., and caused a summons to be issued out of the court of bankruptcy, by which W. was required to appear before the court for the purpose of ascertaining whether he admitted the plaintiff's demand, or had a good defence, and which summons was pending at the time of the defendant's promise, and capable of being enforced; that in consideration that the plaintiff would withdraw the summons out of the court, the defendant promised and guaranteed to pay the plaintiff the 236*l*. 14*s*.; and that the plaintiff withdrew the summons out of the court of bankruptcy, of which the defendant had notice. Breach, nonpayment of the 236*l*. 14*s*. Plea, that the defendant had not notice that the plaintiff had withdrawn the summons:—Held, that the words "withdraw the summons" meant the taking some step whereby W. might be exonerated from attending the court, which must be making some communication to him on the part of the plaintiff, or that it meant the taking some step in the court of bankruptcy, in either of which cases notice was not necessary, and, therefore, that the plea was bad. Alhusen v. Prest, 6 Ex. 720; 20 L. J., Ex. 440.

On Contract of Service.]—A guarantee was given in the following terms: "I hereby guarantee to you the sum of 250*l*. in case Mr. P. should make default in the capacity of agent and traveller to you:"—Held, that the consideration sufficiently appeared on the face of the instrument. Kennaway v. Treleavan, 5 M. & W. 498; 9 L. J., Ex. 20; 3 Jur. 1034.

A guarantee in the following words: "Entertaining the highest opinion of C.'s integrity of character as well as propriety of conduct, we therefore hold ourselves responsible to you in 500*l*., for his discharging faithfully and honestly any duty assigned to or trust reposed in him; and we are ready to execute bonds to that effect, and for that or any larger amount that may be necessary, whenever you require it,"—expresses a sufficient consideration, by necessary inference, viz. the employment of C. Lysaght v. Walker, 5 Bligh (N.S.) 1.

An agreement in these words: "I agree to be security to you for J. C., late in the employ of Mr. P., for whatever (while in your employ) you may trust him with, and in case of default, to make the same good,"—discloses a sufficient consideration. Newbury v. Armstrong, 6 Bing. 201; 3 M. & P. 509; 4 Car. & P. 59; M. & M. 389; 8 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 4; 31 R. R. 386.

Engagement at Lloyd's.] — The defendant wrote and signed a letter in 1845, addressed to the managing committee of Lloyd's thus: "I engage to hold myself responsible for any debts which my son may contract in your establishment, connected with the same:"—Held, that no consideration appeared upon the face of the document, which was therefore void as a guarantee under s. 4 of the Statute of Frauds. Baring v. Grieve, 6 W. R. 466.

Assignment of Debts.] — An agreement as follows: "I undertake, on behalf of Mr. Peate (in consideration of Mr. Dicken having this day given me an undertaking to procure Mr. Ward's cheque or note in favour of Mr. Peate for 150*l*., on account of a debt due from Mr. Chambers to Mr. Peate), that Mr. Chambers shall have credit for that sum in his accounts with Mr. Peate, and that Mr. Ward shall stand in the place of Mr. Peate, to that amount; and I further undertake that Mr. Peate shall not personally dispute Mr. Ward's right to deduct that sum from the accounts owing by the colliers of the Black Park colliery to Mr. Chambers," shews a sufficient consideration moving from the plaintiff. Peate v. Dicken, 1 C. M. & R. 422; 3 D. P. C. 177; 5 Tyr. 116; 4 L. J., Ex. 28.

A., by letter acknowledged to have received from B. 321*l*. 5*s*. By a contemporaneous account taken between these parties, it appeared that 146*l*. 3*s*. 6*d*., part of the 321*l*. 5*s*., was a sum due from C. to B., which A. allowed to be transferred to the debit of his account with B. A. was sued by B. for money lent:—Held, that A. was not liable for the 146*l*. 3*s*. 6*d*., the arrangement amounting to a promise without consideration to pay the debt of another. French v. French, 2 Man. & G. 644; 3 Scott (N.R.) 121; 1 Drink. 159; 10 L. J., C. P. 220; 5 Jur. 410.

Taking Bills in Payment.] — The plaintiff having pressed W. for payment of a debt, the defendant, W.'s attorney, sent to the plaintiff a bill accepted by W. at two months, inclosed in a letter, in which the defendant said, "W. being disappointed in receiving remittances, and you expressing yourself inconvenienced for money, I send you his acceptance at two months." The plaintiff refused to take the bill, unless the defendant put his name to it; the defendant wrote on the back of the letter, "I will see the bill paid for W.":—Held, that he was responsible, and that the consideration for the guarantee sufficiently appeared. Emmott v. Kearns, 5 Bing. (N.C.) 559; 7 D. P. C. 630; 7 Scott, 687; 8 L. J., C. P. 329; 3 Jur. 436.

Where the defendant signed and gave a guarantee to the plaintiff, stating that his ship was chartered; and that the charterer having paid one-half the freight, and given the plaintiff his acceptance for the remaining half at four months' date, the defendant engaged to be accountable to the plaintiff for the amount of the acceptance, should it not be paid when due:—Held, that the consideration clearly appeared on the face of such guarantee, as the bill would not have been taken unless thus signed. Pace v. Marsh, 8 Moore, 59; 1 Bing. 216; 1 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 69.

When Void in Part.] — A contract to be answerable for a third person for goods furnished and goods to be furnished, which is bad in part for want of a consideration, and good as to the other part where the consideration is expressed, is not vitiated in toto by the bad part, but will sustain a count framed on the valid part of the undertaking, to which the objection does not apply. Wood v. Benson, 2 C. & J. 95; 2 Tyr. 98; 1 Price, P. C. 169; 1 L. J., Ex. 18.

Supplying Consideration by Parol Evidence.]—Since the statute 19 & 20 Vict. c. 97, s. 3, though parol evidence may supply the consideration for a guarantee, it cannot be admitted to explain the promise. Holmes v. Mitchell, 7 C. B. (N.S.) 361; 28 L. J., C. P. 301; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 73.

Where the expression "for goods supplied" was used in a written guarantee:—Held, that parol evidence was admissible to show that the parties meant not a past, but a future, supply of goods. Hoad v. Grace, 7 H. & N. 494; 31 L. J., Ex. 98; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 43; 5 L. T. 359; 10 W. R. 85.

Before 19 & 20 Vict. c. 97.]—By the word "agreement" in the 29 Car. 2, c. 3, s. 4, must be understood the consideration for the promise, as well as the promise itself; and, therefore, where one promised in writing to pay the debt of a third person, without stating on what consideration, parol evidence of the consideration was inadmissible; and, consequently, such promise appearing to be without consideration upon the face of the written engagement, it was nudum pactum, and gave no cause of action. Wain v. Warlters, 5 East, 10; 1 Smith, 299; 7 R. R. 645.

An agreement to pay the debt of another must be in writing, and contain the consideration for the promise, as well as the promise itself; and parol evidence of the consideration could not be received. Saunders v. Wakefield, 4 B. & Ald. 595; 23 R. R. 409. And see Goodman v. Chase, 1 B. & Ald. 297; 19 R. R. 322.

There must be a good consideration for a promise in writing to pay the debt of another, as well as for any other promise. Barrell v. Trussell, 4 Taunt. 117.

To constitute a valid agreement to answer for the debt or default of a third person within the statute, it was not necessary that the consideration should appear in express terms; it was enough if the memorandum was so framed that a person of ordinary capacity must infer from the perusal of it, that such, and no other, was the consideration upon which the undertaking was given. Hawes v. Armstrong, 1 Scott, 661; 1 Bing. (N.C.) 761; 1 Hodges, 179; 4 L. J., C. P. 254. S. P., Raikes v. Todd, 8 A. & E. 846; 1 P. & D. 138; 1 W. W. & H. 619; 8 L. J., Q. B. 35.

"As you have a claim on my brother for 5*l.* 17*s.* 9*d.* for boots and shoes, I hereby undertake to pay the amount within six weeks from this date—January 14, 1833":—Held, that no action lay on this undertaking, inasmuch as no consideration appeared on the face of the instrument. James v. Williams, 3 N. & M. 196; 5 B. & Ad. 1109; 2 D. P. C. 481; 3 L. J., K. B. 97.

So in a guarantee in the following form:—"1843, June 28th. Mr. P., I will see you paid for 5*l.* or 10*l.* worth of leather on the 6th of December for T. L., shoemaker. Signed, R. R.," the consideration did not sufficiently appear on the face of the guarantee. Price v. Richardson, 15 M. & W. 539; 15 L. J., Ex. 345.

Action on the following guarantee:—"In consideration of your having this day advanced to our client, Mr. V. D., 750*l.*, secured by his warrant of attorney, payable on the 22nd of August next, we hereby, jointly and severally, undertake to pay the same on default, &c. Dated the 20th of June, 1840." The declaration stated, that, in consideration that the plaintiff would, on the 22nd of June, 1840, lend to V. D. 750*l.*, on the security of a warrant of attorney, payable on the 22nd of August next, and would forbear and give time to V. D. until the 22nd of August, the defendant promised:—Held, that the instrument was sufficiently ambiguous to admit of evidence to show that the advance was not a past one, but was made simultaneously with the execution of the guarantee, and that no amendment of the declaration was necessary. Goldshede v. Swan, 1 Ex. 154; 16 L. J., Ex. 284.

A declaration alleged, that L. had requested the plaintiff to sell and deliver to him goods in the way of his business, and the plaintiff, at L.'s request, consented to do so, provided the defendant would guarantee the payment, of which he, before the making of his promise, had notice; that afterwards, and before L. was indebted to the plaintiff for any goods, and when no goods delivered by the plaintiff to L. were unpaid for, and no money was due from L. to the plaintiff on any account whatever, the defendant, by writing addressed to the plaintiff, promised in the words following: "I hereby guarantee the payment of any sum or sums of money due to you from L., the amount not to exceed at any time 100*l.*"; that afterwards the plaintiff supplied goods to L. for reasonable prices, amounting to 100*l.*, and thereby allowed L. to become indebted to him in 100*l.*; that L. had not paid, or the defendant:—Held, that the circumstances stated in the declaration might be looked at to explain the meaning of the instrument. Bainbridge v. Wade, 16 Q. B. 89; 20 L. J., Q. B. 7; 15 Jur. 572.

Held, also, that the writing so explained showed a good consideration for the defendant's promise, namely, the future advances by the plaintiff to L., so as to satisfy the statute of frauds. Ib.

"In consideration of Messrs. E. R. & Co. giving credit to Mr. D. J., I hereby engage to be responsible to and to pay any sum not exceeding 120*l.* due to Messrs. E. R. & Co. by D. J.":—Held, that the words "giving credit" might be shown, by extrinsic circumstances, to apply to a particular credit agreed upon; and that the guarantee, therefore, disclosed a good consideration, and was not bad for uncertainty. Edwards v. Jevons, 8 C. B. 436; 19 L. J., C. P. 50; 14 Jur. 131.

On the 20th of December, 1833, the following letter was written by the defendant in London to the plaintiff, who had succeeded T. M. in his business in Liverpool:—"When I had the pleasure of seeing you in London, I then told you I had not the least hesitation in becoming surety to you in the amount required for my brother, but, for a protection both to myself and him, I thought it highly necessary I should distinctly understand in what state his affairs were, in order that he may not, by any inadvertence, involve me, at which I am convinced he would grieve as much as myself. I still hold this mind, and before I sign any bond or instrument I must clearly see my way. In the meantime, in order to convince you it is furthest from my thoughts in any way to retard his business or prospects, I will hold myself responsible to you to the amount of 200*l.* in the event of his inability to meet it, with the full understanding that you are to consider this responsibility in the full and liberal light of the security I before entered into for him with Mr. M., your predecessor, and that, when a full statement of his affairs is laid before me, and such proving satisfactory, I then enter into the security you require; that the said sum of 200*l.* be void and of no effect, and not to be in force or added to the aforesaid security" :—Held, that this letter did not show a consideration in writing, as required by the statute of frauds, either in express terms or by necessary inference, and therefore that it was void as a guarantee. Bentham v. Cooper, 5 M. & W. 621; 9 L. J., Ex. 114.

So an undertaking as follows: — "Messrs. Morley & Co.,—We hereby promise that your draft on William Clarke, Son & Co., due at Messrs. Mastermans' at six months, on the 27th November next, shall be then paid out of money to be received from St. Philip's Church, say amount 174*l.* 13*s.* 5*d.*—W. Clarke, W. Boothby"—was void, no consideration appearing for Boothby's promise. Morley v. Boothby, 3 Bing. 107; 10 Moore, 395; 3 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 177.

The following letter, dated and signed by the defendant, and addressed to the plaintiff:—"I hereby agree to see you paid, within three months from date hereof, the amount of 5*l.*, due to you on account of G. M., jun.," was not sufficient to bind the defendant, the consideration for the promise not being sufficiently expressed. Clancy v. Piggott, 4 N. & M. 496; 2 A. & E. 473; 1 H. & W. 20; 4 L. J., K. B. 75. S. P., Jenkins v. Reynolds, 6 Moore, 86; 3 Br. & B. 14.

b. Past or Executory.

For Goods to be Supplied.]—M. supplied a son with some beer, and on his refusing to supply more without a guarantee, the son gave the following guarantee, signed by the father:—"I hereby undertake to pay you for all the beer supplied by you to the Star Brewery, 131, East street, Walworth, on the completion of the purchase, which will take place in a few days":—Held, that the promise was primâ facie a promise to pay for goods to be supplied. Mockett v. Ames, 23 L. T. 729.

"I hereby guarantee Mr. J.'s account with you for wines and spirits to the amount of 100*l.*" is a guarantee for an existing account, and not for a future supply. Allnutt v. Ashenden, 6 Scott (N.R.) 127; 5 Man. & G. 392; 12 L. J., C. P. 124; 7 Jur. 113.

A wife being entitled to separate estate, without restraint upon anticipation, in order to obtain credit for her husband, a trader, gave the following guarantee to a wholesale dealer:—"In consideration of you having, at my request, agreed to supply and furnish goods to W. M. C., I do hereby guarantee to you 500*l.* This guarantee is to continue in force for the period of six years, and no longer":—Held, that the guarantee only extended to the price of goods supplied after it was given, and not to debts owing to the guaranteed in respect of previous transactions. Morrell v. Cowan, 47 L. J., Ch. 73; 7 Ch. D. 151; 37 L. T. 586; 26 W. R. 90—C. A.

A guarantee was given as follows: "I. V. hereby engages to be responsible for liabilities incurred by M. and V. to the extent of 50*l.*" At the time the guarantee was given 41*l.* was due from M. and V. to the plaintiff:—Held, first, that the guarantee contemplated future credit, but only to such an amount as with the existing liability made up 50*l.* Chalmers v. Victors, 18 L. T. 481; 16 W. R. 1046.

And the amount having been paid off by M. and V.:—Held, secondly, that the guarantee did not cover goods subsequently supplied. Ib.

The plaintiffs (of whom D. had been in the habit of buying goods) having heard of a bill of sale given by D. to the defendants, declined to let D. have certain goods which he had then bought of them without a telegram from the defendants that they would be answerable for them. They sent such telegram, and D. had the goods and in due time paid for them. By the post of the same day on which the telegram was despatched, the defendants sent to the plaintiffs a letter, in which, after referring to the telegram, and stating that they had done business with D. for five years, and had never known anything dishonest in his transactions, they wrote: "What you have heard was done to protect him from a dishonest tradesman, and will in no way, we hope, be to the injury of his creditors. Having every confidence in him, he has but to call upon us for a cheque, and have it with pleasure for any account he may have with you. When to the contrary we will write to you":—Held, that the letter was a continuing guarantee for the amount of goods D. should buy of the plaintiffs until they should hear to the contrary. Nottingham Hide, Skin, &c. Co. v. Bottril, 42 L. J., C. P. 256; L. R. 8 C. P. 694; 29 L. T. 134; 21 W. R. 739.

A guarantee for the payment of goods supplied to a third person, given on the 7th, will cover goods contracted for on the 6th, but not delivered till the 7th, and then supplied on the credit of the guarantee. Simmons v. Keating, 2 Stark. 426.

Ambiguous.]—"In consideration of E. R. & Co. giving credit to D. J., I hereby engage to be responsible, and to pay any sum not exceeding 120*l.* due to E. R. & Co. by D. J.," is a good and binding guarantee, the words "giving credit" being equally applicable to future as to past credit. Edwards v. Jevons, 8 C. B. 436; 19 L. J., C. P. 50; 14 Jur. 131.

The defendant gave to the plaintiffs the following guarantee: "Gentlemen,—As Mr. D. informs me you require some person as guarantee for goods supplied to him by you in his business, I have no objection to act as such for payment of your account":—Held, that the expression "for goods supplied" did not necessarily import a past consideration, and ought to be read "for goods to be supplied." Hoad v. Grace, 7 H. & N. 494; 31 L. J., Ex. 98; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 43; 5 L. T. 359; 10 W. R. 85.

A guarantee was as follows: "In consideration of the credit given by B. to E., I hereby agree to guarantee the payment of all bills of exchange drawn by B. and accepted by E. Also I hereby agree to guarantee the payment of any balance that may be due from E. to B. This guarantee to include all bills of exchange now running as well as the balance of account at this day." It appeared that at the time of giving the guarantee there were bills running and an account due from E. to B., and future dealings between the parties were contemplated:—Held, that the guarantee extended as well to future as to past transactions. Broom v. Batchelor, 1 H. & N. 255; 25 L. J., Ex. 299; 4 W. R. 712.

Where the words of a guarantee were capable of expressing either a past or concurrent consideration:—Held, that the latter, which made the instrument valid, was to be adopted. Steele v. Hoe, 14 Q. B. 431; 19 L. J., Q. B. 89; 14 Jur. 147.

Construction of Several Documents.]—The plaintiffs, on the 24th November, wrote to the defendant, "We are doing business with Messrs. B., and we require a guarantee of 200*l.*, and they refer us to you for one." The defendant replied on the 27th November, "I have no objection to become security for Messrs. B., and subjoin the following memorandum to that effect:—'200*l.* I hereby engage to guarantee to [the plaintiffs] 200*l.* for iron received from them for Messrs. B., as annexed'":—Held, that the contract was to be collected from the three documents read together, and that the consideration for the promise was, that the plaintiffs would continue to supply iron to B. after the 27th November. Colbourn v. Dawson, 10 C. B. 765; 20 L. J., C. P. 154; 15 Jur. 680.

Mutual Obligation.]—P. being indebted to the plaintiffs, the defendants gave them the following guarantee: "In consideration of your agreeing, at our request, from time to time to supply on credit to P. such goods as he may require, and you may think fit to supply, we do hereby guarantee to you the payment of such sum as he now owes and may at any time, from time to time, owe to you":—Held, that the guarantee did not contain any binding agreement on the part of the plaintiffs to supply goods to P., and that, as they never did supply any goods to P. after the date of the guarantee, the defendants did not become liable to pay the existing debt of P. Westhead v. Sproson, 6 H. & N. 728; 30 L. J., Ex. 265; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 502; 4 L. T. 408; 9 W. R. 695.

Payment of Rent—Determination of Tenancy.]—M. being yearly tenant to the plaintiff on the terms of a written agreement, the defendant, in consideration of the plaintiff's continuing M. as such tenant, gave to the plaintiff a guarantee for "the rent of the Leese farm, in the occupation of M." The plaintiff afterwards gave M. notice to quit, but on the payment of arrears of rent withdrew it, before the expiration of the current year. The next year the rent became in arrear, and the plaintiff sued the defendant on his guarantee:—Held, that the old tenancy was determined by the notice to quit; that the guarantee applied only to the tenancy which existed at the time when it was given; and that the defendant was therefore not liable. Taylour v. Wildin, 37 L. J., Ex. 173; L. R. 3 Ex. 303; 18 L. T. 655; 16 W. R. 1018.

Advances—Past or Future.]—A father gave his son a promissory note for 2,000*l.*, which was indorsed by the son, and discounted by a banking company, who took from the father an agreement under seal that, on condition of their discounting the note, certain deeds of the father's deposited at the same time should remain as security for all money due or to become due from the son to the company on any account whatsoever. At the date of the agreement the son owed the company 3,000*l.* upon a running account, and the sum was subsequently increased to 5,000*l.* The father having died:—Held, that the bank was entitled to prove against the father's estate not only for the 2,000*l.*, the amount of the note, but also for all sums due from the son. Burgess v. Eve, 41 L. J., Ch. 515; L. R. 13 Eq. 450; 26 L. T. 540; 20 W. R. 311.

A guarantee that, in consideration of advances made and to be made by C. and D., bankers, or by any other persons of whom their firm might from time to time consist, in the way of loan, payments, discount, or otherwise, to F. H. and S. F., H. and G., jointly and severally, thereby guaranteed to C. and D. the repayment of the advances, and to indemnify them against any loss by reason of such advances; their liability not to exceed the sum of 1,000*l.*; the guarantee to be a continuing guarantee, and to be a security to C. and D. to the extent of 1,000*l.* for the whole of any balances which might from time to time, or at any time, become due to C. and D. or to the persons for the time being constituting the firm of the banking house, is a good and binding guarantee for both the past and future advances, such future advances having been made. Chapman v. Sutton, 3 D. & L. 646; 2 C. B. 634; 15 L. J., C. P. 166.

The defendant being agent to receive rents for A., undertook, upon A. giving him an authority to do so, to repay to the plaintiff out of the first money received on A.'s account anything the plaintiff might be pleased to advance to A. A. gave the defendant this authority: "Please to pay [the plaintiff] 20*l.* by four instalments, namely 5*l.* each quarter, from my estate, commencing from the 29th of September, 1852, until September, 1853; and should any money be owing by me to her after that time, please to pay same way, as above":—Held, that the authority was not confined to the payment of the 20*l.*, but authorised the payment of further advances made by the plaintiff to A. Horlor v. Carpenter, 3 C. B. (N.S.) 172; 27 L. J., C. P. 1.

A creditor cannot avail himself of a security obtained under an agreement for a further advance, which he afterwards refuses. Mayhew v. Crickett, 2 Swanst. 193; 1 Wils. Ch. 418; 19 R. R. 57.

The plaintiffs declared, that, in consideration that they would lend and advance 5,000*l.* to S. & Co., the defendant would be answerable for and repay them the sums so lent and advanced, and averred that they accordingly advanced the 5,000*l.*, by reason whereof the defendant became liable to pay. The defendant, at the request of the plaintiffs, on the 19th of May, 1815, wrote to them, stating that she would be answerable to the extent of 5,000*l.* for the use of the house of S. & Co. At the time this guarantee was given, S. & Co. were considerably indebted to the plaintiffs. On the 24th of the same month the guarantee was deposited with the plaintiffs as a security, with two bills amounting to 3,528*l.* 16*s.* 2*d.*, which, having been in their hands as securities before, were delivered and redelivered as a security for a new note of 6,500*l.*, and no money passed on that day:—Held, that, as between the plaintiffs and the defendant, no money was advanced to S. & Co. subsequent to the guarantee, so as to give it a retrospective operation. Glyn v. Hertel, 2 Moore, 134.

In August, 1848, the defendant gave the following guarantee to O.: "I am aware that my uncles, J. and J. F. K., stand considerably indebted to you for professional business, and for cash advanced to them, and that it is not in their power to pay you at the present; and as in all probability they will become further indebted to you, though I by no means intend that this letter shall create or imply any obligation, on your part, to increase your claim against them, I am willing to bear you harmless against any loss arising out of the past or future transactions between you and my uncles to a certain extent, and, therefore, in consideration of your forbearing to press them for the immediate payment of the debt now due to you, I hereby engage and agree to guarantee you the payment of any sum they may be indebted to you upon the balance of accounts between you, at any time during the next six years, to the extent of 1,000*l.*, whenever called upon by you to pay the same, and after twelve months' previous notice." At the date of the guarantee, J. and J. F. K. were indebted to O. in 513*l.* Subsequently O. advanced large sums of money to J. and J. F. K., and dealings went on till January, 1849, when the debt due from them to O. amounted to 2,184*l.*:—Held, that the guarantee was founded on a sufficient consideration, and that, further advances having been made, and time given, it bound the defendant. Oldershaw v. King, 2 H. & N. 517; 27 L. J., Ex. 120; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1152; 5 W. R. 753—Ex. Ch.

The consideration for the promise to guarantee was the keeping the account open, and making further advances. Per curiam, dissentiente Crompton, J. Ib.

—— Evidence.]—"Messrs. H., in consideration of your being in advance to L. in 10,000*l.* for the purchase of cotton, I do hereby give you my guarantee for that amount on their behalf. J. B.":—Held, that the words of the guarantee did not necessarily imply a past advance, and that the plaintiffs, on a trial, might have offered evidence to show that future advances had been contemplated. Haigh v. Brooks, 10 A. & E. 309; 4 P. & D. 288.

—— Implication.]—A. guaranteed to a banking company "all current obligations in their hands to which B. may be a party, and also all his future obligations and engagements that may come into their hands":—Held, that the latter part of the guarantee, as to the future obligations, implied of itself a consideration, and did not require the specific statement of one in the body of the guarantee, according to the statute of frauds; and that the company might, therefore, on the bankruptcy of A., prove for the amount of their advances to B. subsequently to the date of the guarantee. Littlejohn, Ex parte, 3 Mont. D. & D. 182; 7 Jur. 474.

—— Sufficiency.]—The following guarantee:—"We, the undersigned, hereby indemnify the National Provincial Banking Company to the extent of 1,000*l.*, advanced or to be advanced to R. P. by the company," R. P. at the time the guarantee was given being indebted to the bank in a sum exceeding 1,000*l.*, does not upon the face of it, or construed with reference to the extrinsic circumstances, disclose a sufficient consideration. Bell v. Welch, 9 C. B. 154; 19 L. J., C. P. 184; 14 Jur. 432.

"As you are about to enter upon transactions in business with Messrs. C. (with whom you have already had dealings), in the course of which they may be from time to time largely indebted to you, in consideration of your doing so, I hereby agree to be responsible to you for, and guarantee to you, the payment of any sums of money which that firm, whether it may consist of the same members as at present, or others, now is, or may at any time be, indebted to you, so that I am not called upon to pay more than 2,000*l.*," discloses a sufficient consideration, and covers both past and future debts. Johnson v. Nicholls, 1 C. B. 251; 14 L. J., C. P. 151; 9 Jur. 429. S. P., Raikes v. Todd, 1 P. & D. 138; 8 A. & E. 846; 1 W. W. & H. 619; 8 L. J., Q. B. 35.

A bond was vested in a trustee in trust as to income for a married woman for life, for her separate use, with remainder in trust for her issue; and in default of issue, in trust for such persons as the married woman alone, notwithstanding coverture, should by deed, or instrument in writing, to be by her sealed and delivered in the presence of, and to be attested by, two credible witnesses, appoint. The husband being indebted to his bankers, on the balance of an account current, the married woman deposited the bond with the bankers, with a letter signed by her to the effect, that, in consideration of the bankers paying, or having already paid, the cheques of the husband, or otherwise advancing him sums of money, she thereby guaranteed the repayment thereof; and that she deposited, as a collateral security, the bond, which she undertook to assign to the bankers on request:—Held, that the consideration was sufficient, and that the separate life interest of the wife was effectually charged; but that, the letter not having been executed and attested as required by the power, the court would not, under the circumstances, give effect to it as an appointment. Thackwell v. Gardiner, 5 De G. & Sm. 58. But see 19 & 20 Vict. c. 97, s. 3, by which the consideration for a guarantee need not be in writing.

On account of other Debts.]—Guarantee given by the defendant to the plaintiff as follows:—"In consideration of your having resigned the office of deacon at the Baptist church at C., I hereby agree to hold myself responsible to you for the payment of 150*l.* due to the Rev. J. E. by the Baptist church at C., and also the interest, payable every six months, for which you and P. M., deacons of the church, became responsible to the Rev. J. E. by an instrument dated September 25, 1840." That instrument was as follows:—"In consideration of your having resigned the pastoral office over the Baptist church at C., and the church having agreed at the earliest possible period to pay to you 700*l.*, with interest half-yearly until the same be paid, we, the deacons, agree to hold ourselves responsible to you for the carrying out of the said resolution." The 700*l.* had been reduced to 150*l.* by payments between 1840 and 1845. In 1842 a resolution was entered in the church books, and signed by the plaintiff, inviting the defendant to become pastor, on condition that he agreed to be legally responsible to the plaintiff, the present deacon, and any future deacon, for the payment of 500*l.* due to J. E. by the church, and also agreed that the trustees of a fund for the maintenance of the minister should pay to the plaintiff, or other deacon, 100*l.* yearly, for the purpose of liquidating the above debt to J. E., and that the interest of the debt be paid half-yearly from the church funds. The defendant signed a memorandum in the church books that he accepted the invitation on these terms. A declaration stated that, in consideration that the plaintiff, at the request of the defendant, would resign the office of deacon of the Baptist church at C., the defendant promised to hold himself responsible to the plaintiff for payment of 150*l.*, due to J. E. by the Baptist church at C., and interest, being the residue of the 700*l.* remaining unpaid, for which the plaintiff and P. M. had become responsible to J. E.:—Held, that the effect of the guarantee was correctly stated in the declaration, and that the funds for the support of the minister were intended to be included for the payment of the debt due to J. E. Steele v. Hoe, 14 Q. B. 431 ; 19 L. J., Q. B. 89 ; 14 Jur. 147.

c. Forbearance to Sue and Abandonment of Claims.

In What Cases.]—The plaintiff's agent wrote to the defendant : " I have this morning received the most peremptory instructions to settle this account. Be good enough to arrange something by to-morrow." The defendant in reply : " I undertake to pay 500*l.* on the account between my late brother, Mr. O. D. Hughes, and your client on or before this day three weeks." The plaintiff did not expressly agree to forbear suing, but did in fact forbear for three weeks :—Held, that the correspondence, together with the plaintiff's actual forbearance for three weeks to sue, constituted a good and binding promise to pay on the part of the defendant. Wynne v. Hughes, 21 W. R. 628. See Coles v. Pack, 39 L. J., C. P. 63 ; L. R. 5 C. P. 65 ; 18 W. R. 292.

An agreement to forbear for a reasonable time is a good consideration to support a promise to guarantee a debt due from a third person. Oldershaw v. King, 2 H. & N. 517 ; 27 L. J., Ex. 120 ; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1152 ; 5 W. R. 753 —Ex. Ch.

A testator appointed his son and three other persons his executors and trustees. The son disclaimed and renounced probate and afterwards purchased a portion of the testator's property. The other legatees raised a claim for losses incurred by the trustees, and the son's solicitor wrote on his behalf to the claimants agreeing to pay 300*l.* in satisfaction of the losses :—Held, that this agreement was not void for want of consideration. Orrell v. Coppock, 26 L. J., Ch. 269 ; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1244 ; 5 W. R. 185.

A surety, upon being informed that proceedings are contemplated against himself and his principal, states by letter his intention to pay the debt :—Held, after his decease, that the letter was a promise to pay ; and that the forbearance to sue was a sufficient consideration for the promise. Jones v. Beach, 21 L. J., Ch. 543.

Withdrawal of Petition.]—A guarantee was given in the following terms : " In consideration of your withdrawing the petition you have presented for winding up the A. company we agree to pay all the costs you have incurred in reference to the petition. We further agree to guarantee the payment to you within eighteen months, by the company or the liquidator thereof, of the principal of your debt of 722*l.*" To declaration on this guarantee, alleging as a breach the non-payment of the 722*l.*, the defendants pleaded that after the alleged withdrawal of the petition, and before a reasonable time had elapsed, and within the eighteen months, the plaintiff presented another petition for winding up the company, which prevented the collection of the assets of the company. At the trial the jury found that the presentation of the second petition did not prevent the collection of assets :—Held, that the withdrawal of the first petition was a sufficient consideration for both promises of the guarantors ; that the plea, as proved, afforded no defence ; and that on the finding of the jury the plaintiff was entitled to recover. Harris v. Venables, 41 L. J., Ex. 180 ; L. R. 7 Ex. 235 ; 26 L. T. 437 ; 20 W. R. 974.

Where Fraudulent.] — In an action on a guarantee for a debt due from S. to the plaintiff the promise alleged being that if the plaintiff would give S. a written acknowledgment that the plaintiff had no legal claim on S., the defendant would be answerable for the amount, with an averment that the plaintiff wrote and sent such acknowledgment to S. Plea, that S. was a trader within the bankrupt acts, and a prisoner in execution for debt, owing 300*l.* and upwards, and was desirous of petitioning the Court of Bankruptcy for an interim order of protection under 7 & 8 Vict. c. 96, s. 6, and in support of such petition of falsely representing himself to the court as owing less than 300*l.*, and that the defendant, at the request of S., gave the guarantee, with the intent on the part of S. and the defendant that S. should be the better able falsely to make such representation, and that the plaintiff knew the corrupt purpose for which the guarantee was given, and with such knowledge accepted it, and assented to write the acknowledgment for the purpose of aiding S. in making the false representation :—Held, on proof of the facts pleaded, that the plaintiff's acknowledgment was not a release under seal, and that the defendant was entitled to a verdict on the evidence. Coles v. Strick, 15 Q. B. 2.

Statement of Consideration.]—A declaration stated that L. made his promissory note payable to the plaintiff ; that the note being in the plaintiff's hands overdue and unpaid, " in consideration that the plaintiff would forbear and give time to L. for payment of the note, to wit, for a reasonable time, the defendant promised to pay the note in case L. should make default." It then alleged that L. made default, and that the defendant did not pay the amount of the note. At the trial it appeared that the defendant having agreed to guarantee the payment of the note by L., indorsed on the back thereof as follows :—" I guarantee the payment of the within note by L., on the 2nd November next." On that day the note being due and dishonoured, the defendant signed the following memorandum, addressed to the plaintiff :—" Sir,—I request you will hold over the promissory note in your favour, of L., dated 31st July, 1844, for 200*l.*, at three months ; and in consideration of your so doing, I undertake to continue in all respects my guarantee " : —Held, that the guarantee was defective, and that there was no evidence to support the declaration. Temple or Semple v. Pink, 1 Ex. 74 ; 16 L. J., Ex. 237.

B. and C., members of a railway committee, being indebted to A. in a large sum which A. sought to recover by contributions from the committee, and A., having brought an action against B., and having threatened to sue C., D. promised that, in consideration that A. would cease to prosecute the action brought, and would forbear to sue C., he, D., would pay a certain smaller sum to A. In declaring upon this promise it is not necessary to allege that D. was a member of the committee, or that A. had any well-founded claim against the committee, or that the actions brought and threatened related to the committee, or that the plaintiff was ready and willing to accept the smaller sum in satisfaction of the debt owing from B. and C. Empson or Tempson v. Knowles, 7 C. B. 651 ; 18 L. J., C. P. 222.

Abandoning Lien.]—A declaration stated that plaintiff was a shipbroker, and that he was employed by the owners of a ship to procure for them a charter of that ship upon the terms that he should be entitled to receive the freight, and thereout to satisfy himself his commission, and that he did accordingly procure a charterparty on certain terms; that the ship sailed, and performed her voyage and returned to England; that a change of ownership in some of the shares of the ship accrued before her return: that after her return the plaintiff was about to collect, and would have collected the freight, so as thereout to satisfy himself his commission; that the defendants were the brokers for the new owners, and it became desirable for them to obtain immediate possession of the ship, and they were, therefore, anxious that plaintiff should abandon his right of receiving the freight; that in consideration of the premises, and that the plaintiff would relinquish his right to collect the freight, the defendants promised to pay him his commission: that the plaintiff relinquished his right; but that the defendants would not pay him his commission:—Held, that this was an agreement by the defendants to pay in consideration of the plaintiff abandoning his rights arising from several matters stated by way of inducement, the inducement, as stated, being material; and that the declaration was not supported by proof of an agreement, in consideration of the plaintiff not asserting any lien on the freight, without its appearing whether or not he was entitled to such lien. Gull v. Lindsay, 4 Ex. 45; 18 L. J., Ex. 355.

In an action on a guarantee, the declaration alleged that, in consideration that the plaintiffs would give up their lien on certain goods of Y., and would take his acceptance for 140*l*., the defendant guaranteed to the plaintiffs payment of the same, and the plaintiffs accordingly gave up to Y. the goods, and took the acceptances of Y. for 145*l*.:—Held, that the declaration disclosed no cause of action. Pickles v. Thornton, 33 L. T. 658—C. A. And see cases ante, col. 1138.

Composition of Debts.]—A declaration stated that A., being indebted to the plaintiffs in 7,093*l*., and being unable to pay the amount, requested them to accept a composition of 10*s*. in the pound on their debt, and to give time for payment, to which they agreed upon having the same guaranteed, and that thereupon the defendant addressed a guarantee to them, to the following effect: "At the request of A., and in consideration of your agreeing to take 10*s*. in the pound for your claim on them, amounting to 7,093*l*., and giving them five years to pay off 3,546*l*., being one-half of the debt, or at the rate of 10*s*. in the pound for the whole, with interest on 3,546*l*., at the rate of 5*l*. per cent. per annum, payable half-yearly, the 3,546*l*. to be paid by the instalments and in the manner mentioned, or to be mentioned, in your agreement with A., I hereby guarantee to the extent of 500*l*. the payment by A. of 3,546*l*., with interest, as mentioned in the agreement"; that the plaintiffs and A. subsequently entered into a written agreement, by which the plaintiffs agreed to accept of A. the composition of 10*s*. in the pound, to be paid by stipulated instalments, on specified days, extending over a space of five years, in consideration of having the payment of the instalments guaranteed by the persons named in the schedule, and in which the defendant's name appeared as guaranteeing to the extent of 500*l*. The agreement contained a proviso, rendering the agreement void, and enabling the plaintiffs to recover the whole of the original debt, in case A. should make default in payment of any instalments on the stipulated days, or should commit any act of bankruptcy on which a fiat should issue. The declaration averred that one instalment became due, that default was made in payment thereof by A., that the plaintiffs applied to the defendant, but that he had not guaranteed the instalment, and that the same remained unpaid:—Held bad on general demurrer, on the ground that, upon the true construction of the guarantee, the consideration of the defendant's promise was that there should be an agreement between the plaintiffs and A., and that the agreement entered into by them did not comply with the terms of the guarantee. Clarke v. Greene, 3 Ex. 619.

Release, at what Time.]—In an action on a guarantee, the plaintiff, in support of an averment in the declaration, that he had executed a certain indenture, gave in evidence the following document, signed by the defendant: "In consideration of your having by indenture agreed to accept payment of the debt owing to you by A. by the following instalments, that is to say, 10*s*. in the pound, I promise to guarantee the payment of the instalments." There was evidence that when A.'s creditors received the guarantee, he signed the deed at the same time:—Held, that, under the circumstance of the case, the true construction of the guarantee was, "that if at some future time the plaintiff shall have released the debt, the defendant will guarantee the same to him"; and, therefore, that it did not prove the averment in the declaration. King v. Cole, 2 Ex. 628; 17 L. J., Ex. 283.

d. Other Cases.

Indemnity to Sheriff's Officer.]—A declaration alleged that the defendant issued a fi. fa. on a judgment against M., which the sheriff delivered to the plaintiff, his officer, to execute, and the plaintiff, at the defendant's request, seized goods, believing them to be M.'s, whereupon G. claimed them, and gave notice to the sheriff not to sell them; and in consideration of the premises, and that the plaintiff would pay no attention to the claim or notice, and would proceed to a sale, the defendant promised the plaintiff to indemnify him for so doing; that the plaintiff thereupon paid no attention, and sold the goods, and levied, and, at the defendant's request, delivered the balance to the defendant; that afterwards G., by reason of the premises, impleaded the plaintiff, together with the sheriff, in a county court, for seizing and selling, and recovered against the plaintiff and the sheriff the value of the goods, damages and costs, which the plaintiff being liable (as the defendant knew) to indemnify the sheriff, paid to G., but the defendant did not indemnify:—Held, a good declaration, for that consideration sufficiently appeared, and it was no objection that the plaintiff's disregard of the claim was not shewn with sufficient certainty to have been otherwise than an illegal act, or that the plaintiff, consistently with the allegations, might have sold in the mere performance of his duty, or that it was not sufficiently shewn that G. recovered solely by being entitled to the goods seized, and not by any irregularity in the plaintiff's acts, or how much damage accrued from the selling, and how much from the seizing, or that the action in the county court was against the sheriff together with the plaintiff. Elliston v. Berryman, 15 Q. B. 205.

Indemnity against Costs.]—An agreement by the plaintiff, an attorney, the defendant, and B., set forth, that, in consideration of B. having agreed to pay to the defendant his claim against B., and certain costs, out of the proceeds to arise from the recovery by B., in an action of B. against J., the defendant undertook to pay the plaintiff all costs incurred by him in prosecuting the action of B. against J., the plaintiff thereby agreeing with the defendant to bring the same:—Held, that, in an action on this agreement, the consideration was rightly described to be, that the plaintiff, at the request of the defendant, would, with B.'s assent, prosecute the action of B. against J. Dally v. Poolly, 6 Q. B. 494.

Indemnity against Debt of Wife.]—Covenant by a third person to indemnify the husband against wife's debt, a good consideration. Compton v. Collinson, 2 Bro. C. C. 377.

Giving Security without Payment.]—A plaintiff having given the defendant promissory notes, and a cognovit for 500*l.*, as a composition for certain claims, the defendant in consideration of the money so secured to be paid, engaged to indemnify him against certain liabilities:—Held, that the security, not the actual payment, was the consideration, and that the plaintiff might sue on the guarantee, though he had not paid the 500*l.* Ikin v. Brook, 1 B. & Ad. 124; 8 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 379.

Failure of Consideration.] — Upon the eve of a sale by the sheriff, A. (a stranger) agreed to guarantee the judgment debts, upon the judgment creditor consenting to postpone the sale under the execution. It turned out that the consent of another party was necessary in order to prevent the sale, and in consequence the sale took place. A. gave notice that the consideration having failed, the guarantee was at an end:—Held, that A. was not liable on the guarantee. Cooper v. Joel, 27 Beav. 313; 1 De G. F. & J. 240; 1 L. T. 351.

8. Extent of Liability.

Generally.]—A guarantee is merely a contract to indemnify upon a contingency; and is in the nature of a claim for unliquidated damages. Sampson v. Burton, 4 Moore, 515; 2 Br. & B. 89.

A surety bound himself jointly to a banking company in 500*l.*, the condition of the bond being that if the obligors should from time to time pay all and every such sum or sums of money as should become due to the bank for money advanced to surety's co-obligor, and pay interest at 5*l.* per cent. per annum for such sum or sums of money as aforesaid, to be computed as is usual with the banking company in ordinary banking accounts with them; and also the lawful commission, charges and expenses incident to or occasioned by the transactions or matters between the bank and the co-obligor, and should indemnify and save harmless the banking company from all actions, suits and expenses, and all liability whatsoever by reason of the transactions and matters; then the bond was to be void. Provided that the principal moneys to be ultimately recovered on the bond were thereby limited not to exceed 250*l.*, and that the obligors or any of them should not be liable to pay, by virtue thereof, any greater principal sum than 250*l.* But that the bond should be a continuing security to that amount, for the sums from time to time owing as aforesaid, exclusive of interest (to be computed as aforesaid), commission, costs, charges and expenses:—Held, that the surety was liable on this bond only for 250*l.* principal moneys advanced, and interest accrued upon that sum; but not for interest upon any further principal sum advanced by the bank. Meek v. Wallis, 27 L. T. 650.

Where a bond which on the face of it appears to be a simple money bond is given to secure a sum certain with interest, it must be construed, so far at least as regards the surety, as given to secure the debt then existing, and not to cover floating balances. Walker v. Hardman, 4 Cl. & F. 258; 11 Bligh, 299. And see Pease v. Hurst, 5 M. & Ry. 88; 10 B. & C. 122; 8 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 94.

Primâ facie, a continuing guarantee, limited in amount, to secure a floating balance, is, as between surety and creditor, a guarantee of so much only of the debt as does not exceed the sum named in the limitation, for it is to be presumed that the surety did not contemplate the creditor's allowing the debtor to become indebted to him beyond that amount. No such presumption arises where the debt, in respect of which the bond is given, is an ascertained amount, exceeding the sum named in the limitation. Ellis v. Emanuel, 46 L. J., Ex. 25; 1 Ex. D. 157; 34 L. T. 553; 24 W. R. 332—C. A.

Upon a contract to guarantee a bill of exchange for a given sum, the guarantor would not be liable to that extent on a bill given for a larger sum. Philips v. Astling, 2 Taunt. 206; 11 R. R. 547.

The defendant requested the plaintiff, by letter, to advance B. 2*l.* a week, and engaged "to pay him all moneys he might advance to B., in addition to the 24*l.* which he had already let him have":—Held, that the guarantee was to be read as if it had been "all such moneys," i.e. the 24*l.*, and the amount of the subsequent weekly sums of 2*l.*; and that it did not extend to any other sums he might advance over and above the allowance of 2*l.*, because this allowance was the subject-matter of the letter. Smith v. Brandram, 2 Scott (N.R.) 539; 9 D. P. C. 441; 2 Man. & G. 244; 5 Jur. 173.

Rateable Contribution.]—Sureties in a recognizance contribute in proportion to the amounts for which they were respectively originally bound. MacDonaghs, In re, Ir. R. 10 Eq. 269. And see post, cols. 1285 et seq.

Shares—Collateral Securities.] — The defendant and two others agreed to become sureties to the plaintiff for a debt of a fourth person, and all entered into a joint and several covenant for payment of 1,000*l.* and interest; one of the sureties gave on his own account an extra collateral security for the same debt, by assigning an annuity for 60*l.*, which was not paid, but accounted for. The principal debtor also gave a bill of sale to the plaintiff, under which he took possession, and which he afterwards gave up to one of the sureties on receiving bills for 200*l.* from him:—Held that the defendant, as one of the three sureties, was liable for one-third of the amount of the original debt and interest, notwithstanding the securities given and payments made by his co-sureties; the two other sureties having in effect paid their shares, the defendant was liable to the plaintiff for his share. Margrett v. Gregory, 6 L. T. 543; 10 W. R. 630.

For Agent—Construction.]—In construing an agreement in the form of a bond in which a surety became liable for the due fulfilment of an agent's duties therein particularly enumerated, a general clause in the obligatory part of the bond must be interpreted strictly, and controlled by reference to the prior clauses specifying the extent of the agency:—Held, accordingly, that moneys received by an agent on account of his employers during the time of his agency, but not in pursuance of the particular agency disclosed to the surety by the specified conditions in the bond, were not covered by the surety's obligation "that during the whole time the said J. D. B., the agent, shall continue to act as agent aforesaid, in consequence of the above-recited agreement, he shall well and truly account for and pay to us, the employers, all sums of money received by him on our account." Napier v. Bruce, 8 Cl. & F. 470.

For Apprentice.]—Father, on binding his son apprentice, gives a bond for 1,000*l.* for his son's fidelity; the son embezzles 200*l.*, which the father pays, but desires his master not to trust his son any more with the cash; the master does trust the apprentice again with the cash, and is negligent in calling him to account; the son embezzles 1,000*l.* more; the father is liable, but not to answer more in the whole than 1,000*l.*, including the first 200*l.* Shepherd v. Beecher, 2 P. Wms. 288.

A. puts his son apprentice to B., and gives bond for his fidelity, and takes a covenant from B. that he would at least once a month see his apprentice make up his cash. The apprentice embezzles the cash, and B. brings an action on the bond. On a bill by A. to be relieved:—Held, that A. should be answerable for no more than B. could prove his servant had embezzled in the first month after the embezzlement began. Mountague v. Tidcombe, 2 Vern. 518.

For Postmaster—Duration of Guarantee.]—A security bond for a deputy postmaster, for three years, shall extend further; but, semble, if the arrears had been paid up at the end of three years, the surety might have been relieved. Williams v. Jones, Bunb. 275.

Engagement at Lloyd's.]—Where a father, on his son's entering as an underwriter at Lloyd's, addressed to the managing body a letter whereby he held himself responsible for all his son's engagements in that capacity:—Held, that the guarantee extended to all the son's engagements as underwriter at Lloyd's, whether with members or outsiders. Lloyd's v. Harper, 50 L. J., Ch. 140; 16 Ch. D. 290; 43 L. T. 481; 29 W. R. 452—C. A.

The defendant guaranteed to the committee of Lloyd's the debts that S., who had applied to be admitted as a subscriber to Lloyd's, might contract as insurance broker, to enable him to act as such; S. took a partner H.: the defendant thereupon withdrew the guarantee, but on finding S. would cease to be a subscriber, wrote to say that the guarantee should continue in force on the same terms and conditions as therein mentioned; partnership firms are not admitted as subscribers of Lloyd's, but subscribers may have a substitute; H. was made a substitute for S.; their business of brokers at Lloyd's was transacted sometimes by S., sometimes by H. as his substitute, and was on behalf of the firm and its name; debts accrued on these transactions:—Held, that the guarantee applied to such debts. Leathley v. Spyer, 39 L. J., C. P. 299; L. R. 5 C. P. 595; 22 L. T. 821.

Guaranteeing Profits of Business.] — The vendor of a trading concern guaranteed the net profit of the business sold, and of another business, in which the purchasers were also engaged, at a certain specified sum:—Held, that the guarantee applied to the profits made by the two concerns, after deducting the interest allowed on the amount of further capital advanced by the purchasers for the purpose of carrying on the concern. Kirby v. Wright, 2 Myl. & K. 131; Coop. t. Brougham, 215.

Guaranteeing Freight of Two Ships—Loss of One.]—The defendant chartered two vessels of 300 tons each for a voyage from Ibralia to London, with full cargoes of petroleum, at 84*s.* per ton. In consequence of their stores at Ibralia having been destroyed by fire, he was unable to furnish any oil; and the owners agreed to cancel the charterparties and to procure other cargoes, upon the defendant guaranteeing each vessel a sum of 900*l.* gross freight home. The homeward cargoes shipped under the substituted contract fell short of the guaranteed sum for each vessel by 343*l.* 6*s.* One of the vessels arrived in safety, the other was lost:—Held, that the contract was broken at the moment of the shipment of the homeward cargo, and consequently that the owners were entitled to recover the deficiency in respect of each vessel, notwithstanding the loss of one. Carr v. Wallachian Petroleum Co., 36 L. J., C. P. 236; L. R. 2 C. P. 468; 16 L. T. 460; 15 W. R. 874—Ex. Ch.

Guaranteeing Payment of Goods—At what Price.]—A surety agreed to guarantee the payment of goods supplied by the plaintiff to B. under a contract with government. At the time the guarantee was given negotiations only were on foot, but soon after the government contract was made with B., and also the sub-contract between B. and the plaintiff. Each contract provided that the articles were to be supplied within given periods; but, in point of fact, the articles were not supplied by the plaintiff to B., or by B. to the government, until long after the fixed period. The government, however, had the option, and waived the delay, and paid B. the contract price. B., not having paid the plaintiff, the plaintiff sued the surety on the guarantee, and the surety sought to shew that the price given by B. in the contract with the plaintiff was a high one, on account of the shortness of the time within which the goods were to be delivered, and that the market price at the time the goods were to be delivered was much lower, and he claimed to set off the difference between the two prices:—Held, that the surety could not set off the difference in price. Oastler v. Pound, 7 L. T. 852; 11 W. R. 518.

Held, also, that the goods were supplied under the original contract, and that the acceptance after the delay did not constitute a new contract, and that the surety was liable. Ib.

Upon Bankruptcy of Principal — Rateable Deduction.]—When prior to the commencement of an action against a surety, whose liability is limited to a portion only of the principal debt, the plaintiff receives dividends from the estate of the principal debtor, under proceedings in liquidation, amounting to 9*s.* 2*d.* in the pound on his entire debts, he is not entitled to recover in such action the whole amount of the surety's liability, but only the balance or difference, after deducting the amount of a dividend of 9*s.* 2*d.* in the pound thereon. Ellis v. Wilmot, 44 L. J., Ex. 10; L. R. 10 Ex. 10; 31 L. T. 574; 23 W. R. 214.

When a surety has become a party to a bond conditioned for payment of the debt and interest, with a proviso that he shall not be liable for more than a certain sum, and the creditor, under a liquidation of the affairs of the debtor, receives a dividend on the whole of the debt and interest then due, the right of the surety to have a proportion of those dividends applied in reduction of the claim against him depends upon whether the bond amounts to a guarantee of the whole debt, with a limitation of the sum which he is to be called upon to pay, or to a guarantee of a part only of the debt. In the former case he is liable for the whole unpaid balance to the extent of the sum limited in the proviso. In the latter case he is entitled to a deduction pro ratâ in respect of the dividends. Ellis v. Emanuel, 46 L. J., Ex. 25; 1 Ex. D. 157; 34 L. T. 553; 24 W. R. 832—C. A.

Where a debt having been partly guaranteed, the debtor becomes a bankrupt, and the creditor proves for a larger amount than that covered by the guarantee, the dividends must be applied in ease of the guarantor, rateably to the whole debt proved. Raikes v. Todd, 1 P. & D. 138; 8 A. & E. 846; 1 W. W. & H. 619; 8 L. J., Q. B. 35.

A bill having been accepted by a banking company, and indorsed to a holder for value, the company passed a resolution to wind up voluntarily, and the winding-up was ordered to be continued under supervision. After this date the holder received from the drawer a composition of 8*s.* 6*d.* in the pound on the amount of the bills. After this payment the holder lodged a claim with the liquidator for the whole amount of the bills:—Held, that he was entitled to be admitted to prove only for the balance, after deducting the part payment. Oriental Commercial Bank, In re. Maxondoff, Ex parte, L. R. 6 Eq. 582; 18 L. T. 450; 16 W. R. 784.

H. gave to B. a guarantee: "I hereby guarantee to you the payment of all goods you may supply to E. H., but so as my liability to you under this or any other guarantee shall not at any time exceed 250*l.*" L. gave a similar guarantee. B. supplied goods to E. H. to the amount of 657*l.* E. H. then became bankrupt. B. proved for the whole sum, and then called on the guarantors, who paid him 250*l.* each. B. having afterwards received a dividend of 2*s.* 1*d.* in the pound on the 657*l.*:—Held, that each of the guarantors was entitled to a part of this dividend, bearing to the whole the same proportion as 250*l.* to 657*l.* Hobson v. Bass, L. R. 6 Ch. 792; 19 W. R. 992.

The obligee of a bond given by principal and surety, conditioned for the payment of money by instalments, who has proved under a commission of bankruptcy against the principal the whole debt, and received a dividend thereon of 2*s.* 7*d.* in the pound, may recover against the surety an instalment due, making a deduction of 2*s.* 7*d.* on the amount of such instalments; and the surety is not entitled to have the whole dividend applied in discharge of that instalment, but only rateably in part payment of each instalment as it becomes due. Martin v. Brecknell, 2 M. & S. 39; 14 R. R. 579; 2 Rose, 156. S. P., London Assurance Co. v. Buckle, 4 Moore, 153.

"In consideration of your giving credit in the way of your trade to L. M., I guarantee to you the payment of any debt which he may contract with you from time to time as a running balance of account, to any amount not exceeding 400*l.*" The plaintiff, on the faith of this guarantee supplied L. M. with goods to the amount of 800*l.*; and he afterwards, being in insolvent circumstances, assigned all his effects to trustees for the benefit of his creditors. The plaintiff claimed a debt of 625*l.*, as the balance due to him against L. M.'s estate, and received a dividend of 8*s.* 9*d.* in the pound on the whole debt. In an action by the plaintiff against the defendant on his guarantee:—Held, that he was not entitled to deduct the whole sum received as a dividend from the gross amount of the debt, and to hold the defendant liable on his guarantee for the residue of the demand up to the extent of the guarantee; that the dividend received was to be applied rateably to the whole debt, as well the part covered by the guarantee as that which was not; and therefore, that a rateable deduction was to be made for the sum covered by the guarantee. Bardwell v. Lydall, 5 M. & P. 327; 7 Bing. 489; 9 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 148.

The plaintiffs had become security for N. and had received bills of lading from him to protect themselves. Defendants were interested in the goods, and in consideration of being allowed to direct the sales, agreed with plaintiffs that, after the account sales were made up, "they would bear one-half of whatever loss might occur." There was a loss of 4,215*l.* N. became bankrupt, and plaintiffs proved against his estate for the whole loss and received a dividend thereon:—Held, that the defendants were not entitled to any deduction from the amount of their guarantee in respect of the sum so received by the plaintiffs. Liverpool Borough Bank v. Logan, 5 H. & N. 464; 29 L. J., Ex. 249; 2 L. T. 382.

A., wishing to be allowed from time to time to overdraw his account with his bankers, the defendant gave them the following document: "On demand I promise to pay to Messrs. G. & Co. 300*l.*, with interest on same, to secure an advance now or hereafter on a banking account with A." A. became insolvent, and paid, by agreement with his creditors, a composition of 16*s.* in the pound; the bankers, who had advanced much more than 300*l.*, received the dividend on their whole advance, leaving a balance on the whole of more than 300*l.*:—Held, that the promise by the defendant was to repay an advance of 300*l.* and that he was therefore only liable for the balance of 300*l.* after deducting 16*s.* in the pound from that amount. Gee v. Pack, 33 L. J., Q. B. 49; 9 L. T. 290.

Where a limited guarantee has been given, and the limit has been exceeded by the party guaranteed, who afterwards receives from the estate of the principal debtor a dividend, the guarantor is entitled to the benefit of a proportional part of that dividend on the amount guaranteed, notwithstanding that the unpaid debt greatly exceeds the amount of such guarantee. Thornton v. M'Kewan, 1 H. & M. 525; 1 N. R. 16; 32 L. J., Ch. 69; 11 W. R. 140.

Advances—Purpose of.]—A defendant guaranteed the payment of gold with which the plaintiff should supply a goldsmith for the purposes of his trade; the plaintiff discounted bills for the goldsmith, and gave him for them partly gold and partly money; the gold was applied to the goldsmith's trade, but the goldsmith did not indorse the bills:—Held, that the defendant was not liable under his guarantee for the gold so furnished. Evans v. Whyle, 5 Bing. 485; 3 M. & P. 130; M. & M. 468; 7 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 205.

A. gave B. the following guarantee: "I have given C. an order to purchase cotton, and as it may be to my advantage to have his bills on me negotiated through your house, I have in such case to request that you will honour his drafts to the amount of those he may send you for sale on my account, and engage that his bills on me, so transmitted, shall be regularly accepted and paid":—Held, that under this guarantee B. was justified in honouring C.'s draft to the amount of a bill drawn by C. on A. and represented by C. to B. as being drawn on account of A., though such bill was in fact drawn by C. on his own account. Ogden v. Aspinall, 7 D. & R. 637.

Action against a surety upon a bond conditioned for the due payment by M. of all sums in which he should from time to time become indebted to the plaintiffs for goods supplied him by them in the course of their business. The plaintiffs having drawn a bill upon M. for coals supplied to him, discounted the bill, which was dishonoured. M. went to the plaintiffs, and telling them that he wanted 80*l.* to enable him to take up the bill, asked them to lend him that sum. The plaintiffs thereupon gave him a cheque for 80*l.*, with which, and his own money, he took up the bill:—Held, that this was not in substance a loan by the plaintiffs to the defendant of the 80*l.*, but an advance by them for the specific purpose of taking up the bill, which as between the plaintiffs and M. remained unpaid to that extent; and that consequently, as the plaintiffs might have recovered the 80*l.* from M., as for goods sold, the defendant was liable to pay that sum. Davey v. Phelps, 2 Man. & G. 300; 2 Scott (N.R.) 564.

—— Deed of Assignment in respect of—What included in.]—W. and S. by deed assigned to J. P. all moneys to which they might become entitled from a certain railway company upon trust to secure the due payment of the sum of 5,000*l.*, advanced by J. P., "and also of all other sums which might thereafter become due from W. and S. to the said J. P. whether in respect of principal, interest, discount, commissions, or otherwise howsoever." The 5,000*l.* mentioned in the deed was paid off, but J. P. was afterwards compelled to pay 5,000*l.* under a guarantee for W. and S. The appellants, as execution creditors, afterwards attached a sum of money due from the railway company to W. and S. J. P. gave notice of the assignment to the railway company:—Held, that the deed of assignment included not only advances made by J. P. to W. and S., but also money paid by him under his guarantee for them, and was not affected by subsequent letters offering additional security for the guarantee. Dumbell v. Isle of Man Ry., 42 L. T. 745—P. C.

—— By Bankers.]—The directors of a company being desirous to allot a sufficient number of their shares to procure the appointment of a settling day on the Stock Exchange, arranged with the manager of a bank to open an account in the name of S., a promoter of the company, to be drawn on by him to an amount not exceeding 30,000*l.*, and for advances made on that account the company gave a guarantee under their common seal. Such an account was opened, and, as arranged with the manager, the money drawn thereon by S. was immediately paid in by him to an account opened at the bank in the company's name as and for the deposits payable by allottees of shares in the company. Those allottees were real persons who had been induced by S. to apply for shares, but they were wholly incapable of paying for them; they had no intention of really becoming shareholders, and immediately handed their letters of allotment and blank transfers to S. The bank directors were ignorant of the object of this scheme, and believed that the money was advanced to S. to be employed by him as the company's agent in their legitimate business. In furtherance of the plot, the manager gave a certificate in the name of the bank that 23,006*l.* had been paid in for the deposits on 11,503 shares in the company, but the application for a settling-day was refused, and shortly afterwards it was ordered that the company should be wound up. Before the winding-up there had been paid in on the company's account a total sum of 24,505*l.* 18*s.* 6*d.* made up of S.'s payments, and of 1,500*l.* which really was the company's money, and their liquidator sued for the 24,505*l.* 18*s.* 6d. as money received for their use. The bank sought to set off 24,506*l.* 8*s.* 4*d.* due to them on S.'s account:—Held, that the bank was liable to the company for 1,500*l.* only, the sum really paid in on their account. British and American Telegraph Co. v. Albion Bank, 41 L. J., Ex. 67; L. R. 7 Ex. 119; 26 L. T. 257; 20 W. R. 413.

Interest—Balance due from Receiver.]—A receiver, who had omitted to account regularly, became bankrupt, being indebted to the trust estate in a large sum, and for some time no steps were taken to have the accounts duly passed:—Held, that under the particular circumstances of the case, his sureties were not liable to pay interest on the balance found due from him, though he himself, if solvent, would have had to pay such interest. Semble, that in general the sureties of a receiver are answerable for such interest, as well as for such principal as the receiver himself is liable to pay. Dawson v. Raynes, 2 Russ. 466; 26 R. R. 9.

Costs—Of Action on Bond.]—Where, in a suit against the principal and sureties to a bond, the sureties were held liable to make good a deficit of principal and interest, and costs were given against the principal, but not against the sureties:—Held, that the sureties were not to be liable for the costs by circuity under the bond. Berwick Corporation v. Murray, 26 L. J., Ch. 201; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 847; 5 W. R. 208—L. C.

—— Of Attachment of Receiver.] — The sureties for a receiver are liable under the recognizance for the costs of an attachment against the receiver for not passing his account, and for all costs incurred in discharging him and appointing a new receiver. Maunsell v. Egan, 3 Jo. & Lat. 251; 9 Ir. Eq. R. 283.

—— Of Recovering Balance from Committee of Lunatic.]—The sureties in the recognizance of the committee of a lunatic for his obeying the orders of the Lord Chancellor, with respect to the lunatic's estate:—Held, liable, on his making default, not only for the balance reported due from him, but also for the costs of the proceedings taken for enforcing the payment of such balance, although they may have had no notice of the default of their principal until after such proceedings taken. Lockey, In re, 1 Ph. 509; 14 L. J., Ch. 164.

—— Forbearing Execution—Lease of House.]—The plaintiff having recovered judgment against F., the defendant promised, that if the plaintiff would forbear to issue execution against F., she would, on or before a certain day, erect a house, and cause a lease of the same to be granted to the plaintiff; and the plaintiff promised that such lease, when granted, should be in satisfaction of the judgment. In an action against the defendant for not erecting the house, and causing the lease to be granted:—Held, that the measure of damages was the value of the lease, and not the difference between the value of the judgment and the lease. Strutt v. Farlar, 16 M. & W. 249; 16 L. J., Ex. 84.

—— Interpleader Proceedings.]—In 1816, G. shipped goods on board a vessel chartered by him for Calcutta, and B. & Co. made advances to enable him to do so, under an arrangement that the goods should be transmitted to the agents at Calcutta of B. & Co., who were to dispose of the outward cargo there, and send the proceeds in goods or bills to B. & Co. in London, who were to reimburse themselves their charges, and hold the balance at the disposal of G. In November, 1817, G. being in difficulties, and indebted to the defendants in 850*l.*, they and G. applied to B. & Co. to pay off this debt by a further advance to G. on his consignment, and the defendants gave B. & Co. the following guarantee: "Messrs. B. & Co., You having expressed some doubts of the propriety of paying G.'s draft on you for 850*l.* in our favour, we hereby engage, if you will pay us the same, that we will reimburse you the amount on demand, with interest, in the event of your finding it necessary to call upon us to do so, either from the state of G.'s pending account with you, or from any other circumstances." B. & Co. thereupon accepted and paid a bill of 850*l.* drawn by G. on them in favour of the defendants. The vessel returned to England with a cargo in April, 1818, when C., the owner (G. having become bankrupt), gave notice to the East India Company (in whose docks she lay), not to deliver any part of the cargo without his authority. They thereupon sold the cargo, and paid the owner's demand for freight, and, in consequence of conflicting claims from G.'s assignees and from B. & Co., filed an interpleader bill in equity, and paid the balance of the proceeds into court. Proceedings at law and equity were continued between all the parties, under legal advice, up to 1837, when the result was, that B. & Co. were obliged to pay C.'s costs. In 1838, B. & Co. demanded of the defendants the 850*l.* due by the guarantee, with interest, and their share of the expenses incurred in the law proceedings, and, on their refusal to pay, brought an action against them on the guarantee:—Held, that the defendants could not be made liable, under the guarantee, for the expenses incurred by the plaintiffs in the law proceedings. Colvin v. Buckle, 8 M. & W. 680; 11 L. J., Ex. 33.

Guaranteeing Application of Contract-moneys—Non-receipt.]—The plaintiff, previously to delivering bricks to a government contractor, received from the defendants a guarantee in the following terms: "Please to deliver to Mr. S. for the completion of his contracts at D. and W. yards, 500,000 best bricks, to be delivered at the dockyards at 32*s.* per thousand, and we, as his sureties, consent that the proper officer, Navy-office, Somerset House, who shall or may have the payment of the contract when finished, shall and may stop the amount of such account for bricks delivered; and we agree to become guarantors for the payment of the same to you when the amount of the contract is paid." The bricks were delivered, and S. received, with the consent of the plaintiff, a part payment. S. having performed part only of his contract, and failed in the performance of it, other persons were employed by government to finish the contract without the assent of S. or the defendants, and to these persons payment of the remainder of the contract price was paid; after which a balanced account was made out with S., in which he was debited for the sums paid to the parties who finished the contract, and with the sum paid for work partly performed, and received credit for the whole contract work done:—Held, that by the guarantee the defendants undertook only that the money should be paid to the plaintiff when paid in pursuance of the contract, and that the money paid to the parties who finished the contract was not money paid to him. Hemming v. Malin or Trenery, 2 C. M. & R. 385; 1 Gale, 206; 5 Tyr. 887; 4 L. J., Ex. 245; 1 Jur. 893.

Payment out of certain Fund.]—E. S., a widow, being indebted to B. in 199*l.*, and being unable to comply with his demand for payment in full, paid 40*l.* on account, and entered into a written agreement with him, whereby, after reciting her inability to pay the 159*l.*, B. covenanted that in consideration of her regularly paying the interest, 7*l.* 10*s.*, every year during her life (which she thereby agreed to pay), he would forego all claim to the principal sum until after her death, and would not during her life bring any action to recover the same. The three daughters of E. S., also signed the following memorandum at the foot of the agreement: "We, the undersigned, E. F., E. J. S., and L. J. S., daughters of above-named E. S., hereby agree to pay the said sum of 159*l.* to the above-named J. B., his executors or administrators, out of the estate of the said E. S. at her decease." The only property of any kind or sort whatever, real or personal, which at the date of the agreement and thenceforth to the date of her decease, E. S. was possessed of or entitled to, was a life estate or interest in a house and premises called the Talbot Hotel, the reversion in fee of which property was vested in her daughters, and which hotel accordingly at her decease became their absolute property as tenants in common in fee. On the death of E. S., B. brought an action against the daughters on the above undertaking for the payment of the 159*l.*:—Held, that the plain and natural meaning of the words used in the memorandum was that, at E. S.'s death, the daughters would, out of what she might leave behind her available for payment of her debts, pay B.'s debt, and that the words "the estate of the said E. S." did not name or apply to her life estate in the Talbot Hotel. Brown v. Fletcher, 35 L. T. 165.

In consideration of the plaintiff forbearing to prosecute a chancery suit against the defendant, it was agreed between them that the defendant should, out of the first moneys he might receive from W., on whom the defendant had claims, hand to the plaintiff 500*l.*; and out of any further moneys he might receive from W. on account of the same contract, the defendant should pay the plaintiff 10*l.* per cent. upon the nett amount which he from time to time might receive, until such percentage paid to the plaintiff should reach 1,300*l.*, and no longer; and that the defendant would not compromise with W., without providing for the plaintiff 1,300*l.*, or so much of it as then might remain due. Only one instalment was received from W.:—Held, that the plaintiff, under this agreement, was not entitled to any percentage beyond the 500*l.* due on the first instalment, though exceeding 500*l.* Cochrane v. Green, 9 C. B. (N.S.) 448; 30 L. J., C. P. 97; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 548; 9 W. R. 124.

Proceeds realised in Composition.]—C. & Co., being insolvent, compounded with their creditors, by agreeing to pay them a composition of 7*s.* 6*d.* in the pound by three instalments, and execute a conveyance of their real and personal estate to the defendants, in trust to permit them, C. & Co., to carry on the business, subject to the control of the defendants, and to pay thereout to the creditors the three instalments, and in case of full payment to reconvey and reassign the estate to C. & Co.; but upon default of such payment, then in trust to sell, and after deducting out of the proceeds interest, costs and amount of mortgages, to divide the remainder amongst themselves and other creditors. C. & Co. continued accordingly to carry on the business, and opened an account with a banking company, from whom they obtained large advances. The bank applied to, and obtained from the defendants the following guarantee: "C. & Co. having assigned over all their real and personal estate to us, in trust for securing a composition of 7*s.* 6*d.* in the pound to their several creditors executing such deed, and it being necessary to open a banking account for the purpose of carrying on the trade, in order that the stocks and goods on hand may be wrought up and converted into money, for the purpose of paying such dividends, and you having at our request consented to open a banking account for that purpose, and to make advances on such account, or on the credit of the names of C. & Co., or of any person or persons for the time being carrying on that concern; we do hereby promise and engage that any sum or sums of money to become due to you or to the banking company, in respect of such account, shall in the first instance be paid to you out of the nett proceeds of the trust estate, so far as the same will extend to pay." Further advances were made by the bank to C. & Co. subsequent to this guarantee. The defendants subsequently sold the property of C. & Co. under the provisions of the composition deed, and the proceeds were insufficient to pay the creditors the composition of 7*s.* 6*d.* in the pound:—Held, that the meaning of the guarantee was, not that the defendants should be liable to the bank only out of the proceeds realised from the estate of C. & Co. after payment of the composition of 7*s.* 6*d.* to the creditors, but that they were liable, in the first instance, to repay out of the proceeds the whole amount of the advances made by the bank to C. & Co., as well before as after the guarantee. Wilson v. Craven, 8 M. & W. 584; 10 L. J., Ex. 448.

Receiver of Rents.]—The sureties for a receiver of rents and profits of real estate upon a recognizance drawn in the usual form (R. S. C., appendix L. No. 21) are, notwithstanding the limited wording of the security, answerable up to the amount of their bond for all moneys for which the receiver himself is liable to account. Graham, In re, Graham v. Noakes, 64 L. J., Ch. 98; [1895] 1 Ch. 66; 13 R. 81; 71 L. T. 623; 43 W. R. 103.

Receipt by Clerks.]—In an action upon a bond, conditioned for the honest and faithful service of a banker's clerk, and for well and faithfully accounting for all moneys which should come to his hands (assigning for breaches, general misconduct, irregular and unbusinesslike conduct, and not faithfully accounting), an arbitrator, to whom the cause was referred, found specially, that, on a certain day, the clerk made an erroneous balance-sheet, failing to exhibit (as it ought to have done) a surplus of 100*l.*, but that it was not proved that that sum came to the hands of the clerk; and also, that, on a certain day, the clerk, having received from a customer 213*l.*, entered it in the books of the bank 113*l.*, thus exhibiting on that day's balance-sheet a false and an unaccounted-for surplus of 100*l.*:—Held, that these facts did not entitle the plaintiff to recover. Jephson v. Howkins, 2 Scott (N.R.) 605; 2 Man. & G. 366.

A., as surety, entered into a bond for the due and faithful performance by C. of his duty as clerk to a provincial bank. C. being sent by the manager of a bank, at the request of a customer, to his residence about eleven miles distant from the bank, for the purpose of receiving a large sum of money to be placed to his account, a considerable portion of it being in gold and silver, on his way back dropped the money from his pocket and lost it:—Held, that the money was received by C. in the course of his employment as clerk to the bank, that the surety was liable, notwithstanding the finding of the jury that it was not the custom for bankers in that part of the country to send for their customers' money in the manner adopted, and that the loss of the money was primâ facie evidence of gross negligence on the part of C. Melville v. Doidge, 6 C. B. 450; 18 L. J., C. P. 7; 12 Jur. 922.

The surety in a bond conditioned for the good conduct of the principal as a banker's clerk, is not liable for misbehaviour consequent upon his being allowed to become a customer, and to keep an account with the bank. Stoveld v. Upton, 6 L. J., C. P. 126.

A bond was conditioned for the due payment by the chief clerk of a railway company of all moneys received by him on account of the company. He had allowed the other clerks to be in arrear, and made up the deficiency on one day by appropriating to it a portion of the moneys received on the following day, but had, in fact, paid over the sum equal to the amount received on each day, up to the time of his dismissal:—Held, a breach of the condition, and that the company was entitled to recover as damages the full amount of the deficiency. L. B. & S. C. Ry. v. Goodwin, 6 Railw. Cas. 177; 3 Ex. 736; 18 L. J., Ex. 337.

Balance—Moneys Passing.]—A. became surety for a treasurer of a poor-law union, and entered into a bond, which was conditioned for the duly paying over to the guardians upon his removal from office, of the balances, moneys, &c., which should be in his possession by virtue of the office. The treasurer was also a corn dealer, and as such had dealings in corn with the overseers of several townships, who were farmers, and whose duty it was to pay over to him the moneys which were required from their respective townships by the guardians. He was in the habit of receiving corn from them, debiting himself with the amount, and crediting them with the amount due from them for rates. His accounts were duly audited; and at the last audit, after his removal from office, it was found that a balance was due to the guardians:—Held, in an action against the surety, that, as between the treasurer and the overseers, money had in effect passed: and, therefore, that the surety was liable. Belford Union v. Pattison, 1 H. & N. 523; 26 L. J., Ex. 115; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 116; 5 W. R. 121—Ex. Ch.

B. executed a bond, conditioned to be void if G. should honestly, diligently, and faithfully perform and discharge the duties of his office as treasurer of a poor-law union. One of the duties was to pay out of any money for the time being in his hands, belonging to the guardians, all orders drawn upon him. G. was a country banker, issuing his own notes. On the 28th of December the guardians drew several orders for money, some of which having been presented at G.'s bank, 95*l.* were paid in notes of the bank on that day. On the 31st of December the officer of the union presented other orders, and received 200*l.* in notes of G.'s bank. On the same day, the guardians having to transmit money to London, their clerk presented to G. an order for 4*l.* 19*s.* 8*d.*, and obtained from him a banker's draft on a banker in London, which was afterwards dishonoured. G. stopped payment at three o'clock on the 31st of December, and on the 1st of January was declared bankrupt. At the time of the presentment of the orders, G. had in his hands sufficient money of the guardians to pay them:—Held, that B. was not liable to make good either of the three several sums of money to the guardians. Lichfield Union v. Greene, 1 H. & N. 884; 26 L. J., Ex. 140; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 247; 5 W. R. 370.

Legal Collection.]—See infra, 9.

Replevin Bond.]—The liability of sureties in a replevin bond is limited to the amount of the rent in arrear at the time of the distress and costs, and they are not liable for subsequent rent; and, therefore, where on the trial of an action of replevin a verdict was taken by agreement between the plaintiff in the action and the avowant for the penalty of the bond, subject to reference, not only as to the amount of the rent due at the time of the distress, but of the rent then due, and also of certain penal rents, the sureties being no parties to such agreement, and the arbitrator awarded damages to the full amount of the penalty of the bond, the court held, that the sureties were entitled to be relieved from the bond, it appearing that the rent originally distrained for had been fully paid before the trial of replevin. Ward v. Henly, 1 Y. & J. 285; 30 R. R. 781.

Lost Bond.]—If bond is lost, equity will set it up against surety, as well as principal debtor. Sheffield v. Castleton (Lord), 1 Eq. Abr. 93. See also East India Co. v. Boddam, 9 Ves. 464; 7 R. R. 275.

In Equity.]—A surety not chargeable in equity further than he can be by law. Ratcliffe v. Graves, 1 Vern. 196.

Sureties relieved from the penalties of the bond in chancery. Anon., Cary, 12.

A petition by a solvent surety of an insolvent tenant to surrender or reduce the rents of certain premises, which had greatly diminished in value since the lease was made, was dismissed with costs. Semble, the general rule of equity by which a surety is supposed to be favoured more than the principal debtor is erroneous. O'Neills, In re, Sau. & Sc. 686.

9. Collectors' Bonds.

Taxes—Formalities.]—A bond with one surety only, taken by commissioners of taxes, under 43 Geo. 3, c. 99, s. 13, is not therefore void. Peppin v. Cooper, 2 B. & Ald. 431.

A bond, whereby the obligor became bound as collector of duties assessed under 43 Geo. 3, c. 122, might be put in force against one of the sureties, though he was not apprised of the default of the principal collector in not paying over duties collected by him, nor called upon for an indemnity by the commissioners till after the dismissal from office of such collector. Nares v. Rowles, 14 East, 510.

By 43 Geo. 3, c. 99, s. 13, the district collectors of assessed taxes are required to give security to the commissioners in a sum "equal to the amount of the whole duty assessed and to be collected in each district"; and by 55 Geo. 3, c. 184, bonds given by collectors of assessed taxes and their sureties, for the due payment of moneys collected by them, are exempted from stamp duties:—Held, that the direction of 43 Geo. 3, c. 99, s. 13, was virtually complied with by a security given in such sum as was large enough to include, though it exceeded, the exact amount of duties to be collected for the district; and therefore that such bond was within the above exemption in the Stamp Act. Collins v. Gwynne, 2 M. & Scott, 640; 9 Bing. 544; 2 L. J., C. P. 49.

Held, also, that such bond was properly given "to the commissioners," and need not be "to his majesty, his heirs and successors." Ib.

The 43 Geo. 3, c. 99, s. 13, enacts that the collectors shall give security to the commissioners for duly paying such moneys as shall come to their hands, and for duly demanding the sums assessed, and for duly enforcing the act against defaulters; and by 38 Geo. 3, c. 5, s. 21, the collectors are required to give security to the commissioners for paying to the receiver-general the sums collected by them. A surety was sued on a bond which contained those conditions, and also a condition for accounting and paying to the commissioners:—Held, that this latter condition might be rejected as surplusage, and did not avoid the bond. S. C., 7 Bing. 423; 5 M. & P. 276; 9 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 130.

—— Time.]—A bond made by a defendant's testator as surety for E., with a condition reciting that E. had been and still was collector of the land tax, and all other taxes and duties imposed by several acts of parliament on the inhabitants of a parish, by means whereof he received from the inhabitants divers sums of money, and conditioned for the due payment by E. from time to time, and at all times thereafter, to the receiver-general of taxes, of all and every sum which he (E.) should from time to time collect and receive from the inhabitants of the parish for or on account of any tax or taxes then imposed, or which should or might thereafter be imposed on them by any act of parliament, was confined to the current year for which E. was collector at the date of the bond, although it did not appear on the condition that he was only appointed for a year, it being shewn by plea that the office of collector was an annual office, and held as such by E. at the date of the bond, although by the replication it appeared that E. held the office not only for that year, but thence to the commencement of the action. Hassell v. Long, 2 M. & S. 363. And see Curling v. Chalklen, 3 M. & S. 502.

A bond given by a collector and his sureties to the commissioners of land and assessed taxes under 43 Geo. 3, c. 99, is broken if the taxes collected in any one year are not duly paid up by the collector to the account of that year. Gwynne v. Burnell, 7 Cl. & F. 572; West, 342; 1 Scott (N.R.) 711; 6 Bing. (N.C.) 853.

The breach of the condition of the bond is equally complete, and the sureties are equally liable, though all the moneys collected in the year, for which they are sureties, should be in fact paid in, if any part of them should be appropriated by the collector and received by the commissioners in satisfaction of the arrears of a former year. Ib.

Such appropriation of part of the moneys of one year to the payment of the arrears of a former year will not prevent the commissioners from maintaining an action on the bond against the sureties for the year in which the money collected has been so misappropriated. Ib.

—— Illegal Collection.]—Sureties to a bond given by a person appointed a collector of income-tax under 5 & 6 Vict. c. 35, and conditioned for the payment of all sums assessed and collected, or to be assessed and collected by him for a particular year as such collector, are not liable in respect of sums collected by him without legal authority. Kepp v. Wiggett, 10 C. B. 35; 20 L. J., C. P. 49; 14 Jur. 1137.

—— Amount.]—A bond given as a security for a collector of customs does not extend to a subsequent duty on coals where the collector had a new deputation, and gave security for the duty on coals. Bartlett v. Att.-Gen., Park. 277.

So held where no security was given on the second deputation. Bowdage v. Att.-Gen., Park. 278.

—— Enforcing Payment.]—To an action upon a bond given by a collector of assessed taxes and his sureties, pleas shewing that the commissioners and receiver-general had not taken steps to enforce payment from the collector, as directed by the acts relating to the assessed taxes, are bad. Wilks v. Heeley, 1 C. & M. 249; 3 Tyr. 291; 2 L. J., Ex. 51.

A plea that the commissioners have not seized the lands of the collector must shew that there were lands of the collector which might have been seized and sold to supply the deficiency. Ib.

The seizure and sale of lands and goods of the collector, of the existence of which the commissioners had notice and knowledge, was under 43 Geo. 3, c. 99, s. 9, a condition precedent to their right to put the bond in suit against the surety. Gwynne v. Burnell, 7 Cl. & F. 572; West, 342; 1 Scott (N.R.) 711; 6 Bing. (N.C.) 853.

But the seizure and sale of lands and goods of the collector, of the existence of which the commissioners had no notice, was not a condition precedent to their right to put the bond in suit against the surety. Ib.

If in an action on a bond given by the sureties of a collector of taxes there are breaches assigned, that the collector did not pay over money received, and that he did not duly demand and enforce payment of the taxes, it is not necessary on the part of the plaintiff to prove exactly what money he received; for if it is proved that he was to collect a certain sum, and that he paid over a smaller sum, and did not take proper steps to exonerate himself from the residue, the plaintiff will be entitled to recover. Loreland v. Knight, 4 M. & Ry. 597; 3 Car. & P. 106.

Rates—Condition that Notice of Dishonesty should be given.]—The guarantors, by their agreement, contracted to guarantee the plaintiff against loss sustained from any act of fraud or dishonesty by a rate collector, or from any failure on his part to collect and pay into the Bank of Ireland the rates to be collected by him, and produce to the plaintiff, as collector-general, the receipt of the bank for such payment, or from any failure on his part to deliver to the plaintiff true accounts of the moneys collected, and lists of the persons in arrear, "provided that the plaintiff should within ten days after the discovery by him of any fraud or dishonesty of the 'said persons employed,' and of any matter in respect of which any claim may be intended to be made, give notice in writing, at the office of the society, as far as the case will admit, of all the particulars thereof; and after any such discovery, the guarantee herein contained shall, as to loss by any act of fraud or dishonesty subsequent thereto, be at an end":—Held, that the proviso required notice to be given of such fraud or dishonesty only as would form the foundation of a claim under the guarantee, and did not impose upon the plaintiff an obligation to give notice if he discovered that fraud or dishonesty had occurred on the part of the person employed before the guarantee was entered into or the employment under himself commenced. Byrne v. Muzio, 8 L. R., Ir. 396.

—— Power of Suspension of Defaulting Party.]—Under the 12 & 13 Vict. c. 91, the power of dismissing rate collectors is vested in the lord-lieutenant, but by regulations of the privy council, made under the act, the collector-general is empowered to suspend any collector who, in his opinion, has been guilty of neglect of duty:—Held, that the omission of the collector-general to suspend the collector, after knowledge of fraud and dishonesty on his part during his service and employment, was not a defence to an action on the guarantee, first, because the doctrine of Phillips v. Foxall (L. R. 7 Q. B. 666) was inapplicable to a guarantee for the fidelity of an officer appointed and removable by the lord-lieutenant; secondly, because the omission to exercise a power of suspension as distinguished from a power of dismissal did not terminate the liability of the sureties. Ib.

—— Surety liable through Overseers' Negligence.]—The defendant, as surety, gave a bond to the guardians of the poor for the M. Union, conditioned for the due discharge by C. of his duties as collector of poor-rates for the parish of N. C. absconded, having embezzled part of the rates, and allowed others to be lost by not applying for them. The guardians sued the defendant for the loss. The defendant admitted his liability as to the sums embezzled, but disputed his liability as to the sums lost by C.'s negligence, on the ground that the loss would not have occurred if C. had been called upon to account as he ought to have been. It appeared that no negligence could be imputed to the guardians, but there appeared some ground to believe that if the overseers of the parish of N. had discharged their statutory duties with reasonable care the loss would not have occurred:—Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to recover from the defendant the moneys lost through failure of C. to collect them, for that there had been no negligence on the part of the plaintiffs, and they were not answerable for the negligence of the overseers. Mansfield Union v. Wright, 9 Q. B. D. 683—C. A. Affirming 46 J. P. 200.

—— Within what Time.]—The condition of a bond given to commissioners of sewers by a collector of rates was, that the collector should at all times render a faithful account to the commissioners for the time being of all such sums of money as had already been collected or received, or which thereafter should be collected or received by him, by virtue of any rates for and on account of such commissioners, and should pay to the commissioners for the time being all moneys already received, or which should thereafter be received by him:—Held, that the collector was bound to account for and pay to the commissioners for the time being sums of money collected and received by him by virtue of a rate made by commissioners acting under a commission, which expired before the execution of the bond. Saunders v. Taylor, 9 B. & C. 35.

Where a bond was conditioned that a collector of church and poor rates should produce a faithful account to the obligees or their successors for moneys which might be received by him, or come to his hands, pursuant to, and in execution of, his office of collector:—Held, that the obligor was not answerable for moneys received by him on account of any year subsequent to that in which the obligees were in office. Leadley v. Evans, 2 Bing. 32; 9 Moore, 102; 2 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 108.

A., B. and C. entered into a bond as sureties for D. and E., the condition of which bond recited that D. was on such a day appointed collector of the church rate of a parish, by virtue of which office he was empowered to collect and receive all such moneys as were rated and assessed on the inhabitants by virtue of the rate, and for which he was accountable to the wardens of the grand account, and bound the sureties for D.'s duly accounting for all moneys collected or received by him on account of the above rate, as also on all and every other rate or rates thereafter to be made and collected by him (D.):—Held, that the sureties were only answerable for D. in that single appointment, and not on his appointment in the ensuing year. St. Saviour's, Southwark v. Bostock, 2 Bos. & P. (N.R.) 175.

A bond given to secure the faithful performance of the office of a collector of parochial rates (who was by act of parliament to be appointed by trustees for a year, and then to be capable of re-election) was conditioned, that, "from time to time, and at all times thereafter, during such time as he should continue in his office, whether by virtue of his said appointment, or of any reappointment thereto, or of any such retainer or employment by or under the authority of the trustees, or their successors to be elected in the manner directed by the act, he should use his best endeavours to collect the moneys received by means of the rates in the then or in any subsequent year," &c.:—Held, that the obligation of the bond was not confined to the year for which he was originally appointed, but extended also to all subsequent years in which he was continuously reappointed. Augero v. Keen, 1 M. & W. 390; 2 Gale, 8; 1 Tyr. & G. 709; 5 L. J., Ex. 233.

Action on a bond made by C. and his sureties, with a condition reciting the 27 Geo. 2, c. 38, and that C. (four years before the date of the bond) was appointed by the churchwardens and parishioners of D., in pursuance of the statute, collector of the poor-rates to be levied and raised in the parish, and conditioned that C. should account, as often as required, for all moneys so collected and received by him by virtue of the act. Breach for not accounting for moneys collected and received since the bond; pleas, that C. accounted for all the moneys collected and received by him before the bond, and that the office of collector is an annual office, and that C. accounted for all the moneys collected and received by him within the current year of office in which the bond was made:—Held, that both pleas were ill, for, by the words of the statute, the appointment was prospective, to collect future rates, and not retrospective only, and the condition was in the words of the statute without any restraining words; and it was not pleaded that the office was an annual office at the time of making the bond, and if it had been, yet it appeared by the statute not to be an annual office, though concerning rates which were raised in the course of a year. Curling v. Chalklen, 3 M. & S. 502.

—— Plea—No Legal Rate.]—To an action on a bond given as a security for the due performance of the office of collector of rates, and conditioned for payment of all moneys received "by virtue and for the purposes of a certain act of parliament, and relative to the collectorship of such rates," the defendant pleaded, that no rate was made, or in any way existed, which he could legally, or according to law, collect or get in, or could legally, or according to law, demand or obtain, by virtue of his office, and that he did not, during the continuance of his appointment, legally receive any money by virtue or for the purposes of the act, or relative to the collectorship of the rates:—Held, that the former part of the plea would have been held bad on special demurrer, as a negative pregnant, for not shewing in what way the rate was illegal; but those objections not having been raised, the latter averment afforded a substantial answer to the action. Webb v. James, 9 D. P. C. 315; 7 M. & W. 279; 10 L. J., Ex. 89.

B. DISCHARGE OF SURETY.

1. ALTERATION OF OBLIGATION GENERALLY.

Creditor depriving Surety of Rights.]—If the principal creditor deprives the surety of any right he would have had against the original debtor, even though the surety is benefited thereby, the surety is discharged. Polak v. Everett, 46 L. J., Q. B. 218; 1 Q. B. D. 669; 35 L. T. 350; 24 W. R. 689—C. A.

Although the surety is aware that an alteration is being made in the original contract, he is not bound to express his dissent to the transaction. Ib.

N. was indebted to the plaintiffs, and by deed agreed, first, to pay them 3,400*l.* on the 15th of February, 1874; secondly, within a certain time after the allotment of shares in a company to which he was about to assign his business, to transfer to them shares in it to the nominal value of 6,000*l.*, and redeem them at par within twelve months from the 1st of January, 1874; and, fourthly, it was agreed between him and the plaintiffs that the book debts due to him, to the nominal amount of 8,000*l.*, should be collected and one-half paid to the plaintiffs, to be applied towards redemption of the shares, and when they had received a sum equal to, or a multiple of, the amount of a share, they were to deliver to him shares at par equivalent to the amount so received. The defendant guaranteed the performance of this agreement by N. so far as concerned the redemption of the shares of the value of 6,000*l.* Subsequently an arrangement was made between the plaintiffs and N. by which, for an equivalent in shares and cash, they released to him their interest in the book debts, that he might dispose of them to the company. The defendant having been sued on his guarantee for a deficiency of 2,250*l.* in the amount of shares:—Held, that the new arrangement was such a variation of the rights of the defendant as surety as to discharge him. Ib.

In equity upon a contract of suretyship, if the person guaranteed does any act injurious to the surety, or inconsistent with his right, or if he omits to do any act which his duty enjoins him to do, and the omission proves injurious to the surety, the surety will be discharged. Watts v. Shuttleworth, 5 H. & N. 235. Affirmed 7 H. & N. 353; 29 L. J., Ex. 229; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 945; 5 L. T. 58; 10 W. R. 132—Ex. Ch.

It is not every alteration of his position by the act of the creditor that discharges the surety. To have this effect, the alteration must be such as interferes for a time with his remedies against the principal debtor. Tucker v. Laing, 2 Kay & J. 745.

Where the creditor knew that the surety was negotiating a loan for the principal debtor for the purpose of paying off therewith the debt for which the surety was liable, and thus getting rid of such liability, and the creditor promised the debtor to give him further time, and this induced the surety to desist from his attempt to raise the money:—Held, that the surety's liability to the creditor was not discharged. Ib.

The neglect of the obligee to give notice to the surety that the principal has made default does not discharge such surety; but if the obligee (without the privity of the surety) enters into an engagement with the obligor, and deprives himself of the power of suing him, whereby the surety is prevented from coming into a court of equity for relief, he is then discharged, but not otherwise. Orme v. Young, Holt, N. P. 84; 17 R. R. 611.

Altering Purpose of Company.]—In 1872 a company was formed to purchase and work a going concern, consisting of railway tyre and steam-roller works, and the vendor accepted part of the purchase-money in fully paid-up shares, called "vendor's shares." The vendor guaranteed to the shareholders a dividend for the first five years upon the called-up capital for the time being at the rate of 10 per cent., and that if in any one of the five years the profits should not equal a dividend of 10 per cent., he would pay the amount required to make the profits equal such dividend; and that, if he did not on demand pay such amount, the company might sell his "vendor's shares," and apply the proceeds in satisfaction of such amount. The business was carried on at a loss from the first, and in 1874 the directors, who had the widest powers of management, shut up the railway tyre department, which comprised four-fifths of the whole concern. In 1875 there were no profits at all, and the directors called upon the vendor under his guarantee to pay an amount sufficient to make up the dividend of 10 per cent., and, on his refusal, commenced an action to enforce payment:—Held, that the discontinuance by the company of one branch of their business did not discharge the vendor from his guarantee, and that the company were entitled to judgment for the sum claimed, together with interest and costs. Brown & Co. v. Brown, 36 L. T. 272—C. A.

Nature of Tenancy.—In an action against a surety on his bond, whereby he guaranteed the performance of a covenant by his principal, the lessee of a farm and flock of sheep, to deliver up to the plaintiff at the end of the tenancy, with the farm, a like number and quality of sheep regularly heathed and pastured on the farm, it was proved that an alteration had been made in the terms of the letting by the surrender of a small part of the farm and a proportionate reduction of the rent. The jury found that the alteration had not made any material difference in the relation between the parties, so as to affect the capacity of the tenant to perform his covenant: — Held (Brett, L.J., dissentiente), that the surety was discharged. Holme v. Brunskill, 47 L. J., Q. B. 610; 3 Q. B. D. 495; 38 L. T. 838—C. A.

Any alteration in the form of the agreement between principals discharges the surety, unless it is self-evident that the alteration cannot prejudice the surety; the surety himself being the judge as to materiality. Ib.

The surety is discharged where there has been a material alteration, or an alteration of some specific provision of the agreement, but not otherwise. Ib.

In a contract by A. to let, and B. to take the milking of cows at so much yearly rent payable quarterly, and by C. to pay the rent, C. is a mere surety; and in an action against him for the rent, A. must prove a literal performance of the contract on his part; as any variation made in such a contract by A. and B. without the consent of C. would discharge him, although his risk was not thereby increased. Whitcher v. Hall, 8 D. & R. 22; 5 B. & C. 269; 4 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 167; 29 R. R. 244.

Taking additional Security.]—Merely giving an additional security by a principal will not discharge a surety. Overend, Gurney & Co. v. Oriental Financial Corporation, L. R. 7 H. L. 348; 31 L. T. 322.

To an action for money lent, the defendant pleaded that the cause of action arose out of disbursements made for and on account of a vessel belonging to the defendant, and that the master made and sealed a bottomry bond, which was accepted and received by the plaintiff in satisfaction of the promises in the declaration. The plaintiff replied that he did not accept or receive the bond in satisfaction of the promises. At the trial it appeared that the bond was given by the master the day after the transaction as to the advances on the ship's account was closed, and by way of collateral security only:—Held, that the plaintiff's right to sue the owner in respect of the implied contract was not destroyed by the taking such additional security. Weston v. Foster, 3 Scott, 155; 2 Bing. (N.C.) 693; 2 Hodges, 59; 5 L. J., C. P. 242.

One of the co-sureties of a bond received from his principal a promissory note to the amount of that instrument:—Held, that it was a question for the jury to say quo animo the note was given, and whether it was given in pursuance of an arrangement that the surety should be thereby discharged, or merely by way of collateral security, in which latter case the surety would be liable for contribution on payment of the bond by his co-surety. Done v. Whalley, 2 Ex. 198.

A creditor took, as security for his debt, bills of exchange drawn and indorsed by a surety, and accepted by the principal debtor. After those bills were dishonoured, the creditor drew accommodation bills on and which were accepted by the principal debtor, but were paid by the drawer when at maturity. On a bill filed by the surety to restrain an action subsequently brought against him on the bills which had been dishonoured, the court allowed the action to proceed, but stayed execution. Quære, whether the surety was discharged by the subsequent transactions which, without his knowledge, took place between the creditor and the principal debtor. Mackintosh v. Wyatt, 3 Hare, 562.

By a decree in a creditor's suit U. was declared to be a specialty creditor on the estate of R. It appeared that the claim of U. against R. was in respect of a debt due by S., and for which R. had become surety. After the decree U. sued S., and took a judgment by arrangement for payment of the debt by instalments without the knowledge or consent of R.:—Held, that his so doing did not discharge the estate of R. Jenkins v. Robertson, 2 Drew. 351.

Creditor having, among other securities, a bond with a surety, taking a mortgage from the principal debtor, and agreeing to receive the residue by instalments, secured by a warrant, &c., without prejudice to any security he now holds; injunction granted against suing the surety. Boultbee v. Stubbs, 18 Ves. 20; 11 R. R. 141.

Composition with reserve of the remedy against sureties valid, but must plainly appear. Ib.

A. and B. were indebted to C. on a joint and several promissory note, A. as principal, B. as surety. A. deposited with C. a policy of assurance as a collateral security for the debt. C. died, appointing D. his executrix. A. became bankrupt; D. proved for the balance of the debt against A.'s estate and without communicating with B. surrendered the policy to the insurance office for value:—Held, that B. was not thereby discharged from his original liability. Coates v. Coates, 3 N. R. 355; 33 L. J., Ch. 448; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 532; 9 L. T. 795; 12 W. R. 634.

If A. take a joint bond from B., C. and D., and then accept the notes of B. and C. in discharge of the bond, D., as a surety, is no longer liable. Skip v. Edwards, 9 Mod. 438. S. C., nom. Skip v. Huey, 3 Atk. 91.

Dealings with Principal.]—A. was security for B. on a joint and several bond to Z. Title deeds of B. were deposited with Z. as a collateral security for payment of the debt and interest secured by the bond. A. on a given day, offered to pay Z. the amount due on having B.'s title deeds delivered up to him. This was refused by Z. Subsequently Z. lent B. the title deeds to enable him to come to an arrangement with A., his surety, as to paying off the amount of the bond, on an undertaking to return them to Z., which he had done:—Held, that this was not such a dealing with the principal as discharged the surety from the debt and interest due on the bond. Bushell v. Collett, 6 L. T. 20.

A surety to the East India Company discharged by payment of a balance to the principal under an erroneous settlement by the officer of the company without their authority or knowledge. Law v. East India Co., 4 Ves. 824.

—— Secret Dealings.]—Where a surety gave a guarantee to A. for a certain amount of goods to be sold to B., and, by a secret agreement between A. and B., the latter consented to pay 10*s.* per ton beyond the market price of the goods, in satisfaction of an old standing debt due to the former:—Held, that this secret agreement was a fraud upon the guarantor, and discharged his liability. Pidcock v. Bishop, 5 D. & R. 505; 3 B. & C. 605; 3 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 109; 27 R. R. 430.

W. and his wife deposited with a banking company the title deeds of real estate, to which the wife was entitled under her father's will, to secure a running account not exceeding 2,000*l.* The father of W. gave the following guarantee to the bank: "I beg to say that the deeds lodged by my son are good for the amount of the arrangement with him, otherwise I will guarantee the same." The father subsequently paid a portion of the amount due on the security, and received back his guarantee:—Held, that the security was not thereby vacated, so as to affect the surety. Waugh v. Wren, 1 N. R. 142; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 356; 7 L. T. 612; 11 W. R. 244—L. C.

If a banking company agree that, upon receiving the guarantee of a particular person, they will advance a certain sum of money for the purpose of securing to the creditors of a trader a composition, and setting up the trader in business again; and at the same time the company, being themselves creditors of the trader, enter into a secret arrangement with him, by which they secure to themselves repayment of the difference between their composition and the full amount of their debt; this is a fraud upon the guarantor and upon the creditors who execute the composition deed on the faith of the ostensible agreement, and the guarantor may sustain a bill in equity to set aside the guarantee. Pendlebury v. Walker, 4 Y. & Coll. 424.

On the 15th February, 1831, A. and B. dissolved partnership, A. leaving in the business, to be continued by B., the amount of his share. On the same day B., as principal, and F., as surety, executed a bond for payment to A. of 5,000*l.* on the 15th August following, with interest at 5*l.* per cent. On the 21st February, 1831, without the privity or consent of F., A. and B. agreed that the whole of the debt due by the latter to the former should, as to 1,000*l.*, be paid within a year, and as to the residue within the five years, by equal half-yearly payments, with interest. In May, 1855, B. was adjudicated bankrupt, and under the bankruptcy A., or his assignee, received dividends. In February, 1856, A. commenced an action against the representatives of F. to recover a large sum and interest, and thereupon a bill was filed to restrain the proceedings, and an injunction was granted. On the hearing the court directed that the injunction should be made perpetual, that A. should enter up satisfaction on the judgment obtained (by consent) against F.'s estate, and that A. should pay all the costs at law and in equity. Wright v. Sandars, 3 Jur. (N.S.) 504; 5 W. R. 644.

Taking and destroying Bill.]—A bill given for the amount of a guarantee by the person guaranteed and taken by the plaintiff before the expiration of the time mentioned in the guarantee, but afterwards destroyed in the guarantor's presence, is no waiver of the guarantee. Collins v. Owen, 15 L. T. 327.

Irregular Payments.]—A contractor undertook to perform certain works, and it was agreed that three-fourths of the work as finished should be paid for every two months, and the remaining one-fourth upon the completion of the whole work:—Held, that the sureties for the due performance of the contract were released from their liability, by reason of payments exceeding three-fourths of the work done having, without the consent of the sureties, been made to the contractor before the completion of the whole work. Calvert v. London Dock Co., 2 Keen, 638; 7 L. J., Ch. 90; 2 Jur. 62.

Mode of Advances Irregular.]—A., as principal, and B., as surety, gave a joint and several promissory note for a sum of money to C., the consideration for which was expressed to be a draft at three months' date. No draft was given by C.; but without the knowledge and assent of B., C. immediately, and without making any deduction by way of discount, advanced the money to A.:—Held, that this was a material variation from the engagement to which B. was party, and that B. was released from his liability. Bonser v. Cox, 6 Beav. 110; 13 L. J., Ch. 260; 8 Jur. 387—L. C.

To an action by payee against maker of a note, he pleaded that the note was made by him jointly and severally with and as surety for A. to secure the repayment of 20*l.*, advanced by a loan society to A.; that the loan was advanced by the society in the ordinary way of business; that, according to the rules of the society, it was to be repaid by weekly instalments; that discount to the amount of 2*s.* in the pound, and no more, was to be charged by the society to A.; and that the society wrongfully and contrary to the rules, and without the surety's consent, deducted from the loan a larger sum of money than at the rate of 2*s.* in the pound, to wit, 12*s.*:—Held, that the surety was liable. Brown v. Wilkinson, 13 M. & W. 14; 13 L. J., Ex. 302.

Meaning of "Credit."]—"If you give A. credit, we will be responsible that his payments shall be regularly made":—Held, that the word "credit" meant a fair and reasonable credit, according to the manner in which A. and the persons guaranteed should deal, and did not confine the guarantee to dealings according to the strict customary credit of the trade. Simpson v. Manley, 2 C. & J. 13; 2 Tyr. 86; 1 Price, P. C. 130; 1 L. J., Ex. 3.

Fraudulent or unreasonable extension of credit, to the prejudice of the guarantors, would raise a question dehors the agreement. Ib.

Method of Accounting.]—The plaintiffs, bottle manufacturers, appointed M. their agent for the sale of bottles on commission, and received the following guarantee, signed by the defendant: "I hereby agree to guarantee my brother M.'s intromissions as your agent in Leith, to the extent of 500*l.*" The terms of sale between the plaintiffs and M., at the time of the guarantee, were, that the moneys received should be remitted from time to time, and an account of sales rendered at the end of each month, or when required, and an account current every three weeks. It was soon after agreed between the plaintiffs and M. that the account current should be rendered every six months; and subsequently, in pursuance of an agreement between them, M. from time to time gave his promissory notes to the plaintiffs, payable four months after date, for sums having no relation to the amount due from him, and the plaintiffs, as the notes became due, transmitted M. the difference between the money then in his hands and the amount of the notes. The defendant had no knowledge of, and never inquired as to the original and subsequent terms of dealing:—Held, that the alteration in the mode of accounting and paying did not discharge the surety. Stewart v. M'Kean, 10 Ex. 675; 3 C. L. R. 460; 24 L. J., Ex. 145; 3 W. R. 216.

Substituted Agreement.]—A variance in the agreement to which a surety has subscribed, which variance has been made without the surety's knowledge or consent, and which may prejudice him, or amount to the substitution of a new agreement for a former one, will discharge the surety, though the original agreement, notwithstanding such variance, may be that on which the liability is substantially incurred. Bonar v. Macdonald, 3 H. L. Cas. 226; 14 Jur. 1077.

A. became surety for B.'s conduct as a clerk in a bank. B. was subsequently appointed to a better situation in a branch of the same bank, and A. extended his suretyship to this new situation. B. afterwards, while remaining in the same situation, undertook, on having his salary raised, to become liable to one-fourth of the losses on discounts. No communication of this new arrangement was made to A.; B. allowed a customer considerably to overdraw his accounts, and thereby the bank lost a sum of money:—Held, that the surety could not be called on to make good this loss, though it fell within the terms of the original agreement, as the fresh arrangement was the substitution of a new agreement for the former one, and A. was thereby discharged. Ib.

Bond varied by Judgment.]—The defendants, Evans, Digby, and Simson, executed a joint and several bond for 150*l.*, in order to comply with an order of a judge at chambers, under Ord. XIV., directing the defendant Evans, in an action of Tatum v. Evans, to find security as a condition for leave to defend, the condition of the bond being that it should be void if Evans should pay to the plaintiffs the sum of 75*l.*, or such sum (not exceeding that amount) as the court should think fit to award. When the case came on for trial, Evans consented to judgment being directed for 750*l.*, to include costs, payable, as to the first 400*l.*, by instalments of 25*l.* per month; the remainder to be paid by instalments of 50*l.* per month, the first instalment to be payable on the 1st March, 1885, the plaintiff to be at liberty to issue execution for any balance of the 750*l.* upon default in payment of any instalments, the defendant to reconvey all his interest in the premises to the plaintiff forthwith. It was also provided that the first payment by the defendant was to be taken in discharge of the sureties pro tanto, but they were not to be fully discharged until payment of 75*l.* It was found as a fact that the defendant Digby consented to the terms of the judgment, but the defendant Simson did not consent:—Held, that the defendant Simson was discharged from liability under the bond. Tatum v. Evans, 54 L. T. 336.

Insurance of Securities—Insolvency of Insurance Company—Policy varied by Scheme of Arrangement.]—The appellants insured by a policy the principal and interest of debentures of a limited company, the directors of which, respondents in the appeal, by an agreement undertook to repay to the insurers all sums within a prescribed amount which the latter should have paid under the policy. Default was made in payment of the debenture interest, and, the appellants finding themselves unable to meet their liabilities, a resolution for their voluntary winding-up was passed; and a scheme of arrangement was subsequently sanctioned by the court under which, "in lieu of its liabilities under such policies," the rate of interest payable by the appellant corporation was, as from the date of the winding-up resolution, reduced, and the time for payment of principal was extended. A payment of interest was made by the appellants calculated at the original rate up to the resolution for winding-up and at the reduced rate for the period subsequent thereto, and the appellants claimed to be reimbursed by the respondents:—Held, that the respondents were not liable, as the payment was made wholly under the scheme, and not under the policy, and no distinction could be drawn between the amount calculated at the higher and that at the lower rate of interest. Mortgage Insurance Corporation v. Pound, 65 L. J., Q. B. 129—H. L. (E.)

Amount of Advances.]—To an action against a defendant on his bond, he set out the condition, that J. had agreed to become tenant to the plaintiffs of a public-house; that it was stipulated that he should take from them the ale, wine, &c., to be consumed there; that he should become bound, with a surety, to pay for the same to the amount of 50*l.*, before he should have a fresh supply, as long as he should continue tenant of the plaintiffs; that when he should cease to be their tenant, the surety should be liable to the plaintiffs in such sum not exceeding 50*l.*, as J. might then owe the plaintiffs for ale, &c.; the condition then stated that, if J. should pay the plaintiffs for all ale received from them to an amount not exceeding 50*l.* before he should have a fresh supply, and when he should become indebted to them in that sum, and if he should pay them for all sums which he should owe them for ale, &c., not exceeding 50*l.*, when he should cease to be tenant, the obligation was to be void. The plaintiffs permitted J. to become indebted to them in a larger amount than 50*l.*:—Held, that the defendant was not discharged by reason of the plaintiffs having supplied J. with ale, &c., to an amount exceeding 50*l.* upon credit, but that, in any event, on default of the principal, the defendant was liable to the extent of 50*l.* Seller v. Jones, 16 M. & W. 112; 16 L. J., Ex. 20.

—— Notice of Excess.]—A. executed a bond for 2,000*l.* to a banking company, the conditions whereof recited that C. kept an account with the company, and it was declared that if C. or A., or either of them, should, on demand, pay to the company all sums, not exceeding in the whole 1,000*l.*, which should from time to time be due to the company by C., with interest, the bond should be void. The company sued A. on the bond, alleging, that on 30th June, 1856, there was due from C., as the balance of his account, 996*l.* 12*s.* 11*d.*, which had not been paid by C. or A., though duly demanded, and a further sum for interest. Equitable plea, that the bond was executed by A. solely as surety for C., and so accepted by the company, and that by reason of various verbal and written communications between A. and the company before and at the time of execution, the liability of A. and the advances to C., which were to be secured, were limited to 950*l.*, and A. was to be informed if the account, with interest, should reach 1,000*l.* and not be reduced within a month, and he became surety on such terms only, but the company on each of several occasions made advances beyond 950*l.*, and on each of several occasions the account against C. exceeded 1,000*l.*, and was not reduced within a month, and A. was not informed, whereby he became absolutely released from liability and entitled to equitable relief. Previously to the execution of the bond, A. objected by letter to becoming liable for interest upon an advance of 1,000*l.*, and requested to know whether the 1,000*l.* was to include interest. In answer, the company informed him that the bond was for 1,000*l.*, with interest, but that there was little chance of its exceeding that sum for any length of time, as the company, if it should be over the amount, including interest, at the half-yearly balance, would require it to be reduced to 1,000*l.* or would limit the amount to 950*l.*, which would leave a margin for interest. Afterwards the company executed a memorandum to the effect that C.'s advance should be limited to 950*l.*, and A. should be informed if the account with interest should reach 1,000*l.*, and not be reduced in a month. At this time the advance exceeded 950*l.*; A. then executed the bond. Afterwards the limit of 950*l.* was on many occasions exceeded; also on three occasions the amount of 1,000*l.*, interest included, was slightly exceeded, and not reduced within a month, and A. was not informed of it; also at one half-yearly balance the amount was 1,004*l.* 10*s.* 1*d.*, but was reduced by 12*l.* in two days after:—Held, that the effect of the agreement was, not that A. should be discharged from liability, upon the limit being exceeded, but that 950*l.* should be considered as substituted for 1,000*l.* in the condition. Gordon v. Rae, 8 El. & Bl. 1605; 27 L. J., Q. B. 185; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 530.

Necessity of retaining Securities.]—A surety is entitled to the benefit of any security which the creditor has received for the debt, though he has received it after the contract of suretyship; and, therefore, where the creditor has so dealt afterwards with such security that on payment by the surety it cannot be given to him in the same condition as it was when the creditor first acquired it, the surety is discharged to the extent of such security. Campbell v. Rothwell, 47 L. J., Q. B. 144; 38 L. T. 33.

A., as B.'s surety, indorsed bills drawn by B., to C. Subsequently B. gave C. a lien, in respect of such bills, upon goods of his in C.'s possession. B. having written to C. authorising him to deliver up such goods to D., C. undertook to do so upon D.'s paying him a less sum than the amount of the bills:—Held, that A. was thereby discharged. Ib.

A creditor who holds several securities for his debt, partly given by the principal debtor and partly by a surety, must retain all securities given by the principal debtor for the benefit of the surety, and if he neglects to do so, he discharges the surety. Merchants' Bank of London v. Maud, 18 W. R. 312. See S. C., on appeal, 19 W. R. 657.

—— Mortgage.]—A creditor holding a mortgage for a guaranteed debt is bound to hold it for the benefit of the surety, so as to enable him, on paying the debt, to take the security in its original condition, unimpaired. Pledge v. Buss, Johns. 663; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 695.

The rights of a surety, with respect to securities, extend to securities taken after the contract of suretyship. Ib.

The appellants having become sureties on the faith of a mortgage granted by the principal debtor to his creditor, claimed to be released wholly or pro tanto from liability, on the ground that the creditor had without notice to them sold parts of the mortgaged property in a manner unwarranted by the terms of the mortgage deed, and that inasmuch as the purchaser had failed to pay the price, they had been deprived of the benefit of a security upon which they were entitled to rely for protection:—Held, that on the evidence the sale was effected by the mortgagor, although with the previous consent of the mortgagee, in the due course of his management and in a manner contemplated by the mortgage deed, and that the liability of the sureties was not affected thereby. Taylor v. Bank of New South Wales, 55 L. J., P. C. 47; 11 App. Cas. 596; 55 L. T. 444—P. C.

Right to Assign Debt and Securities.]—A principal debtor and his surety, being entitled to two shares in a fund in court, assigned them to a creditor to secure a debt. The creditor assigned the debt to the trustees of his marriage settlement, but no notice of the assignment was given to the surety, nor was any stop-order obtained by the trustees:—Held, that the assignment of the debt without notice was no discharge of the surety. Wheatley v. Bastow (Collin's Case), 7 De G. M. & G. 261; 3 Eq. Rep. 865; 24 L. J., Ch. 727; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1124; 3 W. R. 540.

The creditor is no doubt under the obligation of preserving the securities which he takes from the principal debtor, for the surety may entitle himself to the benefit of those securities, and if any of them be lost by the act or default of the creditor the surety may be wholly or partially discharged; but the creditor enters into no contract with the surety not to assign the debt or the securities. The law gives him the right to assign them, and if he does so assign them the obligation which attached upon the creditor attaches upon the assignee. The position of the assignee is in no respect altered. The assignee on the other hand acquires by the assignment all the rights of the assignor, and the surety can be in no better position against the assignee than he was in against the assignor—per Turner, L.J. Ib.

Bill of Exchange.]—The acceptor of a bill of exchange knows that by his acceptance he does an act which will make him liable to indemnify any indorser of it who may afterwards pay it. Duncan Fox & Co. v. North and South Wales Bank, 50 L. J., Ch. 355; 6 App. Cas. 11; 43 L. T. 706; 29 W. R. 763—H. L. (E.)

The indorser is a surety for the payment to the holder, and having paid it, is entitled to the benefit of any securities to cover it, deposited with the holder by the acceptor. He is so entitled whether at the time of his indorsement he knew, or did not know, of the deposit of more securities. The surety's right in this respect in no way depends upon contract, but is the result of the equity of indemnification derived from the contract of suretyship. Ib.

Omission to Value Security in Bankruptcy.]—The defendant was surety for the repayment of a sum of money advanced by the plaintiff to the principal debtor. As a further security for the advance, the principal debtor deposited with the plaintiff a policy of life insurance. The principal debtor subsequently became bankrupt, the advance remaining unpaid, and the plaintiff proved against his estate for the full amount of the advance without valuing the policy of life insurance as a security, which was in consequence claimed by the trustee in bankruptcy as part of the bankrupt's estate. It was contended by the defendant in an action against him, as surety, that by not valuing the policy, and so depriving him of the benefit of it, the plaintiff had discharged him from all liability as surety:—Held, that the omission to value the policy was at most a mere neglect or omission on the part of the plaintiff, and as such did not discharge the defendant from all liability as surety, but only to the extent of the value of the policy. Rainbow v. Juggins, 49 L. J., Q. B. 353; 5 Q. B. D. 138; 28 W. R. 428. Affirmed, 49 L. J., Q. B. 718; 5 Q. B. D. 422; 42 L. T. 346; 29 W. R. 130; 44 J. P. 829—C. A.

On Paying off Mortgage Debt.]—A., B. and C. executed to D. a mortgage of B.'s lands (comprised in the petition for sale), and of C.'s lands, to secure 2,914*l.* 9*s.* 9*d.*, of which 900*l.* was B.'s debt, and the remainder C.'s debt. The mortgage contained a proviso that, as between A., B. and C., A. was a surety only, and that B. and C. respectively were sureties only for portion of the said sum; yet, with regard to D., they were to be considered as principal debtors, so as not to be released by time being given to any other or others of them, or by any act or omission of D., whereby, as sureties only, they would be released. B. subsequently executed to D. two other mortgages of the lands comprised in the petition. A. having paid D. the full amount of the debt secured by the first mortgage, claimed to stand in D.'s place for 900*l.*, being B.'s debt, and the moiety of 2,014*l.* 9*s.* 9*d.*, being C.'s debt, for which both he and B. were joint sureties, and to be placed on the final schedule on foot of, and in the priority of, the first mortgage:—Held, first, that A.'s claim was valid, and that he was not estopped by the special proviso of the mortgage from relying on his equitable rights of surety. Kirkwood, In re, 1 L. R. Ir. 108. And see Forbes v. Jackson, 51 L. J., Ch. 690; 19 Ch. D. 615; 30 W. R. 652.

Held, secondly, that a surety joining in a mortgage is entitled on paying off the original mortgage debt to get the benefit of all the securities held by the original mortgagee, without paying off subsequent mortgages. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that the doctrine of tacking is applicable only in the case of an existing debt. Ib.

Diverting Appropriated Funds.]—When a surety contracts with A. on behalf of a principal, the withdrawal, by arrangement between A. and the principal, of funds which the surety had a right to rely on as a security that the matters should be done which he, as surety, had contracted with A. should be done, is a prejudicial alteration of the surety's position, which discharges him from liability. General Steam Navigation Co. v. Rolt, 6 C. B. (N.S.) 550, 584; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 801; 8 W. R. 223—Ex. Ch.

D. having overdrawn his account at his bankers', and being desirous of further overdrawing it, for the convenience of carrying on his trade with ready money, induced his niece, who had lived under his care for several years, immediately after she attained her majority, and had come into possession of her property, to join as surety in a promissory note to the bankers to secure his balance. The bankers some time afterwards, without any communication with the surety, placed the amount of the note to the credit of D.:—Held, that, by this dealing with the note, the position of the surety was changed, and her liability discharged. Archer v. Hudson, 7 Beav. 551; 8 Jur. 761. Affirmed, 15 L. J., Ch. 211.

An obligation to a banker by a third party, to be responsible for a cash credit, to be given to one of the banker's customers, is not avoided by the fact, that immediately after the execution of the obligation the cash credit is employed to pay off an old debt due to the banker. Hamilton v. Watson, 12 Cl. & F. 109.

Discharge pro tanto.]—If, by the neglect of the creditor, the benefit of some of the securities for the debt is lost, the surety is pro tanto discharged. Capel v. Butler, 2 Sim. & S. 457; 4 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 69.

Where, through negligence on the part of a creditor, a security, to the benefit of which a surety is entitled, is not properly perfected, the surety is discharged to the extent of the security lost. Strange v. Fooks, 4 Giff. 408; 2 N. R. 507; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 943; 8 L. T. 789; 11 W. R. 983.

Neglect to Enter up Warrant of Attorney.]—Where, upon taking a guarantee for repayment of advances to one of their customers, bankers also took from their principal debtor a warrant of attorney to cover the debt, and at the same time agreed with the guarantor that they would at any time, at his request, enter up judgment and levy execution on the warrant of attorney against the principal debtor; but by their neglect to file the warrant of attorney or a true copy thereof, in compliance with the requisitions of the Bankrupt Act (12 & 13 Vict. c. 106), s. 136, the warrant of attorney became void:—Held, that this neglect on the part of the bankers operated as a discharge to the surety in equity. Watson v. Alcock, 4 De G. M. & G. 242; 1 Eq. R. 231; 22 L. J., Ch. 858; 17 Jur. 568; 1 W. R. 399.

Giving up additional Security.]—But where a creditor, whose debt was secured by a bond of the principal debtor, and a surety took, after the date of the transaction, further security from the principal debtor, and afterwards gave up that further security:—Held, that this did not discharge the surety. Newton v. Chorlton, 2 Drew. 333; 10 Hare, 646. See Lake v. Brutton, 8 De G. M. & G. 441; 25 L. J., Ch. 842; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 839.

Cause of Loss.]—As between principal and surety, if the primary security proves worthless, whether it was so originally, or whether it becomes so afterwards, the surety is not discharged, unless the loss or deficiency of the original and primary security was occasioned by the act of the creditor. Hardwick v. Wright, 35 Beav. 133.

Security and Covenant for Payment—Discharge of Liability on Covenant—Security also Released.]—Where a person joins in a mortgage as surety for the mortgagor by giving security and covenanting for payment of the mortgage debt, if the surety be discharged from liability on the covenant by reason of alteration of the contract with the principal debtor, the security given by the surety is also released. Bolton v. Salmon, 60 L. J., Ch. 239; [1891] 2 Ch. 48; 64 L. T. 222; 39 W. R. 589.

2. Release of Principal or Co-Surety.

Release of Principal.]—Action on a guarantee given the plaintiffs for goods to be supplied by them to G., to the extent of 400*l.* The guarantee provided, that the plaintiffs were to have full liberty to extend the period of credit to G., and to hold over or renew bills, notes, or other securities given by him, and to grant to G., and the person liable on such bills, notes or securities, any indulgence, and to compound with him or them, as the plaintiffs might think fit, without the same discharging or in any manner affecting the liability of the defendant, by virtue of the guarantee. The declaration averred the supply of goods exceeding the guarantee, which was unpaid by G., of which the defendant had notice, and was requested to pay that sum, but had not done so. Plea, that, after the debt was incurred by G., and before action, the plaintiffs became parties to a composition deed between G. and his creditors, whereby he assigned all his stock-in-trade for the benefit of his creditors; and that, in consideration thereof, the plaintiffs and the other creditors, parties thereto, granted a general release to G., of all debts and demands against him. The plea averred, that the guarantee was only made by the defendant as surety, and that the plaintiffs, by the deed, released G. without the privity of the defendant, and without notice:—Held, that, under the express terms of the guarantee, the surety was not discharged by the release of the principal debtor. Cowper v. Smith, 4 M. & W. 519.

A defendant covenanted with the plaintiffs that, in consideration that they would give credit to one Taylor, he would be surety to the extent of 100*l.* for any sum which might from time to time be owing by Taylor. The deed provided that no indulgence, time, credit or forbearance given or shewn to, or security taken from or composition with Taylor, should be any discharge of any liability under the deed, or should release the defendant from observing the provisions thereof. Taylor entered into a deed of composition with his creditors, which contained an unconditional release, which the plaintiffs executed:—Held, that the composition deed was no defence to the claim for 100*l.*, as by the terms of the guarantee the surety was not discharged by the release of the principal debtor. Union Bank of Manchester v. Beech, 3 H. & C. 672; 34 L. J., Ex. 133; 12 L. T. 499; 13 W. R. 922.

Where a creditor having already a warrant of attorney from his debtor, takes a promissory note from him and a surety, and afterwards enters up judgment under his warrant of attorney, and takes the goods of the debtor in execution, and subsequently withdraws the execution without the knowledge of the surety, he discharges the surety. Mayhew v. Cricket, 1 Wils. Ch. 418; 2 Swanst. 185; 19 R. R. 57.

—— Substitution of Security for Personal Liability.]—A surety guaranteed payment of the premiums upon a life policy, which had been assigned by the principal debtor to his creditor to secure payment of part of the debt. Subsequently, the creditor, without the knowledge of the surety, agreed with the debtor to take the security, with the liability of the debtor and surety to pay the premiums thereon, in substitution for the personal liability of the debtor, in respect of that portion of the debt, and released the debtor from personal liability in respect thereof:—Held, that this arrangement discharged the surety. Lawes v. Maughan, 1 Cab. & E. 340.

—— Or Covenant not to Sue—Novation of Debt.]—Where there is an absolute release of the principal debtor, the remedy against the surety is gone, because the debt is extinguished. Where such a release is given no right can be reserved, because the debt is satisfied and no right of recourse remains when the debt is gone. Language imputing an absolute release may be construed as a covenant by the creditor not to sue the principal debtor when that intention appears, leaving such debtor liable to make good any claims for relief at the instance of his sureties. But a covenant not to sue the principal debtor is a partial discharge only, and although expressly stipulated is ineffectual if the discharge given is in reality absolute. Commercial Bank of Tasmania v. Jones, 62 L. J., P. C. 104; [1893] A. C. 313; 1 R. 367; 68 L. T. 776; 42 W. R. 256; 57 J. P. 644—P. C.

Release of Executor of Principal.]—Where a bond has been given for payment of money on a certain day by A., B. and C., jointly, and it does not appear on the face of the bond that B. and C. are only sureties, it is no defence in an action on the bond against B. and C., after A.'s death, to plead that A. was the principal, and that the plaintiff had released A.'s executor before bringing the action. Ashbee v. Pidduck, 1 M. & W. 564; 2 Gale, 116; 1 Tyr. & G. 1016; 5 L. J., Ex. 251.

Release of one of several Sureties.]—Semble, that if a creditor releases by deed one of two sureties, who are jointly and severally liable, the other is also discharged. Evans v. Bremridge, 2 Kay & J. 174; 25 L. J., Ch. 102; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 134; 4 W. R. 161. See S. C., 25 L. J., Ch. 334; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 311; 4 W. R. 350—L.JJ.

Discharge of surety by creditor has not the effect of a discharge of the principal without reserve, and, therefore, a co-surety is not discharged. Gifford, Ex parte, 6 Ves. 805; 6 R. R. 53.

—— Co-sureties in Severalty.]—Where two or more sureties contract severally the creditor does not break the contract with one of them by releasing the other. The contract remaining entire, the surety in order to escape liability must shew an existing right to contribution from his co-surety which has been taken away or injuriously affected by his release:—Held, in an action upon a guarantee, that a plea to the effect that M. was the defendant's co-surety, and had been released in consideration of a new guarantee given to the plaintiff, constituted no defence: the plea nowhere averring or implying that the liability was joint, or that the defendant became surety on the faith of M.'s co-suretyship, or that any right of contribution had arisen against M. which had been taken away or injuriously affected, or that the defendant had suffered any damage or injury by the substitution described. Ward v. National Bank of New Zealand, 52 L. J., P. C. 65; 8 App. Cas. 755; 49 L. T. 315.

Release by one Co-surety of the Other—Effect on Charge by Third Party in favour of the Former.]—B. and C. were jointly bound as sureties for A.; D., the wife of A., charged her separate estate to indemnify B. from all losses, &c. The whole loss was borne by B. alone, who afterwards, without the concurrence of D., released C., his co-surety:—Held, that D.'s separate estate was thereby released from the moiety of the losses. Hodgson v. Hodgson, 2 Keen, 704; 7 L. J., Ch. 5.

3. Death.

Of Surety.]—A guarantee, the consideration for which is given once for all cannot be determined by the guarantor, and does not cease on his death. But as to whether a guarantee for future advances which the party guaranteed is not bound to make, is not determinable by the guarantor and whether it does not cease on notice of his death, quære. Lloyd's v. Harper, 50 L. J., Ch. 140; 16 Ch. D. 290; 43 L. T. 481; 29 W. R. 452—C. A.

In May, 1863, a father, on the occasion of the admission of his son as an underwriting member of Lloyd's, addressed to the managing committee of that body a letter, by which he held himself responsible for all his son's engagements in that capacity. Lloyd's was then a voluntary association, governed by certain by-laws, under which a person once admitted a member could not be excluded from membership except in the event of his bankruptcy or insolvency. The association consisted of underwriting members, non-underwriting members, and subscribers. The practice of the underwriting members was to underwrite policies of marine insurance for the benefit of various owners of property, both members of the association and outsiders, but the policies with outsiders could only be effected through the agency of insurance brokers who were either members of or subscribers to the association. The association as such incurred no liability on the policies underwritten by its members. In 1871 the society was incorporated by act of parliament, all the rights of the committee on behalf of the members being vested by the act in the corporation. In 1876 the father died, and notice of his death was shortly afterwards given to Lloyd's. In 1878 the son became bankrupt, and thereupon ceased to be a member of Lloyd's:—Held, by the court of appeal, that the guarantee was not determined by the death of the father or by the notice of it, but that his estate was liable in respect of engagements contracted by the son after his death. Ib.

A guarantee was determinable by six months' notice. The guarantor died, leaving as his executor the debtor on whose behalf the guarantee was given. The creditors to whom the guarantee was given continued to make advances to the debtor, knowing that there was no personal estate to answer the guarantee:—Held, that, under the circumstances, the creditors were not entitled to the benefit of the guarantee for their advances subsequent to the death. The death alone did not determine the guarantee. Harris v. Fawcett, 42 L. J., Ch. 502; L. R. 8 Ch. 866; 29 L. T. 84; 21 W. R. 742.

A continuing guarantee, in the absence of express provision, is revoked as to subsequent advances by notice of the death of the guarantor. Coulthart v. Clementson, 49 L. J., Q. B. 204; 5 Q. B. D. 42; 41 L. T. 798; 28 W. R. 355.

The death of the surety does not operate as a revocation of a continuing guarantee. Bradbury v. Morgan, 1 H. & C. 249; 31 L. J., Ex. 462; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 918; 7 L. T. 104; 10 W. R. 776.

A guarantee as follows: "I request you will give credit in the usual way of your business to L., and in consideration of your doing so, I hereby engage to guarantee the regular payment of the running balance of his account with you, until I give you notice to the contrary, to the extent of 100*l.*" is not a bare authority, but a contract, and therefore the executor of the guarantor is liable for goods supplied after his death. Ib.

W. guaranteed the current account of his firm at a bank by a letter, which provided that the guarantee was to be a continuing one "notwithstanding any changes in the partnership." W. died on April 12, 1895, but no notice of the fact was given to the bank. In November, 1895, the bank manager heard in conversation that W. was dead; but the bank continued to discount the firm's bills down to December 31, 1895, when the account was closed. The bank sought to make W.'s estate liable on the guarantee, the firm being insolvent:—Held, that knowledge of the guarantor's death was sufficient to put the bank upon inquiry whether there was any authority to continue the previous course of dealing, and that the guarantee was determined on the date when the bank first had knowledge of the guarantor's death. Dodd v. Whelan, [1897] 1 Ir. R. 575.

—— Partner.]—A partnership composed of three persons, A., B. and C., gave a joint and several bond to the bank to cover advances to be made to them by the bank on a cash credit; and in that bond two estates held by A. were specially named as part securities for these advances. On A.'s death:—Held, that by his death the partnership was dissolved and the security, so far as his estates were concerned, was no further continued. Bank of Scotland v. Christie, 8 Cl. & F. 214.

A bond was given by country bankers to a London firm conditioned to repay advances made by the latter to the former or any of them, associated or not with other persons. One of the partners in the country bank died, a considerable balance being then due to the London firm. In the month following the death of the deceased partner the London bankers received sums in payment more than sufficient to discharge the balance due, but also made advances of an equal amount:—Held, that the London bankers were entitled to apply the payments to the debt of the new firm and to recover on the bond against the representatives of the deceased partner. Simson v. Ingham, 2 B. & C. 65; 3 D. & R. 249; 1 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 234; 26 R. R. 273.

—— Of one of several Guarantors.]—A firm of bankers took a continuing guarantee for advances to a customer in the form of a joint and several bond from two sureties. One of the sureties died, and after notice thereof the bank made further advances to the customer:—Held, that the surviving surety was liable to the bank in respect of such advances. Beckett v. Addyman, 51 L. J., Q. B. 597; 9 Q. B. D. 783—C. A.

B. being hired as a clerk to A. & Co., but not for any definite period, C. and D. joined in a bond to secure his duly accounting for his assets. C. died, and his executrix gave a written notice to A. & Co. that she would no longer remain surety; A. & Co. communicated this notice to B., and required and obtained from him the bond of another surety; D. died, and also the new surety, and four years and a half after the death of C., B. died, when deficiencies were found in his accounts, subsequent to the notice:—Held, that the executrix of C. had no equity to restrain A. & Co. from proceeding at law on the bond. Gordon v. Calvert, 4 Russ. 581; 2 Sim. 253; 29 R. R. 94. And see S. C., 7 B. & C. 809; 1 M. & Ry. 497.

The condition of a bond, after reciting that A., B. and C. had filed a bill in equity against D. and E., was, that the obligee would pay all such costs as the court of chancery should award to the defendants on the hearing of the cause:—Held, that the death of E., before any costs were awarded, could not be pleaded in discharge of the bond. Kipling v. Turner, 5 B. & Ald. 261.

Of Principal.]—By the conditions attached to a contract of indemnity against losses in trade, the guarantee became void on the death or retirement from trade of the person guaranteed:—Held, that this condition applied to the death or retirement of one of two partners guaranteed; and therefore, that a plea alleging such death of the partner was an answer to an action against the co-partner by the guarantors for the subscription or annual payment agreed to be paid by the assured. Solvency Mutual Guarantee Co. v. Freeman, 7 H. & N. 17; 31 L. J., Ex. 197.

4. Bankruptcy of Principal or Co-Surety.

Disclaimer by Trustee — Liability of Bankrupt's Surety.]—The plaintiff being lessee of a farm for a term of years, assigned the lease to P., taking the covenant of the defendant as surety for the due payment of the rent to the lessor for the residue of the term. During the continuance of the term P. became bankrupt, and his trustee having obtained the requisite leave of the court, disclaimed all interest in the lease. Subsequently the lessor demanded from the plaintiff the half-year's rent accruing after the bankruptcy. The plaintiff paid the rent, and brought an action to recover the amount from the defendant under his covenant. Neither the plaintiff nor the defendant had entered upon or taken possession of the farm:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover. By Manisty, J., on the ground that the disclaimer operated only as a surrender so far as was necessary to relieve the bankrupt, his estate, and the trustee from liability without otherwise affecting third parties, and that the plaintiff as lessee remained liable for the rent, and had his remedy over against the defendant as the bankrupt's surety. By Watkin Williams, J., solely on the authority of East and West India Docks Co. v. Hill (22 Ch. D. 14). Harding v. Preece, 51 L. J., Q. B. 515; 9 Q. B. D. 281; 47 L. T. 100; 31 W. R. 42; 46 J. P. 646.

Sureties not Discharged by.]—By an agreement between the Agra and Masterman's bank, a Calcutta tea company, and their London agents, the bank granted a letter of credit, permitting the tea company to draw bills on the bank. The tea company undertook that the credit should provide for the outlay for the season's tea; that they would ship the whole produce of the season; that they would draw upon the London agents for the value of the produce, and forward to the bank the bills, with bills of lading, policy of insurance, and invoice of tea shipped; and that they would pay any balance which might appear due on the credit on or before a certain date. The London agents guaranteed to the bank that the tea company would perform its undertaking, "the terms of which we hereby confirm, holding ourselves responsible for the same." The tea company drew, in accordance with the letter of credit, several bills on the bank, which it accepted. Before any of them became due, the bank stopped payment, and was wound up, and its property transferred to the Agra bank. The bills were not paid at maturity, but were afterwards paid either by the Agra and Masterman's bank or by the Agra bank. The tea company never performed any part of their undertaking except the drawing the bills before mentioned, and became insolvent. The Agra bank, relying on the guarantee, claimed to be creditors for the amount of the bills, against the estate of the London agents, who had executed a deed of inspectorship:—Held, that the fact of the Agra and Masterman's bank stopping payment, and being wound up, did not excuse the tea company from fulfilling their contract, or release the guarantors from their liability; and that the claims of the Agra bank must be admitted for the amount of such damage as they had sustained by the default of the tea company to fulfil their contract. Agra Bank, Ex parte, Barber, In re, 39 L. J., Bk. 39; L. R. 9 Eq. 725.

A discharge of a debtor in liquidation, under the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 125, is in all respects equivalent to and identical with a discharge in bankruptcy under s. 48, and therefore the unconditional discharge of a debtor in liquidation, obtained by means of a resolution of the statutory majority of creditors, under s. 125, does not release the debtor's sureties, although they did not assent to but protested against the resolution of discharge; and the right of the creditors to sue the sureties remains untouched and unaffected by such discharge. Ellis v. Wilmot, 44 L. J., Ex. 10; L. R. 10 Ex. 10; 31 L. T. 547; 23 W. R. 214.

The discharge of a debtor by the acceptance of a composition under the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 126, is a discharge in bankruptcy by operation of law, and only releases the debtor himself, but does not release any person jointly bound with him. Jacobs, Ex parte, Jacobs, In re, 44 L. J., Bk. 34; L. R. 10 Ch. 211; 31 L. T. 745; 23 W. R. 251.

Therefore, when the acceptor of a bill of exchange filed a petition for liquidation of his affairs by arrangement, and the creditors duly passed resolutions accepting a composition from him, and the holder of the bill voted in favour of the composition:—Held, that this did not operate to release the drawer. Ib.

A debtor and his sureties jointly and severally covenanted with a trustee for the creditors, to pay to him so much as would suffice to pay a composition of 7*s.* 6*d.* in the pound to all the creditors, by three instalments, 2*s.* 6*d.* each, at four, eight, and twelve months; and the deed contained a proviso that in case default should be made in payment of any or either of the instalments or in case, before the composition should be fully paid to the trustee, the debtor should be adjudicated bankrupt, or make an attempt to make any assignment of his estate for the benefit of his creditors, or any arrangement with his creditors different to that arrangement, then, and in every such case, the deed and the release, and every other clause and provision therein contained, should be thenceforth at an end and void. In an action against the sureties to recover the second instalment, the principal debtor having been adjudicated bankrupt on his own petition:—Held, that the bankruptcy did not render the deed void as against the sureties, but that the proviso made it voidable at the election of the creditors. Hughes v. Palmer, 19 C. B. (N.S.) 393; 34 L. J., C. P. 279; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 876; 12 L. T. 635; 13 W. R. 974.

Where under s. 18, sub-s. 11, of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, an order is made adjudicating a debtor bankrupt, and annulling a composition made by him with his creditors, a surety who has given security for payment of the composition is discharged from liability, and the security becomes void so far as relates to such liability. Walton v. Cook, 58 L. J., Ch. 180; 40 Ch. D. 325; 60 L. T. 91; 37 W. R. 189.

Second Bankruptcy.]—A surety who guarantees the payment of an instalment under a composition resolution is not released by the debtor subsequently being adjudicated bankrupt at the suit of creditors who are not bound by the resolution. Glegg v. Gilbey, 46 L. J., Q. B. 325; 2 Q. B. D. 209; 35 L. T. 927; 25 W. R. 311—C. A.

The creditors of a debtor agreed by resolution to accept a composition payable by three instalments, the last instalment to be guaranteed by a surety. By a subsequent deed of inspectorship, the debtor was to be allowed to carry on his business, but if he made default the inspectors might apply for an adjudication in bankruptcy, or compel him to assign his effects to them; and the deed provided "that in the event of his being adjudicated bankrupt or of a conveyance or assignment of his property and effects being made or required under the provisions of these presents" before payment, the surety should be released from his guarantee. The debtor was afterwards adjudicated bankrupt on the petition of creditors not bound by the resolution. A creditor sued on the guarantee:—Held, that, the surety's position not being altered by the act of a party to the contract of guarantee, and the bankruptcy not having been brought about by the inspectors under the deed, the surety was not discharged from liability. Ib.

Proof.]—If a creditor sues a surety on a guarantee, and the principal debtor becomes bankrupt, and the creditor proves the debt; and the surety gives notice to the creditor that, although he does not admit his liability as surety, he will, if the creditor signs the certificate, hold himself altogether discharged; and after issue joined in the action, but before the trial, the creditor signs the certificate, which, without such signature, the bankrupt could not obtain, and the certificate is allowed, and the creditor obtains judgment in the action, the surety is not discharged from his liability. Browne v. Carr, 2 Russ. 600; 5 M. & P. 497; 7 Bing. 508; 9 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 144.

A defendant, after he had become bankrupt, was discharged out of custody, on a ca. sa. upon executing a warrant of attorney with two sureties, the sureties consenting that the plaintiff, in order to lessen their liability, should prove his debt under the commission. The plaintiff having proved his debt, but no dividend having been paid, the court refused, on summary application, to exonerate the sureties. Duncan v. Sutton, 1 Scott, 338; 1 Bing. (N.C.) 431; 4 L. J., C. P. 164.

Composition with Debtor releasing Sureties.]—To an action on a bond the defendant pleaded that it was the joint and several bond of himself and J., and was executed by him as surety only for J., and afterwards a composition deed was made between J. of one part and the plaintiff and another on behalf of all the creditors of J. of the other part, whereby J. conveyed to the parties to the second part all his estate to be administered for the benefit of his creditors in like manner as if J. had been adjudged bankrupt; and each of the creditors released J. from his debts "in like manner as if he had obtained a discharge in bankruptcy"; and that the plaintiff executed this deed without the consent of the defendant:—Held, a good plea. Cragoe v. Jones, 42 L. J., Ex. 68; L. R. 8 Ex. 81; 28 L. T. 36; 21 W. R. 408.

An agreement between a bond debtor and his creditor that the latter shall take all the debtor's property, and pay his other creditors 5*s.* in the pound, though not a discharge of the bond by way of accord and satisfaction, because not under seal, still operates in equity as a satisfaction of the debt; and it is not possible in equity, upon such a transaction, to reserve any rights against the surety, and any attempt to do so would be void, as being inconsistent with the agreement. Webb v. Hewitt, 3 Kay & J. 438.

A banking company whose chief office was in London, but who had offices and carried on business in Australia, made advances at the request of M. and R. to C., the agent of M. and R. in Australia, upon bills of exchange drawn by him upon M. and R. These bills were dishonoured by M. and R., who had entered into a deed of composition with their creditors, which was executed on behalf of the banking company. Dividends had been received under this deed by the banking company, who had brought an action in Australia against C. for the amount of their advances upon the bills, and damages for their non-acceptance. Injunction granted restraining the banking company from proceeding in this action, they having been distinctly informed that the bills were drawn by C. as agent for M. and R., whom they had relieved by executing the deed and taking a dividend thereunder. Objection as to jurisdiction overruled, the chief office and domicile of the banking company being in London, where also the deed had been executed, and all the arrangements made. Walker v. Brooks, 4 W. R. 347.

Discharge of Recognizance under Bastardy Order—Consent of Parish Officers.]—On an application to discharge a recognizance which had been estreated, it appeared that the petitioner was surety for A. under an order of bastardy; that the petitioner subsequently became embarrassed and left D. and came to L. to endeavour to procure employment, during which period A. took the benefit of the insolvent act, and died; the petitioner then returned to D., and was arrested for the amount of his recognizance:—Held, although it was shewn that the petitioner had no property, that, as it appeared that the parish had been charged for many years with the burden cast on them by the principal, they could not grant the application without the consent of the parish officers, nor could they grant a rule to compel the parish officers to shew cause why they should not give their consent. Smith, In re, 13 Price, 3.

Bankruptcy of Surety—Discharge pro tanto of co-Surety.]—Under the law of principal and surety, a creditor must not (1) act in a manner inconsistent with the contract under which the obligation of suretyship was incurred; (2) do anything to prejudice the right of contribution between the co-sureties. If he does, the sureties will be released either wholly or pro tanto. Where the creditor had effected a compromise with the trustee in bankruptcy of one of several sureties, by which he precluded himself from receiving a dividend against his estate:—Held, that the co-sureties were discharged to the extent of the dividend which, but for such compromise, the creditor might have received. Wolmershausen, In re, Wolmershausen v. Wolmershausen, 62 L. T. 541; 38 W. R. 537.

5. Change of Service.

Terminable at Shorter Notice.]—A bond was given by the obligor as surety that a servant would from time to time, and at all times during the service, satisfactorily account for and pay over to the master all moneys received by the servant for the master's use. One of the terms of the service was that it should be terminable by one month's notice on either side, but this was not known to the surety. After the commencement of the service the master and servant agreed, without the knowledge of the surety, that the service should be terminable at three months' notice :—Held, by Kelly, C. B., Pigott, B., and Pollock, B. (dubitante Martin, B.), that the surety was not discharged. But the servant having failed satisfactorily to account for or pay over moneys which he had received for the master's use, and the master having with knowledge, and without informing the surety thereof, retained the servant in his service :—Held, that the surety was discharged as to defaults committed by the servant after he was so retained. Sanderson v. Aston, 42 L. J., Ex. 64 ; L. R. 8 Ex. 73 ; 28 L. T. 35 ; 21 W. R. 293.

Where Separate Employments.]—Where a principal is appointed to two distinct employments, and his sureties guarantee by one bond his good conduct in both, they are not discharged from liability as to one of the employments by the fact of his duties being altered and enlarged in the other. Skillett v. Fletcher, 1 H. & R. 197 ; 35 L. J., C. P. 154 ; L. R. 1 C. P. 217 ; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 295 ; 13 L. T. 61 ; 14 W. R. 435. Affirmed 36 L. J., C. P. 206 ; L. R. 2 C. P. 469 ; 16 L. T. 426 ; 15 W. R. 876—Ex. Ch.

And where one enters into a bond as surety for the performance by another of two matters which are separate and distinct, a subsequent alteration of the principal's contract as to one of them, without the surety's consent, does not release the surety from his contract of suretyship as to the other. Harrison v. Seymour, 35 L. J., C. P. 264; L. R. 1 C. P. 518; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 924.

Change in Employers' Firm.]—A bond was given to a mercantile firm conditioned for the due accounting for and payment of all moneys received by B., their agent, on account of the firm. B. afterwards, with the knowledge and assent of the firm, takes A. into partnership, and the defendant enters into a similar bond, conditioned for the due accounting for and payment to the firm of all moneys received by A. on their account : —Held, first, that the defendant was not liable, within the meaning of the bond, for moneys received by A. and B. London Assurance Corporation v. Bold, 6 Q. B. 514 ; 14 L. J., Q. B. 50 ; 8 Jur. 1118.

Held, secondly, that letters written by the defendant, shewing his knowledge of the partnership between A. and B., could not be looked at for the purpose of so extending his liability. Ib.

A surety, who is bound for a clerk in the employment of the obligors, is not discharged from the obligation of his bond by the obligors having taken into the firm a new partner. Barclay v. Lucas, 1 Term Rep. 292, n. ; 3 Dougl. 321 ; 1 R. R. 202, n.

—— Corporation.]—A bond given to trustees to secure the faithful services of a clerk to an insurance company, which was no corporation, may be put in suit by the trustees for a breach of faithful service by the clerk, committed at any time during his continuance in the service of the actual existing body of persons carrying on the same business under the same name, notwithstanding any intermediate change of the original holders of the shares by death or transfer ; the intention of the parties to the instrument being apparent to contract for such service to be performed to the company as a fluctuating body ; and the intervention of the trustees removing all legal and technical difficulties to such a contract made with, or suit instituted by, the company themselves as a natural body. Metcalf v. Bruin, 12 East, 400 ; 2 Camp. 422 ; 11 R. R. 432.

Executors of Obligee.]—A bond with condition that a clerk shall serve faithfully and account for all money to the obligee and his executors does not make the obligor liable for money received by the clerk in the service of the executors of such obligee, who continue the business and retain him in the same employment. Barker v. Parker, 1 Term Rep. 287 ; 1 R. R. 201.

By Incorporation of Society.]—A bond was given to A., B., and C., payable to them and their successors, as the governors of the Society of Musicians, conditioned to secure H.'s faithfully accounting with them and their successors, governors, &c., as their collector ; afterwards the society was incorporated by letters patent, at which time H. had duly accounted for all moneys collected by him, but after the incorporation received money for which he did not account :—Held, that the obligor of the bond was not liable for such default. Dance v. Girdler, 1 Bos. & P. (N.R.) 34 ; 8 R. R. 748.

Reduction of Salary.]—In 1841, R. was, by a resolution of a vestry, appointed permanent assistant overseer to a parish at an annual salary of 16*l.*, and he performed the duties without giving security. In May, 1846, it was resolved by the vestry that he should continue his office upon giving security ; and accordingly, in June, 1846, a bond was entered into by R. with two sureties, in pursuance of 59 Geo. 3, c. 12, subject to the condition that R. should from time to time, and at all times thereafter during the continuance of his appointment, faithfully account for the collection of the rates, and duly execute all the duties of the office ; and a few days afterwards a warrant of the appointment of R. as assistant overseer was executed by the magistrates. R. continued to perform the duties of assistant overseer till 1851, but the duties having become lessened, in consequence of the appointment of a relieving officer in that year, a vestry (amongst whom was one of the sureties to the bond), with the consent of R., came to the resolution that R. should continue the office at a salary of 14*l.* per annum. After this R. continued to discharge the duties of the office for some months, and then resigned it, when he was found to be in debt to the parish :—Held, that the resolution of the vestry of 1851 did not amount to a revocation of the original appointment of R., but that he continued in the office at a reduced salary, and consequently that the sureties were not discharged from liability under the bond. Franks v. Edwards, 8 Ex. 214 ; 22 L. J., Ex. 42.

Increase of Salary.]—In March, 1845, L. was elected assistant overseer of a parish, by the inhabitants in vestry assembled, at a yearly salary of 27*l.* In May following he entered into a bond with two sureties as a security for the faithful execution of the office under 59 Geo. 3, c. 12 ; the condition of the bond recited that statute, and that L. had been duly nominated and elected at the annual salary of 27*l.* In March, 1846, at a vestry duly held, a resolution was come to that the permanent overseer's salary (meaning L.'s) should be raised from 27*l.* to 35*l.* a year, including all other extra charges. In June, 1846, a warrant of the appointment of L. was signed and sealed by two justices of the peace; this warrant recited that L. had been nominated and elected in March, 1846, at a yearly salary of 35*l.* Subsequently to June, 1846, L. had acted as assistant overseer, but had become defaulter to a considerable amount. In an action on the bond against the sureties:—Held, that there never had been an appointment by the justices upon the nomination and election of March, 1845, at an annual salary of 27*l.*, upon which the bond had been given, inasmuch as the appointment was made in pursuance of the resolution of March, 1846, at the increased salary of 35*l.*, and therefore that L. had never been duly appointed assistant overseer, and the sureties were not liable. Holland v. Lea, 9 Ex. 430; 2 C. L. R. 532; 23 L. J., Ex. 122.

Change in Mode of Payment.]—A clerk was appointed at a salary of 100*l.* a year, and a bond was executed by the defendant, conditioned for the accounting by the clerk for all moneys received by him for the use of his employers. Subsequently his salary was commuted for a payment on commission:—Held, in an action on the bond, that the defendant was released by the change in the mode of payment. L. & N. W. Ry. v. Whinray, 10 Ex. 77; 2 C. L. R. 1207; 23 L. J., Ex. 261; 2 W. R. 523.

Yearly Reappointment.]—A bond, reciting that A. was appointed assistant overseer of a parish, was conditioned for the performance of his duties thenceforth from time to time and at all times so long as he should continue in such office. On the 25th June, 1840, a vestry meeting was held, at which A. was elected assistant overseer until the 25th March, 1841, at a salary of 8*d.* in the pound on some sums collected, and 4*d.* on others. Two justices by their warrant dated 9th July, 1840, reciting the vestry resolution, and that his salary had been fixed for the execution of his office until the 25th March then next, stated that, in pursuance of 59 Geo. 3, c. 12, they appointed him assistant overseer. On the 25th March, 1841, he was again elected to the same office at a salary of 50*l.* per annum, and was reappointed by the justices, and he continued to be so re-elected and reappointed by the justices until March, 1846. On ceasing to hold office, he retained the moneys in his hands:—Held, that the sureties were not liable on the bond. Bamford v. Iles, 3 Ex. 380; 18 L. J., M. C. 49.

Where parties had become sureties in a bond reciting that R. had been appointed to act as overseer for making and levying borough rates in that part of parish A. which lay within the borough during the pleasure of the council, and the bond was conditioned for performance of the duties during such time as A. should act as such overseer:—Held, that the sureties were liable beyond the expiration of the year A. continued in office, for that there was no law limiting the duration of the office to a year, so as to control the express stipulations of the bond. Birmingham Corporation v. Wright, 16 Q. B. 63; 20 L. J., Q. B. 214; 15 Jur. 749.

Action on a bond. Plea set out the bond, which recited that J. had been appointed clerk to a company, and upon such appointment being made it was agreed that he and his sureties should enter into such bond for the due execution of his office; and the condition was that he should duly account "so long as he should continue to hold the office and employment." Averment, that the appointment of J. in the condition mentioned was an appointment for one year, and no longer. Replication, that J., with the assent of the sureties and the company, continued and remained in the office and employment after the expiration of the year in the plea mentioned:—Held, that the sureties were not liable after the expiration of the period for which J. was originally appointed; that the fact of the appointment being for one year might be shewn by plea; and that the continuance in office alleged in the replication must be taken to be by a reappointment. Kitson v. Julian, 4 El. & Bl. 854; 24 L. J., Q. B. 202; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 754; 3 W. R. 371. See also cases ante, cols. 1202 et seq.

Variation of Annual to Perpetual Appointment.]—Sureties by bond in 1842 covenanted with a corporation that M., who had been appointed treasurer to the corporation under 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 58, "should well and truly pay to the corporation, or to their successors, all such sums of money as M. should or might recover or receive, in virtue of his appointment as treasurer, during the whole time of his continuing in the office in consequence of the said election, or under any annual or other future election of the council to the office." At the time of his appointment the office was an annual one; but in 1843 was passed the 6 & 7 Vict. c. 89, which repealed 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 58, as inconvenient and unnecessary, and directed that the treasurer should "thenceforth hold his office during the pleasure of the council for the time being":—Held, that there was not such a variation of tenure of the office as to discharge the sureties, and that the change from an annual to a perpetual appointment during pleasure was provided for by the words of the bond, "annual or other future election." Oswald v. Berwick-upon-Tweed Corporation, 5 H. L. Cas. 856; 25 L. J., Q. B. 383; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 743; 4 W. R. 738.

A bond executed before 6 & 7 Vict. c. 89 by the sureties of P., treasurer of a borough, was subject to a condition by which, after reciting that he had been elected treasurer under 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, it was provided that the bond should be void, if he should account for moneys that might come to his hands as treasurer "(whether by virtue of his present or any subsequent appointment to the office) according to the directions and true intent and meaning of the statute, and in every other respect act in strict conformance with the same, and all other laws and regulations now or hereafter to be in force touching the office of treasurer, or the persons performing or liable to perform the duties thereof":—Held, that the sureties were liable for misconduct of P. after the tenure of the office had been altered by 6 & 7 Vict. c. 89 from an annual office to an office held during pleasure. Clifton Dartmouth Hardness Corporation v. Silly, 7 El. & Bl. 97; 26 L. J., Q. B. 90; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 434; 5 W. R. 255.

The condition of a bond, after reciting that S. had been appointed treasurer of a borough under 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76 (which by s. 58 required the treasurer to be appointed every year), was that he should faithfully and according to the provisions of the act, and of such statutes as might thereafter be passed relating to the office, conduct himself in the office and perform all the duties thereof:—Held, that the bond did not extend beyond the year of office for which S. had been appointed at the time of execution of the bond. Cambridge Corporation v. Dennis, El., Bl. & El. 660; 27 L. J., Q. B. 474; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 265; 6 W. R. 653.

Assistant Overseer appointed Overseer.]—A., being duly appointed assistant overseer of the poor of a parish, entered into the usual bond with sureties; while he held that office he was appointed overseer of the same parish, and continued to discharge the duties of both those offices till he became a defaulter, when he resigned:—Held, that his acceptance of the office of overseer did not vacate that of assistant overseer without a resignation to and acceptance by the vestry; and that his sureties were liable for his defalcations committed both before and after he was so appointed. Worth v. Newton, 10 Ex. 247; 2 C. L. R. 1471; 23 L. J., Ex. 338; 2 W. R. 628.

Collector of Poor-rates appointed Collector of Drainage Rates.]—A declaration was framed on a bond conditioned for the due performance by A. of his duties as collector of the poor-rates and of the sewers and general rates of a parish, the bond to continue in force if A. held either office separately. Breach, that he received money in each capacity, and failed to pay it over. Plea, that before breach two acts of parliament were passed increasing his duties as collector of sewers and general rates, and under which he was also appointed collector of main drainage rates by the persons under whom he held his other appointments. These acts altered the proportion in which certain sewers rates were to be borne by different parishes, increasing the proportion payable by the parish, and also imposed upon the sewers rates fresh charges of small amount:—Held, that the appointment of A. to the new office of collector of main drainage rates did not avoid the bond. Skillett v. Fletcher, 36 L. J., C. P. 206; L. R. 2 C. P. 469; 16 L. T. 426; 15 W. R. 876—Ex. Ch.

Held, also, that the changes introduced by the acts did not amount to an alteration of the office to which he was originally appointed, and did not avoid the bond. Ib.

Collector of Rates—Transfer of District.]—A bond, reciting an order of the poor-law commissioners in 1836, by which the guardians of a union should appoint one or more fit and proper persons to be the collector or collectors of the poor-rates of such of the parishes as the guardians might deem to require a collector, and that every person appointed a collector should give security for the due discharge of the duties of the office, and that W. was duly appointed to be a collector under the order, was conditioned that he should, during his continuance in his office, and whether the district for which he was appointed was or was not changed, faithfully discharge the duties thereof, and obey the lawful directions of the guardians. In the first instance, the guardians elected three persons to be collectors of the poor-rate in the union, to each of whom was assigned a portion of the parish. In 1848 the guardians divided the parish into four districts for collection of the poor-rates, and appointed an additional collector. After 13 & 14 Vict. c. 99, it was determined to appoint a fifth collector. At this time one of the four collectors resigned, and an advertisement was published that the guardians would appoint two persons to be collectors of the poor-rates of the parish, to one of whom would be assigned a collection of such rates from the owners of small tenements. W. applied, offering himself as a candidate for one of them; and he was elected for the purpose of collecting the rates from the owners of small tenements. The bond was then executed by W., and by A. as his surety. In 1855, one of the other collectors having resigned, W. applied to the guardians to transfer him to that district, which application was acceded to:—Held, that the appointment of W. was a general one, as collector of poor-rates for the parish, and that, there being only a change of the duties in 1855, the obligation of the surety was not discharged. Portsea Island Union v. Whillier, 2 El. & El. 755; 29 L. J., Q. B. 150; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 887; 2 L. T. 211; 8 W. R. 493.

Clerk to Railway—Amalgamation of Companies.]—A bond was given by a party to the C. railway company, as a surety for the performance by G. of his duties as clerk. The condition was, that if G. should render to the C. company, or to the committee for managing the London terminus of the C. and B. and S. E. Railways, a true account of all the receipts and payments of him as such clerk, and also should pay to the C. company, or to the committee, all such sums as he should receive on account of the company or committee, then the obligation to be void. The surety pleaded that the bond was made before the passing of an act to consolidate the B. and C. companies, and that the action was commenced afterwards, and that the C. company thereby became dissolved:—Held, that the plea was bad, and was no defence, inasmuch as the new company was the same as the two old ones, with additional powers, and that the amalgamation of the companies did not affect the responsibilities of the surety or G. L., B. & S. C. Ry. v. Goodwin, 6 Railw. Cas. 177; 3 Ex. 736; 18 L. J., Ex. 174.

C. as surety executed a bond, conditioned for the faithful service of a clerk to a railway company. Whilst the service continued that company and another railway company were dissolved and united into one company by a statute which provided that all bonds made or entered into with, in favour of, or by the dissolved companies should "be and remain as good, valid, and effectual, in favour of and against and with reference to the new company, and might be proceeded on and enforced in the same manner to all intents and purposes, as if the last-mentioned company had been a party to and executed the same, or had been named or referred to therein, instead of the persons, company, or parties actually named therein":—Held, that the surety was liable for breaches of the bond committed by the clerk after the union of the two companies. Eastern Union Ry. v. Cochrane, 2 C. L. R. 292; 7 Railw. Cas. 792; 9 Ex. 197; 23 L. J., Ex. 61; 17 Jur. 1103; 2 W. R. 43.

Appointment — Whether ultra vires.]—In January, 1851, A. as surety executed a bond to a railway company, which, after reciting that the company had agreed to appoint L. as their clerk or agent, for the purpose of selling coal, at a yearly salary of 100*l.*, was conditioned for the accounting by L. of all moneys received by him for the use of the company. L. performed the duties of clerk or agent at such salary until May, 1851, when it was agreed between L. and the company to substitute for such salary a commission of 6*d.* per ton on all coal for which he should obtain orders. From that time L. was paid for his services by commission, which amounted to a larger sum than the fixed salary. In 1852 L. was indebted to the company for sums which he did not pay over, and the company having sued the defendant on the bond :—Held, that the bond was valid, although the company had no power to deal in coal. L. & N. W. Ry. v. Whinray, 10 Ex. 77 ; 2 C. L. R. 1207 ; 23 L. J., Ex. 261 ; 2 W. R. 523.

Enlargement of Office.]—Where the duties of a principal are enlarged and extended by act of parliament, a bond for the due discharge of the principal's duties is void although he may still be liable to perform the duties originally contemplated, because the duties and liabilities originally contemplated by the sureties were what the principal was at that time liable to perform and not what might be subsequently imposed upon him. Pybus v. Gibb, 6 El. & Bl. 902 ; 26 L. J., Q. B. 41 ; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 315 ; 5 W. R. 44.

Association of Partners with Agent.] — A surety entered into a bond with an insurance company, and conditioned that L., his son, who had been appointed agent for the company, would well and truly pay to the actuary of the company all sums of money received by him as such agent. At the time he entered into the bond he received a letter stating that he was only insuring his son's integrity. L., with the knowledge of the surety, was associated with F. in the agency ; and shortly afterwards L. and F. entered into partnership as general merchants, and afterwards became insolvent ; premiums having been received both by L. and F. as agents for the company, and such premiums not having been accounted for :—Held, in an action on the bond against the surety that the surrounding circumstances at the time he entered into the bond ought to be taken into consideration, and that his liability had been changed, and that he was consequently not liable on the bond. Montefiore v. Lloyd, 15 C. B. (N.S.) 203 ; 33 L. J., C. P. 49 ; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1245 ; 9 L. T. 330 ; 12 W. R. 83.

6. Change of Partnership.

Admission of Partner.]—A surety bond for the faithful service of A. to a sole trader does not extend to a subsequent partnership. Wright v. Russell, 2 W. Bl. 934 ; 3 Wils. 530.

If A. becomes bound to B. under condition that C. shall truly account to B. for all sums of money received by C. for B.'s use, and C. afterwards, with B.'s knowledge, takes D. as his partner ; the guarantee does not extend to sums of money received by C. for B.'s use, after the formation of the partnership. Bellairs v. Ebsworth, 3 Camp. 53 ; 13 R. R. 750.

A guarantee of moneys advanced by a firm, consisting of F. & Co., will not extend to a new firm, in which H. is introduced as a partner. Spiers v. Houston, 4 Bligh (N.S.) 515.

Payments made by the principal after the alteration of the firm, and in transactions with him, are applicable to the extinction of the balance due to the old firm at the date of the alteration. Ib.

Retirement of Partner.]—In and prior to 1866, W. and L., partners in trade, executed two joint and several bonds to the trustees of S.'s will to secure the repayment with interest of two sums of money advanced to them. In 1869, W. retired from the firm, and in pursuance of an agreement, assigned by deed all his share and interest in the firm to L., who covenanted to indemnify him against all the trade debts and liabilities. The trustees had notice of this deed. L. carried on the business with C. till 1871, when they filed a petition for liquidation by arrangement. The trustees proved under the liquidation for the balance of the principal and interest then due on the bonds, and attended and voted at all the meetings of the creditors, who agreed to accept a composition. The trustees were also parties to the composition deed by which they gave time to L. and C. for the payment of the balance due on the bonds. W. filed a bill praying for a declaration that, under the circumstances, he was absolutely released from all liability under the bonds :—Held, that the retirement of W. with a covenant of indemnity with the knowledge of the trustees, had altered his character of principal into that of surety ; that the subsequent acts and conduct of the trustees had effected a complete novation of the bond debts ; and, consequently, that W. was entitled to the relief which he sought. Wilson v. Lloyd, 42 L. J., Ch. 559 ; L. R. 16 Eq. 60 ; 28 L. T. 331 ; 21 W. R. 507.

Action on a bond against a surety. The condition recited that the university of Cambridge had appointed B., C. and J. their agents for the sale of books printed at their press in the university, and that the defendant had offered to enter into a bond with them as a surety ; and it was conditioned that if B., C. and J., and the survivors or survivor of them, and such other person or persons as should or might at any time or times thereafter, in partnership with them, or any or either of them, act as agent or agents of the university, for the sale of books as aforesaid, did and should duly account to the university for all books delivered or sent to them, or any or either of them, for sale as aforesaid, and should pay all moneys which should become payable to the university in respect of such sale, then the obligation to be void :—Held, that by the retirement of J. from the partnership of B., C. and J., their surety was discharged from all further liability on this bond. Cambridge University v. Baldwin, 5 M. & W. 580.

A guarantee given to a firm consisting of three partners is determined by the retirement of one of them. Dry v. Davy, 2 P. & D. 249 ; 10 A. & E. 30 ; 8 L. J., Q. B. 209 ; 3 Jur. 315.

Substitution of Partner—Variation of Terms—Implied Consent of Sureties.]—A., B. and C. contracted with a company to execute certain works on given terms. D. and E. gave a bond, as their sureties, for the performance of the contract. A. and B. retired from the partnership, and F. was substituted. Afterwards disputes arose between the company and C. and F. as to the conduct of the works, and various transactions took place by which the terms of the contract were varied, and during which the company paid to C. and F. certain moneys which it had been agreed originally should be paid to A., B. and C. D. and E., the sureties, were no parties to these transactions, and gave no express consent, but they had been the solicitors of A., B. and C. in the original contract, knew of all the subsequent transactions, and acted as the solicitors of C. and F., and as such solicitors, prepared many of the documents required for such transactions. The company having brought an action on the bond against the sureties, for breach of the contract, they filed this bill to restrain the action:—Held, that the sureties were not discharged, and that the action could not be stopped. Woodcock v. Oxford and Worcester Ry., 1 Drew. 521.

Death of Partner.]—Where a bond by A., reciting that B. intended to open a banking account with C., D. and E. as his bankers, was conditioned for payment to them of all sums from time to time advanced to B. at the banking-house of C., D. and E.:—Held, that on C.'s death such obligation ceased, and did not cover future advances made after another partner was taken in; and that B., who was indebted to the house at C.'s death, having afterwards paid off the balance, which was applied at the time to the old debt incurred in C.'s lifetime, A. was wholly discharged from his obligation. Strange v. Lee, 3 East, 484.

Where C. became surety for such sums as should be advanced to meet bills drawn by A. and B. as partners, or either of them:—Held, that it did not extend to bills drawn by B. after the death of A. Simpson v. Cooke, 8 Moore, 558; 1 Bing. 452; 2 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 74.

A., B. and C. carried on business in co-partnership for a term, which would expire on the 19th of February, 1807, under articles which empowered A., in case of his death during the term, to bequeath his share of the trade in favour of his wife or children. S., a customer of the bank and a surety, covenanted that they, or one of them, would pay to A., B. and C., the survivors or survivor of them, &c., all sums which, on or before or until the 19th of February, 1807, should become due from the customer to A., B. and C., the survivors or survivor of them, &c. A. died, having bequeathed his share of the concern to his executors, in trust for his children; the business continued to be carried on under the same firm as before, and his executors interfered in the management, and shared in the profit. At the time of A.'s death the balance due from S. to the bank was upwards of 14,000*l.*; after that time, S. continued his dealings with the bank in the same manner as previously, paying in more than 14,000*l.* within a few weeks after A.'s death, but drawing out during the same period a larger sum, and these subsequent dealings were contained in the same account with the preceding dealings, and some years afterwards S. became insolvent, being indebted to the bank in a balance of 19,000*l.* and upwards:—Held, that the partnership, which carried on the business after the death of A., was a new partnership; that the surety's covenant did not extend to cover sums advanced to the customer by the bank after A.'s death; that the balance due at A.'s death from the customer was to be considered as discharged by the payments subsequently made by him to the bank. Pemberton v. Oakes, 4 Russ. 154; 6 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 35.

—— State of Accounts.]—A bond was given to the several persons constituting the firm of a banking-house, conditioned for the repayment of the balance of an account, and of such further sums as the bankers might advance to the obligor; one of the partners dies, and a new partner is taken into the firm; at that time a considerable balance is due from the obligor to the firm; advances are afterwards made by the bankers, and payments made to them on account by the obligor; the latter is credited by the new firm with the several payments, and charged with the original debt and subsequent advances, as constituting items in one entire account, and the balance due at the time of the partner's death is considerably reduced; and that reduced balance, by order of the obligor, is transferred by the bankers to the account of another customer, who, with his assent, is charged with the then debt of the obligor. The person so charged having become insolvent, the surviving partners of the original firm brought their action upon the bond:—Held, that as they had not originally treated it as a distinct account, but had blended it in the general account with other transactions, they were not at liberty so to treat it at a subsequent period; and, that having received in different payments a sum more than sufficient to discharge the debt due upon the bond at the time of the death of the deceased partner, the bond was to be considered as paid. Bodenham v. Purchas, 2 B. & Ald. 39; 20 R. R. 342. See Hart v. Alexander, 2 M. & W. 484; 6 L. J., Ex. 129.

Under a guarantee given to a banking-house, consisting of several partners, for the repayment of such bills, drawn upon them by one of their customers, as the bank might honour, and any advances they might make to the same customer within a certain time:—Held, that the guarantee ceased upon the death of one of the partners in the bank, before the expiration of the time to which the guarantee was expressed to extend. Hollond v. Teed, 7 Hare, 50.

Held, further, that bills accepted before the death of the partner, and payable afterwards, were within the guarantee. That the amount guaranteed could not be increased by any act of the continuing firm and the customer, after the death of the partner, although such amount might be diminished by such act. That, in the particular form of the guarantee, the amount guaranteed in respect of the bills honoured by the bank, was not to be reduced by the amount of a balance owing from the bank to the customer when the guarantee ceased, such balance having been afterwards paid in the course of business between the continuing firm and the customer. Ib.

A bond, conditioned to repay to five persons all sums advanced by them, or any of them in their capacity of bankers, will not extend to sums advanced after the decease of one of the five by the four survivors, the four then acting as bankers. Weston v. Barton, 4 Taunt. 673; 13 R. R. 726.

Dissolution.]—R. and H., being in partnership, were in the habit, through the plaintiffs' firm, of consigning goods to B. and S., in China, for sale; the proceeds were remitted to the plaintiffs in London, against which they accepted bills drawn by R. and H., and which they discounted. If the remittances did not put the plaintiffs in funds when the bills became due, the defendants were bound to make up the deficiency. By long practice, though there was no actual agreement, if the goods were not sold at the maturity of the bills, the plaintiffs accepted fresh bills, which the defendants negotiated, and handed the proceeds to the plaintiffs, who were thereby enabled to take up the first acceptances, and so to let defendants have the benefit of the advance for a further time without being under cash advance. In 1873 the partnership of R. and H. ceased by efflux of time, and it was agreed between them that H. should take over the whole stock of the old firm. The plaintiffs had notice of this. At the dissolution of the partnership there were acceptances of the plaintiffs running, and they, after the notice, renewed the bills, according to the old practice, by accepting fresh drafts of H. alone. When the goods were sold, the remittances were not sufficient to meet the plaintiffs' advances, and they brought an action against R. and H. to recover the balance. R. raised as a defence, that he had, by the agreement between him and H., become only a surety for H., instead of a principal joint debtor; and that the plaintiffs, by giving H. time after notice of this had discharged R.:—Held, that R. and H. could not change their position with regard to the plaintiffs without their assent, and so deprive them of the right they had to treat both R. and H. as principal debtors; that R. was therefore not discharged by the giving time to H. by means of the fresh acceptances. Swire v. Redman, 1 Q. B. D. 536; 35 L. T. 470; 24 W. R. 1069.

Continuing Business after Term.]—B., as principal, gave to his partner, C., a bond, which was executed by L. as surety, indemnifying him from all loss from the partnership business, it being stipulated by the articles of partnership that the business should continue for five years; that in case either partner should retire, and the other be desirous of continuing the business, the continuing partner might take the retiring partner's share of the partnership assets at a valuation; and that if at the expiration of the partnership term either of the partners should be desirous of carrying on the business, and should neglect or refuse to purchase his partner's share in the assets at a valuation, then the assets should be realised, the debts paid out of the proceeds, and the surplus divided between the partners according to their interests. At the expiration of the partnership term neither of the partners retired, but without consulting L., continued to carry it on for about twenty months longer, at the end of which time C. retired, leaving the whole partnership assets in the hands of B., by whom the business was continued till B.'s bankruptcy, about three months afterwards. B. afterwards absconded, leaving the concern insolvent, and C. was compelled to liquidate the liabilities of the partnership:—Held, that inasmuch as by the articles the partnership ought to have been wound up at the expiration of the term limited by the articles, it was not competent to C. to agree to its continuance without the consent of L., and yet to hold L. liable as surety upon the bond; and that C., therefore, was not entitled to put the bond in force against L. Small v. Currie, 5 De G. M. & G. 141; 2 Eq. R. 639; 23 L. J., Ch. 746; 18 Jur. 731.
